I. Establish a parking pre-registration system. This system would allow motor vehicle parking assignments to be predetermined during the summer. Spaces in control lots would be assigned on a priority basis to faculty, staff, and qualified students. IBM cards would be distributed to eligible persons by May 1. This would then eliminate long lines at September registration, which Hartwell said are "unnecessary and should be done away with".

II. Improvement of several existing parking areas and creation of new ones. One of the most pressing immediate needs is an additional parking lot for commuters as close to the center of campus as possible.

III. The new position of Parking Co-ordinator has been created, with Mr. Ferriter serving as the same.

IV. The Parking Co-ordinator is conducting a complete survery of existing facilites and policies. Mr. Ferriter has assembled an ad hoc committee composed of Professors William Boyer and Paul Procopio, William Lambert (resident campus architect), John Marchand, plus a grad student, an undergraduate, and a representative from the office of the Dean of Students.

The recommendations have met with much approval. Hartwell said the Administration was, "extremely pleased with the report". President Lederle cited the ideas as very good, and well-written. However, he said the biggest problem is money.

Last year the University requested $2 million from the Legislature, to be used for parking facilities, but received none. The amount of money currently available is severely limited.

Hartwell said, "The obvious problem is that the University is expanding, and the need for land is crucial." He predicts that in ten years there will be no space for parking. "I think it will eventually come to the construction of a large parking center off campus with busing service."

Mr. Ferriter agreed that this is a "good, valid assumption, economically", as land on the outskirts of the campus is cheaper.

Hartwell predicts that if the recommendations are followed, by September ' 69 the system will be smoothly functioning. He said the situation can't get any worse. Mr. Ferriter praised the recommendations and said his committee is also open for any suggestions.

Festival of Life Opens Today

A community Festival of Life opens today at the University. The two-day celebration sponsored by the Students for Ecumenical Action, is an attempt to explore what real celebration is all about. The SEA members feel that a true student festival must reflect what goes in the student's lives, and that "we can have a meaningful celebration only by seriously confronting the realities of our lives, rather than by escaping from those very realities." Expenditures of tens of thousands of dollars for entertainment as in a typical university weekend is unnecessary because the people in the University community itself are often the best source of entertainment.

The Rev. Malcolm Boyd, who has been called "chaplain-at-large to American university students" will speak at Curry Hicks cage on Friday night. He will begin the celebration by talking on "Community and Interpersonal Relationships." Following Mr. Boyd's talk, the audience will participate in a session of "theatre games" which will further explore the ideas of community and interaction.

Two members of the Milwaukee 14 will be the first speakers of the celebration on Saturday. They will discuss "The Polarization of the American Community" in Thompson 106 at 1:00 p.m. The Milwaukee 14 is a group of priests who were arrested last year for destroying draft files.

A film festival will follow the Milwaukee 14 at 2:30. Several films with the basic theme of "Conscience and Community" will be shown.

The Festival will conclude Saturday night at the Student Union Ballroom with mixed-media entertainment. The community celebration will provide opportunities for the celebrators to participate in various activities in art, music, and theater, and body painting.

It is hoped that through involvement with each other's lives and work, the celebrators will experience a confrontation with themselves. That type of serious confrontation can be the key to real joy in life.

Nixon Gets Riotous Welcome

ROME (AP) - President Nixon, warmed by a rousing sendoff in West Berlin, arrived in Rome Thursday to a cheering welcome by thousands of Romans - and then in its wake the worst rioting this capital has seen in years.

What surprised officials was the friendly reception given Nixon after his jet touched down at Ciampaine Airport. As the motorcade headed for Rome, the crowd surged forward and engulfed the presidential car at one point. Nixon got out and began to mingle with the wellwishers. Hoisted to their shoulders he waved his arms in delight.

The violence occurred after Nixon arrived at Quirinal Palace and began his talks with President Giuseppe Saragat and other leaders.

Free University A Success

By ANNE HILLERMAN
Staff Reporter

The Free University, an effort to make education more meaningful, is currently blooming in the Northeast quad. Its curriculum, including a course called "Sensativity and Sexuality" and an unstructured literature course, is student initiated. Classes are led by both students and faculty members. No grades or tests are given. The courses also carry no credit since one of the program's basic principles is that the value of an education cannot be measured in terms of hours and credits.

Reaction to the Free University thus far has been overwhelmingly favorable. One class which began last week with an enrollment of 30 now has 50 students.

"The Free University has gone over far better than we expected. It's really encouraging to see kids leaving the dorms at night to come to class on their own because they want to learn something," said John Dolpe, a spokesman for the Free University. The program's planners are hoping that it will grow to be a regular part of the Northeast section.

Eight courses are offered by the Free University this semester: Lawlessness and Disorder, Truth, Sensativity and Sexuality, Prejudice and Discrimination, Racism in America, To Groop and Read your Own Thing. A photography class is pending. Meetings are held in the lounges of dorms in the Northeast quad Monday through Friday nights.

Spring is coming to Amherst and so is the Spring Fashion Special. Why don't you get in on the action too - be the Collegian model of the year.

Report Warns of Racially Divided Society

WASHINGTON (AP) - The nation may be "sowing the seeds of unprecidented future disorder and division" by failing to respond to the Kerner report's year-old warning of a racially divided society, an independent progress report concluded Thursday.

"A year later," it said, "we are a year closer to being two societies, black and white, increasingly separate and scarcely less unequal."

The follow-up study was made by Urban America, Inc., and the Urban Coalition, two non-profit urban-affairs organizations.

Entitled "One Year Later," its aim is to assess the progress - or lack of progress - in the critical areas where the Kerner Commission found the root causes of riots and civil disorders.

The report is pessimistic in all areas except that of police-military response to disorders once they break out. This, the study group found, had become more sophisticated, less violent.

"Black and white Americans," the report said, "remained far apart in their perception of slum-ghetto problems and the meaning of civil disorders. The gap had widened by the end of the year..."

In a news conference at which the report was officially released, chairman John W. Gardner of the Urban Coalition said the report "makes it clear that the nation's response to the crisis of the cities has been perilously inadequate... We have not made the total commitment that is so urgently needed if we are to make this a livable society for every American."

In Atlanta, the Rev. Ralph David Abernathy of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference said the progress report "may well be the third strike in the urban crisis."

"One year ago," the Negro leader said, "The nation took the Kerner report as strike one and did nothing. Then we took 6,000 of the poor themselves to testify through the Poor People's Campaign and Congress sat back, took the second strike and did nothing.

"Now we have the third strike coming in March of 1969, with no plan or program to deal with the main crisis being faced by our nation. Instead, we are talking about antiballistic missiles systems, which are just another subsidy for the military-industrial complex. If we stand by and watch the third strike called against us, it may be the last inning of Western civilization."

Placement Counselor Discusses Student Dissent

By NEAL NOVACK
Staff Reporter

"No person has a right to physically stop another person from a recruitment interview." This response was made by Clarkson S. Edwards of the Placement Office in light of this month's Dow Demonstration in Whitmore Administration Building. Mr. Edwards, a staff assistant, stressed, however, that students do have the right to picket and to dissent, so long as the demonstrators respect the individual rights of others.

In his vocational counseling, Mr. Edwards is responsible for some 1,300 men students whose field of study range from the liberal arts and fine arts to business administration and physical sciences. Mr. Edwards, who has been working at the University since August also has administrative tasks dealing with the alumni.

The Feb. 14th sit-in and arrest of 33 students developed through their protest to the on-campus presence of Dow Chemical recruiters. This led some students to question the University's providing placement services for such a company or for any companies.

To the question - does the placement service have a necessary and justified role at the University? ....Mr. Edwards believes, "students want this service to make it easier for themselves ..."

The students who see Mr. Edwards are mostly seniors and graduate students, "most of whom have no idea of what they want to do,' says Mr. Edwards, "although many students end up in businesses and other occupational areas which they hadn't previously considered."

Whatever the occupation, Mr. Edwards says, "the admirable part of our generation is that young people are more willing to take chances with employment; whereas, people during the 1950's may have been more security - oriented."

Urgency of Med School

Few People in Massachusetts would dispute the need for the Commonwealth to clamp down on excessive state spending. On the other hand, few people would dispute either the need for a state medical school or the expediency with which it should be built in light of the startling facts given by Dr. Lamar Soutter, Dean of the UMass. Medical School.

According to Dean Soutter at the recent board of trustees meeting, delays in construction of the state medical school are costing the state $33,000 a day. Also the medical school will probably lose $13.8 million in Federal funds if construction hasn' begun by September.

On the other hand, if the rising costs of construction are a deterrent to the building of a medical school, then the startling figure that 296 our of 483 qualified pre-med students from the Commonwealth cannot get into med schools because of lack of space, should certainly prove sufficient reason for the state to immediately start construction before costs rise further. Also with the rising cost of a medical education, particularly in private schools, the lack of a state medical school is increasingly making the medical profession only accessible to those in the upper class economically and, consequently, barring those in the low and medium income bracket.

No doubt the state of Massachusetts needs a state medical school and, with the previous figures given, can ill afford to delay the start of construction. If this procrastination continues, not only will the medical profession become accessible only to the elite, but the already serious doctor shortage will become so acute that we in Massachusetts will lack sufficient doctors to heal the sick.

On How Youth Will Fare .

By JOHN ZEH

WASHINGTON (CPS-TELEX) - The Campus Americans for Democratic Action Wednesday petitioned the Civil Aeronautics Board to continue low-cost youth fares as an experiment in"third-class" fares for people who could not otherwise afford air travel.

The C.A.B. also accepted briefs from the National Student Association (N.S.A.) and the National Student Marketing Corp. (SNMC).

The Board holds a hearing March 12 to decide whether to abolish the discount rates for persons 12-22.

A C.A.B. examiner ruled in January that youth fares are "unjustly discriminatory" against older travelers who must pay full fares. A federal court had ordered the board to open up the matter after opponents of youth fare (mainly interstate bus companies) brought suit.

Three measures were introduced in Congress within the last week to continue youth fares. Rep. James H. Scheuer (D-N.Y.) offered an amendment to the 1958 Federal Aviation Act that would make explicit the C.A.B.'s right to grant youth fares. (Opponents of youth fare contend they violate a section of the Act that prohibits unjust discrimination.) Sen. Charles Percy (R-Ill.) offered a similar bill in the Senate, and Rep. Arnold Olsen (D-Mont.) introduced a "sense-of-the-Congress" resolution that says youth fares are in keeping with the Act's intent.

Campus A.D.A. contends in its petition that the U.S. has not achieved the "adequate, economical service at reasonable charges" that the 1958 Act sought from chartered airlines. While travel is a necessity today, air transportation "remains a luxury which most Americans can ill afford," it argues.

For the one-half discount, youth fare travelers must travel on a stand-by basis, that is, without a reservation. (Some airlines do offer guaranteed seats at a one-third discount.)

N.S.A., an organization campus of student governments, argues in its petition that youth fares should not be abolished because they create "an extraordinary opportunity to broaden educational horizons" by bringing air travel within the reach of students for the first time. The discounts, N.S.A. says, are "fundamentally sound and consonant with deeply-rooted social and economic patterns of our society."

N.S.A. also argues:

1) Youth fares encourage education by making it possible for students with limited financial resources to select the college best suited to their needs and goals without being unduly limited by geography and cost of travel.

2) The discounts help to minimize localism and regionalism, making for more-diversified student bodies which contributes to the social and intellectual growth of students by exposing them to a greater breadth and variety in their fellow.

3) Youth fares are "socially desirable" in relieving the financial burdens which most families with college-age children bear.

4) The discounts allow the "broadening" experience of summer vacation travel.

N.M.S.C., which markets products and services on campus (including American Airlines' youth fare cards) calls the discounts "a fair and sensible mode of encouraging 'young people to travel and no an "invidious' form of discrimination.

The C.A.B. has been deluged with letters from students and parents urging it not to abolish the discount fares. Whatever decision it makes will probably be appealed in the courts, which earlier agreed with arguments that the fares are discriminatory.

Besides the bus companies, some airlines also oppose continuation of youth fares. There is talk of a boycott being organized against these carriers.

"It Could Be Our First One-Man Mixed Reception"

INSIDE REPORT:

GOP Taps the Airlines

BY ROWLAND EVANS AND ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON - With the Transpacific air routes case now under fresh study at the Nixon White House, Republican fund-raisers have succeeded in selling top officials of Braniff International Airways $30,000 worth of $1,000-a-head tickets to the party's big post-election money-raising gala at the Washington Hilton on April 2.

Those 30 tickets will buy the Braniff team, one of the big winners in the Transpacific case before President Nixon rescinded President Johnson's decision, three tables of ten each at the gala.

What makes Braniff's generosity so interesting is that the top echelon of the Texas-based airline is crowded with Democratic friends and cronies of the former President. The airline's Washington lobbyist, for example, is the amiable Cliff Carter, a long-time LBJ insider. Jimmy Ling of Ling-Temco-Vought (which owns Braniff) and Troy Post, old-old Texas friends of Mr. Johnson's, control Braniff's corporate structure. Walter Jenkins, LBJ's top White House aide in the early Johnson years, is on its payroll.

But LBJ isn't in the White House any longer, and so when Braniff, along with all other major carriers. received an engraved invitation to buy $1,000-a-head tickets to the Republican gala honoring President Nixon, Vice President Agnew, and all new Republican Governors, Senators, and Representatives, Braniff's high command made a strategic decision to speedily accept.

Braniff's award from the Civil Aeronautics Board (CAB), which is headed by John H. Crooker, Jr. - another long-time Texas pal of the former President - gave it brand-new routes from St. Louis and five major Southern cities to Hawaii, Braniff's first chance to dip its toe into the lucrative Pacific air traffic.

The award was made by the CAB despite the fact that the examiner's recommendation to the board gave Braniff nothing at all. That is the award Mr. Nixon rescinded on Jan. 24, pending a complete White House review. The review could cancel out all of Braniff's gains.

The engraved invitation sent to Braniff by Republican National Chairman Ray C. Bliss and the chairmen of the Senate and House campaign committees contained a "face card" carefully explaining that "complete tables can be reserved" by individual companies (even though tickets can legally be purchased only by individuals, not corporations).

A footnote: Party fund-raisers hope to clear $3 million at the April 2 gala, with $500,000 earmarked for transition costs before Jan. 20 and the balance to be split between the National Committee, the Senate Committee and the House Committee.

DIRTY MOVIES

The first attempt by President Nixon's appointees in the Justice Department to redeem a campaign pledge to crack down on pornography is running aground on a hard legal fact of life.

It is not that Will Wilson, Assistant Attorney General in Charge of the Criminal Division, is lacking in zeal as an anti-smut crusader. The conservative Democrat-turned-Republican was outraged when shown excerpts of "I am Curious - Yellow," a salacious Swedish film about to be distributed in the U.S.

Concurring in Wilson's review, the U.S. Customs Office in New York had impounded the movie. The Second U.S. Court of Appeals in New York recently ordered it released. Wilson promptly proposed that the government appeal that decision to the Supreme Court.

That desire ran exactly counter to a decision by Solicitor General Erwin N. Griswold not to appeal. Griswold, one of the country's top legal minds and the Justice Department's only high-level holdover from the Johnson administration, countered Wilson's moral outrage with cool realism in urging this case with Attorney General John Mitchell.

While agreeing with Wilson about the facts of pornography, Griswold contended that the Second Circuit Court decision made the matter very nearly moot. Moreover, he feels that the government's legal case - as contrasted to its moral case - is shaky in the extreme.

Finally, Griswold, the Republican who would not mind being appointed to the Supreme Court by Mr. Nixon, wants to spare the high court the embarrassment of another highly publicized pornography case.

Campus Comment

The Magic

To the editor:

It seems very sad that the morality of 33 students should dictate the morality of the entire campus. If we accept this idea, then any group of 33 people can determine the rights of the rest of the community. Thus 33 Christians could ban Hillel or 33 atheists close the Newman Center. The minority has a right to their opinions, but they must in turn respect those of the majority.

We, the undersigned, all favor the retention of the present open recruitment policy. Its success can be seen in the large number of seniors who take advantage of it. If any of us would like to work for Dow or any other company, it is our right to do so. Mr. Story's suggestion of a state employment office is written in total ignorance of the State Offices of Employment Security's function. They are almost totally concerned with filling unskilled, semi-skilled and skilled positions; not executive technical careers.

Furthermore, we reject the contention that the upset students were martyrs. If Marie LeBeau would check her "neo-Christian" theology, she would find that one of the prerequisites for martyrdom is not desiring it, otherwise the person's action reeks of pride.

We feel President Lederle acted prudently and in the best interest of the entire campus community. We wish to commend President Lederle and the administration for their control of a potentially disruptive situation. Also, let it be known that we do not intend to have our education or rights disrupted by a small minority of students.

"Chicks" to Unite

To the editor:

Ladies, unite; you have nothing to lose but your girdles!

There is but one thing worse than being oppressed, and that is, being oppressed and being brainwashed into liking it. Men expect women to be timid, submissive, subservient - not just to wash the dishes, cook, wipe the baby's bottom, be seduced, but even to be the yes-man and the sweet companion. And most chicks are so ready to play that game, as long as they are amply rewarded with a diamond ring, pretty dresses, a station wagon, $25 a week allowance, babies, and the belief that they are put on a pedestal (when they actually are the pedestal.).

But it's not women against men. There's something about this society and its system of socialization which determines the sex roles and mores which make women what they are. Of course, most societies are patriarchal, most use sex as a means to divide the labor - but that doesn't mean any society must force half its population to suppress its own drives and feelings. All this is perpetuated in American society by the economic structure which uses the woman as a glorified object to be adorned and to adorn her home. Just look at all the commercial enterprises which make a buck out of femininity American-style, out of marriage (see the Bridal Fair on Monday), even out of the Women's Liberation movement itself (note Virginia Slims, designed to fit the contours of a woman's hands and lips).

If women would just start liking each other (instead of talking trivia and competing with each other), then they could get together and do something about this situation. Well, some of us - the Female Caucus of SMILE - are getting together this Sunday at 2:30 in the Student Union to have a workshop on Women's Liberation. All members of the five-college community are invited. Chivalry is dead.

Mammalia?

To the editor

During the first week of February several announcements regarding "Dogs and Cats" were published; these were signed by Priscilla D. Lord. I will compliment her on her humanitarian thoughts to "please think ahead" if one is contemplating acquiring a dog or cat. But there are several other good reasons why a student should "please think ahead" before acquiring an animal pet.

1. Animals living in a group setting, such as a residence hall, are known to become fractious.

2. Is anyone in the house where the animal is being kept allergic to animal fur? Many persons are. Do your adjacent neighbors' feelings about animals concur with yours? Do they object to the smell, wimpering (puppy), barking (dog), or meowing (cat) of an animal?

3. Dogs and cats can carry disease agents transmissible to man as well as arthropods (insects) which can cause disease to man. Some of these diseases are: (a) Rabies - this can be a serious disease in cats as well as in dogs. (b) Cat-scratch fever - can be transmitted by scratching, biting, licking, etc. Many times the animal has an inapparent infection and does not appear ill. (c) Rocky Mountain Spotted Fever - caused by the dog tick in the eastern United States. (d) Ringworm - both the scalp and body can be affected. This is a fungal disease and is very difficult to treat. (e) Leptospirosis - spread through the urine of the animal. (f) Creeping Eruption - dermatitis caused by dog or cat hookworm. (g) Echinococcosis (hydatid disease) - dog tapeworm. Dogs and cats carry other vectors and parasites which could cause human disease.

4. Food to feed the animal must be kept in a student's place of residence. If not properly stored, this food could draw insect pests.

The above are reasons the 1968-69 "Student Handbook" forbids the keeping of live animals in residence halls, fraternities, sororities, etc.

Tuba Technique Displayed In Solo Concert

By William Bellows

Mr. Richard Studeny of Northampton presented his graduate recital last Sunday, on his major instrument, the tuba. One rarely hears the tuba played as a solo instrument, and one expects a tuba to be a rather loud and brassy like a large trumpet, with a powerful sound. Mr. Studeny demonstrated that the tuba is acutally a quiet instrument with a soft mellow sound not unlike the french horn. His playing was lyrical and he showed his musicality, playing each piece with feeling and expression.

The first selection was Hindemith's SONATE FOR TUBA. This work is a challenging piece of modern music, and a major work for any tuba player's repetoire. Although Miss Blanton did an excellent job of accompanying, the tuba's sound was sometines lost in the unaccustical Bowker stage.

Next, Mr. Studeny played three songs from Schumann's DICHTERLIEBE. He had transcribed these himself for the tuba; they were originally for voice. These songs were very beautiful and they explored the tuba's melodic capabilities. The second song was the best, as Mr. Studeny showed fine control in the highest register.

In the last piece before intermission, Mr. Studeny, accompanied by Messrs. Purcell, Mirlion, Rosoff, and Tiurney presented CANZONA PER SONARE NO. 1 by Gabrieli. The balance in the quintet was good as was the intonation. The group had obviously rehearsed the Canzona well.

The first work after the intermission was SONATA FOR TUBA and PIANO by Wilder. This work is one of the best compositions available for tuba and was played quite well.

Next on the program was Hartley's SUITE FOR UNACCOM – PANIED TUBA. This was the high point of the program as Mr. Studeny showed fine technique and beautiful tone, while displaying the qualities of the tuba as a solo instrument.

Jazz Workshop Features "Elysian Spring"

Tonight, at 8 p.m. in Bowker Auditorium, the University Jazz Workshop will present its third concert, featuring "The Elysian Spring" and the "Kansas City Rockers."

The Workshop's two previous concerts were sold-out affairs; and the groups scheduled for tonight give promise of yet a third SRO event.

The night will begin with a set by the "Amherst Jazz Orchestra" an 18-piece big band under the leadership of trumpeter Jim Meyer.

Next on the agenda is a relatively new group, the "Kansas Rockers" - the personnel of this group are a chaotic band; and nobody is ever really sure how many of them will show up for a concert. Their music though - mean soul - is excellent. This will be their first public appearance.

Anchor group will be the "Elysian Spring" (formerly the Time Machine) - a softspoken powerhouse of versatility. Their music speaks for itself. "Elysian Spring" under the general direction of an old - time Amherst area pianist Rainer Bertrams, is now a familiar group to the campus. They have highlighted past Jazz Workshop concerts.

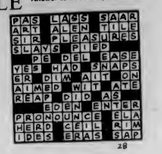
Artist-sculptor Ric Steliga has produced a continuous light show to run throughout the entire concert. Ric too is no stranger to Workshop productions - his efforts have enhanced their past productions.

A note from the Workshop people requests, "Please do not steal our posters until after the concert. The sixth set has already been posted in the Union in just two days." If you would like one, posters will be available free at Bowker on Friday night.

Limited tickets for this event will be available in advance at the Student Union box office for $1, or at the door for $1.25.

Faculty Scores Presented In Concert

Music by University Composers, a concert for the Howard M. Lebow Memorial Scholarship Fund, was presented Wednesday night at Bowker Auditorium. Original compositions by faculty composers Charles Fussell, Philip Bezanson, and Robert Stern were performed by various artists. The majority of the works were imaginative and musically ingenious, with the two outstanding performances of the evening being Philip Bezanson's Duo for Cello and Piano and Robert Stern's Music for Horn and Soprano.



Duo for Cello and Piano by Philip Bezanson was a dischord-filled, typically modern yet highly reflective work. Cellist Joel Krosnick and pianist Estela Kersenbaum Olevsky combined talents to present an interpretation of mastery and direction. Most impressive was the second movement Adagio where subtle rhythms and vastly - textured harmonies created a sense of extreme beauty.

Composter - pianist Robert Stern's premier performance of his Fantasy Pieve for piano was nothing exciting. Basically the work lacked unity. It dealt too frequently with long-held tones and diusonant contrasts to really be effective. It was centainly a pensive composition however, and this might have been what the piece was aiming for.

THE ELEMENTS OF OUR * MONTREAL

MONTREAL

Montreal is on the Island of Montreal at the junction of the St. Lawrence and Ottawa Rivers. The most conspicuous feature of Canada's city is Mount Royal, which rises to 764 feet. A city of 3 million, Montreal has been called a smaller New York City. The difference is the Parisian atmosphere enhanced by Montreal's Old City and a large French-speaking population. Montreal offers old world customs in a modern environment

The QUEEN ELIZABETH HOTEL

Conveniently located in the heart of Montreal, a Hilton hotel with ultra-modern facilities and French flavor.

For your comfort, each of the warmly-furnished guest rooms has private bath, radio and television.

For your pleasure, each of the hotel's dining rooms and lounges has a gourmet's choice of fine food and beverages. Reasonably priced.

SKIING

At Mont Gabriel Ski Resort in the Laurentian Mountains where the season extends well into April. Incomparable day and night skiing on 16 trails from beginner slopes to expert runs. All trails are kept in excellent condition and well-groomed. Besides skiing, there's ice skating, tobogganing, a heated swimming pool and a warm apres-ski lodge.

SIGHTSEEING

Old in years and seeped in history, yet young in spirit and vibrant with creativity, Montreal offers numerous points of interest. The Montreal Museum of Fine Arts, the site of Expo, Notre-Dame-de-Montreal, Place Des Arts theater, the zoo and gardens of Lafountaine in the heart of the city, and many more. Take a walking tour of Old Montreal or hire a taxicab driver with a tourist guide license. Maximum rate is $4.00 total per hour for several persons.

NIGHTLIFE

Montreal provides entertainment in great variety. Whether your mood is for an intimate cocktail lounge, a nightclub with dancing and floor shows or a rock discotheque, Montreal can fulfill it.

SHOPPING

Perfect places for a shopping spree — and you don't even have to step outdoors. Place Ville Marie, the underground shopping mall, has more than 200 boutiques and specialty shops plus three cinemas and live theatre.

SWIMMERS' TAKEOFF - The Redman swimming team will travel to Boston tomorrow for a 3:30 p.m. meet against M.I.T. Senior Co-captains Flip Morton and Bob Asquith will be making one of their two final appearances for the Redmen. March 6, 7 and 8 the team will be competing in the N.E.I.S.A. meet to be held in Connecticut. The swimming team has made an excellent showing in their last two against the Coast Guard. During the meet against Vermont, the team broke and set several new records for UMass. Shown in this photo are Mark Miller (center) and Maurice Lynch (right) in action against the Coast Guard.

Gymnasts Down Springfield, Unbeaten Record in Tact

The freshman gymnastics team kept their unbeaten record in tact Wednesday as they defeated the Springfield frosh, 123.30 - 117.18. Outstanding in floor exercises for UMass was Tony Vacca who placed first with an 8.5 and John Calabria in second place at 8.15.

Lenny Aubrey did a fine job in the side horse taking first place with an 8.95. Dick Ennis took second place in the rings with a 7.90.

The long horse team totaled 25.98 points taking first, second and third places. Vacca scored 8.73, Dave Genest, 8.70 and Calabria, 8.55.

The parallel bar team was led by Genest scoring 7.10 and Doug Salisbury at 7.05.

Vacca took first place in the high bar with a 6.95. Vacca also took first in the all-around competition scoring 42.43 and Salisbury took third at 35.08.

The frosh now have a 4-0 record and tomorrow will meet a varsity team from Trenton, N.J., for the last meet of the year.

DOWNHILL RUN - Sophomore Ted Martin will be skiing for the Redmen in the weekend slalom. If either he or Jerry Curran (see photo on right) can place fourth for the team, UMass has a chance for a slalom win. (MDC photo by John Kelly).

Skiers travel to northern New Hampshire to compete in a giant slalom tomorrow and another one Sunday. The race tomorrow will be sponsored by Northeastern University and held at Wildcat Mt. Eight college teams and several individual entries will compete in the giant slalom.

In Sunday's race, 16 colleges will compete in a two run slalom at the Tyrol Ski Area. These schools comprise all of the teams in the Osbourne Division and the Northern Division of N.E.I.S.C. With 128 skiers in this race, it will be a long drawn out affair.

Amherst College, the current leader in the Osbourne Division, will be favored in the giant slalom, but second ranked UMass has knocked them off in this event earlier in the year.

The key to a Redman victory will depend on the performances of two sophomores, Ted Martin and Jerry Curran. Either one of them has the ability to crash through with the necessary brilliance to put the Redmen on top.

The fastest four times are totaled for the team position and the efforts of Curran or Martin when added to the veterans Jim Garstang, Dave Kamila and Dick McHugh's performances should add up to a strong showing for UMass.

In the slalom, Coach Dick Mac Connell laments, "We just haven't found the groove this season in the slalom. I've had trouble getting the boys up for this event, and our results have been inconsistent."

The Redmen have drawn a much higher seed than Amherst for Sunday's slalom, and this may make a difference. With the heavy accumulation of new soft snow and the large number of racers in this race, the early starters will have a definite advantage.

The season will end next weekend with a final giant slalom at Cranmore in North Conway, New Hampshire.

SOPHOMORE STYLE - Jerry Curran, who has been skiing well all season for the Redmen, could give the team some added depth in the slalom events this weekend. If he finishes in the top four, the Redmen could have a win. (MDC photo by John Kelly).

Trackmen to Battle Defending URI for Yankee Conference Crown

Tomorrow, the University of Vermont field house will be the site of the annual Yankee Conference Championship Track Meet. Defending champ Rhode Island will be hard pressed by both UConn and UMass to hold its crown.

Redman coach Ken O'. en looking at the upcoming i t said, "Connecticut is strong in the running events and score most of their points from the 600 to the two mile. Rhode Island, as in the past, has good weight men, broad jumpers and pole vaulters. They also have good sprinters and hurdlers but their scoring power runs out in the running events.'

In assessing his own team the coach said, "We possess an all around scoring ability. We have good high jumpers, sprinters, hurdlers, middle distance and distance men and a good weight team."

The winning team will be the one that can hold on to most of the points in their strengths, the coach added. "We'll have to take points from both squads and because of this we would have to be rated as underdogs with URI and UConn, who would not be hurting each other's strengths, tabbed as the favorites.'

In the weight events, UMass will be counting on soph Ed Arcaro and senior Bill Wilen. Their chief opposition will be supplied by Bill Phillips of UNH in the weight and Horace Jennings of URI in the shot put. UMass' potential point scorers in the broad jump, Dick Dyer, Clarence Gaynor and Dave Canterbury should find their toughest opposition in Gary King of UNH and Bill Richardson of Maine.

Defending conference high jump champ John Ariensen, who won the event in 6'4 last year, will join other Redmen Cal Carpenter and Paul Nyman in hopes of taking the top three places in the event. Bob Keillon of the host team Vermont will try to break into the UMass trio.

Another strong UMass trio is sprinters Walter Mayo, Ed Heywood and Dave Marble. This group will try to continue to ground down the opposition with Henry Fowler of Rhode Island and Bill Richardson of Maine the top foes.

Hurdlers Jerry Spellman and Marc Lefever will go for top honors in their 60-yard specialty. Peter Whitfield, the defending conference champ from URI and Ed Jackson, New Hampshire's top hurdler will also vie for a first place finish.

The 600 could prove to produce the closest race of the day with a strong field representing four schools. UMass' contribution to this field will be senior Bob Hasselbaum, who placed second last year behind UMass' John Andersen who was graduated. UConn will have two strong runners in the field with George Pacheco and Bob Hilmar. Also on the track in the seeded heat will be Maine's Ed Miller and New Hampshire's Bob Wear.

The 1000-yard run will also see a close battle between Diego Gonzalez of UMass and Steve Flanagan, the recent New England 1000-yard champ, from UConn. When these two runners met in the UConn-UMass dual meet both runners set school records.

In the mile and two mile, the top runners will most probably be wearing either the blue of Connecticut or the Maroon of UMass. Milers Craig McColl, Bill Young, and John Vitale of the Huskies will hope to outrun Ron Wayne and Tom Derderian of the Redmen. McColl has the fastest time with a 4:09.6 mile to his credit. Wayne is the UMass record holder with a 4:13 mile.

JUMP DEFENDER - Redman Co-captain John Ariensen, who is defending the high jump conference title, will be backed up by Cal Carpenter and Paul Nyman in that event tomorrow to be held in New Hampshire. (MDC photo by Dave Evans).

Hoopmen Clobber St. Anselm's, 90-75, in Home Finale

By PETER PASCARELLI
Sports Editor

Peter Gayeska, 6'10, concluded his UMass homecourt career in great style last night as he led the Redmen to a 90-75 victory over a persistent St. Anselm's team before 2237 at the Cage.

The win left the N.I.T. hungry Redmen with a 16-6 record with 2 games remaining. The loss dropped the Hawks to 13-9.

Gayeska never was better than tonight. The big Cougar scored a career high of 29 points while hauling down 13 rebounds. He saved four of his points for the most important juncture of the game.

After leading since the first two minutes of the game, UMass was caught by the hit shooting Hawks at the 14:48 mark of the second half. Fittingly though, the man who scored the go ahead hoop for St. A's was guard Gerry McLean who scored 29 points.

It was here that Gayeska scored four points in a row to put the Redmen ahead to stay, 55-51 with 12:18 remaining. However, things were far from being concluded.

St. Anselm's hung tough throughout the latter stages as Gerry Flynn and Tom Gentile got hot from outside. With 5:35 showing, the Hawks still trailed by only four as the two teams traded hoops.

Gayeska was now forced to share the hero's mantle with Ray Ellerbrook, as he got red hot. The junior southpaw hit three straight 15 footers for the Redmen to push UMass out of a more comfortable margin of seven points with 1:454 to play.

Ellerbrook then sealed the victory with a big steal at 1:25. The Redmen proceeded to run in the last ten points of the game to give a misleading final margin.

UMass with an eight point run at about the six minute mark of the first half, got off to a 13-5 lead. Dennis Chapman had two hoops during the run, while Ken Mathias, who had 10 points the first half, had one basket and Gayeska one, off a fine feed by Mathias.

Gayeska returned the favor, as he set up Mathias as 13:05 to give UMass a ten point lead at 20-10. The two teams then traded points for six minutes until McLean got torrid from outside to lead the Hawks back with six at halftime.

The opening part of the second half was the same nip and tuck affair until McLean put the Hawks ahead for the only time in the game. However Gayeska and Ellerbrook restored sanity to a dangerous situation.

UMass now won five in a row and are headed toward a school win record.

Leading UMass, in addition to Gayeska's 29 points, was Ellerbrook with 18, Mathias with 12, Chapman also with 12. McLean had 29 for the Hawks while Flynn had 26.

REDMAN RANTINGS - Joe DiSarcina was suited up for the first time in two weeks but did not see any action . . . He was introduced with his senior mates, John Dreyer, Gayeska and JohnShockro who played a strong game in the substitute role . . .

FROSH TWO - Rich Vogeley drives in for two in frosh rout over St. Anselm's last night in the Cage.

Frosh Cagers Roll Over St. Anselm's, 105-70

By DICK BACKER
Staff Reporter

The UMass freshmen concluded a perfect season last night as they defeated St. Anselm's College, 105 -70. The win brought the Little Redman's record to 15-0 and broke a previous freshman record for wins set in as season by the 1961-1962 team.

From the opening tap it was UMass' ball game. Tom Austin won the tap, and Mike Pagliara gathered the ball and laid it in for two quick points.

Seconds later Rich Vogeley hit a jumper, and the Little Redmen were off and running.

Despite numerous turnovers and sloppy play, UMass led 8-5 at the 15 minute mark. St. Anselm's tried to freeze the ball with a three-man weave hoping for an easy lay-up underneath. The Redmen gained their poise and exploded for 16 consecutive points after that.

On the UMass special, Vogeley hit a jumper and ball hawking by Pagliara and John Bettancourt produced six more points. Austin, Julius Erving and Vogeley controlled both boards.

With 7.26 left in the first half, Mike Lowe hit a jumper. UMass came right back and outscored St. Anselm's 22-11, as they built up a halftime lead of 44-19.

The second half started out as a carbon copy of the first. UMass dominated the play as they scored 15 straight points. Austin led the spree with seven points including a stretch of five. Austin's block of Lowe's jumper produced the fanciest play of the game.

Bettancourt gathered in the ball and charged down the court. He stopped at the top of the key, faked left and passed right to Erving cutting into the basket for two. Seconds later Pagliara stole the ball, raced down court and scored as he faked the defenders out completely. Pagliara went left, drew the defender and proceeded to go right around him.

The Little Redmen continued applying pressure as they outrebounded St. Anselm's, 53-36, and out shot them 63 per cent to 32 per cent.

With time running out and UMass taking a commanding lead, Coach Peter Broaca took his starters out one by one. Only with the Little Redman subs did St. Anselm's manage to start hitting. Tom Landolfe hit the 100 mark at 3:27.

It was a well-balanced attack for the Little Redmen. Mike Pagliara paced UMass with 21 points. Erving had 16 points and 21 rebounds while Austin and Bettancourt had 16 apiece.

Pucksters Drop Finale, 7-0, to UNHC

By WALT STACHURA
Senior Reporter

DURHAM, N. H. - Graham Bruder's hat trick led the University of New Hampshire hockey team to a 7-0 whitewash of UMass at Snively Arena last night before a near capacity of 3500.

Bruder notched all three of his goals in the final six minutes of the game and the Wildcats scored four times in all in the last period as the Redmen appeared to run out of gas.

UMass found themselves down only 3-0 after the first two periods and played very evenly during the opening two periods but were unable to put the puck in the net.

New Hampshire center Rich David opened the scoring with the Wildcats when he beat a UMass defenseman to a loose puck and fired it past Redman goalie Larry Walsh from a wide angle.

Twenty-nine seconds later Bob Brandt tallied the second Wildcat goal when his ten footer went through Walsh's legs into the net. This goal was his 66th career goal, setting a UNH record.

The best Redman effort of the opening period came on a hard shot by Tom Babson that the Wildcat goalie made a quick split save on.

In the second period, the Redmen had several opportunities to get on the scoreboard, but UMH goalie Larry Smith was unbeatable. Ken Reddick had a breakaway early in the period but his shot went wide.

Midway through the second period, Jeff Sanborn had a breakaway after a fine pass by John Hartnett, broke him loose, but Smith stuck his leg pad out to deflect the puck just as the post.

After Ed Riley picked up a tripping penalty at 10:57, the Wildcats applied the pressure on their power play but Walsh made several fine saves. Just as Riley was returning to the ice Alan Clark fired a 40 foot slap shot from the left lane into the corner of the net.

On the goal, Walsh injurrd his left thigh forcing him to leave the game. He was replaced by Stu Kadish.

During the final period, the Redmen fell apart as the Wildcats pumped home four goals. Bruder got his first goal at 13:19 with a 15 footer between Kadish's pads. It was Bruder's first goal of the season.

Bruder picked up his second goal three minutes later on a 40 foot screen shot. David scored the sixth UNH goal at 19:11 and Bruder completed his hat trick 24 seconds later to finish the scoring for the night.

Saves in the last period showed the advantage that the Wildcats held as they outshot UMass 19-2.

For the season, UNH is now 22-5-1, while UMass finishes the season at 9-12.

All Systems Go for Apollo 9; Paves Way for Lunar Landing

CAPE KENNEDY, Fla. (AP) - The Apollo 9 commander and the astronaut's doctors yesterday declared the crew fit and eager to blast off today for a risky 10-day space flight that could clear the way for an American moon landing in July.

"We're looking forward to it and disappointed we couldn't go Friday,"said Astronaut James A. McDivitt. He, David R. Scott and Russell L. Schweickart have been suffering colds but "appear to be flight ready," National Aeronautics and Space Administration doctors said after a morning medical checkup.

A final examination was planned this morning before the trio climb aboard their spacecraft. They are to take off at 11 a.m. EST on a $340 million mission described by project officials as "the most complex we've ever launched."

With Vice President Spiro T. Agnew and a worldwide live television audience of millions looking on, the brute-strength rocket is to thunder away from the moonport and drill the astronauts into an earth orbit 119 miles high.

During the next 10 days, the crew will perform risky rendezvous exercises and engineering tests between their Apollo command ship and lunar module LEM, the spidery craft that will shuttle future astronauts to and from an Apollo command craft in moon orbit to the lunar surface.

It will be the first manned flight of a LEM, and if successful could be America's last earth orbital mission for at least two years.

Success would clear the way for the next flight, Apollo 10, to test theLEM in moon orbit in mid-May. The first lunar landing mission is now scheduled on Apollo 11, scheduled to blast off July 15. Highlights of today's flight will be a two-hour space walk by Schweickart, scheduled Thursday, and a risky maneuver the next day when McDivitt and Schweickart pilot the LEM 109 miles away from the command ship, flown by Scott, then rendezvous and link up again.

Apollo 9 Facts and Figures

Launch time: 11 a.m. EST.

Astronauts: Air Force Cols. James A. McDivitt, 39, and David R. Scott, 36, and civilian Russell L. Schweickart, 33.

Purpose: Orbit the earth to qualify all pieces of Apollo hardware, including first manned test of lunar module designed to land two men on the moon. Rendezvous and docking exercises between lunar module and Apollo 9 command module and a two-hour space walk by Schweickart.

Flight duration: 9 days, 22 hours, 47 minutes.

Rocket: Three-stage Saturn 5, which with Apollo spacecraft stands 363 feet tall. The world's most powerful booster, with first-stage thrust of 7.7 million pounds.

Cost of mission: Saturn 5, $185 million; Apollo 9 craft, $55 million; lunar module, $41 million; launch operations, including recovery forces, $59 million. Total $340 million.

SDS Plans All Day Protest of Bridal Fair

By RICHARD LANE
Senior Reporter

An SDS workshop on "Women's Liberation" yesterday made plans to conduct a form of protest against the Bridal Fair to take place today in the Student Union. Approximately 20 SDS members met in the Nantucket Room and decided to set up tables and pass out leaflets all day concerning the Fair. The group was undecided as to what sort, if any, active demonstration they would engage in to actually disrupt the Fair.

According to one young coed the Bridal Fair is being criticized because it is "not where it's at." Another stated that the Fair is wrong because it is "setting up models for these girls to look up to," and that these models are not necessarily correct.

Yesterday's action stemmed from a weekend conference of regional SDS members called the Dan Shay's Assembly which met at Amherst College. The conference was attended by less than 100 members, mostly from the Springfield Movement for a Democratic Society, Amherst and Smith Colleges and the UMass Chapters.

In addition to Bridal Fair action, the two day SDS convention also passed four proposals for future action: (1) that the Springfield workshop become the area office of Western Massachusetts SDS chapters; (2) Springfield project on taxation and the ruling class; (3) Springfield area free school; and (4) labor studies and action program.

The second proposal on the Springfield taxation project centers around the Massachusetts Mutual Insurance Co. and, according to Leverett Millen, is the company's "control of major financial institutions of Springfield," and its effect on the city's population.

Mass. Mutual and others are "not paying the taxes that they should be paying" said Millen and are hence creating the real Massachusetts tax problems. The insurance companies have been able to influence legislative action which allows them a way out (or a reduced way) of tax paying. Millen's proposal calls for "people to begin to look at tax bases in their own community," as well as to "begin demonstrations against Mass. Mutual agents whenever they come to colleges."

Tom Bell spoke for the Springfield area free school saying that it must be "most similar to an SDS chapter," with an aim to "action, criticism, education, and learning of skills." Bell said that he hoped the school might eventually lead to a political union. The school is to place emphasis on radical research and provide a background for action in such fields as the local power structure, the welfare system, housing and transportation in the city, the tax base, educational system, and the effects of militarization on the area. Also to be studied will be the world of revolutionary and U.S. left movements and a radical analysis of capitalism and imperialism.

Saturday afternoon the convention conducted a workshop on capitalism with preliminary remarks by chairman John Weissman on the purpose of Students for a Democratic Society. He stated that "SDS has always seen itself as an on campus movement,' and a "movement from liberalism to self-consciousness not so much doing something for others as for ourselves." According to Weissman the group must be or have an analysis of imperialism, socialism, and capitalism with a "clear methodology of choosing and attacking the enemy." "Americans must understand the need for revolution," he added.

Steve Hallwell of New York University spoke first on the military phases of the war. He himself toured Southeast Asia a short time ago. Hallwell speculated that due to the latest Viet Cong offensive around Saigon and other areas bombing may be resumed and the war "may enter a whole, new, fantastic stage of fighting." He also believes that the North Vietnamese and Viet Cong are willing to use any kind of diplomatic action possible to end the war but that the U.S. may well pull away from the talks first. Hallwell concluded by saying that "We really don't understand Vietnam."

The group agreed that confrontation should be used more and that the activists should thus be more prepared (such as in self-defense and equipment). One member stated that "It's going to be rough," but that "I don't think we should stop because of opposition. We should push ourselves to the limits."

Soviets Claim Red Chinese Border Attack

MOSCOW (AP) - The Soviet Union said a Red Chinese unit crossed into far eastern Soviet territory yesterday and fired at Soviet border guards. The Chinese later accused the Soviets of a like incursion and said many Chinese frontier guards were killed and wounded.

The Soviet news agency Tass said: "Violators of the frontier were chased away from Soviet territory by the resolute actions of Soviet border guards.

The Chinese version, via Peking radio monitored in Tokyo, mentioned no Chinese bordercrossing and said Soviet troops entered northeast Manchuria. It said the Peking government lodged a protest with the Soviet Union "over this grave border violation incident."

THE NEWS IN BRIEF

AMMAN, Jordan (AP) - Jordanian and Israeli forces fought a one-hour and 40-minute artillery duel in the southern Jordan valley yesterday afternoon, a Jordan army spokesman reported.

He said Israeli forces on the occupied west bank of the Jordan opened up with artillery batteries on Jordanian forces in Karameh village, five miles north of Allenby Bridge. The Jordanians returned the fire, he added, and hit an Israeli artillery position and silenced it. There were no casualties among the Jordanians, the spokesman said.

WASHINGTON (AP) - Former President Dwight D. Eisenhower, his pneumonia on the wane, ate his first solid meal in nearly two weeks yesterday.

Doctors at Walter Reed Army Hospital reported that "the area of pneumonia in the right lung base is markedly diminished" 48 hours after this new ailment was first made public.

KYOTO, Japan (AP) - Smashing window panes and tearing up papers, about 300 student radicals left offices of Kyoto University in a mess yesterday. The rampage occurred after the helmeted left-wing students staged wild demonstrations on the campus of thestate-finance university in an attempt to block entrace examinations, part of an effort to paralyze school operations until officials agree to demands for reform.

Journalism Prof Honored by SRSPI

SAVANNAH, Ga. - Dr. Dario Politella, UMass journalism professor was honored here for "meritorious achievement in promoting effective communication among the disparate elements of the college campuses in America" by the Southern Regional School Press Institute and the Southern Universities Student Government Association, Feb. 21.

President of the National Council of College Publications Advisers, Dr. Politella was awarded a bronze plaque. The award ceremoney was held at Savannah State College before 400 student journalists and advisers from 15 southern states.

In making the presentation, SRSPI Director Wilton C. Scott lauded Dr. Politella for his "devotion to the cause of promoting the welfare of student journalists, regardless of race, color and creed."

Dr. Politella is recognized nationally for his work in advising student publications. He is Coordinator of NCCPA's Commission on the Freedom and Responsibilities of the College Student Press in America and has served as faculty adviser to publications at Kent (Ohio) State U., Syracuse U., Ball State U. (Ind.) and UMass. He is editor and founder of the triannual magazine, "The Collegiate Journalist," and editor of the biennial "Directory of the College Student Press in America.' A popular speaker and prolific writer, he has been published in every major magazine in his field.

Also receiving plaques were the Honorable Carl E. Sanders, former Governor of Georgia, and Sylvan Meyer, editor of The Daily Times of Gainesville, Ga. They were also honored for their "unselfish devotion to promoting interracial good will through communication."

Student Workers Discuss Forming Unions

By MARC ELFMAN
Staff Reporter

The possibilities for the creation of a union of student workers were discussed Friday, at an open meeting held in the Student Union.

Aurthur Glauje, initiator of the meeting, intends to ". . .make an US, rather than a ME out of the student worker."

The concensus was that the Student Senate could not adequately present the grievances and demands of the workers to the administration, if they do not work themselves.

Two plans were proposed to alleviate the alleged unfair wages and lack of benefits.

The first plan, a twenty per cent raise across the board, coincides with the demands of the state employees being brought before the Massachusetts Senate now.

The second plans asks for:

1. A $.20 work allowance per meal at the nearest cafeteria (no requirement to buy a meal ticket before getting a job at a cafeteria)

2. A choice between a twenty minute non-punched out meal break or a half an hour punched out break.

3. a) A student work organization with a budget from University funds.

b) A room in the new student center or a desk in the placement office manned by a paid student worker, who would represent the student workers' complaints and inform new student workers of their rights.

Another meeting will be held tomorrow, at seven thirty to organize the group and discuss future lines of action.

MDC Model of the Year Chosen

By HELEN KENSICK
Squaw Talk Writer

Deborah Carter, an attractive UMass coed was chosen the DAILY COLLEGIAN Model of the Year last night from 11 finalists in the Plymouth Room of the Student Union. She is an eighteen-year old freshman from Springfield.

As the DAILY COLLEGIAN Model of the Year, Debbie will go to New York the weekend of March 8 to model spring fashions for a special fashion magazine to be put out by the COLLEGIAN. She will model clothes from New York stores that are also available in the Amherst area Saturday. Sunday, she will model the clothes taken directly from Amherst area stores at well-known landmarks in New York.

Donna Holman was chosen runner-up in the contest. The other finalists, who will model for subsequent "Squaw Talk" fashion features, include Averie Katz, Julie Dunning, Nancy Nickerson, Constance Teahan, Nancy Operacz, Susan Newman, Deborah Hopkins, Victoria Brandt and Ingrid White.

Crime on the Rise

Crime in this country has been rising at an alarming rate of about 16% - 19% a year , and is continuing. Washington D.C. has the third worst crime rate among the 20 cities of comparable size.

Crime has caused not only many injuries and deaths, but is becoming financially ruinous to Washington. Merchants are robbed and shot at, and accordingly they go out of business or move to the suburbs. Loss of tourists is definitely noticeable. Shoppers no longer come in to buy, but do business in safer districts.

Rioting is a major problem. The city's population is declining at a fast rate as the affluent, mostly white, population leaves. White workers come into the city by day making the city one-half white and one-half black. But at night the city is two-thirds black. The people that could afford to leave, did, and the remaining are afraid.

President Nixon is putting into effect measures long needed to combat this unnecessary rise in crime, such as: hiring of 1,000 police officers, reorganization of Washington's judicial system, strengthening rehabilitation programs, and instituting a system of preventive detention. In Washington, the criminal cases are brought before federal judges, who can't set prohibitively high bails (1966 Reform Act). But violent crimes by the habitual criminal are a problem. As President Nixon said "Men walking on probation are responsible for many of the crimes taking place in the city." These measures are to set the pace also for law enforcement in the entire nation.

Unfortunately this means an accused man with a record will be held over until trial. But if it comes down to whose freedom is to be lessened - his or the victims of crime, I must agree with Mr. Wilson, President Nixon's expert on crime prevention, "If somebody's liberties are being curtailed, the person charged with crime has to lose some of his."

The crime rate is ridiculously high all over the country. To preserve our own right of life without fear of violence and the death and destruction it brings, new and stronger deterrents must be used.

I have tortured
Even without the mushroom cloud still I would have hated

I would have done the same the same things
even if there were no death

I will not be held like a drunkard

I refuse the universal alibi

Like an empty telephone booth

Statement:

Committee to End Military-Industrial Recruitment

The Committee to End Military and Industrial Recruitment will present two demands to President Lederle and the Board of Trustees. The first demand is a request that members of the Committee be allowed to attend the next meeting of the Board of Trustees in order to explain its position. The second demand is that a substantial number of students be chosen to serve as full participating members of the Board of Trustees. The Committee will hold a march to dramatize its demands, Monday, March 3, at 1:00 p.m. The march will form in the main lobby of the Student Union.

A Poem

To the editor:

On tuesday I walked by and heard a little roar
so natch decided an investigate and found to my abbor(rence):
The President Lederle Show.

some students came to humiliate rather than to construct and expiate
Oh Yes! Yes, you did, but damn, his patience would not sway to even the highest humiliation bid.

if I were in his position
I do not think my ears would listen in this duty I would snap till the students stop throwing loaded crap,

Open Forum

To the editor:

The University community will have the opportunity to confront a DOW spokesman, Mr. Dean Wakefield, Eastern Public Relations Manager, of DOW Chemical Company. The DEBATE WITH DOW, sponsored by Sigma Alpha Mu will be held Thursday, March 6, in the Student Union Ballroom at eight p.m. Many students have expressed a desire to hold a dialogue with representatives from corporate structures, since American business, as well as other segments of our society, are being asked to define and justify their roles in a nation geared for war against the wishes of many Americans. Is there national guilt for the war in Viet-Nam? What can be expected of Dow in a time of national guilt? What can be expected of students?

Participation in programs like the DEBATE WITH DOW is a beginning to answering these questions. The turnout for this event will be one measure of the concern students have for answering these questions. I hope that concern is intense. I hope we are not facing a dying nation.

On Freedom

To the editor:

I wholeheartedly concur with the opinion of James Colbert expressed on the front page of Friday's COLLEGIAN. I'd support anyone's freedom of speech and of dissent, but only if it did not deny basic privileges to others. The Dow demonstrators did not exhibit this courtesy; in exercising their freedom they usurped my own.

Thank goodness someone has the intelligence to stand up for the basic rights of the apathetic masses! I hope the University expels the 33 students involved - for depriving the rest of us of our freedom of choice.

Susan Jerome

Sordid History

To the editor:

On Feb. 26th, the COLLEGIAN printed a small article dutifully announcing the "surprise" of the Administration at the resignation of Dean Hunsburger of COSIAC. The unhappy truth of the matter is that Administrators and Faculty alike knew that the Dean would and HAD to go, for he made a costly political mistake.

The former Dean, consulting the "Old Guard" in the History Dept., signed Dr. Potash as Department Head, and THEN innocently presented him to the Department for approval. When confronted with his hanky-panky, the Dean denied it; but he was through.

But the vendetta in the History Dept. has just begun anew!! The senior members of the department are retaliating against the "Young Turks" who refuse to play ball without regard for the rules. This feud between the senior and junior members has raged fiercely since the publication of the COOK REPORT last spring. Six members of the staff are now being fired; six others are ready to quit. Grad students in History are so upset they they've published a paper called THE GADFLY in order to vent their rath. In light of the failure of the Administration, History Department, and COLLEGIAN to report this mess, I feel a full investigation is needed by both the Student and Faculty Senates.

UMass Chemistry Professor to Receive Plastics Science and Engineering Award

GREENWICH, Conn. - Richard S. Stein, Commonwealth Professor of Chemistry and director of the Polymer Research Institute at UMass, has been elected to receive the International Award in Plastics Science and Engineering, given annually by the Society of Plastics Engineers (SPE). Announcement of the Award, sponsored by the New York section, was made by Gim P. Fong of Sweetheart Plastics, Inc., President of SPE, at the society's council meeting this week in New York.

The award, comprising a certificate, a gold medal and a cash honorarium of $1000, will be presented to Dr. Stein during the society's 27th Annual Technical Conference at the Palmer House in Chicago, May 5 through 8. At that time he will deliver his International Award Lecture, "Rheo-Optics of Polymers on Two Continents."

The award was established by the society in 1962 to recognize outstanding achievements of distinguished scientists in the plastics field.

Dr. Stein has conducted a productive research program for many years at UMass on the physical chemistry of polymers. By himself, or in conjunction with colleagues, he has published over 100 treatises on high polymers. Among his most important accomplishments have been the development of a number of rheo-optical techniques for studying mechanisms of polymer deformation, and propounding a theory of light-scattering from polymeric solids.

DR. RICHARD S. STEIN

Together with Professor Roger S. Porter (who will give the award citation in Chicago), Dr. Stein helped establish the University's Polymer Science and Engineering Program. The internationally recognized Polymer Research Institute has a staff of seven professors and has approximately 50 graduate students in attendance.

In accepting the SPE International Award, Dr. Stein joins a distinguished list of recipients, including Nobel Prize winner Guilio Natta, the 1963 award winner. Last year the award was present to Dr. Raymond F. Boyer, director of plastics research, Dow Chemical Co.

Born in Far Rockaway, N.Y., in 1925, Dr. Stein received his B.S. degree from the Polytechnic Institute of Brooklyn in 1945, and his doctorate from Princeton University in 1948. He held assistant professorships at both schools before his UMass appointment in 1950 in the same capacity. He was promoted to full professor in 1959, and in 1961 achieved the University's highest professional rank, Commonwealth Professor.

A Fulbright Lecturer at the University of Kyoto in Japan for the past six months, Dr. Stein returns to UMass this semester to resume his teaching at the institute.

Iraq to Hang More Spies

JERUSALEM (AP) - Israel's Foreign Ministry said yesterday sources have confirmed that Iraq intends to hang another group of alleged spies, including three Jews today or tomorrow.

Spokesman Shmuel Ovnath said Israel was doing everything it could to mobilize world organizations, governments and public opinion to avert the executions.

Valley Peace Center to Hold Draft Counselling in Baker

The continuing " Peace and Freedom" program of the Valley Peace Center will hold its second discussion program of this semester tonight at 7 p.m. in Baker Lounge. "Why Vietnam" the official Defense Department film explaining the government's position on the Vietnamese War will be shown. Members of the Valley Peace Center and other members of the peace movement on campus will be present to offer rebuttal to the content of the film.

This discussion is part of a general peace and freedom program which includes draft counseling. The individual draft counseling is available every Monday night from 6:30 - 8 p.m. in both Coolidge Lobby and Baker Lobby. Trained draft counselors from the Peace Center are on hand during each of these sessions. The Peace Center offers its apologies for last Monday nights program when due to the snow storm the film did not arrive. It is now on campus however and will be shown tonight in Baker.

Joel Kronsnick, resident faculty cellist at UMass will present a recital in Bowker Auditorium Wednesday, 8 p.m.

For his recital, Krosnick will be assisted by the pianist Samuel Sanders in a program including Robert Schumann's "Fantasiestucke, Opus 73; Beethovan's Sonata in C Major, Opus 102, No. 1; Charles Fussell's "Ballades for Cello and Piano which will be a premiere; Dubussy's Sonate. Also Chopin's "Polonaise Brilliante, Opus 3 and Davidoff's "Allegro de Concert, Opus 11.

This event is sponsored by the UMass Department of Music and is open to the public without charge.

UMT to Hold Production Tryouts

UMass Theatre will hold tryouts this week for two major productions. THE MAROWITZ "HAMLET", a contemporary (and controversial) version of Shakespeare's tragedy, will be given its New England premier performance here April 23-26. Associate Professor Vincent Brann, the director, said "Marowitz uses a 'collage' technique as a means of deliberately creating discontinuity - to take the language, the structure, and the narrative of the play and discover to what extent one can juggle those elements and still maintain contact with what is essential in HAMLET."

Tryouts will also be held this week for the May 7-10 production of Ron Cowan's SUMMERTREE, to be directed by Jim Young Chairman of the Theatre and Oral Interpretation Area.

Scripts of THE MAROWITZ "HAMLET" are available in Bartlett 362. SUMMERTREE scripts are on reserve in Goodell Library. Tryouts will be held in Barlett Hall, room 119 and 125, today at 4:30 p.m. and tomorrow at 7 p.m. All those interested, regardless of experience, are encouraged to try out. For further information, contact Mr. Young at Bartlett 357, or Mr. Brann at Machmer 402.

Jazz Groups Present Third Workshop in Bowker

By SUSAN SCHMEHL
Fine Arts Staff

Friday night in Bowker Auditorium the University JazzWorkshop presented its third concert, featuring the "Elysian Spring" and the "Kansas City Rockers".

The evening began promptly with a set by the "Amherst Jazz Orchestra", an 18 piece band directed by Jim Meyer, trumpeter. Appearing more conservative by contrast to the following groups, it was nonetheless well received and gave a highly professional performance. It was clearly evident that much time and careful precision was utilized to give the group their fine polish.

Following the Jazz group, was the "Kansas City Rockers" in their first public appearance. The six-man lively ensemble played reminiscently of "Blood, Sweat and Tears" and others in their "mean soul" style. Although the vocal aspect of the group was sometimes overwhelmed by the horns, the instrumental was excellent.

The " Elysian Spring" (formerly the Time Machine) concluded the entertainment with their ethereal sounding and extremely versatile music, under the general direction of pianist Rainer Bertrams. They were the highlight of the evening as in past workshops and as phrased in an earlier article they were "a softspoken powerhouse of versatility" - most enjoyably so. The group is also releasing their first album which will be available in the spring.

Should you drink beer straight from the bottle?

If you're on a blanket party or something, carrying along a glass is pretty clumsy. But when it's convenient, we think it's a shame not to use one. Keeping Budweiser inside the bottle or can is missing half the fun.

Those tiny bubbles getting organized at the top of your glass have a lot to do with taste and aroma. Most beers have carbonation pumped in mechanically. Not Budweiser. We go to a barrel of trouble and expense to let Budweiser create its own bubbles with the natural carbonation of Beechwood Ageing. So you really can't blame us for wanting you to get it at its best, can you?

Just for fun, pour your next four or five bottles of Bud into a glass. If you don't agree that the extra taste, clarity and aroma make a big difference, go back to the bottle.

We won't say another word.

Budweiser. is the King of Beers.

Grapplers Split Weekend Meets Finish with Finest Record (9-5)

By BOB GANLEY
Staff Reporter

The UMass varsity wrestling team closed its dual meet season with a win and a loss over the weekend. On Friday night, the Redmen defeated Boston College 31-12 and on Sat. afternoon, they lost a close 23-17 decision to M.I.T. They ended the season with a 9-6 record, which is the best ever for a UMass wrestling team.

In the Friday night meet, the Redmen fell behind early as Nick Di Domenico (115), Howie Kaplin (130) and Phio Davis (137) lost decisions. However, the next six matches were completely dominated by UMass wrestlers. Bob Freeman decisioned his opponent after coming very close to pinning him. Mike Brauner, Tom Young, and Tom Andrewes gave the Redmen 15 quick points as they pinned their adversaries.

Bob Willman and George Zguris sewed up the meet as Willman won an overwhelming decision and Zguris won with a second period pin. Heavyweight Bob Gilbert made his first appearance of the year, but didn't have enough as he lost a 7-3 decision.

The Saturday meet was almost the highlight of the season for the Redmen. Coach Homer Barr knew his forces would be the underdog as they were facing a team which finished second in the New England tournament last year and boasted three individual New England champs. Unfortunately for UMass, one of the three was heavyweight Fred Andree, who also placed fourth in the Nationals last year.

After falling behind 13-0, the Redmen came back to close the score to 18-17. An upset was in the making, but the only match remaining was the unlimited class and Andree, who has won 42 straight dual meets made it 43 as he pinned tough Tom Callaghan in the second period.

Inability to win at the low weight classes hurt the Redmen and proved to be the deciding factor in the final score. DiDomenico suffered a third pin in his match as did Bill Goodwin in the 123 lb. class. Kaplin didn't get pinned, but he spent a great deal of time on the mat while losing a one sided decision.

Phil Davis started the UMass comeback by decisioning his opponent and Bob Freeman did the same at 145 lbs. Freeman may have established himself as the best in New England as he completely demolished Maxham of M.I.T. who is defending New England champion. Bobby was much the superior wrestler in his overwhelming 14-3 victory.

Brauner was also facing a N.E. champ and wrestled very well in a 1-1 draw. Young and Andrewes won by decisions to bring their team to within a point of the wrestlers from Cambridge.

The meet was the final tuneup for the N.E. tourney next weekend at Worcester and with the performances lately of Freeman, Young and Andrewes, Coach Barr is beginning to feel optimistic of a high finish by the Redmen.

UMass Stuns Yankee Conference in Track Victory

By DAVE EVANS
Staff Reporter

CLEARING THE BAR is Cal Carpenter, whose jump of 6' 4" won first place in that event. UMass beat chief rival UConn at the Yankee Conference Track Meet in Burlington, Vt. (MDC photo by Dave Evans)

An inspired win in the two mile run by Senior Co-Captain Charlie Lang nailed the lid on chief rival UConn to give the underdog University of Mass. track team the Yankee Conference indoor track and Field Championships at Burlington, Vt., Saturday. The Redmen scored 55 points to win. Appropriately in keeping with UMass' style this year, they never led in the meet until the very end with only the relay left to be run and the results of the high jump to be tabulated.

At one point in the meet UMass was behind the leaders by 20 points twelve points behind first place Rhode Island. However, URI had done about all the scoring that they would for the afternoon, and the real threat was UConn, who was a point ahead of the Redmen. It was at this point that UMass began to dominate the meet by practically outscoring all of the other teams combined. UMass picked up 32 points to the rest of the teams 35. Leading the charge was two-miler Lang who not only ran his best time ever, but also broke the old conference record in the event. Lang's time of 9:07.9 broke the record by more than 15 seconds. Also finishing under the old record was Paul Hoss in third place and Leo Duart in fifth. These two men broke up the UConn tandem of Dick Sparling and John Vitale who had ideas of placing 1-2.

Following the two mile, was another UMass - UConn confrontation in the 1000 yard run. Diego Gonzalez, running a tough race, broke the school record for the second time this year and managed to break up a potential 1-2-3 UConn finish by nabbing second place. Grabbing fifth place for the Redmen was Sophomore Ron Wayne, running his second race of the day. Wayne had earlier taken fourth in the mile in 4:13.4.

Going into the relay, Coach Ken O'Brien's boys were only three points behind UConn, and the results from the high jump, a strong UMass event, were not yet in. Behind a blazing lead-off leg by Steve Chase (50.5) the Redmen were in the lead all the way as Bill Donaldson, (52.9); Bob Hasselbaum (51.9); and Jerry Spellman (50.9) increased the distance over the rest of the field to win in 3:26.3.

With the meet pretty much in hand UMass' Cal Carpenter took top honors in the high jump with a leap of 6'5". Following him were John Arienson in third and Pul Nyman in fourth place as they cleared 6'3" and 6'3" respectively. This great finish to the meet provided the margin of victory for O'Brien's team.

Doing the early scoring were the sprint, hurdle and field event forces, who have been consistent point scorers all year. Starting the scoring off was weightman Ed Arcaro. Arcaro heaved the 35 pound weight 52'9" to take a valuable third place. Unfortunately, Arcaro injured his shoulder and neck in this event and could barely compete in the shot put, in which he did not place.

Sophomore Dave Canterbury, while not jumping his best, did manage to land fifth. The group of finalists in this event were all within several inches of each other, with Bob Richardson of Maine the eventual winner at 22'7".

In the sprints and hurdles, it was basically UMass fighting it out with URI. Soph Walt Moyo, defeated for the first time this year took second behind Rhode Island Bob Fowler. Consistant Dave Marble took third place to give UMass the needed points in this event.

In the final of the high hurdles it was a slightly different story as sophomore Spellman found himself in the final with three URI men. UMass' other hurdler, Marc Lefever, still bothered by a hamstring strain, had been eliminated earlier in a run-off for fifth place. Spellman was outleaned at the tape in a close decision with Paul Whitfield of URI edging him for first.

In the long sprint race of the day, senior co-captain Bob Hasselbaum took the lead at the start of the 600 and was never headed. Hasselbaum, co-record holder of the 440 outdoors, ran his best time Saturday in the 600, winning in 1:13.1.

The win was a most satisfying one for both Coach O'Brien, Coach Gary Schwartz and the team. This year started off as a lesson in frustration for the team, but has since turned into one of great satisfaction and reward. Much more will be heard of this team before the year is over, especially when they compete outdoors this spring on their new Tartan track. It has been six years since the Redmen track team had a home meet. Congratulations are in order for both Coach O'Brien and his assistant Coach Schwartz on their first Yankee Conference championship.

CHARLIE LANG and found itself in sixth place. Refusing to get rattled, the Redmen responded to the pressure remarkably well. A young team, comprised largely of sophomores and juniors, they continued to pick off points in almost every event, and pulled closer to the leaders, URI, and UConn.

With only four events remaining, UMass was still in third place

Conference Streak Broken As Redmen Prepare for Final Against UNH

By MIKE CURRAN
Senior Reporter

KINGSTON, R.I. - UMass blew an 18 point lead, a game, and with it an N.I.T. berth as they fell to Rhode Island 57-56 before 2100 fans here in Keaney Gymnasium Friday night.

The Redmen, riding high with a 42-24 lead with 14:21 remaining in the contest, fell before a full-court Ram press which forced the usually poised visitors into a bad case of the jitters and numerous turnovers. UMass's record now stands at 16-7, 8-1 in the conference.

Coach Jack Leaman's league champs, although not sharp offensively, outplayed Rhody by a wide margin in the opening period, Pete Gayeska, hitting on short hooks and followups, got the Redmen out to an early 15-8 lead after the Rams had managed a 6-5 edge in the opening minutes.

Rhode Island was completely stymied on offense by the visitor's combination defense.

Despite the efforts of John Fulty and Claude English, the shooting of Ray Ellerbrook and Dennis Chapman further increased the UMass advantage to 32-18 to halftime.

After intermission the Rams, who skipped their second half warmups, started to work the ball inside with more consistency. Inside hoops by Ron Louder and Fulty cut the Redman lead to 32-22.

A hoop and a freethrow from Ellerbrook sent Rhody into a full court press, however. For a time this didn't affect UMass. Bob Dempsey's steal and lay-in, followed by a John Shockre rebound shot, and an Ellerbrook solo seemed to put the visitors into a commanding 42-24 margin.

The roof caved in on UMass' tournament hopes at this point. For the next six minutes, the Redmen could only manage one free throw, by Shockre, while the Rams scored 18 points. In this span UMass missed three foul shots, two of them the start of potential one-and-one opportunities, and turned the ball over four times to the aggressive Rhody press.

Ellerbrook, Shockre, Gayeska, and Dempsey tried to rally the Redmen, but even when they pulled UMass back into a 55-47 edge, it looked bad. Fulty was red hot and the visitors had no one who could stop him.

A rebound by Harvey Fine, a Ron Fiskevitch free throw and two hoops from Fulty narrowed the lead to a single point again. Ken Mathias' charity stripe shot put UMass up, 56-54, but Fulty, scoring at will, tied the game with 59 seconds go to go.

The Redmen froze the ball until 14 seconds remained, called time out, then tried to set up Ellerbrook on the Iowa State pattern. The junior guard's shot bounced off the rim.. Fulty grabbed the rebound, getting fouled in the process.

With 3 seconds left, the 6'6 junior from Natick, one of the best free-throw shooters in the nation, calmly sank the shot, and UMass.

A desperation shot at the buzzer was all the visitors could do with such little time remaining.

DOUBLE DRIBBLES . . . Fulty led all scorers with 25 points, 18 in the second half. He scored 12 of Rhody's last 15 markers . . . Ellerbrook and Gayeska tallied 19 and 14 respectively . . . Shockre came up with eight big points in a reserve role . . . UMass outrebounded Rhode Island 39-36 with Mathias' nine caroms leading the way . . .The bus ride home which was a shoo-in for worst of the year, considering the outcome of the game, wrapped up the award when a flat tire held up the trip home for a good two hours . . . Considering the results of Saturday night's action, losses to N. Y. U., Penn State, and Holy Cross, the Redmen would have been invited to the N.I.T. had they not faltered at Keaney Gymnasium.

Ray Ellerbrook tallied 19 points in a loosing cause.

Varsity Riflemen Second at Coast Guard

The Varsity riflemen travelled to New London on Saturday to fire against marksmen from B.C., Brown, New Haven College and Coast Guard Academy. The Academy cadets who rank first in New England this season, had entered three teams of four and were dominating the team event until the Redmen arrived. With Dudley Darling and David Sears leading the way with scores of 285 out of 300, the UMass team scored a total of 1131. This gave them 2nd place medals in a field of eight, behind Coast Guard's winning score of 1149.

The second UMass team finished 6th with 1096. Doug Hjorth was high man with 280.

In the following individual competition, most of the Redmen's scores dropped off, but John O' Donoghue shot way above his recent form to become high UMass individual with 284 and 7th place in 40.

The Riflemen are 8-0 on their regular season which winds up next week wit h a match at W.P.I. After that they have two meets at M.I.T., two chances to get revenge over Coast Guard.

Administrative Misunderstandings Key to Hunsberger Resignation

By DONALD A. EPSTEIN
Editor-in-Chief
Copyright 1969 Massachusetts Daily Collegian

I. Moyer Hunsberger, former Dean of the College of Arts and Sciences, resigned last week as a result of a tragedy of circumstances involving misunderstandings on the part of certain members of the history department and mistakes resulting from administrative bureaucracy.

Hunsberger's resignation followed a meeting between him and the faculty of the history department on Feb. 20. The meeting was called to discuss the proposed reappointment of Professor Robert A. Potash as department head. Under questioning at "that very tense session," Hunsberger said he was "coming i n good faith" to consult the department concerning the appointment. However, immediately thereafter, Associate Prof. R. Dean Ware stood up and said that he had a Xerox copy of a letter signed by President John W. Lederle, Provost Oswald Tippo, and Hunsberger stating that in fact Potash had already been formally recommeaded for the job.

The DAILY COLLEGIAN's investigation disclosed that the problems in the history department originated in May 1968 when the department voted to have a popularly elected executive committee consider tenure, rank, and promotions. This new method apparently was considered intolerable by certain "senior men" in the department who wanted to continue the "Peel Off" system, whereby a man's promotion is determined only by his superiors in rank. Meanwhile, Professor Howard H. Quint, then head of the department, announced that he wanted to step down as his five-year term had expired. One faculty member told the DAILY COLLEGIAN, "Quint, with the support of Hunsberger, had been arbitrary and tyrannical and that Quint's resignation renewed the efforts to reform the department." At this time Hunsberger appointed Potash to be head of the department for one year.

According to the faculty member, the feelings in May 1968 were widespread that non-tenure members who had dissented against Quint and Potash would lose their jobs. Seven members of the department, called by some "the magnificent seven" were told last spring that their contracts would not be renewed. Some of the younger faculty felt they were fired because of their disagreement with the department head.

In the fall of 1968 Potash announced he was modifying the department's constitution by means of an "option form," by which a department member could indicate whether he wished his promotion to be considered by the entire executive committee composed of all ranks or by some form of the old "Peel Off" system. One of the faculty members interviewed said he felt that Potash gave the department this choice in order to determine who was on his side and who was not.

On Feb. 13, Hunsberger sent a memorandum to all members of

Apollo 9 Off to Good Start; First Tests Are Successful

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) The Apollo 9 astronauts Monday successfully completed the delicate maneuvers freeing the moon-landing ship for its space debut and the tests that will clear America's way to the moon.

Air Force Cols. James A McDivitt and David Scott and civilian astronaut Russell L. Schweickart circled the earth in the command module after they had joined the cone-shaped craft with the spidery lunar module, a fragile vehicle designed to land men on the moon.

Scott, the command module pilot, cautiously guided the command module through the difficult transposition and docking maneuvers only three hours after a near-perfect launch from Cape Kennedy.

The crew docked the command module with the moon ship and the combined machines were ejected from the spent S4B booster stage which had helped punch them into orbit.

"We have made a successful ejection," McDivitt reported. "Sounds beautiful," answered ground control.

Scott started the intricate maneuvers by separating the command module from booster, moving away 50 minutes and then skillfully guiding the docking probe on the command module nose into a docking collar on the moonship.

" Everything came off just right," McDivitt reported.

Apollo 9, a complex 10-day mission which will put America on the threshold of a moon landing or slam the door indefinitely, was punched by the 36-story Saturn 5 rocket into orbit through a heavy cloud cover at the precise minute scheduled.

Ground controllers reported the orbit varied only slightly from the 119-mile circular orbit planned months before.

During the next four days the astronauts will test the lunar module, or LEM, a fragile, spider-like spacecraft designed to land men on the moon, but which has never before flown manned in space.

Commuters Form New Coalition

An executive order was issued yesterday to the Independent Commuter Coalition by Paul Silverman, Student Senate President. This new group of commuters has been formed in an effort to stress the independence of individuals living outside the campus.

The chairman of the coalition, Paul Papaluka of Northampton said, "The efforts of this group will be directed toward working together to effect changes for commuters and to attempt to implilment a commuter government."

Commuter senators have during the last Student Senate session been able to receive certain concessions onlegislation and look forward to increased influence.

Eight points have been declared as a platform for the ICC. These are: 1. To establish a student staffed Off Campus Housing Complaint Board. 2. To increase and improve the campus bus service with particular regard to the needs of the commuter. 3. Improve and increase parking facilities. 4. To investigate the towing and ticketing procedures on campus. 5. To investigate the Athletic fee. 6. To press for the reduction of the student tax by eliminating superficial budgets. 7. To establish a Commuter Communications Center. 8. Establish a foul weather class cancelation procedure.

Candidates under the banner of the ICC have pledged their support to this platform. They are: Dick Kline, Bill Chiodo, Fred Arnold, George Inglis, Martin Tinker, Sharon O'Brien, George Sykes, Kevin Neary, and Bob Guzowski.

Study Finds Protests Profitable For Colleges and Universities

CHICAGO (CPS) - Most colleges and universities will profit from student protests if their administrations are free from outside political pressure.

That finding is suggested in data gathered in the American Association for Higher Education's Campus Governance study and in lessons from the crisis at San Francisco State College.

It was sketched in a talk Monday by George C. Stern, a Syracuse University psychology professor, at the AAHE's annual convention. Some 2700 administrators and faculty members are here for the meeting, which has as its theme "The Agony and the Promise of America."

Declaring that "a university kept open at bayonet point is neither a "university " nor 'open', Stern scored political interference in the internal affairs of embattled San Francisco State. He said the continuance of universities as "the sole institution in America dedicated to understanding rational responses to problems hinges on our keeping free from outside forces."

"To disregard the student revolt, to dismiss it as the work of a tiny fringe of agitators manipulating issues that are entirely beyond the control of the educational enterprise, is to risk and encourage politicization of the university - to lose the ideal of an independent intellectual community, not regainit," Professor Stern said.

In his talk on "The impact of Campus Environment on Student Unrest," Stern said the AAHE study indicates that schools which stress opportunities for personal growth have "far fewer problems" than those which do not. "The largest number of problems of all types are reported from schools with rigid, highly-controlled environments" that are oppressive and academically trivial, he said.

Stern suggested that schools loosen their rigidity by opening the undergraduate curriculum to new programs freed from restrictions of graduate school preparation. But sometimes offering alternative courses to disenchanted students doesn't work, he noted.

THE NEWS IN BRIEF

TOKYO (AP) - Red Chinese swarmed around the Soviet Embassy in Peking Monday, chanting anti-Russian slogans while China and the Soviet Union swapped protest notes over a clash between their forces on the Manchurian border.

Plodding through snow, Red Guards and workers waved placards emblazened with demands to "hang' Soviet Premier Alexei N. Kosygin and to "fry' Soviet Communist party chief Leonid I. Brezhnev.

TEL AVIV (AP) - Moshe Dayan's refusal to lend his voice to the nomination of Golda Meir as Israel's interim prime minister was seen Monday as a threat to the unity of the ruling Labor party.

The patch-eye defense minister abstained from the vote Sunday night of Labor party Cabinet ministers in selecting the 70-year-old former foreign minister. But she has the overwhelming majority of the Cabinet ministers and presumably the job is hers if she wants it.

HARWICH, England (AP) - British navy experts removed a live World War II mine from the anchor chain of the German ship Lohengrin in Harwich Harbor after the mine was accidentally pulled out of the harbor bottom.

Buried since the war, the 380-pound mine was so rusted it was impossible to determine whether it was a British device sunk during the war to protect the harbor, or whether it was laid by the Germans to blow up English ships.

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Nixon, moving quickly to report to the nation, scheduled an hour-long White House news conference for 9 p.m. EST Tuesday, devoted solely to his European trip and U.S. foreign policy.

Nixon plans with an opening statement to sum up his impressions of the eight-day visit to five European nations.

The news conference, double the usual time, will be carried live on nationwide television and radio from the East Room in prime evening time.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) - The Students for a Democratic Society are recruiting college students for volunteer work in Cuba, picking sugar cane this summer.

Russell T. Nufeld, a section leader of a social studies course at Harvard, made the announcement and said he hopes to recruit eight students from Harvard and Radcliffe Colleges for the summer in Cuba.

He said they must make their own way to Mexico City from where the Cuban government will take them to Cuba.

the history department. In it he stated, "I have been so favorably impressed by his (Potash) performance during the past eight months that I am prepared to recommend an additional three-year appointment for him as department head."

Earlier, the department's search committee had recommended to Hunsberger unanimously the three-year appointment of Potash.

Also in the memorandum, the former Dean invited anyone from the department to discuss with him in private the reappointment. Also a departmental meeting was scheduled for Feb. 20, in Thompson Lounge. The memo concluded: "I must emphasize that the meeting will be consultation. Under the policy of the Board of Trustees it is the responsibility of a Dean to recommend appointments of department heads after appropriate consultation with the department concerned."

Hunsberger had wanted the Board of Trustees to consider Potash's reappointment at its Feb. 21 meeting. In order for the Board to act on the appointment, the matter had to be placed on the agenda two weeks before the actual meeting. In order to do this, Hunsberger submitted Potash's reappointment papers to President Lederle and Provost Tippo. Apparently Hunsberger felt that the department would concur with the reappointment at the Feb. 20 meeting, and that the Board of Trustees would be able to take action the next day. However, Hunsberger realized that if any obstacles developed, he could ask that the matter be withdrawn from the agenda. One high administrator told the DAILY COLLEGIAN that taking items off the agenda is almost "a routine matter." Items can be taken off the Trustee agenda before a meeting; only rarely can an item be put on the agenda after the agenda is made.

In order to insure that a place would be reserved on the agenda, Tippo signed the necessary papers Feb. 9, and Lederle signed them on Feb. 11.

To further complicate matters, a new form for appointments and promotions was being used for the first time, which resulted in the Administration getting its signals crossed. Apparently, Hunsberger expected Potash's personnel papers, signed by Lederle and Tippo, would be either returned to him or held by the Personnel office until final action could be taken. This is the way it has been done in the past. However, a secretary in the personnel office, believing that the reappointment was finalized, sent the personnel letter, by campus mail to Potash. Someone, somewhere, intercepted the letter, made the Xerox copies of it, put the original in a different envelope, and sent it on to Potash.

Firm indications are that Hunsberger had no knowledge that the letter of reappointment had actually been forwarded to Potash. The past routine of personnel actions would confirm this. Hunsberger said he was consulting in good faith. Assoc. Prof. Ware then produced a copy of the personnel letter, antedating the meeting, saying that Potash had already been recommended for reappointment; and thereby implying that Hunsberger was not then acting in good faith. Following this disclosure, the faculty voted 14-18 against Potash's reappointment.

After this meeting Hunsberger went to Whitmore and explained to the Provost what had just transpired. Hunsberger's strong code of ethics lead him to submit his resignation. He felt it would be in the best interest of the University to resign. Several high level administrators spent hours trying to talk him out of it; urging him to stay and explain the mistakes. A source in the administration told the DAILY COLLEGIAN that at the Feb. 20 faculty meeting, "the Dean acted in good faith."

On Feb. 25, the day Hunsberger's resignation was made public, the tenured members of the history department voted 12-4-1 supporting the reappointment of Potash. A member of the faculty complained saying that the vote constituted "less than one-third of the department" and thus was not representative. Late last week Potash was formally reappointed as head of the department.

Tensions this week are nearing the boiling point in the history department. One faculty member told the DAILY COLLEGIAN "the administration won't achieve peace by continuing the Quint-Potash regieme," In an effort to ameliorate the problems within the department, Provost Tippo is meeting individually with all the history faculty this week.

Freshman Open Class Meeting Draws Small Audience Sunday

by MARGRET ANDREWS
Staff Reporter

About fifty of the 3500 freshmen attended the open class meeting held Sunday night in Mahar Auditorium. President Ernie Lepore opened the meeting by introducing William F. Field, Dean of Students, who belatedly welcomed the swing-shift freshmen who were in a majority of the audience.

A meeting between President Lederle, Dean Field and the swing shifters scheduled a few weeks earlier was cancelled because of bad weather. In greeting the freshmen, Field said that follow-up on the University's experience with the swing-shift freshmen is encouraging and he urged the students to participate in class activities.

Second on the agenda was an introduction to class advisor, John Siegres, but Mr. Siegres was not present.

After Dean Field spoke to the meeting, Dick Broma, the president of the committee organizing the four-class Montreal trip, outlined details of the trip.

President Lepore then explained the activities of the freshmen Summer Executive Council, which helps swingshifters during orientation. Twenty new members are needed.

Fifth on the agenda were reports from the Public Relations, Events, Finance and Coordinating Committees on their activities concerning such various class projects as the multi-college mixer on March 14, a Spring concert on May 3 and the Freshmen Picnic, tentatively scheduled for May 17. There was no report from the Special Events Committee.

Original Art Pieces to Be Displayed at Student Union

Original prints by classic and contemporary artists will be on exhibit in the Cape Cod Lounge of the Student Union at UMass Wednesday from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.

The exhibition, presented by the Ferdinand Roten Galleries of Baltimore, Md., and the Student Union Art Committee, includes over 1,000 original etchings, lithographs and woodcuts by such artists as Picasso, Chagall, Miro, Goya, Renoir, Baskin, Kollwitz and others. Also on display will be a collection of outstanding Western and Oriental manuscript pages from works of the 13th through the 20th centuries.

Prices on the art works range from $5 to $1,000 with the majority priced under $100. A representative of the Roten Galleries, Wynn Ruff, will be present at the exhibition to answer any questions regarding graphic art and printmaking.

Established in 1932, Roten Galleries has one of the largest collections of graphic art in the United States. The firm operates a branch gallery in Cambridge, Mass.

College of Agriculture Initiates Seminar Course

A University of Massachusetts seminar in Contemporary Problems in Resource Development will be held at Waltham and Amherst in 16 Thursday sessions from Feb. 27 to May 22.

Its purpose is to update extension people and others in the natural resources field on the complex and constantly changing problems of environmental management in Massachusetts. It is conducted by the UMass College of Agriculture as a function of its Planning and Resource Development Program.

The first 14 sessions will be at the UMass Waltham Field Station at 240 Beaver St., Waltham. The final two will be at the Holdsworth Natural Resources Center in Amherst. Two sessions will be held each Thursday, one from 9 a.m. to 12 noon and one from 1 to 4 p.m.

Topics will include ecology, population biology, air, soil and water pollution, the role of trees in urban society, contemporary environmental problems, economics in resource development, multiple land use and others. The seminar staff will be drawn from the faculty of four UMass departments: agricultural and food economics, environmental sciences, forestry, and wildlife management and landscape architecture.

The seminar may be taken as a two- credit UMass graduate course. Full information is available from Prof. John H. Noyes, department of forestry and wildlife management, Holdsworth Natural Resources Center, University of Massachusetts, Amherst, 01002.

The opening sessions Feb. 27 at Waltham will include "The Scope of Ecology" in the morning and "The Pollution Problem' and "Population Biology' in the afternoon.

Dean Field to Talk At MLK Coffee Hour

Every Tuesday the Martin Luther King Social Action Council sponsors an open Coffee Hour with Administration. Today's guest will be Dean Field. It will be held from 12:00 to 2:00 p.m. in the Colonial Lounge of the Student Union. The purpose of these informal gatherings is to give the students an opportunity to discuss with representatives of the Administration those aspects of the University that are disturbing to them. Faculty and students are urged to participate. Free coffee will be served.

Domestic Student Exchange Program Available to Interested Students

By ROSE L. MILLER
Staff Reporter

Mrs. Marjorie Rodgers of the Admissions Office is a very busy woman. Not only responsible for transfers admissions at UMass, she is also a member of a committee involved in the expansion of UMass' present Domestic Student Exchange Program.

The Domestic Exchange has been in existence for several years and has featured the University of New Mexico, University of South Florida and Florida State University as participating schools. The expansion of the current program adds Illinois State University, Montana State University, Paterson State College, Portland State College, the State University of New York at Albany, the University of Alabama, the University of Montana, and the University of Oregon.

To be eligible for the program a student should have a 2.5 overall cume at the beginning of exchange and only those who are currently sophomores and juniors will be considered with the preference for sophomores. A personal essay explaining the reasons why one wants to attend another university for a semester or a year is a part of the application.

The exchange student will pay the fees of the host institution, but Mrs. Rodgers estimates the cost of attendance at the host school will be approximately the same amount as UMass.

In a DAILY COLLEGIAN interview amidst a busy schedule, Mrs. Rodgers offered some of her own opinions on the value of Exchange Program to a student's education. She pointed out the regional differences of the country and how each part of the country has different ways of looking at a situation with a corresponding unique interpretation. Mrs. Rodgers sees the exchange student as benefiting from the exposure to other viewpoints and life styles.

Supporting Mrs. Rodgers enthusiam over the extended program, Robin Sanders, president of UMass' Exchange Club, described her one semester at the University of New Mexico as "the happiest days imaginable."

Those students genuinely interested in introducing themselves to new ideas and life styles, but who are interested in the new colleges other than those on the present list of participating schools, (Universities of New Mexico and South Florida) are invited to sign up at the Admissions Office, stating the desired school along with their own name and campus address. If enough interest and inquiries are made about a school, it may be made available, and a notice to that effect will be published in the DAILY COLLEGIAN.

Mr. William Cheney has been co-ordinator of the Exchange program until recently, when it was transferred to Mrs. Rodgers in the Admissions Office. For those who would like to further explore the program and its extensions, Mr. Cheney will be available anytime on Tuesdays and Thursdays.

How to Win Friends. . . . . with a Cheerful Smile

An irresponsible display of adolescent behavior yesterday by members of the college of campus protest groups illustrated the inability of campus radicals to express their thoughts and emotions in anything resembling an adult manner.

Dissatisfied with a DAILY COLLEGIAN article on the planned Bridal Fair protest, 10 members of SMILE allegedly stole 500 COLLEGIANS from the Student Union, and posted a sign which read, "No COLLEGIANS today due to false statements and such - (signed) your friendly Ed."

Prior to this action, the same 10 students had expressed the complaint to the DAILY COLLEGIAN that the paper had misrepresented the Bridal Fair protest's sponsor in a headline. They claimed, "The headline which says that SDS is running the protest is a damned lie." They informed the paper that SMILE was sponsoring the protest. The COLLEGIAN answered that its reporter was not made aware of the distinction between SDS and SMILE, since the two groups were meeting concurrently.

The COLLEGIAN editor answering the complaint also brought up the problem of distinguishing between SDS and other protest-oriented groups on campus, considering the fact that many protest leaders seem to change group alliance daily. No answer was made to this question.

This method of expressing a complaint was responsible. It was voiced by a group which felt its press coverage was inaccurate, and which expressed the hope that future coverage would be handled in a different manner. This was an attempt at a reasonable discussion, one which had the potential of helping both the COLLEGIAN and SMILE.

But SMILE's subsequent action undid any good which the initial discussion might have produced.

The 10 members acted in an obviously childish manner. They became frustrated. But instead of using an intelligent discussion to serve as an outlet for that frustration, they vented their frustration in a manner which easily qualifies as adolescent irrationality.

The stealing of 500 DAILY COLLEGIANS to protest dissatisfaction with the paper's handling of a story seems to indicate that several members of the campus Protest Establishment are insincere when they profess to believe in such exalted causes as freedom of speech and the right to assemble. It is interesting to note the similarity of this action to that of totalitarian regiemes which burn material which they find offensive.

Thus there exists a gaping chasm between the campus radicals and the student body. Protestors constantly change group affiliation and profess beliefs which they seem to violate. This alone would block any kind of mass support for protest groups.

But all of this is pushed into the background each time members of protest groups behave as they did yesterday. The actions of SMILE must simply be those of the irresponsible, and cannot help but alienate the student body.

A Cause for Concern

(Editor's Note: This is a reprint from the Gadfly, a publication of history department.)

It has been painfully obvious to graduate students in the History Department, that the faculty has fragmented into several warring factions. Perhaps it is the place of the graduate student to steer clear of this lamentable internecine struggle. But we, the graduate students, do have opinions with respect to the catastrophe, and it IS a catastrophe, which has enveloped the department. Many of us side with the so-called "Young Turks" and their quest for "justice". Others have attempted to weigh in the balance the position of the younger faculty members as well as the stance adopted by the administrative personnel in an attempt to fairly appraise the unfortunate course of events which have torn the belly out of the department. Most of the grads don't give a damn, but for the most part they don't give a damn about anything except cramming for their next exam, cranking out a term paper, or drowning their troubles at the PUB.

Frightening aptly sums up the atmosphere. To observe faculty members openly abusing each other, to witness the Jekyll and Hyde transformation of colleagues into deadly enemies, to savor the intensity of the bitterness and hate as seen in DAYYENU, to hear the History Department castigated by other institutions - "Oh, you go to UMass? Gee, they're having an awful time of it aren't they" - is a terrifying and embarrassing experience.

Hopefully, Dean Hunsburger's resignation signals the approaching end of the storm and a return to calm and reason and fair play on both sides. Any further upheaval can lead only to disaster.

SDS-Yes

To the editor:

Richard Lane's incompetence as a reporter is only matched by his willingness to break promises and your willingness to help him. "SDS Plans All Day Protest of Bridal Fair", headline, March 3, is lie number one. SDS had nothing to do with it. Neither UMass SDS NOR Amherst SDS, which I belong to had anything to do with it.

"Yesterday's action stemmed from a weekend conference of regional SDS members called the Dan Shays Assembly which met at Amherst College.' Lie number 2. The Dan Shays (Shays not Shay's as you'd have it) conference was not a trunk from which the women's workshop stemmed. The women's workshop was entirely independent, planned entirely independently, and attended by a small minority of participants in the conference. I wish more had gone. But the point is that the whole article was a lie: linking the SDS conference with the women's workshop was a lie. I co-ordinated the conference and thus speak "officially".

Lie number 3: "in addition to Bridal Fair action, the two day SDS convention also passed four proposals...." The Bridal Fair action was not even proposed to the conference for its approval. Lie number 4 is Lane's agreement not to report the deliberations of the women's workshop.

A 5th lie is usually called a misquote. I didn't say "Americans must understand the need for revolution" and other statements alleged to me and Steve Halliwell which are inaccurate and out of context. But let me partially save Lane from this by saying now that American s will come to understand the need for radical, revolutionary change.

Something subtle at work in Lane's broken promise to the workshop might be his sense that a promise made to a group of women doesn't really count. If so, this shows as clearly as the Bridal Fair the need for a woman's liberation movement in this area. There's a meeting about that this Sunday afternoon in the Student Union.

To the editor:

Unbelievable! S.D.S. plans another protest over the "superestablishment" Bridal Fair. It's a sad state of affairs when the M.D.C. has to take a third of the front page for this garbage.

I attended an S.D.S. meeing a while back, and this is what they admitted to one another at that time:

1. they were disorganized
2. they had no main objective
3. the dog-burning incident was a great publicity stunt for which another S. D. S. chapter praised them.
4. they admitted that UMass has one of the six most liberal campuses in the U. S.

I would like to make particular note of statement #4. They realized that President Lederle and Dean Field were doing all they could to establish fields of communicatio n between the administration and student body (FOR EXAMPLE, WEEKLY MEETINGS BETWEEN HIGH ADMINISTRATIVE OFFICIALS AND STUDENTS IN THE STUDENT UNION — NOT MANY OTHER COLLEGES DO THIS!)

Certainly S. D. S. is sucking swamp water when they have to stoop to attacking the Bridal Fair because it's "NOT WHERE IT'S AT" Who can define this term?

Not including the many people who watched the show, there were more models and escorts then the twenty S.D.S. members who organized the protest.

The next time this ridiculous group wants publicity for another stupid stunt, please don't put them on the front page. Put them where they belong - under 'HELP WANTED' or 'LOST AND FOUND'.

Ovation?

To the editor:

A raging "underground" controversy has sprung up as to why "Purlie Victorious" received a standing ovation last Friday and Saturday nights at Bartlett Auditorium.

I would be interested in the opinion of anyone who attended either performance, to record as part of my evaluation of the production, required for inclusion in my thesis. I would, indeed, welcome any comments from any member of any audiences (Wednesday through Saturday) - whether positive or negative - either in person (phone 253-7152) or in writing (c/o Speech Dept.).

UMass-Boston Senate Committees Ask For More Student Responsibility

By Jean McAndrews
Staff Reporter

The Student Council at UMass/Boston has proposed to change its name to the "Student Senate" in a first step towards revamping the council and "creating a more practical and influential form of student government" on the campus.

The "Initial Master Plan" for the new Student Senate, which was presented to the council last week, outlines a system of committees modeled after the Faculty Senate, and proposes means to appoint or elect students to Faculty Senate committees.

The proposed committees include: academic affairs, to evaluate courses and faculty and review academic policies; admissions, to include student participation in visiting local high schools to speak to prospective candidates; legislative affairs, to effect policies that result in action by the Massachusetts legislature; and "new concepts and departures," to plan innovations in educational processes.

The executive committee will serve as an advisory committee for the President and act as a check and balance system on major policy decisions.

"This is not a cry for student power," says Academic Affairs Committee Chairman Steven Berkowitz, "but for student responsibility. One can become thoroughly educated to the many complexities of the decision - making process only by taking an active part in that process and by experiencing the result of such decisions."

Freshman Senator- at-large, Robert Nims asked for support on a bill which he is co-sponsoring and which is coming before the senate a week from this Wednesday. The bill proposes that the rebate given to students living in triples be raised from 20 to 33% Nims feels that students should be allowed to live in triples if they wish to and should not be forced to move out of a dorm because of that situation.

The following six bills were passed with all the students voting:

A bill:

1. "to co-sponsor a concert on May 3 with the Student Union Program Council."
2. "that the Executive Council authorize the Expenditure of a minimum of $750 for this concert."
3. "that $125 be appropriated for advertisement for the class trip to Montreal."
4. "that $565 be appropriated for the All-College Mixer."
5. "that $100 be appropriated for the April 1st newsletter."
6. "to raise the class tax from $4.00 to $5.00 for the sophomore class of 1972.'

A seventh bill - a "Move to begin discussing and checking availability and prices of talent for SENDOFF Weekend and to act on the advice of the President's Council" - was passed with the amendment to the second half of the bill; President's Council was amended to Executive Council.

Flying Redmen Perform Well In Invitational Drill Meet

This past weekend the Flying Redmen proudly represented U-Mass in the First Annual Garden State Invitational Drill Meet in Elizabeth, New Jersey. This meet perhaps presented the toughest competition the Flying Redmen have ever faced, including Fordham, St. Peter's, Villanova, Drexel, Penn State, Rutgers, and La-Salle. The Redmen finished eighth among the twenty competing teams in the Trick Platoon Division.

Competing against the representative teams the Flying Redmen's two - man trick team finished fourth. The Redmen duo thrilled the audience when they executed for the first time in the history of drill team competition the dangerous maneuver called the "mutilation-corkscrew".

The Flying Redmen now have three weeks in which to prepare for the "Manhattan College Invitational Drill Meet" in Manhattan on March 22.

Board of Trustees Create New Department Of Hotel and Restaurant Administration

The UMass Board of Trustees has established a department of hotel and restaurant administration at Amherst, it has been announced by the head of the new department, Dr. Donald E. Lundberg.

Studies in this area were formerly offered in the restaurant and hotel program of the department of food science and technology. Creation of the new department "reflects the growing importance of hotels and restaurants in the Massachusetts economy,' according to Dr. Lundberg.

A key factor in the new program is the development of the Murray D. Lincoln Campus Center, now under construction and scheduled for completion in February of 1970. "This conference center with its 114 guest rooms and several restaurants will offer facilities in hotel, food and beverage operations," he said.

Study in the field has been offered at UMass since 1936, supported by the hospitality industry. Since 1963, well over $100,000 has been received from the industry in the form of scholarships, grants and other aid. The department now has 250 students and offers courses leading to a two-year associate degree and a four-year B.S. degree. The department also conducts off-campus extension programs for people in the industry.

Greater emphasis will be placed on the hotel administration curriculum as the Lincoln Center becomes available as a teaching facility. Plans for a graduate program are also being developed.

Dr. Lundberg headed the department of hotel administration at the University of New Hampshire before coming to UMass in 1963. Before going to New Hampshire in 1959, he headed the hotel and restaurant management department at Florida State University. He has also held faculty posts at Cornell University, Ithaca College and Idaho State College.

He is a graduate of Iowa State Teachers College with an M.A. from Duke University and a Ph.D. from Cornell. He has had wide experience as a resort manager, hotel and resort consultant and in hotel and resort publications. He is author or co-author of a dozen books in the restaurant, hotel, resort and club area and has written close to 100 articles in his field.

Phi Mu Delta First to Build In Sorority-Fraternity Park

Nu Zeta Chapter of Phi Mu Delta became the first fraternity to break ground in UMass' sorority-fraternity park last Friday. Actual construction is expected to begin by March 15 and the one-story Mediterrean - style house may be completed in time for next year's Homecoming.

The house will accommodate the 54 members with a kitchen capacity of 100 persons on a regular basis and up to 200 for parties. The house is on land owned by Fraternity-Sorority Park, Inc., a 55-acre tract of land in the northest part of campus. It eventually will become the home of 23 UMass fraternities and sororities.

Walter Harfield of Springfield, president of the fraternity's alumni organization, said the $300,000 cost does not include the $50,000 price for the lot, nor the cost of furnishing the building.

Robert Galley, president of the park, said the project proves that the fraternity-sorority concept is far from dying out on college campuses. On the contrary, he said fraternities are actually showing significant growth, although their "rah, rah" image is changing to one of meaningful participation.

Less than a year ago, UMass President John W. Lederle turned the first shovel of dirt marking the first step on the park's development.

All the money used to develop the complex comes from the houses themselves. No state money is involved. It is believed to be the first park of its kind in the country.

When completed the park will represent a $7.5 million investment. Plans for the development date back three years and its directors include university administrators, fraternity offices, businessmen and others.

Magazine Looking For Staff Members

The recently resurrected campus humor magazine, formerly YAHOO, is in danger of not meeting its proposed publishing date for the second issue. Slated to appear on the first of May, the magazine with no name is hampered by a combination of low funds, lack of contributions, and a small staff, according to Dave Stevens, editor-in-chief.

Although a recent recruiting drive brought forth a small number of interested students, many mor e people will be needed if the magazine is to continue publishing, Stevens told the Daily Collegian recently.

The editors o f the nameless humor magazine have expressed the hope that after re-reading the November 1968 issue students will contribute articles or join the staff and upgrade the quality of the magazine.

They request those interested in joining to contact Stevens at the campus publications office, Franklin Room, Student Union.

A Mixed Art: Carnival Success with Mixed Media

By ROSE L. MILLER
Staff Reporter

This article is a mixed art., containing both fact and opinion, but how else does a reporter describe what Project Ten's Electric Carnival was like.

It started at 7:30 Saturday night in Hampden Dining Commons in Southwest, only it no longer looked like a dining commons. Lights flashing, blue, green, orange, red, in the coffee house section of the carnival, while the performers grooved with songs, poetry, skits, sermons, and people sat down at checkered tablecloth-covered table or hung in the background soaking in the electricity of the happening, the first of its magnetism at UMass.

The happening, according to head organizer Phil Appell, had wanted to go on all night, but it had to settle for 1 a.m. But it ended at 12, when Appell was informed the dining commons wanted it closed at the previous proposed time.

Dr. Drum was there. He put together a way out mixed media lecture, the kind his former Botany 101 students are sure to remember. In fact, this presentation consisted of one of his taped lectures along with three screens, pardon me, it was two screens and one balloon. The white elephant-sized balloon hung from the ceiling and slides were flashed on it while the two screens one, on one side of the room, and the other in front of the room projected changes in man's environment.

Back to the coffee house again. Wow, dig those robes, looks like Moses. The sermon began quietly, picked up steam with earthy words, none of which can be printed in the DAILY COLLEGIAN.

About this time an unusual coughing fit engulfed the members of the audience in the reporter's area (toward the back of the coffee house), seemed like an overdos e of incense. Coffee House concluded. The Inward Eye blared out as the dance part of the carnival began.

In the adjoining room "nouveau art" films, such as THE HAT, TOYS, GRAND PRIX along with Harry Reasoner's THE DETACHED AMERICAN attracted many viewers. THE HAT explored the aspects of human nature, TOYS showed the effect of war on children, GRAND PRIX was a farce on how man spends his time on foolish things, and the DETACHED AMERICAN, by far the best film, centered on the atomization of the individual in today's society. It asked the question why don't Americans today give a damn about their fellow man. The answers given in the film were sadly comical.

Redmen Scalp New Hampshire, 76-50; Conclude Best Season Since '55-56

DiSarcina Sparks Victory; Gayeska Cans 27 Points

By PETER F. PASCARELLI
Sports Editor

DURHAM, N.H. - UMass completed its most successful basketball season since 1955-56 and kept alive its NIT hopes by crushing New Hampshire, 76-50, in a virtually empty University Fieldhouse here last night.

The win gave the Yankee Conference Champion Redmen a 17-7 record, tying a school victory mark.

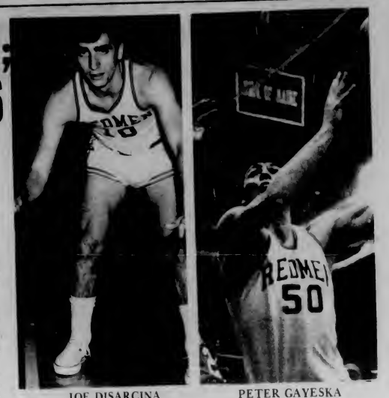
In a game which saw UMass never trail, the biggest highlight had to be the play of Joe DiSarcina. Playing in his first game in three weeks and showing little ill effects from a leg injury, the UMass school assist record holder completed a great career in a great fashion. The same can also be said about his senior counterpart, Peter Gayeska.

DiSarcina sparked the Redmen out of a dull first half, consistently setting up his mates for scores, as he has done so well in the past three years.

Gayeska, meanwhile, was at his overpowering best, scoring at will on hooks and close-in shots. The big center finished the game with 27 points and was the trigger man on numerous fast breaks.

John Shockro, in a starting role at forward, got some key hoops in crucial spots and played his usually strong defensive game.

UMass won the game in the first half as the Redmen completely dominated the opening twenty minutes. The initial five minutes were close mainly due to a New Hampshire offense that took its time taking shots.



However, it was here that Di Sarcina came into the game, and everything suddenly turned around. The Redmen shut out UNH for seven minutes, while scoring 14 points themselves.

DiSarcina had four assists during this time while Ray Ellerbrook, Gayeska and Dennis Chapman took care of the scoring.

Jack Gallagher also chipped in with a fine three-point play, and the Redmen led by 19, 29-10, with 2:47 remaining in the half.

The Wildcats finally scored on a Frank Davis shot, but Ellerbrook countered with two more hoops to give UMass a commanding 33-14 halftime lead.

The early moments of the second half gave no indication of a Wildcat comeback, as UMass' over-all strength was just too much. The Redmen led by 20 points for the entire second half and never were threatened.

JOE DISARCINA

PETER GAYESKA

Redmen co-captains glitter in hoop finale!

REDMEN RANTINGS . . . The final moments were highlighted by a length-of-the-floor dribbling exhibition by Gayeska and by Jon Kruper's first varsity hoop . . . Gayeska led all scorers with his 27 points, while Ellerbrook had 12, all coming in the first half . . . Davis had 16 and Jeff Bannister 12 to lead the Wildcats . . . The Redmen conclude their schedule with a 17-7 record, but still have the hope that they may play some more basketball in the 1968-69 season.

Clinic Set for Saturday

The third annual University of Massachusetts Baseball Clinic will be conducted Saturday in Curry Hicks Cage and Boyden Physical Education Building. The clinic is open to coaches at all levels and to all high school players.

Clinic registration will start at 9 a.m. in the cage. The first session at 10 will cover baserunning, followed by rundowns and sliding. These sessions will be presented by UMass coaches, Dick Bergquist and Al Barber.

At 11:30, a lecture on hitting will be presented by Coach Archie Allen of Springfield College. After lunch, the clinic will resume in the Boyden Building with a demonstration by Steve Shea of the Houston Astros. This will be followed at 2 p.m. with demonstrations for the high school players by the UMass team of fundamentals at all defensive positions.

At the same time, the coaches will gather for a session on "First and Third Defense' presented by Howie Burns, coach of the state high school champion, Springfield Tech.

The clinic will conclude at 3 p.m. There is no admission charge. Special parking will be available in Lot No. 5 adjacent to the Boyden Building.

B.C. Expected To Announce Cousy Heir

BOSTON (AP) - Boston College said Monday it expected to announce this week Bob Cousy's replacement as basketball coach.

The Boston Globe said that Gerry Conboy, assistant coach at Davidson in South Carolina appeared to be the top candidate for the post.

BC declined to comment on the report.

Conboy, 40, has been at Davidson for two years. He is a graduate of Duquesne and was an assistant coach at Pittsburgh.

He left Pittsburgh to start a basketball program at Short Hills Catholic High near Pittsburgh. His nine-year record there was 152-24.

The Globe said Conboy had been asked to stay close to his telephone for a call from BC.

The selection committee had been scheduled to meet on Sunday but called off the meeting at the last minute.

Cousy, who starred for the Boston Celtics of the National Basketball Association, will coach his last game in Boston Thursday night when the Eagles entertain 10th ranked Duquesne.

Espo Leads Scoring Race

NEW YORK (AP) - Boston's Phil Esposito, the record-breaking center, holds an 11-point lead over Chicago's Bobby Hull in the National Hockey League's individual scoring race with only four weeks left in the regular season.

The latest statistics, released Monday, shows Esposito with 101 points on 40 goals and a leading 61 assists while Hull has a pace-setting 46 goals plus 44 assists for 90 points. Esposito broke the scoring record Saturday night when he collected his 98th point. The mark was shared by Hull and teammate Stan Mikita.

Gordie Howe of Detroit is third with 86 points, followed by Mikita with 80 and Jean Beliveau, Montreal, 76.

The St. Louis combination of Glenn Hall and Jacques Plante continue to lead the goalies with an average yield of only 2,000 goals a game.

Forbes Kennedy, traded Monday by Philadelphia to Toronto, has the most penalty minutes, 195.

Frosh Gymnasts Top Trenton To Finish Perfect Season

An undefeated season was assured for the UMass freshman gymnastics team when they defeated Trenton State's varsity, 128.95 to 78.75.

The floor exercise team took the first three places. Tony Vacca scored 8.5, John Calabria 7.2 and Dave Genest 5.3.

Following suit, the side horse team swept all three places. Lenny Aubrey and Richard Ennis tied for second at 5.65 and Vacca came in first with a 5.75.

The ring team scored 22.55 points. Tom Carroll took third with a 7.0 while Vacca was second at 7.5. Ennis was top man with an 8.05.

Calabria took second place in vaulting with a score of 8.2, and Carroll finished first at 8.3.

All five men on the parallel bars did fine routines. Rich Searle scored a 6.0 and Doug Salisbury a 6.75. Third place went to Lou Trumbore for his 6.8 while Genest captured second place with a 7.8. Vacca managed his third first place finish on the strength of an 8.25.

The high bar team turned in their best performance of the year. John Jenkinson scored 6.05 and Salisbury nabbed third place with a 6.4. Trumbore's 6.6 was good for second place, and Vacca once again finished first with a 7.65.

In the all-around competition, Salisbury took second place with a 34.25 total in the six events. Vacca was the number one man with a total of 45.50.

Daily Collegian Plans To File Theft Complaint

The DAILY COLLEGIAN will file a formal complaint with the Dean of Students office concerning the theft of approximately 500 COLLEGIANS from the Student Union lobby Monday.

Donald A. Epstein, Editor-in-chief, explained, "500 students, mostly commuters who paid for the papers through the student activities tax, were not able to receive them. We are reasonably sure of the two individuals who allegedly committed the theft. The editors are locating people who witnessed the incident.'

"Apparently, the theft was motivated by their disapproval with the DAILY COLLEGIAN story on the Bridal Fair protest they were staging,' Epstein went on to say.

"These students profess to be striving for a truly free society," he concluded, "however, their actions Monday cast great doubt on their sincerity."

Participants Named in Dow Debate; Dean Field to Clarify University Policy

The participants have been named for tomorrow's Dow debate, in the Student Union ballroom at 8:00.

Sid Feinhersh will represent students from the Committee to End Military-Industrial Recruitment, and will be opposed by Mr. Dean Wakefield, eastern public relations manager for Dow Chemical. Also taking part in the debate will be Dean of Students William F. Field, who will be available to clarify the University's policy on open recruitment.

The moderator will be John Childs from the UMass admissions office.

The debate is being sponsored by Sigma Alpha Mu. SAM spokesman Neal Whitman said, "I hope that the debate will focus on the responsibility of American business on national affairs." Should a corporation judge foreign policy and try to affect it, and should Dow analyze the War in Vietnam before it supplies the government with weapons? were cited as questions sure to be discussed during the debate.

Fear of Heavy Flooding in State Leads to Extensive Preparations

BOSTON (AP) - With alarmingly high flooding possibilities, both the Army Corps of Engineers and the Massachusetts Civil Defense Agency are making intensive preparations to lessen the dangers involved with a spring thaw.

The Army Corps of Engineers reported 34 flood control dams ready to store 1.2 million acre feet, or 422 billion gallons, of water.

In addition, the corps is prepared with 33 local protection projects, in flood-prone communities which would not be protected by the major flood control dams. The local projects are a system of levees, flood-walls and pumping stations, usually in lower regions of tributaries.

Walter Mackie of the Engineering Corps said the corps maintains the reservoirs nearly empty in case of potential flooding to catch runoff. The amount of runoff depends on weather conditions of the next three to five weeks. A combination of rain and both warm days and nights would cause intensive flooding, he said.

Massachusetts Civil Defense Director Allen R. Zenowitz emphasized that planning is essential to limit flood damages and to prevent deaths due to flooding.

The agency has published a list of 100 flood-prone cities and communities in Massachusetts.

It is also preparing sandbags for emergency use by local communities to retain runoff.

"We're concerned with the record amount of snow," he said. "There is a very strong probability of flooding."

Nixon's News Conference. . .

East-West Relationships Subject Of Discussion in Every Capital

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Nixon said Tuesday night his journey to allied capitals in Europe had created "a new relationship of trust and confidence which did not exist before' - and helped prepare for future summit talks with the Soviet Union.

"This tour was a condition precedent to an East-West summit at a later time," Nixon told a White House news conference - his chosen format for a report to the nation on his five-nation mission in personal diplomacy.

Nixon, a trace of perspiration on his face as he spoke beneath the hot lights, said he always has indicated that before the United States enters direct talks with the Soviet Union there must be "clear understanding' with American allies and friends.

He said the East-West relationship was a topic in every capital he visited: Brussels, London, Bonn, Rome and Paris. Nixon said he discussed not only U.S. policies and plans, but European views and advice.

Nixon began the nationally televised and broadcast news conference with a brief statement on his trip, its purpose and its limitations.

He said he has no illusions "about the limits of personal diplomacy in settling great differences between nations."

But at the same time, Nixon said, "there is an intangible factor" which does affect these relationships.

"When there is trust between men or leaders or nations there is a better chance to settle differences,' he said.

Nixon said both British Prime Minister Harold Wilson and French President Charles de Gaulle used the word trust to describe their meetings with him. He said there is a new relationship of trust and confidence with U.S. allies, one which did not exist before he traveled to the Continent.

"Sometimes we become somewhat disillusioned with our aid programs around the world,' Nixon said. But he said anyone who saw Europe after World War II and then saw it again today would realize that the Marshall plan and the other similar programs were worth while.

"With that recognition," he said, "we now realize that this alliance deserves our attention" and should not be taken for granted.

Winding up his opening statement, Nixon said "I will not divulge the content of personal conversations with Europe's leaders.

In the area of better East-West understanding, Nixon said looking further down the road Americans could look to Red China but "I do not think we should hold out any great optimism in that direction."

He said Europeans are greatly concerned lest a U.S.-Soviet combine would make decisions concerning them.

"Europeans are highly sensitive about the U.S. and the Soviet Union making decisions about their future without their being consulted," Nixon said, "and this will not happen."

"The situation in West Berlin at the moment seems to have leveled off," Nixon said, but added that the situation has been changing from hour to hour.

He said the United States indicated to the West Germans it would support their decision either way about holding the election in West Berlin. At the same time, he said, the Soviets were told any harassment would jeopardize the relations established in the area.

"At this moment . . . I believe that the Soviet Union does not want where it would jeopardoze more important negotiations at the highest level wit h the United States,' he said.

Because such negotiations are in the wings, he said, he thinks he can predict the Soviet Union will cool down rather than heat up the situation.

Scientists Protest Military-University Ties

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) - Hundreds of the nation's university professors, researchers and students cut classes and work Tuesday to discuss the scientist's role in military-related research.

The movement spawned at Massachusetts Institute of Technology, spread to about three dozen other campuses throughout the country.

More than 1,000 persons, mostly students, turned out at MIT's Kresge Auditorium for a series of debates and panel discussions.

The program was organized by the "Union of Concerned Scientists," which called the affair a symbolic protest directed at the military's use of university research. The institute did not sanction the action.

Generally, the meetings had little effect on university routine and took place without incident.

At the University of Pennsylvania in Philadelphia, however, all undergraduate classes were suspended to permit discussion of a broader range of subjects. About 18,000 students were affected.

"We felt if we remained narrow . . . we would be speaking only to a small group of people of the same opinion,' commented Theodore Hershberg, a history instructor and organizer of the Penn program.

Columbia and Fordham Universities in New York had programs patterned after the MIT movement.

A Fordham physics professor, Joseph Shapiro, said the purpose was to motivate scientists to "consider the social consequences of research."

On the West Coast, students and scientists participated in programs at Stanford, the University of California at Berkeley, the University of California Medical Center in San Francisco and San Francisco State College.

The program at Stanford was planned with the "enthusiastic approval" of the university's president, Kenneth Pitzer.

Several departments at the University of Wisconsin in Madison observed what was described as a "Day of Concern," but no work stoppage was reported.

The immediate effect of the MIT halt on research was impossible to assess since, as one organizer noted, researchers work at their own pace and without standard schedules.

Other symposia in the concept of the MIT program were held at Yale, Dartmouth, the University of Maryland, Rensslaer Polytechnic Institute in Troy, N.Y., Syracuse, Case Western Reserve in Cleveland, and New York University, Brooklyn Polytechnic Institute and Rockefeller University in New York City.

There was a counterdemonstration at the Argonne National Laboratory in Illinois. Seventy-nine scientists decided to work a 16-hour day to offset the research hours lost to the symposia.

One of those who helped organize the counterdemonstration was Dr. Jack Uretsky, who said: "There is a place for dialogue within the American political system - after work."

THE NEWS IN BRIEF

LOS ANGELES – Sirhan Bishara Sirhan said Tuesday that, infuriated at what he deemed Robert F. Kennedy's support of Israel, he would have killed the senator nearly three weeks earlier if he had had the chance.

WASHINGTON - Former President Dwight D. Eisenhower's doctors indicated Tuesday he has overcome his pneumonia attack without putting major new strain on his heart.

"Gen. Eisenhower continues to show favorable progress," said a medical bulletin, "though it should be emphasized that he is still very weak and considerable time will be necessary for his to regain his former strength.

WASHINGTON - The United States is spending about $300 million a year on chemical and biological warfare programs but Russia clearly dominates this field, congressmen reported Tuesday after an Army briefing.

Twenty Negro seminarians held control of the administration building at the Colgate Rochester Divinity School inRochester, N.Y., on Tuesday and accused school officials of "a shocking lack of good faith." The seminarians, members of the Black Caucus on Campus, took over Strong Hall on Sunday, nailing and chaining the doors shut, as the wave of student unrest reached still another campus.

Prof. Sees Student Unrest As an International Phenomenon

By SUSAN SHERMAN

Professor Henry Ehrmann of Dartmouth College spoke Tuesday on "Students Against the World." He stated that the student protests could all be thought of as an international phenomenon. Stressing the occurrences in France and Germany, he noted that there existed different political backgrounds, causing slightly different student reactions. "Students on the whole in Europe are more political than in the U.S.

One aspect present in all student protests was a definite dislike for the United States involvement in Viet Nam, deemed as typically "imperialist." Foreign students found the involvement particularly repugnant as the U. S. is held up as a "model democracy."

Discussing the foreign universities themselves, Prof. Ehrmann said that there exists a fear among administrators and faculty of a loss in status that could result from change. The opposition from faculty made it difficult for new professors to advance and caused fewer to enter the profession to begin with. This in turn caused crowded classrooms and poor student-faculty relations.

The three-part division of power among students, faculty, and administrators was looked upon by some students as a step to power, but by others as a mere step to "integration to the system." This type of deadlock could make reforms a failure, and might lead to chronic violence and possibly repression. Professor Ehrmann stressed the point that "the question is a political one and must be settled in a political arena."

Anger was cited as the universal student mood. At the university, students see all the contradictions of society. Most of this anger is vocalized by foreign students in the social sciences.

American Higher Ed. Scored at AAHE

Chicago (CPS) - The American Association for Higher Education Tuesday heard an indictment against "Educational Conservatism" and a prescription for a "New Era" in higher learning.

Howard R. Bowen, president of the University of Iowa, called on administrators and faculty members "to undertake basic revision of undergraduate education." If the reform fails, the consequences will be "disastrous," he said.

"One of the ironies of contemporary high education is that we have been through our greatest era of growth and development but have not captured the enthusiasm of our undergraduates," he said. "The tragedy of it all is that we haven't really tried because in our preoccupation with research, scholarship, and institutional prestige we haven't even been aware of our mediocre performance in liberal education. It is past time to get on with this job."

Whatever gain has been made in effectiveness of instruction has occurred through improved motivation of students, better high school preparation, and improved faculty, not through better modes of instruction, he charged.

Bowen's critique of liberal education scored teachers for their narrow interest intheir own field and their lack of interest in broad intellectual and moral growth of students. "The goal. . .is to convey disciplines, rather than to develop students as persons," he charged. Curricula are "spiritually impoverished," educational methods, "mechanical." The relationship between the curriculum and out-of-class activity is "detached." The possibilities for learning through work-study programs, political activity, field service, and travel are largely ignored, he said.

Bowen spoke at a general session of the AAHE's annual convention, which ends Wednesday with a speech by Sen. Edmund Muskie.

UFO's Can be Explained

Dr. Thomas T. Arny, Assistant Professor of Astronomy, spoke in Berkshire Commons Monday night on Flying Saucers.

Professor Arny is concerned about the extreme emotional involvement of saucer fans. He also mentioned government classification of UFO stories which only increases the public's curiosity. This government deception makes its own job of keeping things calm more difficult in the long run.

The scientist's main dilemma, says Arny, is that so often in the past they have been proved too hasty. 99.9% of biological and physical scientists do believe that intelligent civilizations exist on other planets, but they are confronted with a total lack of evidence. Now they realize that interstellar travel is possible, but they don't believe it's happening here.

Arny said that Unidentified Flying Objects can be explained. Most saucer stories, he claims, have been misinterpretations of natural phenomena. If other civilizations were really interested in watching us, they'd be a little more subtle about it.

He requested, in the interests of science, that if you are ever snarfed up by a spaceship, please make precise observations of times and distances.

Coalition for Student Involvement Sponsors Four Commuters for Senate

The Coalition for Student Involvement has organized a slate of four candidates for Student Senate seats from the Commuter constituency, and has released the following statement:

"The representative nature of the Student Senate and its role as a means of voicing student concerns in the University can hardly be questioned. On the other hand, the role of Student Government in the actual decision-making processes that directly affect students is minimal.

"Students are told that they do not have the maturity and intelligence to make major decisions. It is not too difficult to understand that within the University community students are niggers, with all the connotations of servitude that have denied American Blacks full and equal participation in making the decisions that affect their lives and their communities.

"There are almost an unlimited number of areas in which students could begin to have some influence and work toward the ends outlined above. A beginning point in curriculum change would be the abolishment of all requirements and the substitution of a strong advisory program in which the student designs his own curriculum as much as possible.

"Students should have a powerful voice in selection of administrators whose work affects students directly and in redefining the parameters of their jobs. The most important change, however, would be student representation on the Board of Trustees and close liaison with the legislature and other residents of the state concerned with University affairs.

"The four students whose names appear below are candidates for the Student Senate from the commuter constituency. We are totally committed to using the Senate as a legitimate means to greater student participation in University affairs.

"The four candidates from the Coalition are: Gerald Gillespie, Robert Kentfield, Michael Macmillan, and Peter Thiffault."

Nat'l Charter Recently Awarded To Thirty-Seven Delta Chi Brothers

On March 1, thirty-seven brothers of Delta Chi received their national charter. The chartering ceremony and banquet was held at Chequer's, University Drive, Amherst. Dr. Ralph E. Pruseok was the featured speaker. He is the president of the national fraternity. After his speech, the presentation of the charter was made to George Child, president of the UMass chapter of Delta Chi.

The event was witnessed by the administration, representatives of the Inter-Fraternity Council and Panhellenic Council, brothers of other national charters of Delta Chi, and friends of the house. Guests included Mr. William Field, Dean of Students; Mr. William Richards, Assistant Dean of Men; Mr. William Havard, Head of the Government Department; Mr. Ronald LaFrance, Area Coordinator of Southwest Residential College; Dr. W. Leigh Short, Associate Professor of Chemical Engineering; Herr Horst Wittmann, German Department; Mr. Robert Galley, President of Fraternity-Sorority Park Corporation and Assistant to the President at Greenfield College; and Mike Driscoll, President of the Inter-Fraternity Council. A total of 115 persons were in attendance.

The idea of forming another organization at UMass came about in April, 1966, when several residents of Mills House expressed their dissatisfaction with the fraternity - image at UMass at that time. Later an organization meeting was held to discuss what ideals and purposes a fraternity should have. They emphasized scholarship. Delta Chi has had a high cumulative average for six consecutive semesters; the present average is 2.7.

The preamble of the consitution as written by the founding brothers of Delta Chi Colony states the ideals and purposes of the fraternity: "To contribute to the physical, moral, and academic growth of both ourselves and all the students of the University."

Last year, Delta Chi lead an IFC drive to raise funds for "A Better Chance". The funds went towards scholarships for underprivileged children in Western Massachusetts. They also initiated their annual Freshmen Help Program, which consisted of compiling a list of all upper-classmen who would be willing to help incoming freshmen. This last Fall they held a clothing and life nessecity drive for the poor of Appalachia. They also started a speaker program and cultural exchanges in order to discuss the controversial topics of contemporary life. While the brothers of Delta Chi wish to stress scholarship, they also wish to include a social fellowship with each other.

The receiving of the charter represents the completion of two and a half years of hard work. The brothers of Delta Chi feel that chartering is a very important step; however, only a small step towards the culmination of the initial goals, purposes, and ideals.

Power Vice

This week's talk with the administration, Dean Field specifically, was quite an informative two hours compared to last week's firery dialogue with President Lederle. The difference is that Dow was on everyone's mind last week. Those who do not attend these Tuesday Coffee Hours, sponsored by the Martin Luther King, Jr. Social Action Committee, miss a very important part of their education, and that is how mortal men are caught in a vice of power.

However, it is not as simple or dramatic as that. In any case, this is what I have learned.

Basically the voters and tax payers of the Commonwealth are concerned over this University. They have the right to know and say what the university should be doing. However, this is practically impossible. Therefore, we have a board of trustees who are appointed by the governor. They are lay people who may not be informed in certain modern educational theories or what is on the mind of today's students. They may not even be parents.

These trustees are the ruling body. They can turn back any demand of the student body, faculty and administration. To avoid political conflicts and motives they are appointed for seven year terms. Essentially they and the administration are the middlemen between the student body and faculty combined, and the state legislature who represent the voters and tax payers.

The opinion of this writer is that since the legislature controls the purse strings, and the trustees are appointed by a dubious method; the student really doesn't have much to say in his education. Instead of having two parents you have the state legislature, trustees, and the administration, who wish to improve the university. Where is all this new responsibility everyone talks about?

The complications don't end there. We have the student radicals with the help of a deformed press service which make the administrators work for their pay. If you ever attended one of these coffee hours you saw this for yourself. For one incident, the burning of Rin Tin Tin, disturbed every mother fifty miles on either side of the Massachusetts Pike. Also the radicals show their own hypocrisy in that they want student control over who gets tenure while they deny the right of the faculty to say who stays to learn.

When asked, Dean Field said that having students on the board of trustees is a good idea but he would rather see a unified student body. With one voice this group would speak and not as three separate voices as they speak now.

For me this sounds pretty good in that it might remove some of the personal in fighting which is prevalent throughout this society. Then the trustees could become lobbyist for the university instead of overseers.

Before we can have this we need a little interest on everyone's part. With renewed interest, you may find that many problems do not rest in Whitmore, but on that tenured professor you hate or that ultra-conservative state representative your parents voted for. In any case and to borrow a slogan, "If you're not part of the solution, you're part of the problem."

Voice Funds

To the editor:

Last week a bill asking for funds for the Central Area VOICE went before the Finance Committee of the Senate. It was voted down 8-2 after a debate at which no representatives from the paper were allowed to be present. The objections of the Senate finance committee were: 1. area papers should be supported by the area, 2. the paper wasn't valuable as a source of information because some of the articles could just as well have been printed in the COLLEGIAN, and 3. some of the information could have been circulated by putting cards on the tables in the dining commons as is done in southwest.

I would like to answer some of these objections now. First of all the VOICE has asked the Area for money, but it was denied because dorm funds are running low; the area government can give the paper no money because the Senate has not given the area government any money yet. The paper has no source of income as it would not be practical to sell or advertise because the COLLEGIAN is free and advertisers will usually not subscribe to two campus accounts. Secondly, the articles in the VOICE do not duplicate the COLLEGIAN either in content or form. Some features are purely creative and these would not have found a place in the campus paper. Other articles pertain to the area government, what it is doing and what it plans to do. These articles arouse interest and get rid of apathy. If cards were put on the dining commons tables, the events could be made known, but not their importance or opinions about them.

There is no question in my mind that the VOICE has area support. I have delivered them to lobbies and have them practically grabbed from my hands. Students do read, learn, think, and finally take part in area affairs. Area newspapers are important to the campus because they publish articles which pertain to only a segment of the students which the COLLEGIAN cannot publish. Also by being localized, the area newspaper can draw out those who might not write unless they were approached directly.

I believe that if students are interested enough to work hard for an area paper, then the Student Government should find the money to support them.

Editor, THE CENTRAL AREA VOICE

Thanks

To the editor:

On behalf of the UMass "33" and the Valentine Day Defense Committee I would like to thank all those in the campus community and beyond who contributed to our defense fund. Some monies have already been paid out for bailiff fees; the remainder is being retained in anticipation of the outcome of our case which has been continued in Northampton Distict Court until June 6. Again our thanks for your financial help and expressions of support.

Workshop

TO THE EDITOR

The editorial in Tuesday's Collegian which deals with the theft of 500 or so copies of the newspaper, seems to simply have glossed over the real issue. The Collegian seems to have permitted the pack of lies printed in Monday's paper, concerning the sponsor of the Women's Liberation workshop on Sunday, March 2, to go uncorrected. We organized this meeting on Sunday through SMILE--with no influence on the part of SDS. If Richard Lane had only used any forethought and either checked with the SU scheduling office or read Friday's Collegian, in which there was a letter to the editor announcing the meeting, he would have received the correct information. Even easier, he could have asked at the Workshop itself--where he was confronted by some participants as to his activities in the back of the room. Some people at the workshop--knowing the common practice of Collegian misrepresentation--suggested that he leave. But, after a discussion in which he refused to comment, he was allowed to stay. "trusting his integrity." Well, his integrity can be seen on the front page of Monday's Collegian.

It seems obvious by that article, and by the editorial on Tuesday, that the Collegian would rather deal with a "conspiracy"--what they call "an irresponsible display of adolescent behavior yesterday by members of the college campus protest groups"--than improve their publication, as a start by admitting the article on Monday was far from the truth. We know nothing about the theft of Collegians on Monday, but we do know that trusting the integrity of a Collegian reporter results in lies and mis-representations.

When SMILE sponsors another workshop on Women's Liberation this Sunday--in Worcester Room, S.U. at 2:30--we will most certainly discuss whether we want to trust the "integrity" of the Collegian again.

Coverage

To the Editor
Regarding the article about the SDS and the Bridal Fair, I feel compelled to comment on your policy or lack thereof. "Why do the members of such a small group, composed of a minority of students against the majority of established practices, gain so much coverage on the FRONT page of the student publication?" It seems that the radical, way-out trouble-making fringe of drifters and aimless wanderers on this campus, get more news and publicity for their cause than do the more stable, better settled, and more truly academic students. Change in many things is necessary, but to give such publicity to a group which has shown continuous disregard for proper channels of change, and legal methods of effecting policy, is not in the interest of the general reader. The only possible excuses for even including the article in the paper are 1. Complete coverage of Campus events, 2. Lack of filler, and 3. Editorial support of SDS. But Why front page?

Hollywood Comes to Amherst

Shirley Jones at Home in New Role

Gazing out on the location of the Amherst Common, Miss Jones contemplates how her life has progressed.

Actress Shirley Jones looked out on the Lord Jeff lawn and thought about how her career has developed. "I've accomplished everything I have wanted to", she said.

Miss Jones, attractive, congenial, mid-thirty-ish, an actress and singer was being interviewed by the University of Massachusetts Daily Collegian. She has been in Amherst for two weeks on location shots for her latest movie "Silent Night, Lonely Night" costarring Lloyd Bridges.

Sitting leisurely in a chair between shots and wearing a becoming camel pant's suit, Miss Jones reviewed her achievements. She became Miss Pittsburgh in 1953 which led to a part in the chorus of the Broadway hit "South Pacific". From there she flew to California to try out for the film part of Laurie on "Oklahoma!" at that time coming off a Broadway run. Miss Jones went on to play the leading roles in two other great musicals, "Carousel" and "The Music Man".

Now a musical star, Miss Jones still had not completely fulfilled her desire to achieve acclaim for a dramatic role. She reached this point by winning an Academy Award for her dramatic role in the film "Elmer Gantry."

Though Miss Jones' professional career did not start until 1953, her singing abilities were realized at the early age of three. Nine years later she began to take singing lessons. During high school she took part in various plays and also did work in several amateur stage shows.

Stating she was trying to be honest, not smug, Miss Jones, when asked if all her original goals in life had been fulfilled, answered, "Your mind matures in this business and so your ideals and goals change." Yet Miss Jones feels satisfied in having done most everything she had ever wanted to.

Luckily, show business had not affected her private life in any way because, as she put it quite nicely, "I don't let it. My acting and my private life don't mix. I leave my role at the studio before I come home." There she is, wife and the mother of children aged 10, 7, and 3.

Miss Jones met her husband of thirteen years, actor Jack Cassidy (by the way, also her favorite leading man) while working with him in the stage version of "Oklahoma!" The play took them on a tour of Europe sponsored by the governmental program, ASTA.

Though Miss Jones enjoys doing musical comedies, she "loves the challenge of a straight dramatic role." Her part in "Silent Night, Lonely Night" is exactly that, dramatic. She plays a woman who, while visiting her 13 year old son in a prep school in Amherst, meets (at the Lord Jeffrey) and has an affair with a man. (Lloyd Bridges) who is visiting his wife in a nearby mental institution. How it all comes out will be revealed with the film is presented on television next December.

This film is particularly exciting to Miss Jones because the woman she plays is very close to her own personality; and smiling, she said softly, "It's very difficult to play oneself."

Judith Werby

What happens when Hollywood comes to town? Pretty Penelope "Penny" Newell, a junior from Amherst, majoring in Fine Arts found out.

Because of her resemblance to Shirley Jones in size, height and coloring, Penny was chosen as a stand-in for the singer-actress in the filming of "Silent Night, Lonely Night" while on location here in Amherst and Northampton.

As a stand -in, Penny was used in some long-shots, to test and arrange lighting on the set, and sometimes to help adjust the sound.

Love Kept Them Warm Marriage Filled Their Minds

Despite the inclement weather, prospective brides, hopeful young women, and many curiosity seekers filled the Student Union Ballroom on Monday, March 3, for the third annual Bridal Fair.

Among the rows of silver and china, representatives offered brochures and information concerning their wares. Such comparison and first hand knowledge of the different products help prospective buyers in deciding on patterns and brands.

Everyone was in the running for doorprizes which included a blender, Chanel #5, and a Betty Crocker Cooking Set.

The highlight of the Fair was the modeling of gowns and sportswear for the bride's trousseau. The gowns were furnished by the House of Bianchi in Boston. Tuxedos for the six escorts came from Cahill and Hodges of Northampton.

To make those dreams seem more of a reality, photographs from Fredriks-LaRock in Northampton and Lang's Photo Studio in Amherst were on display.

Fine Arts

Music, Greeks, Jews are Hillel Lecture Topics

By ROSE MILLER
Staff Reporter

The B'nai B'rith Hillel Foundation at UMass is presenting a twin bill. Thursday, March 13, at 8:00 p.m. in Memorial Hall Auditorium, Edwin Jospe will present an illustrated lecture on "Folk Music as a Mirror of Jewish History." On Sunday, March 16, at 11:45 a.m. in the Student Union Commonwealth Room, Cyrus Gordon will speak on "The Common Background of Greek and Hebrew Civilizations." Both lectures are open to the public without charge, and preceeding the second, Hillel will hold a Brunch at 11:00 a.m.

Dean of the School of Fine Arts, University of Judaism, Erwin Jospe is a dynamic musician whose interests range widely through music and the performing arts. He has lectured on Jewish music at American Universities and has served as music director of the National Summer Institute of the B'nai B'rith Hillel Foundations, since 1949.

Dr. Cyrus Gordon is Chairman of the Department of Mediterrean Studies at Brandeis University. His specialized training covered Semitic, Classical and Indo-Iranian languages and cultures. Between 1931 and 1969 he has spent over seven years in the Near East, devoted mainly to archeological exploration and excavation.

He has written several books including THE COMMON BACKGROUND OF GREEK AND HEBREW CIVILIZATIONS.

It Was A Very Good Year . . .

But Only Faint Hope Glimmers for NIT Bid for Cagers

By Peter Pascarelli
SPORTS EDITOR

The greatest basketball team in UMass history completed its schedule Monday, but was left with only faint hopes of going on to the National Invitational Tourney in New York.

Daily Collegian
Sports
VOL. XCVII NO. 95
WEDNESDAY, MARCH 5, 1969

This season's hoopmen lists among its accomplishments 17 wins, tieing the school record, a 9-1 record in the Yankee Conference, setting a school mark, and a second consecutive Yankee Conference title. They also defeated Fordham, Iona, Navy, St. Anselm's for the first time and defeated Providence for the first time since 1957, and Syracuse for the first time since 1962.

But with all this the Redmen are on thin ice as far as the Tourney is concerned. That was the impression UMass Coach Jack Leaman gave yesterday.

The Redmen mentor, who in three years, has brought UMass basketball to its greatest heights, spoke Tuesday with N.I.T. Director Edward Steitz. In their phone conversation Steitz stated that there are, taking into consideration runnerups of conferences to be invited, teams already chosen, plus independents, about three spots open. Steitz said that eight teams are presently in consideration for those three spots of which UMass is one.

The qualifications the selectors are looking for are overall record and toughness of competion. The N.I.T. has already named five teams, they being Boston College, Rutgers, Temple, Southern Illinois and West Texas State.

Leaman was emphatic, in answer to questioning whether his Redman squad deserve to go to the Madison Square Garden classic. "We have had a great year," said Leaman, "the greatest year any UMass team has had. If any one had told me we would win 17 games, while playing ten without Joey (DiSarcina) I would have thought he was crazy."

"We played good competition, Leaman went on, "and I think this team definitely deserves a shot."

Among conferences which may be runnerups in the N.I.T. are, the Atlantic Coast (South or North Carolina), Big Eight (Kansas or Colorado), Southeast (Tennessee), Missouri Valley (Louisville) Western Athletic (Utah) and the Southwest (Baylor).

Independents that are being most frequently mentioned include, Fordham, loser to UMass by 13 points, Jacksonville, St. Peter's, loser to Vermont, Long Island University, Houston, and Army.

UMass' strong bargaining points would seem to be their conference championship, their victories over Fordham, Providence, Syracuse and Navy, the last three on away courts. Also the Redmen finished the season strong, winning, six of their last seven, and 10 out of the last 13.

Working against the Redmen probably will be last week's loss to Rhode Island and losses earlier in the season to Boston University and Northeastern, plus the fact that it was a fairly weak year for the Yankee Conference.

However, the N.I.T. selectors should keep one thing in mind. Joe DiSarcina is healthy and when Joey D. plays, it's a different Redman team.

REDMAN RANTINGS - UMass was represented on the ECAC weekly Division II hockey team with the selection of Redman defenseman Billy McMann. . .The senior is the second UMass iceman to be so honored this season, the other being all-time school scoring leader, Jeff Sanborn. . McMann is joined by Ken Morton and Mike Talbot, both of Bowdoin, Gary Socha of A.I.C., Terry Barry of Boston State, Dave Pierson of Middlebury, and Vermont's Dave Reece. . .On the final ECAC gymnastics standings, U-Mass finished sixth out of eight schools with a 3-4 record. . .The Redmen however defeated third ranked Springfield in the year's finale.....Penn. St., the perennial winner won top honors. . .And the SPRINGFIELD DAILY NEWS , like their illustrious morning counterpart the UNION, again has failed to go beyond the A.I.C. campus to find basketball news. . .In a feature yesterday, the DAILY NEWS wrote glowing praise of a A.I.C. freshman team that won three times. . . The big part of the article, in all fairness, was devoted to scoring sensation Mike White, who averaged 30 plus a game. . . .But if those Springfield writers could tear themselves away from Butova Gym, they may get sight of a UMass frosh that was 15 - 0 against better competition and had four players with 200 or more season points... If the Little Redmen played such powers as Merrimack and Western New England, they might have a few players with 30 or more a game.

Skiers Foiled in Slaloms

Deep snow foiled skiers attempts to move up in the conference standings this past weekend. Most of the top seeded racers experienced difficulties causing UMass and Amherst to fall behind Northeastern and Bentley College in Saturday's giant slalom.

Sunday the Redmen came apart at the seams and finished a discouraging tenth place in the N.E. I.S.C. slalom.

Strong individual performances highlighted the UMass efforts both days, Ted Martin and Dick Mc Hugh placed in the top 10 Saturday and Jim Garstang finished third Sunday, but the four good placings for team position did not materialize.

JIM GARSTANG

McHugh was the first skier from UMass or Amherst to finish with a respectable time in the giant slalom. He switched from fiberglass skis to metal ones to better cope with the deep, soft snow conditions.

The strategy proved sound as McHugh hurried to the top of the course and gave teammate Martin his skis and his opinions on course conditions. Martin responded by beating his run by a full three seconds to place fourth in the event.

After the first run in the slalom, Garstang, Dave Kamila and Mc-Hugh were in solid position and a win was a distinct possibility. Nasty falls once again took their toll, but not for Garstang.

Garstang put together two splendid runs to place third in a field of 110 racers. This was an outstanding accomplishment for his standing number was 57 and the course was deeply rutted for both of his runs.

This is the third time that Garstang placed in the top three.

Next weekend UMass hopes to combine the individual efforts and post a strong team finish. Northeastern University is currently tied with the Redmen for runnerup honors. The outcome will be decided in the season finale at Cranmore Saturday.

Girl Skiers Win Alden Trophy

Sunday, the UMass women put forth a complete team effort to win the Alden Trophy Race at Wildcat Mountain in New Hampshire. All four of the A Team skiers were in the top 10 standings to win the two run giant slalom. Judy Fuller, the team captain, took first honors in the race, as well as putting in the fastest time of the day. Supporting her, in a field of forty racers were Susan Arnold placing third, Barb Bund eighth and Judy Beers ninth.

Saturday, skiing on the deep powder left by last week's storm, the UMass women were again consistent at Intervale. At the two run slalom sponsored by Boston University, UMass skiers took second behind Radcliffe College. Miss Fuller, who led the team this time by placing third, was supported by Miss Bund placing ninth, and Miss Beers, tenth.

Two weeks ago at Waterville Valley, consistency was again the keynote to success. The women brought home the Radcliffe Cup. This time Miss Arnold led the team in the two run slalom by placing second. She was assisted by Miss Fuller recording a seventh place time and Miss Beers a tenth place time in the field of fifty racers.

Supported by a strong B Team consisting of Ann Richardson and Ann Courtemanche, the Women's Ski Team, coached by Gail Biggiestone, is preparing for the final race of this season. By winning the Wheaton College sponsored giant slalom at Cannon Mountain this Saturday, the women could bring the Women's Intercollegiate Ski Conference Trophy back to UMass with them.

Intramural Notes

Intramural entries for swimming are needed by next Monday, March 10. Trial heats are the following Monday, March 17 and finals are March 20.

Entries for the first annual mens and womens volleyball tournament are due today in Boyden. Play begins Monday, March 10, at 8:30 p.m.

What's going on? It's the UMass Modern Dance Club limbering up for this semesters performance. The club is under the direction of faculty member Miss Marilyn Patton.

Senate Debates Four Motions In Lengthy Three-Hour Session

The Student Senate at its meeting last night began with a series of financial motions. The Astronomy Club budget was struck as the Senate concurred with previous policy of not financing any organization that is incorporated into a department.

A motion was passed to appropriate $350.64 to the Central Area Voice. Vice-president Hartwell unsuccessfully attempted to substitute the amount in this motion with $200. The remaining cost, he felt, should be put up by the individual dorms as a sign of physical support for the newspaper. Senator Raskin raised the point that all students on campus should not have to pay for something that is of interest to a small particular group.

In speaking for the newspaper, Editor Pamela Pepper emphasized the role of the paper in eliminating apathy among the students and encouraging unity among the Central Area residents.

An RSO error in the 1967 audit of the Accounting Association was rectified as the Senate appropriated $169.78 to cover the deficit in the Association's budget.

The Index was allowed to pay, through unanticipated revenue from Greeks and other interested residence units, for appropriate sections in the book. This gives the editor the option of selling extra pages to groups who wanted additional space. This would bring in revenue to the Index while expanding coverage to those who desired it.

Asst. Dean of Students Explains Rationale Behind Lifting of Curfews

By JEAN MCANDREWS
Staff Reporter

The new policy of "self-imposed curfews," rather than enforcable University-imposed rules, reflects a general philosophy of the University: that rules such as this exist mainly to help freshmen adjust to a new way of life, and that in general, the University should replicate the situations and experiences of the adult world, allowing the student to mature on his own.

Mr. Robert N. Brooks Assistant to the Dean of Students, explained the rationale behind the lifting of curfew restrictions for second semester, while emphasizing the need for a first semester curfew. The social and educational pressures on first semester freshmen are tremendous, he said, and the retention of a first semester curfew is not a social restriction, but a means to help "bridge the great transition between high school and college."

Brooks indicated that his view of the administration's attitude toward curfews is that a woman student who hasn't developed self-discipline by the time she reaches college age won't be helped by curfews, and it is not the University's role to police her morals. He said that he considered the curfews well enforced, although there were some indications of curfew violation. E. T. Mellor, also of the Student Affairs Office, concurred, saying that the curfew seemed to have a negative, and no real positive effect.

The January, 1969 report of the Student Life Committee, in regard to results of a survey of second semester freshmen, states that in a ratio of eight to one, the girls "expressed the view the second semester curfews served no real purpose. . .Those who still needed this form of restriction in the second semester, it was felt had demonstrated a lack of ability to adjust to the University society, and to say that this assimilation will happen in ten months rather than five is unreasonable."

This policy of self-imposed curfew is reflected in the Student Life Committee's recommendation of 1967: "A University-imposed curfew for freshmen women exists primarily to provide a period of adjustment and orientation," And in the Women's Affairs Committee (of the Faculty Senate) report of 1967: "These revised regulations reflect both faith in the individual student's maturing judgment and the University's acceptance of responsibility for student welfare."

The new policy went into effect Tuesday, February 25. An announcement in the December parents' newsletter on the proposed curfew elimination received only one response.

Sirhan Swears That He Alone Is Involved in Kennedy Murder

LOS ANGELES (AP) - Sirhan Bishara Sirhan testified under oath before his murder trial jury Wednesday that he never was a member of the Communist party, and that he and he alone assassinated Sen. Robert F. Kennedy.

"Did you have anyone with you as an accomplice?" defense attorney Grant B. Cooper asked the 24-year-old Jordanian Arab.

A. No, sir.

Q. Did anyone hire you to kill Kennedy?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did any government hire you to kill Kennedy?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did you ever discuss with anyone the killing of Kennedy?

A. No, sir.

In a third day on the witness stand at his first-degree murder trial, Sirhan listened with obvious embarrassment to more excerpts from private diaries he kept before the assassination. In them were frequent self-exhortations to "kill RFK."

The dark-haired, 5-foot-4 Sirhan, an ardent anti-Zionist, is on trial for his life. The defense says he was emotionally and mentally unstable when he shot Kennedy, partly as a result of his conviction that the New York senator was pro-Israeli during his campaign for the Democratic presidential nomination.

For the first time, the jury of eight men and four women heard a statement Sirhan made in his notebooks on communism. Defense objections kept the state from putting this material before the jury, but Cooper exercised his right to do so when his turn came.

Sirhan wrote: "I firmly support the Communist cause and its people-whether Russian, Chinese, Albanian, Hungarian or whoever-workers of the world unite, you have nothing to lose bu t your chains and a world to win."

Q. What were your feelings at the time you wrote that?

A. Exactly what that says.

Q. Were you ever a member of the Communist party?

A. No, sir.

MacDivitt, Schweickart Succeed In Spaceship Transfer Operation

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) - Astronauts James A. McDivitt and Russell L. Schweickart today successfully fired the big engine designed to land men on the moon after executing the first spaceship transfer by Americans.

The jarring six-minute firing came more than five hours after McDivitt and a slightly sick Schweickart moved through a connecting tunnel from the Apollo 9 command ship into a lunar module LEM, the spidery craft being developed for a moon landing.

Schweickart overcame an early morning bout with nausea and vomiting to make the transfer. There was some concern that if the illness recurs, he might have to delay or cancel a two-hour space walk planned Thursday.

Air Force Col. David R. Scott was left alone in the command module, still locked nose-to-nose with the lunar vehicle.

After hours of extensive evaluation that included a seven-minute telecast to earth, McDivitt and Schweickart reported all systems in the LEM functioning with only one or two minor problems. This was encouraging news for America plans to land two men on the moon in another LEM in July.

The key test came at 12:42 p.m. EST when the two spacemen triggered the big 9,000-pound thrust LEM descent engine, the powerplant that will brake a later vehicle for a lunar touchdown.

During the six-minut e firing, McDivitt reported "It looks pretty smooth. It's going along like a dream."

"Unleash the Young", Says Muskie In Chicago Speech Before AAHE

CHICAGO (CPS) - Sen. Edmund Muskie (D-Maine) Wednesday called for an end to paternalism and continued participation for college students in campus affairs.

"We must develop lines of communication with our young people and open the door to participation rather than confrontation," he told the American Association for Higher Education. "So let us unleash the young."

"If a university is to encourage its students to be active and participating members of society after graduation, that university should make it possible for students to contribute to the enrichment of campus life before graduation," he said, drawing applause from the 2000 faculty members and administrators. "A university education should not be an isolated experience, in terms of the relevance of learning as well as the opportunity for citizenship."

Senator Muskie said schools have depended on book learning and advice too much, and ought to let students "make mistakes - an exhilarating, effective" teaching method. "Really the great task . . . is to instill a judgement - making ability that will allow young people to accept responsibility."

It would be wasteful, he added, not to allow students meaningful participation in "giving new relevance to our universities." He said he views as "reasonable" recent student demands for a say in decisions which directly affect their leves and grievances "in light of the injustices within our society . . . and of their own capacities to contribute."

But Senator Muskie said he does not find students "faultless." "I am distressed that a small band of students with little regard for the rights and safety of others appear so ready to risk violence in pursuit of their objectives, so heedless of the consequences. Violence . . . is not a reasonable substitute for negotiation (or other methods available) to dramatize grievances and demands."

"The picture of National Guardsmen and police stationed o n campuses to maintain order is abhorrent." Interrupted again by applause, he continued, "If intelligent men and women of student bodies , administrations and faculties cannot resolve their differences without bloodshed or the presence of an armed militia, then there is little hope for the rest of civilization."

Delegates to the AAHE's National Convention rejected a statement in the resolution committee's report saying "student activists seem bent on destroying, not reforming, the university" and substituted a suggestion of a radical caucus: "Current headlines and on-campus behavior give testimony to the fact t hat our colleges and universities are unable or unwilling to cope with needed academic reform . . . repressive measures which characterize the responses by college administrators and government officials to demands for change deny the validity of such demands and create the ultimate for extremist reactions."

The delegates took a stand favoring lowering of the voting age to 18, and indicated a desire to involve students in future meetings. But they declined to adopt the full resolution calling for organizational reform and more student participation in campus affairs.

THE NEWS IN BRIEF

Paris Peace Talks

PARIS (AP) - The Viet Cong offensive in South Vietnam and a U.S. threat of retaliation have created a tense atmosphere for the seventh full-scale session of the peace talks Thursday.

President Nixon said in Washington Tuesday that whether the offensive requires a U.S. response "is a decision we'll be making very soon." The question being asked here was whether retaliatory action, all-out or limited, might leave the future of the talks hanging in the balance.

As the four delegations prepared to gather again at the International Conference Center for talks that have produced little but deadlock, few expected that what has been started in Paris would be bombed or shelled out of existence by the two sides in South Vietnam.

Nixon said the United States was not acting precipitately. But he committed Washington to some sort of responsive action if the shelling attacks continue.

What the President calls "appropriate response" could range from limited attacks on North Vietnamese military targets to resuming aerial bombardment of the North.

Sino-Soviet Clash

MOSCOW (AP) - The commander of a Soviet border post was killed when 200 screaming Chinese soldiers stormed into Soviet territory Sunday, the Soviet Pacific Border Command reported today.

The report in the trade union newspaper TRUD said the commander and "some of his comrades" were shot down by Communist Chinese soldiers dressed in winter camouflage capes who surged toward Damansky Island in the Usuri River shouting anti-Soviet slogans.

The Soviets and the Chinese have blamed each other for the border clash, which touched off a wave of anti-Soviet demonstrations in Red China. The Chinese also claim the island, which they call Chenpao. It is on the border between Manchuria and the Maritime Provinces of the Soviet Far East.

"Soviet frontier guards took resolute measures, and the violators of the border were driven off Soviet territory," the report said.

A TRUD correspondent reported the border area was quiet Tuesday.

Riot Wire

Holyoke Community

HOLYOKE, Mass. (AP) - Police were called to the Holyoke Community College campus Wednesday afternoon after approximately 30 Negro students entered a lobby outside the college president's office.

Mayor William E. Taupier went to the building and talked to students.

The 12 police officers there made no move to oust the students.

The reason for the student gathering was not immediately learned.

U of Colorado

BOULDER, Colo. (CPS - TELEX) - Civil and university charges were filed against eight university of Colorado students Wednesday, and more charges are on the way against nearly 100 black and white students who disrupted a speech by acting president S. I. Hayakawa of San Francisco State College Monday night.

More than 500 students walked out of the auditorium as Hayakawa began his speech on "Academic Freedom and Student Militancy", but about 100 others - more than half of them black - heckled and jeered the man the Gallup Poll called "the most respected educator in America."

Hayakawa traded jibes for a while, but then the black students heard racist slurs like "blacks off campus" in response to their "pigs off campus," they jumped onto the stage or began hurling chairs onto it.

Hayakawa retreated, and black and white radical students took over the microphone. Most of the 3000 students who had come to hear Hayakawa stayed and heard discussion by students from San Francisco State College.

University President Joseph Smiley instructed the university attorney Tuesday to bring both civil and university charges against students and nonstudents identified as part of the disruption.

Hundreds of students who supported those charged are talking about calling for a general strike of the 17,000-student campus.

Sarah Lawrence

BRONXVILLE, N.Y. (AP) - Sixty girls and four men of exclusive Sarah Lawrence College staged a sit-in over a proposed tuition hike today, taking command of the girls schools administration building.

Classes continued while the protestors sat in, complete with blankets, in Westlands, the administration building.

A sign posted outside the building demanded "liberated Womanhood in a Sexually and Socio-Economically Homogenous Environment."

Brandeis

WALTHAM, Mass. (AP) - About 40 students began a sit-in Wednesday afternoon in the administration building at Brandeis University.

The students took up positions in the hall outside the office of Morris Abram, the university's president. They said they planned to remain for 24 hours.

The demonstrators said they were acting to dramatize support for several demands made by about 20 black students who seized Ford Hall at the university in January.

Rochester U

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (CPS - TELEX) - The entire black student population of Rochester University is sitting in the school's faculty club, which they took over Tuesday to protest the University's "De Facto Segregation".

The students - 43 out of a student body of 4500 - are demanding that the school hire a number of blacks as counselors, recruiters and coordinators of black programs. They also want 15 black professors hired (the University now has one black faculty member) and more black students admitted as freshmen and recruited as transfers.

Florida State

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (CPS - TELEX) - Fifty-nine Florida State University students and Fred Gordon, National Secretary of SDS, arrested by local authorities Tuesday night for holding a meeting.

About 400 other students held an all-night vigil outside the school's administration building in support of those arrested, who were charged Wednesday with contempt of court.

The students were cited for ignoring a court injunction obtained by University President Stanley Marshall to prevent their meeting and hearing Gordon speak on "Revolution and Supression on Campus.'

Marshall last week withdrew University recognition from the FSU charter of SDS because "some SDS officials in other states have advocated violence and destruction." He denied SDS use of University facilities.

Pontiac, Michigan

PONTIAC, Mich. (AP) - A public employees strike during which policemen teargassed picketing firemen at City Hall ended here Wednesday.

It was the first time since Feb. 14 that all city employees reported for work. The return ended the third short-lived walkout by firemen demanding pay parity with policemen.

STUDENT SENATE PUBLIC RELATIONS COMMITTEE

UNH Com! Reaffirms Open Recruitment Stresses "Educational" Placement Service

By RICHARD LANE
Senior Reporter

A six-member student-faculty-administration Committee to Review Recruitment Policy has reaffirmed the "open campus" job recruitment policy which has existed at the University of New Hampshire for many years.

THE committee was established two months ago by the Senate to review recruiting policies on campus following protests by students over interview visits to the campus by the Central Intelligence Agency and Dow Chemical Company.

The six-member committee stated that: "The Placement Office should continue to be open to all and any student requests for bringing organizations on campus for interviews, provided these organizations meet with the provisions of the Federal Equal Opportunities Law." It also urged that Placement Service activities be altered "so as to emphasize and develop the educational aspects of the Service."

According to the committee the Placement Service has met the vocational needs of a majority of graduating students but "has not fulfilled the academic needs and interests of all students by working more aggressively to bring to this campus a broader spectrum of potential employers."

The Placement Service must therefore become "educational" states the committee's report. It must inform students of all options open to them and seek out and identify a broader range of organizations that would not normally interview on campus. This would include industrial educational, political, charitable and other agencies. In addition, the committee also urged that the Placement Service be properly funded and staffed to carry out these recommendations.

In response to demands that Placement should deny permission to recruit on-campus to certain organizations, including the CIA and Dow Chemical Company, the committee stated that the University cannot properly take a partisan political or moral stance.

"Individuals in the University community can take such stands," states the report, "but the University of New Hampshire as a university has as its proper task the promotion of free discussion. Paternalism, the making of moral and political judgements for others, is to be avoided."

The committee's members support "peaceful demonstrations of concern such as teach-ins, picketing or letters to the editor of the campus newspaper," providing they "do not physically obstruct access to the interview."

The committee also re-affirms a recent decision of the University Senate which condemned use or threat of physical force in obstructing University operations, "as destructive of the principle of the University community and contrary to the precepts of a free and humane society."

The report recommends establishing a policy of inviting potential employers to participate in a forum on-campus. Suggested plans would call for invitations to be sent to a controversial organization by the Placement Office upon receipt of a petition signed by 25 or more members of the university community. But the report cautioned, "Access to the campus for interviewing is not to be contingent upon the organization's acceptance of an invitation to participate in a forum."

The DAILY COLLEGIAN referendum on open recruitment will be held in the Student Union lobby Monday and Tuesday, from 8 a.m. to 9 p.m. The opinion poll will be open to all undergraduate students.

"The referendum", Education Editor Richard W. Story explained, "is designed to provide the student body with a means of expressing favor or disfavor with the present recruiting policy. Up until now, all discussion on this subject has assumed that a general opposition to the present policy exists. This assumption has no real base, and an accurate measure of campus sentiment is a necessity before any alternatives to the present system can be considered."

Judge Advocates Sex in Jail To Make Prisoner's Life Livable

PHILADELPHIA (AP) - A judge says that sex in jail between husbands and wives "is desirable - and would make a convict's future life worth living."

"Otherwise a prisoner won't be worth a damn," says Judge Raymond Pace Alexander of Philadelphia Common Pleas Court. "We'll still be sending monsters out into the community."

He says he'd like some liberalization of normal sex relations in prison, involving married couples, and also unwed inmates "if they have legitimate long-term common-law relationships, backed up by sufficient evidence, and not any phony setup."

Alexander said the Scandinavian countries permit conjugal visits. So do jails in Peru, Argentina, Chile, Brazil, the Middle and Far East.

The judge said he advanced the proposal "because of the horrible, the horrendous sexual crimes that happen in prisons today, and that have been happening for more than 100 years."

A recent report by the district attorney's office said homosexual rapes are "epidemic" in Philadelphia prisons, and estimated conservatively that at least 1,000 occur annually.

"Virtually every slightly built young man committed by the courts is sexually approached within hours after his admission to prison," said the report.

Miss University Pageant Slated for Late April

The Class of '69 will sponsor the fourth annual Miss University beauty and scholarship pageant during the week of April 20 - 26. The search for the successor to Donna Lee Hayes, the reigning queen has officially begun. All fraternities, sororities, and dormitories will be asked to nominate girls possessing beauty, poise and talent. This year's winner and runners-up will be the recipients of scholarships, prizes and trophies.

The new campus queen will also represent the University at the Miss Massachusetts Pageant which will be held in July and will be televised all over the East. If she should be successful on the state level, she will represent Massachusetts in the Miss America Pageant in Atlantic City, New Jersey.

Last year the University had the distinction of staging the largest local pageant ever held in the New England area. It is hoped to surpass last year's success by attracting more girls to participate and hopefully by producing a winner at the state finals.

All single girls who attend the University are eligible to compete. Any girl wishing to enter may pick up an entry blank in the RSO office on the second floor of the Student Union. Groups who are nominating are also asked to do the same. The deadline date for all entries is Tuesday, March 18th at 5 p.m.

College Students Stage International Talent Show Saturday

Parviz Kouski of Iran (Persia) performs one of his virtuoso music selections from the twelve Persian classical music pieces written during the 13th century.

Foreign and American students of the University, Smith College and Mount Holyoke College will stage a two-hour "1969 INTERNATIONAL TALENT SHOW" on Saturday, March 8 at 8:15 p.m. This show is under the sponsorship of the International Club, UMass.

Both foreign and American students are anxious to learn more about each other outside of the classroom. Such exchange of cultural knowledge will include historical and popular music, dances, national dresses and sports. Visitors are cordially invited to this proud showing of national heritage.

The show is basically the display of various talents from different nations.

Mr. Bhatnagar of India (UMass) and his fashion show group will present ten dresses from different parts of India, Pakistan and Ceylon, with the purpose of deemphasizing "Sari" as the only national dress.

Jim Tatro of U.S.A. and his square dancing group will perform some typical western folk dances.

Parviz Kouski of Iran, will display his Persian made musical instrument called santur and render some classical Persian repertoire.

Kees Corssmit, tenor, from the Netherlands, will bring us to the dreamland of Dutch songs and Italian arias from Verdi.

Antonia Perez from the Republic of the Philippines is shaping up his feet for a Filipino dance number.

Other dances from Greece, Germaine Isberian and group, from Thailand, Gin Indara and group from Mt. Holyoke College, from the Republic of China, Delphis King of MHC and her Flag Dance, from India, Konika Banerji and her Candle Dance and from many more different countries will be witnessed during the show.

Mrs. Bhatnagar will sing a few Indian country songs.

Other participating countries are Japan, Pakistan, Korea, Indonesia and many others.

During the "Parade of National Dresses", color, style, material and history of the garments will be explained.

The production staff is composed of Kees Corssmit, chairman (Netherlands); Tony Perez, director (Philippines); Thana King, publicity (USA); Judith Crosby, reception (USA); Steve Grant, stage and decoration (USA).

A reception with refreshments following the show is planned by the University Women.

Miss Nancy L. Reid from Colorado and her partner are shown performing an intricate Philippines folk dance. Mrs. Vivian Wakefield (left) from the Philippines and Mr. Muhammad Noor from Somalia (right) are helping to keep the tall bench from swaying. The public is invited to witness the International Talent Show on Saturday, March 8, 1969, at 8:15 in Bowker Auditorium at UMass.

NES Establishes Springfield Cultural Enrichment Program

The number of N.E.S. volunteers travelling Route 91 to tutor in Springfield has been growing weekly. Because of snow and the recent holiday, Monday's tutors were prevented from going to Springfield, so the total of 98 tutors covered Tuesday through Thursday.

Despite the handicap of an unreliable bus, a cultural enrichment program is being established. The N.E.S. bus will depart Saturday morning for Springfield with volunteers to be left at centers or to remain on the bus. As the bus visits the centers it will pick up children interested in going a field trip to UMass. At the end of the day the process is reversed with tutees going home and tutors returning to the University.

Cultural Enrichment will be starting Saturday, March 8. It will be a small trip to the University. The following weekend it is hoped to have UMass entertainment play in Springfield.

It is suggested that those who are interested in the VISTA program might try the N.E.S. program. There may be no comparison of programs but the problems are similar. One can volunteer through the Martin Luther King Council in 207 Hampshire House or just hop on the N.E.S. bus some afternoon or evening at 2:30 or 6:30 p.m.

An open meeting will be held Tuesday evening, March 5, in the Student Union for all persons interested in working in the Cultural Enrichment Program.

Continued Youth Fares Recommended in House

WASHINGTON, D. C. - Representative Arnold Olsen (D. Mont.) was joined today by 16 House members in introducing a resolution in the House recommending continuation of children, youth and military fares on the nation's airlines. The concurrent resolution expresses the sense of the Congress that special fares now authorized by the Civil Aeronatics Board (CAB) "are consistent with the intent and purposes of the Federal Aviation Act of 1958."

According to Olsen, a Civil Aeronautics Board decision last month by Examiner Arthur Present that airline youth fares discriminate against full-fare passengers and should be eliminated did not reflect the intent of the

According to Olsen, a Civil Aeronatics Board decision last month by Examiner Arthur Present that airline youth fares discriminate against full-fare passengers and should be eliminated did not reflect the intent of the Congress in passing the Federal Aviation Act.

"I do not believe it was the intent of the Congress in this Act to prohibit the existing practices of authorizing one-half fare tickets for youngsters between the ages of 2-1/2 and 12 on a reservation basis; of authorizing one-half fare tickets for persons between the ages of 12 and 21 on a standby basis; or of authorizing one-half fare tickets on a standby basis for military personnel on leave," Olsen asserted.

Continuing, Olsen said he feared a CAB ruling upholding the recent decision "would ultimately threaten other special and desirable fares.

"No one would benefit from an elimination of these fares," Olsen said. "As a matter of fact, it would very likely lead to a general fare increase because two of the three fare categories involved apply only to seats which would otherwise go vacant."

Olsen said feeling is widespread in the Congress that the youth fare, currently under fire, "has been an important factor enabling thousands of our young people to attend the colleges and universities of their choice. It reflects the increased emphasis governments at all levels have placed on strengthening educational opportunities in recent years.

Michigan Legislators Concerned About Violence at Ferris State

Reps Urge Investigation

BIG RAPIDS, Mich. - Claiming that "some lives may be lost if immediate steps are not taken,' Rep. John Conyers (D-Mich.) urged the justice department Tuesday to investigate Monday's violence at Ferris State College.

Students, however, returned peacefully to classes Tuesday following the arrests of 300 Monday night.

Under direct authority of Gov. William Milliken, more than 70 state troopers dragged the 300 students - 250 of them black - out of the administration building Monday night.

The students were staging a protest of what they called "the extremely volatile racism" on the campus.

A growd of white students, estimated at about 500, gathered around the building as police tried to eject the demonstrators chanting "white power." Police ordered them to leave the scene but they refused.

Ferris has been plagued for the past month with sporatic and serious fights between black and white students.

Conyers urged the justice department to "take immediate steps to investigate the situation" hinting that federal funds may be "being used in a discriminatory manner."

He explained in a telegram to the department and the Department of Health, Education and Welfare that "racial confrontation between 75 blacks and 200 whites last Thursday resulted in the injury of 22 persons and now threatens to become a much more serious conflict."

There are currently 360 blacks on the campus of 7700 students, and no black faculty members.

Louis Stone, president of the Ferris Chapter of the NAACP, charged Monday that he had received reports some students had been seen with guns and claimed this was the reason the blacks decided to remin together in the administration building.

Two black state legislators have initiated Michigan'2 third state investigation of student activism be- cause of the Ferris incident. Presently both the house and senate a e beginning investigations into student unrest.

The blacks asked for the new investigation because "black students have expressed fear of being attacked by white students and fear of inability of local law enforcement officers to handle the situation."

Council Wants Hippie Cops

BERKELEY, (CPS) — A left-liberal group has proposed that members of this city's sizable hippie community become police- men - real, live policemen with badges, uniforms, guns and clubs.

The Better Berkeley Council (BBC) has put out a flyer with a shappy-haired, bearded police- man- "Wanted - Hip Cops" and urging hippies to apply for 29 vacant positions in the Berkeley police department.

"If hip people do not apply and go on to fill those vacancies,' says the flyer, "we will get more of the same old stuff and have the same old hassles.'" It said people who apply should be "same. . .love children and other growing things. . .dislike the use of force when gentleness will work . . .defend justice for all. . . believe people should be free to live their own lives if they do not harm others. . .and value people for themselves, not for their money or their dress."

Applicants must also pass a written test and appear before a police board which will look at their "attitudes and such," says Crooke. It may be there that would-be hip cops would falter.

Grad Senate Forms Ad Hoc Com. To Study Need for Judiciary

An Ad Hoc Judicial Committee to hear cases against graduate students was established Monday night by vote of the Graduate Student Senate. The action came in the wake of student arrests resulting from the recent protest of on-campus recruiting by Dow Chemical Co.

Acting Dean Arthur C. Gentile of the Graduate School in a letter to University President John W. Lederle noted the lack of a judicial system and suggested the GSS take steps to set up and implement such an institution.

Dean Gentile explained that the judiciary is needed as an "interim procedure" until the administration accepts the code drafted by the GSS. "We should let the president know what is our due process," he said.

The committee will be organized at the March 17 GSS meeting with five graduate student members appointed by GSS President Thomas Minogue from nominations submitted to the legislative body. The appointments must be approved by the Graduate Student Senate.

A minimum of three judicial committee members will be required to vote on a recommended disposition for an individual case. The majority decision will be forwarded to the Dean of the Graduate School who will take "whatever action is necessary to carry out the recommendations.' Student or administration appeals will be directed to the Committee on Scholarship and Standards of the Graduate Council.

It was emphasized that no hearings could be held by the judicial committee while civil court action is pending against an accused student. This is a definite statement that no formal action will be taken against the Dow protestors at present.

Dean of Students William F. Field maintained that the judicial system "is primarily student-protective." He said, "it tends to get cumbersome, but it is an attempt to avoid being open to question that a case has not been fairly heard."

Dean Field described the kinds of cases which might be adjudicated by a student court. Using such examples as robbery, assault and arson, he said a student might be charged by the university administration if a civil court decision might not be expected to protect the college community.

Questioning the GSS proposals for organizing the judicial committee, SBA Prof. Isidore Silver, the Civil Liberties Union lawyer, who is counsel for the Dow protesters, observed that the legislative body which is making the judicial rules "perhaps should not be putting them into effect."

President Minogue contended the GSS has been requested to set up an ad hoc judiciary to operate until the formal code has been approved. "We passed a resolution last spring adopting a draft of the code and the administration implied we could use the outlined procedures in the code even before the administration has officially accepted it," he said.

With so many people complaining about the students today, maybe it's time to do something really constructive about them. Since they are easily influenced when they are young, that is the time to get them. Our school of Education should learn to give students an education, not a bunch of ideas that make them ask questions. As a first step, here are some educational games combining interest and education.

1.) "LIVING HISTORY" (May also be called "WAR", since war tactics are obviously the only lessons to be learned from history.): Students are divided into two "ARMIES" and lined up facing each other on the playground. Those who can not understand directions are made "OFFICERS". Game begins when "ARMIES" are ordered to "CHARGE".

ALTERNATE PLAN: "VIETNAM WAR": Practice teachers have students wear pajamas to school, and scatter into playground around jungle gyms. Teachers then import R.O.T.C. recruits to clear playground of the little pests. Those on either side who refuse to play the game are sent to "JAIL".

PURPOSE: To prepare students for "REAL LIFE".

2.) "POLLUTION": Students act out parts. "BIG INDUSTRIES" put "POLLUTION' into "AIR' and "WATER". "CONSERVATIONISTS" play game towin "LAWS" and take away "POLLUTION", while "POLITICIANS" try to win "PAYOFFS" by stopping "LAWS" and hiding "POLLUTION". For extra fun, add "PEOPLE', who try not to get "POLLUTION". If they lose, they must go to "OVERCROWDED HOSPITALS" and "SLEEP" on "FLOOR."

(NOTE: All this shoul d build up qualities of "FRIENDLY COMPETITION".

PURPOSE: To prepare students for "REAL LIFE".

3.) "TAXES": "GOVERNMENT" tries to win 'MONEY", through use of "TAXES". "TAXPAYERS" fight back with "DEDUCTIONS", but are given handicap, called "COMPLICATED TAX FORM". "TAXPAYERS" may try to hide "TAXABLE INCOME", but if they lose, they go to "JAIL", or must play "TAG' all the way to "BRAZIL". (NOTE: "TAXES" may be used with 'WAR" and "POLLUTION' .)

4.) "POLITICS": "POLITICIANS" try to hide "POLLUTION", "WAR", and "TAXES". "VOTERS" try to guess which "POLITICIANS" are hiding them, and try to remove them from the game with their "VOTES". Meanwhile, "POLITICIANS" try to win "VOTES' with their "CAMPAIGNS' "CAMPAIGN PROMISES', and "MAGIC ANSWERS". "POLITICIANS" who last longest in the game win "SENIORITY", which in turn can be used to win the biggest prizes: "GRAFT", and 'PAY RAISES".

5.) "DESTRUCTION': Each student gets a number of "BUTTONS" - big kids ("BIG COUNTRIES") get more "BUTTONS', smaller kids ("SMALL COUNTRIES") get only a few. "BIG COUNTRIES' try to get more "BUTTONS' from "SMALL COUNTRIES', so they will have more than the other "BIG COUNTRIES". The game can go on as long as there is anyone who wants to play. No one wins.

ALTERNATE PLAN: "TOTAL DESTRUCTION": Everyone pushes all of his buttons at once. Game ends immediately.

PURPOSE: To prepare students for "REAL LIFE'.

6.) "REAL LIFE": Repeat all games, with authentic details

FORUM COMMENT

Human Uses for The University

I have a few thoughts about some issues that have been raised by some people, who say there is this strange war going on and we are not helping to stop it: they say we are perpetuating it, here, where we go to college.

What are the kinds of critical questions students ask about education? What are the ways in which students conceive questions about educational techniques? What is there for people to learn? Can anyone be taught? Why should anyone learn these things we are supposed to be taught? etc. etc. Well, if the only answers students can give are similar to the answers soldiers give when asked why they are fighting in the war they find themselves fighting in, then I say something is strange.

I had always thought that a soldier's training was different than a student's training. But if their reasons for doing what they do are similar, then education is facilitating the same ends basic military training facilitates. If humans are fodder in an economic and political process, then that process allows only certain kinds of actions and ideas for the humans involved. Patriotism and earning a living subordinate the individual to some process whose means and ends eliminate analytical reasoning, an empirically validated sense of reality, as well as a desire to feel what one feels.

We, for a few millenia, have accepted that the soldier must be an automaton. We have apparently also accepted that the student must be an automaton. Of course, there is the problem of knowing what an automaton is.

This query can be clarified by examining the teachers and parents from whom we have inherited our roles and habits and expectations. In 95% of classrooms will be found boring, unimpassioned, hollow men and women who neither burp nor, seemingly, make love and whose enthusiasm for life is embodied in an occasional late arrival for class. In 95% of homes will be found frustrated, violently repressed men and women who neither cry nor, seemingly, love and whose enthusiasm for life is embodied in a continual desparate struggle for money, things, and obedience from their children.

Travel used to broaden, because thereby people were able to see the way things were done down the road. However, as various students about the world are demonstrating, things down the road aren't done any too differently, since industrialization has been substituted as a n end-all for all societies.

So, we as neophyte citizens are sort of stuck with limited ideas for behavior since the only ones offered lead to the inevitable military training camp and the inevitable corporate job - both accommodating little individual difference, and a short life.

People who have one glass either drink out of the same cup, or use their hands. Are there other alternatives one could imagine?

What do people want, if you could separate for one second their intelligent desire from their roles, habits, taboos, the pressure from Mommy and Daddy, and the fear of the police and the priest? Supposedly, at a university, these are the questions which must be posed and must be answered. Everywhere else in the culture, people haven't the time or the chance to ask free critical questions. Everywhere else in the culture people are not free to innovate - they just implement, they just work the system out a bit farther, mining more alabaster, and cutting down more trees.

One possible use for a university just seems not to be about to be employed here in Amherst. I obviously don't mean using the university as a place where people prepare for careers such as Hotel Management which lately has become the concern of a whole university department.

Use the university as a place which directs all inquiry, all study, all life, toward one end: new ways of living, new ways of accepting human feeling. I know all about Brother Santayana's warning - those who don't know the past are forced to repeat it. I suggest, however, that learning about the past doesn't require that we live in it. So, I'm interested in more than modern plant techniques - I'm interested in no plant techniques, no situation in which humans must work in plants, in the end - no plants at all.

My friends and I believe that we are all killers - in the end what our culture only does is kill. And our ignorance of our own deaths is proven by our desire to become soldiers in the great Walrus game of them all: life without living, desire without experience, words without voices: the life of a political and economic soldier.

Rebuttal

To the editor:

As an individual within the university community who has been held up to public attack I find it a matter of personal conscience to defend myself and refute my attacker (s) through this open letter.

First of all, Jon Weissman's opening remark that I am incompetent as a reporter is strictly his own value judgement relating to this one issue, I would not bother to refute it further except by pointing to Weissman's own words, and these are, that I regard the criticism as one "alleged to me which is inaccurate and out of context."

But what really bothers me is Weissman's accusation of my article as being "a lie." According to him I am a breaker of promises and the story is full of false information. This is just not true!

Weissman states that the women's workshop had nothing to do with SDS. That is most interesting because I covered last weekend's SDS convention or assembly and a "Women's Liberation" workshop was listed, in print, on the program agenda. It also appeared prominently on a poster appearing in the Student Union last week. And when Weissman addressed his audiences at Sunday's plenary session, no reference was made of SMILE, nor SDS's independence from that meeting. Furthermore no one at that workshop ever made reference to SMILE in my presence. And many of the individuals at this workshop had also been present at other aspects of the SDS convention, indicating there was no change of organizations.

It seems then that the workshop and SDS had all the outward signs of being one and the same. If they were not then perhaps it is Weissman's fault for not supplying the proper information as "official chairman."

Weissman also states that I lied by writing that the Bridal Fair protest was linked to the four proposals passed by the conference. I did not refer to the protest as a proposal nor write "other" proposals to the four that were passed. I specifically stated that the protest resulted from a group of what I believed to be 20 SDS members meeting in a special workshop and not as a proposal put before the entire convention.

Lie number 4, according to my attacker, is that I broke an agreement not to report the deliberations of the women's workshop. I can only say that I never made such a promise. The group did propose possible forms of demonstrations at the Fair which might be of an illegal and disruptive nature. Because of this and because the group was unclear as to just what they would do, if anything, in this area, I agreed not to report this aspect, which I did not do. But never did I promise to keep secret the meetings very deliberations because they were of a protest nature such as setting up tables and passing out literature. In fact one individual at that meeting did tell me that it was alright to report that something was going to happen at the Fair.

It must be mentioned that this meeting took place in the Nantucket Room of the Student Room, with the door wide open. There was no closed or executive session. The individuals involved were aware of my presence as a reporter. If these people, be they SDS or SMILE wanted secrecy, they should have planned accordingly.

As for Weissman's final accusation, that I misquoted him, I can only say that he did indeed say the things attributed to him. He himself almost admits as much by going on to say so just after he has denied it. And Weissman also seems to have become the spokesman for Steve Halliwell and others whom he says have been misquoted. If they have been misquoted why have not they said so themselves with specific references.

It seems then that SDS, Weissman, and SMILE have been guilty of the very things they accuse of me - untruths.

I can only say in summation that it is very difficult to distinguish between protest groups such as SDS and SMILE as the COLLEGIAN pointed out in its editorial. "Many protest leaders seem to change group alliance daily."

That is what seems to have happened concerning my article. Originally I was attacked for giving credit to SDS for something SMILE supposedly did. But Weissman and others have taken this basic premise and "changed" it into a criticism of the entire article as one lie after another.

I can assure the campus community and give the readers my word (despite what Weissman, SDS or SMILE may think of my integrity) that Monday's article was "not a lie."

Four Members of Speech Dept. Receive Association Awards

The Department of Speech at the University of Massachusetts has announced that four of the seven annual awards given by the Speech Association of America have been received by faculty members here.

Professor Karl R. Wallace was recipient of the 1968 James A. Winans Memorial Award for Distinguished Scholarship in Rhetoric and Public Address for his book, FRANCIS BACON ON THE NATURE OF MAN. University of Illinois Press, 1967. It was also awarded the $500 SAA Golden Anniversary Prize Fund Award for scholarly publications. In his book, Dr. Wallace probes the conceptual bases of Bacon's system of knowledge and learning and sheds new light on the intellectual climate of the period, with its long tradition of reflection on man's nature and soul.

SAA Prize Fund Awards were also received by M. James Young, Chairman of the Theatre and Oral Interpretation Area, for "The York Pageant Wagon", in SPEECH MONOGRAPHS, (March 1967), and by Associate Professor Vincent Bevilacqua, for three articles, "Baconian Influences in the Development of Scottish Rhetorial Theory," PROCEEDINGS OF THE AMERICAN PHILOSOPHICAL SOCIETY, (August 1967); "James Beattie's Theory of Rhetoric," SPEECH MONOGRAPHS, (June, 1967), and "Alexander Gerard's Lectures on Rhetoric...", SPEECH MONOGRAPHS, (August 1967).

Ursinus College and BOAC Announce Travel Seminar

A summer travel seminar to Britain, offering college credit for qualified students, will be operated by Ursinus College, Collegeville, Pennsylvania, in association with British Overseas Airways Corporation.

The 21-day seminar in British philosophy will be held at England's Durham University. Participants will leave Kennedy Airport, New York, by BOAC jet on 20 July and return 10 August.

Interspersed with two weeks at Durham University's Bede College for lectures and discussions with leading British philosophers will be a week of guided sightseeing and excursions. Visits are scheduled to London, Windsor, Oxford, York and Edinburgh (Scotland). Also, the seminar grop will take in an evening performace at the Shakespeare Memorial Theatre in Stratford-on-Avon.

Seminar director is Dr. William B. Williamson, head of the philosophy-religion department at Ursinus.

The seminar-tour, he said, is open to all. Participating students from other colleges may, with permission from their own deans, receive two semester hours' credit in philosophy from Ursinus.

Covered by the tour's all - inclusive cost of $585 are round-trip transatlantic travel; intra - Britain rail and coach transport; most meals; tickets to events and performances; transfers and tips.

A descriptive folder is available from the tour organizer, Phoenix Travel Service, 227 Bridge St., Phoenixville, Pa., or from BOAC, 1617 Kennedy Blvd., Philadelphia, Pa.

Southwest Assembly Offers Services to Area Students

In an effort to make Southwest a truly residential college, Southwest Assembly is currently offering numerous services to area students. The Assembly is made up of students representing each of the dormitories in the area. It was formed this year to meet the needs of students in the largest residential area on campus. The Assembly organizes student activities and is concerned with problems and improvements of living conditions in Southwest.

Six committees have been formed to handle more specific types of problems and services. These include the Legislative, Academic Matters, Communications, Services, Finance and Program Committees. Several of these are now sponsoring activities for Southwest residents.

The Service Committee has set up a cold Self-Treatment Center in Colldge Tower lobby. It is open from 8:30 - 9:30 a.m. and from 4:30 - 6:30 p.m. on Monday through Friday. Ordinary non-prescription medication is available "for colds and general debilitation caused by hourly exams and term papers", according to the committee.

Emergency Student Loans are available through the Finance Committee from any area coordinator in Kennedy Tower lobby. Loans are given up to $25 and should be repaid within three weeks. Unlike Student Senate book loans, these are unrestricted.

The Social Committee sponsors top-name movies weekly in Southwest, offers numerous lectures and is currently working on plans for a Southwest Week to be held in April.

A Study Hall in Hampden Commons #7, Monday through Thursday from 7:30 - 10:30 p.m. is sponsored by the Academic Matters Committee. There is also a Late Night Study Hall in Berkshire Commons #9 Clubroom, Monday through Thursday from 11:00 p.m. - 2:00 a.m.

The Southwest Tutorial Program has recently been put into effect by the Academic Matters Committee. Tutorial and help sessions are held weekly in Hampden Commons #7 in the closed dining areas facing the mall. Help sessions are held from 7:00 - 10:00 p.m. according to the following nightly schedule. On Monday help is offered in Math 112, Calculus and English 112. German, French, Spanish and Russian help sessions are held on Tuesday evenings. On Wednesday the tutorials are in Chemistry 102, Chemistry 112, and Organic Chemistry. Allso, advanced help sessions in Organic Chemistry are being taught by Professor McWhorter from 7:30 - 9:30 p.m. Wednesdays on the 12th floor lounge of Kennedy Tower. Additional information concerning the tutorial program is available from Mrs. Schnarr (5-1550) or Andy Elliott (6-5324).

Sales Management
Training Program

This Program is designed to develop young college graduates for careers in life insurance sales and sales management. It provides an initial training period of 3 months (including 2 weeks at a Home Office School) before moving into full sales work.

Those trainees who are interested in and who are found qualified for management responsibility are assured of ample opportunity to move on to such work in either our field offices or in the Home Office after an initial period in sales.

Aggressive expansion plans provide unusual opportunities for those accepted.

Hello Friend Performs in SW

In keeping with their philosophy that "If something is to be given, it should be given freely.", the HELLO FRIEND FOLK SOCIETY gave a free concert in the Franklin dining commons on Saturday, March 1st.

The group drew an audience of 250 people for its first appearance in the Central area.

The Folk Society has been in existence for nine months and has performed 10 times on campus. The Society has also performed at Smith College and at the Haystack Ski Area. Money is earned by selling refreshments.

The next concert by the Hello Friend Folk Society will be given at the Hampden commons, the group's home base. The time and date for the concert will be announced in the DAILY COLLEGIAN.

Playtex invents the first-day tampon™

(We took the inside out to show you how different it is.)

Outside: it's softer and silky (not cardboardy). Inside: it's so extra absorbent... it even protects on your first day. Your worst day!

In every lab test against the old cardboardy kind.... the Playtex tampon was always more absorbent. Actually 45% more absorbent on the average than the leading regular tampon.

Because it's different. Actually adjusts to you. It flowers out. Fluffs out. Designed to protect every inside inch of you. So the chance of a mishap is almost zero!

Try it fast.

Appointments Announced At Columbia University

Two major high level positions at Columbia University were filled Tuesday, when acting president Andres Cordier announced the appointment of Nobel-laureate Polykarp Kusch as vice president and dean of faculties, and of Paul D. Carter as provost.

Kusch, 59, Nobel prize-winner in physics, has been on the Columbia faculty since 1937. As dean of faculties he fills a position vacant since 1967, when Jacques Barzun left the position.

Carter had previously served as director of the budget, and as assistant, and later, vice provost. Carter holds undergraduate degrees in both physics and philosophy.

The announcement earlier this year by Truman that he was leaving Columbia ended speculation that he was to succeed Grayson Kirk as president of Columbia. Truman had been widely regarded as a likely successor to Kirk. However, his identification with the controversial responses of the Columbia administration to the student rebellion last spring was believed to have diminished his chances of succession.

Several other major posts at Columbia remain unfilled: in addition to a new president, the university is seeking deans for six other schools and colleges within the institution.

Urban Unrest Ends in Lawsuit

WASHINGTON (CPS – TELEX) - Senator John McClellan (D-ARK.) holding hearings on the causes of urban unrest, was promptly met by a lawsuit from his first witness to the tune of $50,000.

Alan and Margaret McSurely, who were subpoenaed by the permanent investigations subcommittee along with all their personal records, filed suit against McClellan and others on behalf of four activist groups as well as themselves.

The groups - which had been named in the subcommittee's subpoena, are Southern Conference Education Fund (SCEF), Southern Student Organizing Committee (SSOC), Student Nonviolent Coordinating Committee (SNCC) and Students for a Democratic Society (SDS). The suit asks for $50,000 for each group, citing damages incurred.

While close to 300 supporters waited in the hall of the new Senate Office Building, Attorney William Kunstler led the McSurely's through the legal smokescreen put up by McClellan and his counsel. McSurely and his wife refused to answer questions or submit their personal correspondence and files unless the committee hearings were open to the public.

McSurely did tell them, however, that he would be happy to discuss the causes of urban riots.

McClellan had previously stated that he had sworn testimony that the Nashville, Tenn., disorders were started by Stokely Carmichael. Attorney Kunstler replied by saying he was there at the time, and the McClellan's facts were inaccurate.

Toward the end, McSurely offered a statement for the record. The subcommittee chairman said he would accept the statement, but couldn't promise it would go in the record.

McClellan seemed uneasy when he learned of the sentiment and size of the crowd outside. Capitol police were prepared to make mass arrests on charges of "loitering," but the senator sent work telling them not to do so.

At the end of the hearing, McClellan announced the McSurely's had until Friday (March 7) to produce the subpoenaed records. He gave no indication of what would happen then. McSurely has said he has no intention of bringing the records.

The lawsuit, which was filed earlier Tuesday morning, lists all committee members and their counsel as defendants. In addition to the chairman, the members include Senators Henry Jackson (D-Wash.), Sam Ervin (D-N.C.), Robert Griffin (R-Mich), Karl Mundt (R-S.D.), Charles Percy (R-Ill), Jacob Javits (R-N.Y.), Edmund Muskie (D-Me.), and Abraham Ribicoff (D-Conn.). The last three were not present for the hearings.

The suit asks the Federal District court to declare the subcommittee subpoenas unconstitutional and void; to stop congress from citing them for contempt; and to provide such "other relief as the court may deem necessary."

The McSurely's first gained prominence in the summer of 1967 when their home in Pike County, Kentucky, was raided by the commonwealth attorney's office. They were arrested and charged with trying to overthrow the county government. A month later the law was declared unconstitutional.

The McSurely's were Appalachian volunteers at the time, organizing area poor people to combat unjust coalmining procedures. The commonwealth attorney contacted Senator McClellan and told him he would turn over the material seized in the illegal raid.

When McClellan tried to get the material direct from Pike County officials, the Supreme Court blocked him.

McSurely has a long background in anti-poverty work in Appalachiu, and earlier in Washington, D.C.

Sympathy demonstrations for the McSurely's were scheduled by the SSOC in Little Rock and Fayetteville, Ark., Tuesday.

Arcon Interviews

Interviews for next year's Arcons will be held Saturday, March 8, and Sunday, March 9, from 1:00 to 5:00 p.m. in the Council Chambers at the Student Union. Prospective applicants will be interviewed by the present 21 Arcons along with prominent members of the faculty and administration.

Arcon, the University Guide Service, was instituted in 1965 to provide visitors and guests with tours and information concerning the University of Massachusetts. The present group has provided over two thousand visitors to the school with comprehensive tours of the campus.

Applicants will be rated on their ability to answer questions clearly and intelligently. Any questions concerning the interviews should be directed to Norm Allard at 546-7037 or Jerry Howland at 253-9232.

Special Training Offered to English Major Graduates

A federally-funded program to train English teachers for schools in disadvantaged areas has been announced by the University of Massachusetts School of Education.

Supported by an Office of Education grant of $58,800, the program will enroll 12 graduates of liberal arts colleges who have majored in English and who seek careers teaching English in ghetto schools.

The work will include courses in English, psychology and sociology, practice teaching in a ghetto school, a summer working in an Upward Bound program and a semester living and working in a depressed area.

The two-year program leads to a Master of Arts in Teaching degree and offers fellowships of $2000 the first year and $2200 the second. Additional stipends are available for dependents and summer study.

Applications are being accepted now. Information is available from the program chairman, Dr. Richard O. Uhin, School of Education, University of Massachusetts, Amherst 01002.

Income Tax Information Released by Internal Revenue

By RICHARD LANE
Senior Reporter

William E. Williams, District Director of Internal Revenue for Massachusetts, has recently made available news releases with helpful information for Massachusetts tax payers concerning their Federal income taxes.

According to Williams, "The key factor in determining whether you have to file a Federal income tax is the amount of your income." Anyone under 65 who has a gross income of $600 or more for the year is required to file a return. This applies to minors, single, married and STUDENTS. And for anyone 65 years of age or older on the last day of his or her tax year, no return is required unless the gross income was $1200 or more. Even if the income is under these limits you should file a return to obtain a refund of any income tax withheld from your salaries or wages.

Businessmen, farmers, and other self-employed persons must file a return if their net earnings from self-employment were $400 or more.

Williams also announced important news concerning the new tax surcharge. "Some taxpayers are forgetting to add the surcharge to their regular tax while others are figuring it incorrectly," he stated. If the taxpayer is expecting a refund, it will be delayed until the mistake is corrected.

The District Director for Massachusetts suggested that the best way to avoid mistake and refund delays is for taxpayers to read carefully the instructions which are explained on both 1040 and 1040A forms.

The tax surcharge on 1968 income amounts to 7-1/2 per cent of the taxpayer's regular tax, not 10 per cent as generally described said Williams. The 10 per cent surcharge did not go into effect until April 1, 1968 and taxpayers will thus pay only 7-1/2 per cent for all last year's income.

For those planning to list a business deduction of travel and entertainment expenses records of these expenses must be substantiated. Estimates are not legally acceptable for tax purposes.

Mr. Williams said that in many instances a taxpayer should keep a diary or timely record as well as receipts and invoices to back up a travel or entertainment expense. The amount of each separate expenditure must be substantiated as well as confirmation of date, name of person entertained, type and location of entertainment, and also reason and nature of the expense.

Federal tax rates will be lower for single taxpayers as "head of household" when they provide over half the cost of maintianing a home for one of their relatives for the year. The relative, except a parent, must actually live with the taxpayer, and in addition must qualify as a dependent of the taxpayer.

In these situations the taxpayer will be entitled to file as a "head of household" and use the lower tax rates that apply.

Williams concluded by saying that taxpayers should make sure to mail their returns to the correct address. Those showing refunds should send returns directly to the IRS Service Center, 310 Lowell Street, Andover, Mass. 01812. A preaddressed envelope for this purpose is included with your taxforms package.

Taxpayers whose returns show a balance due should mail their returns to: District Director, IRS, John F. Kennedy BLDG., Government Center, Boston, Mass. 02203.

Checks or money orders in payment of the tax shougd be made payable to "Internal Revenue Service."

Lectures on Arab-Israeli Relations Given at Amherst

The second in a series of three lectures on Arab-Israeli relations will feature Professor Uri Ra'anan whose topic is "Soviet Global Policy and the Middle East". Mr. Ra'anan will lecture on Monday, March 10 at 3 p.m. in Converse Assembly.

He will try to relate the setbacks that the Soviet Union has suffered in the Middle East with those they have suffered generally over the last three years in an attempt to show how these failures have affected Eastern Europe and particularly how they have shaped Russian policy in the Middle East.

The third lecturer in the series will be John S. Badeau, Director, Middle East Institute, Columbia University, former U. S. Ambassador to the United Arab Republic. He will speak on "Can the United States have a Middle East Policy?" on Friday, March 14 at 8 p.m. in Buckley Auditorium.

Climaxing the three lectures will be a panel discussion, scheduled for Saturday, March 15 at 10 p.m. in Buckley Auditorium on the topic: "American Policy in the Middle East." Moderator will be George Kirk, Professor of History, University of Massachusetts and panelists will include John S. Badeau, David G. Ness, former Deputy Chief of Mission, Cairo, and Richard Parker, County Director of United Arab Republic Affairs, U. S. Department of State.

I'eymakers Attend Folk Festival

The Heymakers Square Dance Club, one of the most active clubs of campus, attended the Intercollegiate Folk Festival at New York University on February 28 through March 1. Heymakers was the only square dance club attending the Festival, other colleges attending demonstrated other types of folk dances from foreign countries. The Folk Festival which attracts folk dancers from many colleges throughout the Northeast will be hosted by the Heymakers next year.

The Heymakers will also hold their third open square dance of the year on March 15, 8 - 11 p.m. at the Farle y 4-H Lodge. Mr. Henry Cosimini of Agawan will be calling. Guests from the Town 'n' Country Club of Southwick and the Silver Wing Stompers of Westover Air Force Base and other area square dance clubs will be attending. The Heymakers have the distinction of being the oly College Western Square Dance Club in New England.

Sororities Pledge Frosh

Seventy-three freshmen and 40 upperclassmen have been pledged by the 10 UMass sororities as a result of the Formal Rush Feb. 4-12.

Twenty of the new pledges are members of Project 10, according to Mary DellaPaolera, Panhellenic rush chairman. "Sororities seem to be appealing more and more to the individualistic girl," she said.

"Greek spirit was high among sisters and rushees despite the miserable storm which caused many professors to cancel classes," she said. "The storm didn't hinder any of our activities."

"Formal rush allows the rushees to see many sides of the houses," she said. It consisted of 10 open, informal parties, beginning Feb. 4, at which sisters and rushees "get to know each other."

Bids were extended Feb. 12. Informal parties given by each house to welcome their new pledges climaxed the week's activities.

Cadets Promoted

The U.S. Army ROTC Department on the UMass campus has promoted all cadets in its junior class to the rank of C/2Lt. for this semester.

The cadets were promoted for three reasons: (1) Increased responsibility as cadet junior officers, (2) Better training and preparation for their six weeks summer camp session, and (3) Easier functioning of the Cadet Brigade staff this year and next.

As a result of the promotions all juniors have been reassigned immediately to a Junior Company (Co. E) to be commanded by C/Maj. Alfred Monahan, with C/Maj. Peter Reilly as Executive Officer. The company has two platoons of juniors with C/1Lt. Barry Noorigan as the 1st Plt. Leader and C/1Lt. Wm. Burke as 2nd Plt. leader.

Certain juniors have also been reassigned to meet with various cadet brigade staff officers and to learn the duties of their positions. This includes Supply, Intelligence, Operations, and duties of the Adjutant and Executive Officer.

Sophomores in the Army ROTC program have also been promoted to various NCO ranks to fill in for the reassigned juniors.

Frat Elects Officers

John Carhard was elected president of Lambda Chi Alpha Fraternity Thursday, February 20.

A sophomore majoring in Government, Carhard has been active in many campus activities in the past two years, notably the Revelers and the Class of 1971 Executive Council.

The other officers newly elected are Kenneth J. Szczypien, a sophomore from Southbridge, Mass., vice president; Robert Mucha, a sophomore from Ashland, Mass., treasurer; and James P. Calhoun, also a sophomore from Ashland, Mass., secretary.

UMass Bacteriologist Studies Fish Spoilage

Dr. Robert Levin of the University of Massachusetts is studying everything from detergents to viruses in a research battle against bacteria that cost the state's fishing industry thousands of dollars a year in spoiled fish.

A bacteriologist in the UMass department of food science and technology, Dr. Levin is working under federal and state grants on a broad range of fish spoilage problems.

For example, he has just completed an 18-month study of sanitary practices on fishing vessels and has found that only with the use of detergents could spoilage bacteria in trawler holds be adequately removed. He explained: "One of the problems in the fishing industry is the extensive growth of fish spoilage bacteria which occurs in the storage holds of fishing vessels. When these bacteria grow they produce a great deal of slime which clings to storage surfaces, making it difficult to clean and sanitize the holds of the vessel."

UMass researchers first isolated the slime-forming bacteria, then studied methods of eliminating them, one of which was a jet of hot detergent followed by a potable water rinse. This effected a 99 per cent reduction of bacteria as opposed to the conventional method of hand scrubbing and rinsing with harbor water.

Another approach is the study of viruses known as bacteriophage or phage which attack and destroy fish spoilage bacteria. "We obtain such phage from harbor water and have found them to be highly specific towards the species of spoilage bacteria which they attack and kill," Dr. Levin said. This means that phage can be manipulated to determine the precise identity and trace the origin of fish spoilage bacteria.

Dr. Levin noted: "One of our phage is quite unique in that it is unable to reproduce or otherwise function at temperatures above the normal refrigeration level. This is the only known virus which reproduces solely at temperatures near freezing."

The UMass research team, which includes five technicians and six graduate students, is also studying a group of antibiotic-like substances known as bacteriocins. These apparently are produced by some kinds of fish spoilage bacteria as "killing agents" that are lethal to other kinds of spoilage bacteria. "We are studying these bacteriocins with the hope of eventually putting them to use to preserve fish," the UMass bacteriologist said.

The UMass researcher has discovered that the refrigeration storage time of fish may be extended from the customary four to five days to twice that time by dipping fish fillets in a 1 per cent solution of a compound called EDTA, full name ethylenediaminetetraacetic acid, tetrasodium form.

Dr. Levin's work is the first to show that EDTA derivatives are effective in controlling the spoilage of food by bacteria. Derivatives of EDTA are presently in use with other foods to prevent undesirable chemical reactions;

6 jobs in 6 years is called job hopping?

Not necessarily. Not at Du Pont.

We have a practice called "planned mobility," a kind of intramural job hopping. It means you don't go into a training program. You go to work—at different growth jobs that broaden you professionally, benefit you personally, and help you find the specific field you want to grow in. Here's how it worked for Jim Davis, an M.E. from the University of Pittsburgh:

"My first assignment was installation of improved polymer transfer systems," says Jim. "Then some research. A patent was issued on my device to apply steam to a running threadline. Next I was a college recruiter. After that I worked on a five-year forecast of the company's engineering needs. Now I'm in a cost reduction group."

For Jim, it added up to six assignments in six years. This may be some kind of a record. But he didn't waste time. Every day of it was solid profit.

Your Du Pont recruiter is a guy a lot like Jim. Ask him about planned mobility. Ask him anything. The coupon will get you some background information before you meet him.

Shame on Youth
Middle-Agers-The Forgotten Breed

By HAL BOYLE

NEW YORK (AP) - Curbstone comments of a Pavement Plato:

Conservationists are alarmed about the number of species of wild life which are in danger of extinction. How about a species of tame life which is in some peril, too - namely, middle-aged people?

At present they may not be in any danger of disappearing from the earth, but they are in danger of being forgotten and their contribution to society overlooked.

In a time of ever-increasing accent on youth, it is the teenager who gets all the attention and concern. Who worries about the middle-ager, Practically nobody but himself.

Science and industry spend untold millions thinking up new products for the teen-ager and fresh ways to please him. But do you see science and industry cudgeling their brains to dream up new kinds of fun for people over 40. Nope.

It is hard to understand all this toadying to the whims of the teen-ager. Has one of them built a mightily bridge lately, come up with a better mouse trap, or even made a trip into space except with the help of a psychedelic drug?

No, sir, they have not. When you get right down to it, the teen-ager is largely an untested potential, whereas your middle - ager can show a clear record of actual performace.

Our civilization, such as it is, is clearly dependent upon that performance. Middle - agers - those between 40 and 55 - probably make up the largest single segment of the population. They outnumber the preteeners, the teen-agers, the young adults, or the oldsters.

They hold the most jobs, earn the most money, pay themost bills, fill Uncle Sam's coffers with their tax dollars. It is chiefly by their labor and as a result of their sacrifices that our society operates. How long would the Bell Telephone System prosper if teen-agers had to pay for their own phone calls?

Since middle-agers are so vital to the national welfare, should they not then be duly honored for their contributions?

Why not a National Middle-agers Month or, if that seems like overgilding the lily, a National Middle-agers Day at the very least.

On such a day all middle-agers would receive a congratulatory letter from their governments - local, state and federal. Perhaps middle-agers might be allowed to ride free on public buses and subways for the day.

Furcolo in Hospital

NEWTON, Mass. (AP) - Former Gov. Foster Furcolo, who collapsed Monday after shoveling snow at his home, will remain in Newton-Wellesley Hospital until Thursday to undergo further tests.

The hospital said Wednesday that Furcolo was in good condition and good spirits, and that tests so far had indicated no physical problems except fatigue.

"Enduring Thought of Gandhi" Is Lecture Subject at Smith

"The Enduring Thought of Gandhi," an address by former vice-president of Howard University, will be among events at Smith College this weekend to note the 100th anniversary of the Hindu nationalist leader's birth.

W. Stuart Nelson will give the address at 8 p.m. Saturday in Sage Hall on the campus. Nelson has traveled extensively through the Middle East and Africa and has served as professor in philosophy and religion at Howard.

Two symposiums to consider Gandhi's significance will also be held. A morning symposium, at 10:30 Saturday in Wright Hall, will view "Gandhi's Thought in its Religious and Cultural Setting."

Participants will be LeRoy Rouner, professor of philosophy, United Theological College, Bangalore, India; Amiya Chakravarty, professor of philosophy, State University College at New Paltz, N.Y., and Virginia Corwin, professor emeritus of religion, Smith College.

An afternoon symposium on Saturday, at 2 in Wright Hall, will view "the Social and Political Impact of Gandhi's Thought." Participants will be the Rev. Andrew J. Young Jr., a civil rights leader in the Southern Christian Leadership Conference who was a close adviser to the late Dr. Martin Luther King in his non-violent movement; Harris Wofford Jr., adviser to the late President Kennedy on Africa and Asia, presently president of the State University College, Oyster Bay, N.Y., and A.K. Saran, Ada Howe Kent lecturer, Smith College.

Nelson will also speak at 11:30 a.m. Sunday in the Helen Hills Hills Chapel on the campus. The events are open to the public.

Sierra Club To Exhibit Grand Canyon Film

A combined color photo, film and slide exhibit on the Grand Canyon will be presented by the Sierra Club Monday, March 10, in the Council Chambers at the University of Massachusetts Student Union in observance of the 50th anniversary of the establishment of the Grand Canyon National Park.

Continuous showings of the film entitled "The Grand Canyon of the Living Colorado" will be offered from 11:30 a.m. through 2 p.m., in the enterval from 2 p.m. to 6 p.m. the film and slides will be shown every hour on the hour.

The film is a Sierra Club movie of the Grand Canyon by Martin Litton with a script co-authored by Dave Brower and the producer, Jeffrey Ingram.

Redmen Swimmers Travel to UConn for N.E.I.S.A.

Mermen 4-6 Seek Strong Finish After Bowing to MIT Last Saturday

By JAN CURLEY
Assistant Managing Editor

With hopes of improving their standing of last year, the swim team heads for the N.E.I.S.A. meet in Connecticut today. Last year the tea m finished eighth out of 18 schools, but the competition this year will be against 21 schools. The team will be going into the New Englands with a 4-6 record.

The Redman contingent consists of senior co-captains Bob Asquith and Flip Morton. Asquith will be swimming in the 500 free style, 200 backstroke and 200 individual medley. Morton will be competing in the 50 and 100 free style and 200 IM.

Also Dave Larson, Mark Miller, Dick Donoghue and Al Northup will be representing the Redmen. Larson will swim in the IM, relay and is entered in the diving event. Miller will compete in the 50 and 100 free style and 200 backstroke. Donoghue is entered in the 100 and 200 fly and Northup in the 100 and 200 breaststroke.

Although Coach Joe Rogers says he "doesn't expect to win anything," the swimmers are going into the meet with some impressive times. In the meet against UVM, Asquith broke the record for the 200 backstroke with a time of 2:09.7. In the same meet, Miller broke the 1942 record in the 100 freestyle with a 51.9 time. In the 50, his best time is 23.6. Donoghue holds the record in the 200 butterfly at 2:17.5.

Northup's best times in his events are 1:09.0 in the 100 breaststroke and 2:32.0 in the 200 breaststroke. Morton's best times in his events are 2:19.0 in the 200 IM, 51.9 in the 100 free and 23.6 in the 50 free.

Last weekend the team travelled to MIT and lost 65-37. A lack of depth sunk their efforts to even the season mark at 5-5.

MIT took the medley relay with an unimpressive time of 4:09.3. Lee Dilly broke his team's pool record in the 200 yard free style with a good time 1:52.5. For the Redmen, Morton was second followed by Don Markel of MIT in third.

The Redmen picked up six fast points when Miller won the 50 yard free style and teammate Geoff Senior took a third place finish. Dick Stage of MIT, who is just recovering with a bout with mono, was a close second to Miller. Asquity won the 200 individual medley, his fifth in a row, with a fair time of 2:12.8. Larson won both the high and low board diving events besting Harry Hines of MIT in both events.

MIT recovered for the 200 yard butterfly to take first and second place followed by Donoghue in third. Dilly also won the 100 with the good time of 50.2 with Miller second and MIT's Sage third.

Asquith came back for his second win of the day by capturing the 200-yard backstroke with Bob Clare and Steve Riley of MIT in second and third place respectively. Bob Lynch and Dave Jarnes of MIT swept the 500-yard freestyle with Lynch finishing in a good time of 5:37.4. Maurice Lynch of the Redmen was third. Northup finished the scoring for the Redmen with a second in the 200 yard breaststroke.

the MIT meet was the last dual meet for senior mermen co-captains Asquith and Morton, Senior, Larson, Donoghue and Tom Bech.

ANCHORS AWEIGH - Mark Miller revs up in practice for the start of today's New Englands at Connecticut. He'll compete in the 50 and 100 freestyle and 200 backstroke. Redmen seek to better last year's eighth place finish.

The loss of these six seniors is sure to hurt the team next year, but there are some good prospects coming up on the freshman swimming team. Among them are free stylers Greg Donohue and Bob Freeman and breaststroker Herb Schuster.

Girl Gymnasts 2nd in Regionals

Woman's Gymnastics Team had a victorious 5 day trip to Pennsylvania last weekend, In a dual meet against Penn. State, the U-Mass girls won handily by placing 1-2-3 in most events and piling up the highest team score of the year, 95.55. Penn. State girls earned 66 points.

The Eastern Regional Championships, held at East Stroudsburg 2 days later, proved to be a closely fought high caliber meet. UMass girls came home with the second place trophy, .85 behind the defending champions, Springfield College.

In the novice division, Joan Hluchan tied for second place in floor exercise with a 4.2.

Intermediate division saw Linda Seikunas win the balance beam with 7.5, and come second in floor exercise, scoring 6.8.

In the closely fought championship division, Margie Sims proved to be an outstanding competitor, placing closely behind Olympian Kathy Gleason from Buffalo State in almost every event.

In floor exercise, Kathy Gleason won with a score of 8.65, Margie sims came second, scoring 8.45, and Bonnie Remo from Springfield third, earning 7.8.

Vaulting was dominated by Kathy Gleason, scoring 9.45 with a beautiful 1/2 twisting Yamashita. Second one and third places went to Patty Corrigan and Linda Beyer from Springfield College, who scored 9.1 and 9.0 respectively. Margie Sims came in fourth with a 8.85 and Sue Clancy fifth, scoring 8.45.

In the balance beam event, Kathy Gleason was first with 8.65, followed by Margie Sims and Carolyn Hacker (Southern Connecticut) who tied for second, scoring 8.60 Third place went to Sally Espe from Southern Connecticut.

Kathy Gleason also won uneven bars with a 8.6. Margie Sims came second, scoring 8.6, Sally Espe took third and Parry Corrigan fourth. Sue Clancy from UMass placed fifth in this event.

The most coveted all-around award went to Kathy Gleason. Margie Sims placed second, Sally Espe third, Carolyn Hacker fourth, Patty Corrigan fifth, and Sue Clancy sixth.

Team Score ended up as follows:

Springfield College 90.20, UMass 89.35, Southern Connecticut 80.5, followed by Towson College, West Chester State College and East Stroudsburg State College to round up the top 6 places among 15 competing teams.

The next big event for UMass girls will be National Intercollegiate Championships, held at Springfield College this coming Friday and Saturday.

Mermaids Set for Easterns At Philly Next Saturday

This week the competitive girl's swim team is working with an added incentive - their biggest meet of the season, the Eastern Intercollegiate Championships, to be held outside of Philadelphia, Pa., on Saturday, March 8th.

This is the first time that the UMass team has entered this championship meet, and 5 students have qualified to compete. Sophomores include: Captain, Janet Shockley; Sue Berger and Marie Witwicki. Freshmen include: diver Ginny Hepp, and Janet Reid.

With this small nucleus, UMass cannot hope to overcome such powerhouses of swim talent as West Chester State (winners of the Easterns since 1959) or Marymount College (captained by Olympian Martha Randall), but each of the UMass representatives is priming to do her individual best time in her specialty.

Miss Reed, coach, feels that the team's highest hope rests with the 200 Medley Relay team, which set a record at the Albany Invitational meet before Christmas, and placed second by only eight one-hundreths of a second in the New England Championships last month.

Also favored to place among the finalists if Janet Shockley, who set two New England records in winning the 100 and 200 free styles at Springfield's new Linkletter pool.

This past season the girls compiled wins against Mount Holyoke, Conn. College for Women, and Holyoke High School, in dual meets and were the trophy winners at the Albany invitational meet beating such schools as Skidmore, S.U.N.Y., U.V.M., and University of New Hampshire.

The team also placed 5th at the New England's, travelling to this meet with another small group of eight swimmers. A few of the members who have competed this past season, but did not qualify for the Easterns, are Jan Yorke, Becky Fall, Carolyn Urban, Debbie Donahue, Pat Ritchie, Diana Veith, Diane Allan and Jane Gillon.

Bruins Tie, Regain First

BOSTON (AP) - Phil Esposito set up two goals to establish a single season record for assists Wednesday night as the Boston Bruins twice came from behind to tie Detroit 2-2 and to take over first place in the National Hockey league East Division.

The veteran center's pass in front of the crease led to a goal by John Bucyk to match the count 1-1 midway in the second period. After the Red Wings had gone ahead again on Godie Howe's 38th goal of the season, Espo fed John McKenzie in front of the net on another power play situation to tie it again at 6:02 of the final session.

Esposito, who last weekend became the first player in NHL history to go over the 100 point barrier, boosted his assist total to 63, breaking the record of 62 set by Chicago's Stan Mikita in 1966-67.

Shaw Climbs

PALM BEACH GARDENS, Fla. (AP) - The $30,000 Tom Shaw won in the Doral Golf Tournament Sunday boosted him into fourth place among Professional Golfers' Association money winners.

Gene Littler leads the pack with $52,428 after playing in seven tournaments, winning one and finishing in the top five four times.

Campus Recruiting Moral Positions Debated in Union

By NEAL NOVACK
Staff Reporter

The issues concerning military-industrial recruitment at the University were met last night by responsible and intellectual discussion in an organized forum. The forum, held in the S. U. Ballroom at 8 p.m., had as its participants: Sid Feinhersh, representing students of the Committee to End Military-Industrial Recruitment; Mr. Dean Wakefield, Eastern Manager of the Public Relations Department for Dow chemical Company; Dean of Students William F. Field, and moderator John Childs, Assistant Dean of Admissions and Coordinator of Special Programs.

Each speaker was allowed three ten minute sessions for presentation of their issues; three five minute responses by the participants, and a question period including audience and guest speakers.

One of the initial issues discussed was whether the University should be open to recruitment by Dow or any other company, and what exactly should be the University's position in the community and society.

Dean Field opened the talk by saying that a "land grant university belongs with it s roots all over. We must have access to outside contacts. I've never seen the University as a total retreat." Dean Field went on to clarify his position by saying that he believes recruitment is not immoral and that "the majority of students want this recruitment service."

Continuing the issue of the University's role, Sid Feinhersh distinguished between the values of the university and the values of corporate America, He views the corporation as being out for power; whereas, he says, "the university's values are "motivated by a scientific kind of spirit and taken intellectually.' However, Feinhersh said that the University does not live up to its values, and that they are "subverted by corporate values." Dean Field, representing the administration's position, denied corporate ties with the University as a myth.

Wakefield answered Feinhersh's statement on values by saying that the "intellectual responses of the university and the corporation are the same," and that without this same type of intellectual motivation, this country wouldn't have the industrial products that benefit mankind.

The discussion was then shifted to the Vietnam war, napalm and whether they stand as moral or immoral aspects in our society.

Sidney Feinhersh stated that, "Dow is symbolic of an entire set of values which are alien to our (the University community) own. Napalm is a noxious weapon of war."

Wakefield rebuted by saying that, "If you accept any war as justifiable, as I do personally, then there are weapons of warfare that are justifiable, so long as they have not been outlawed by international law." Asked to state Dow's official position on the war and the napalm they contribute to it, Wakefield stated that, "We, as a company, have made a moral judgement. We are men honestly trying to find the best possible solution to complex international problems. If history judges this to be an immoral war, then we're willing to stand as being wrong."

Reverting back to the original issue of recruitment, Feinhersh concluded by saying that, "any private profit making organization should not be allowed to come on campus.

Schweikart Takes Space Walk; Apollo Crew Sets for Rendezvous

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) - Apollo 9 astronaut Russell L. Schweickart plunged alone into the void 140 miles above earth Thursday, floated to a spacecraft platform and told the world, "Boy, oh boy. What a view."

The astronaut, recovered from attacks of nausea, stood for 38 minutes on the "front porch" of the moonship, exclaiming again and again at the panorama of curving blue earth below and moon and stars in the black sky above.

The space walk came as a surprise after Schweickart and Air Force Col. James A. McDivitt transferred for a second time to the lunar module. They rejoined Air Force Col. David R. Scott in the command module after 6-1/2 hours in the moon ship.

The three were anxious to get some sleep before the separation and rendezvous of the two spacecrafts that will make Friday the most hazardous day of the 10-day flight.

But before they could settle down, ground controllers discovered there were some switches out o f place in the lunar module. When they told the crew, it triggered the first sharp exchange of the flight between the astronauts and the ground.

"How long would it take you to go back up there into the lunar module and pull the circuit breakers," a ground controller asked.

'It'll take about 30 minutes to clear the tunnel, go back up there and pull the circuit breakers out and get back to the CM and that's really going like mad," McDivitt said.

The ground controller went into a lengthy explanation, but McDivitt cut him off.

"I'm telling you, if we're gonna do it we ought to get going on it and not keep talking about it all night," said McDivitt.

RUSS Schweikart took the first American space walk in two years yesterday, as he floated next to the Apollo 9 capsule, 140 miles above the Earth's surface.

Faculty Senate Discusses Draft Policy

By RICHARD W. STORY
Education Editor

Pregnant questions on the agenda seem to assure good attendance at the bi-weekly meetings of the Faculty Senate. Yesterday was no exception. One of the most enticing, however, - a six-part question from Maria DePillis - was withdrawn in the light of the recent resignation of Dean Hunsberger.

The Dean of Students clarified the matter of the University's stance on the notification of Selective Service boards as to student enrollment. The University does, at present, provide a mechanism whereby local boards are notified of a (male) student's enrollment, semester-by-semester.

The white Selective Service cards in registration packets are forwarded to local boards, the Dean explained; and to follow-up on students who do not register for another following semester, there are lists sent to local boards detailing non-registration. There is also a mechanism, he added, for notifying local boards of students who withdraw in the middle of a semester. This is not a function of any law, Field said.

Business Manager Gerald Grady explained the University's hiring practices as they relate to persons with criminal records: although applicants are asked at the time of their application whether or not they have any police record, this is not checked out in advance of employment, except for persons applying for security jobs. Other applicants who indicate a police record is checked following their employment (if they are actually employed). Grady said that the matter was one presently under review within the University.

Provost Tippo responded to a question concerning tenure decisions. He reiterated the fact that the Board of Trustees retains final authority to make all decisions on tenure. He did also add, however, that in preparing their recommendations, deans and department heads may consult with any individuals or groups they choose. This could, in some cases, allow deans and chairmen to consult with non-tenured faculty members in formulating their recommendations.

Prof. R. Dean Ware (History), speaking from a question that had arisen within his department, asked for clarification as to the status of non-reappointed members, when the voting turned to matters of department heads. The Provost replied that, in such cases, only reappointed members should vote on the appointment of the man under whom they would be working in the future.

The policies of which the Provost was speaking were Trustee policies, he said - contained in a document from their office.

Turning to the regular agenda, the Senate returned to the unfinished business arising from the report of the ad hoc calendar committee. This committee had proposed a motion recommending increased utilization of evening classes, Saturday classes remaining optional by department and school. There was a considerable amount of discussion on this point, many senators feeling that evenings were already heavily committed to other activities. The motion to recommend increased use of evening hours for classes was defeated.

Following up on the report of the UMA long range planning committee, the Senate heard the nomination of three professors to serve on the special master planning committee recently discussed by the President and the Faculty Senate. The committee would have been freed of all other duties for a full year to take a long basic look at the University. The Senate, after some discussion, agreed to postpone final action on the matter for two weeks.

The annual report of the Library committee was heard, minus the minority report to be filed by the two student members of the committee.

The committee had not indicated that such a minority report was forthcoming. Student Senate vice president Fred Hartwell announced that the report would be filed; and asked the propriety of hearing the committee's majority report without the minority report.

Matters of time had reportedly made the distribution of the minority report impossible; but the Senate was assured that it would be forthcoming.

The final business of the day - the note on which the meeting adjourned - concerned a report dealing with faculty representation on the Board of Trustees. A variety of schemes were advanced, ranging from full or right faculty membership to simpli service (by the faculty) on some Trustees' committees. The matter of student involvement with the Board also arose; and Hartwell responded that a joint approach to the Board might be desirable. Since faculty membership on the Board might introduce some questions of conflict of interest, as in matters of promotion and tenure, for example, the general consensus was that faculty presence at Trustees' meetings, and service on their committees, might suffice. The matter was not fully resolved; and will be taken up again at a special meeting scheduled for next week.

UMUAHIA, Biafra (AP) - Biafran sources reported several casualties yesterday after an air raid on Umuahia, the secessionist state's administrative center.

At least five persons were reported killed and about 30 injured in the raid, carried out by a plane identified by the Biafrans as a Nigerian Ilyushin.

PRAGUE (AP) - Czechoslovakia is boycotting a Communist-Bloc writers conference this month in Budapest, Hungary. Both Czech and Slovak writers unions voted not to attend after Soviet press attacks on their national chairman, self-exiled Eduard Goldstuecker, and Acting Chairman Jaroslav Stefert.

DAMASCUS, Syria (AP) - Suicide of the nation's secret police chief, Col. Abdel Karim Jundi, marked the Syrian power struggle yesterday, authoritative sources said. He died from a bullet wound in the head.

The coup promoted last week by Lt. Gen. Hafez Assad, the defense minister, evidently had stalled and two leaders once reported to have been ousted turned up in their official capacities for Jundi's hasty funeral.

Senate Strips Chorale RSO Status In Late Action Wednesday Night

The Student Senate, in late action Wednesday night, voted to strip R.S.O. status from Chorale and to allow the DAILY COLLEGIAN to purchase a photo copy machine.

By passing an amended bill initially proposed by Senators Olken and Taylor, the Senate withdrew R.S.O. status from the University chorale, ruling that since "Chorale is an academic course at the University and as such receives credit,...its organizational structure violates the basic tenants of Recognized Student Organizations."

The Senate ruled, then, that an activity which receives academic credit should not be supported by SATF funds.

The Fine Arts council is considering striking Chorale's budget and if this happens, the Senate will have to decide whether to grant the organization a budget. It was suggested in the meeting Wednesday night that the body which should logically support the group is the Music Department.

The DAILY COLLEGIAN was granted permission to purchase A.B. Dick photo copy machine by paying half of the $1400 purchase price this year and paying the remaining $700 next year. This means encumbering $700 of the paper's assets toward the purchase and means, basically, that the Student Government of the University is backing the paper's credit.

In other late night business, Senator Joe Kilmartin's Bill recommending "to the Administration that University recognition be withdrawn from any Fraternity of sorority whose national and or local chapter discriminates with respect to color or creed..." was not acted upon because of a lack of quorum.

Neault Named Manager

Appointment of Arthur Neault of New Britain, Conn., as manager of the University of Massachusetts Employees Federal Credit Union was announced this week by Arthur Warren, UMEFCU president.

In making the announcement, Warren pointed out that "Due to the growth and potential of the UMass Credit Union, the hiring of a manager is a big step forward in providing services that the Credit Union members have every right to expect."

UMEFCU was formed in 1967 by a group of employees who volunteered their own services to operate a Federally-chartered, non-profit service organization of individuals who work together to save money together and to lend money to each other when they need it.

A native of Biddeford, Me., Neault is a graduate of Assumption College, Worcester, Mass. He comes to UMEFCU from New Britain, Conn., where he had been manager of the New Britain Machine Co. Credit Union. Other experience includes managing credit unions at St. Andre's, Biddeford, and at Dow Air Force Base.

Officials of the UMass Credit Union include Herschel Abbott, Jake Bishop, Matthew Blaisdell, Karl Broekhuizen, Alton B. Cole, Barbara Fifield, Jerome Jacobs, Guy Lucia, Dario Politella, Michael Sullivan, Frank Singer and M. Venkatesan.

Raise inPart TimeEmployment And Work-Study Wages

Plans have been finalized to raise the minimum part-time employment and Work-Study student wages in the following manner.

September 1, 1968 - $1.30 minimum wage.

September 1, 1969 - $1.45 minimum wage.

September 1, 1970 - $1.60 minimum wage.

These minimum wages are in compliance with the Fair Labor Standards Act as amended in 1966 which requres these minimums by February of the following year. Aside from the minimum wage, the actual wage paid is determined by the Placement & Financial Aid office in consultation with the employing department and consultation with the Treasurer when budgets are affected. All wages will be raised in proportion to the change in minimum wages for these periods.

Part-time employment is paid for by state funds (except for occasional grant allocations) distributed to departments by the Treasurer's office. These funds do not increase proportionately as the student body increases. Thus the number of students seeking work exceeds the number of jobs available through budget allocations. Higher wages often require decreased working hours for some students and fewer jobs available throughout the campus.

The Work-Study employment is paid for through two sources - 80% by the federal government and 20% by state funds. Federal regulations require that these jobs be given to financially needy students. The amount of funds available varies from semester to semester and also must be apportioned for summer employment off-campus as well.

Supervisors of student workers are advised to become acquainted withthe Manual for On-Campus Student Employment. Copies were distributed to all departments on July 1, 1968. Additional copies may be obtained by calling 545-0802.

Questions concerning part-time and Work- Study student employment policies should be raised with Mr. Robert J. Morrissey, Director, Placement & Financial Aid Services. Questions concerning employment of individual students, payroll problems, approval of positions, availability of student help, etc. should be referred to Mr. John J. Siegrist, Staff Assistant.

"Northeast Passage" Blocked

THE NORTHEAST PASSAGE is holding up publication for a few weeks, Editor Morris Bernstein, '70, said today, because he and his staff wish to pay a $200 debt before putting out another issue. An auction and a cartoon festival, featuring such old-time favorites as the Roadrunner, are being planned to raise funds.

Nine issues of the four-page newspaper, printed by the Adams Speciality Company of Adams, were published last semester for approximately $1,000. Sales of early issues, advertisements, a $300 allocation from the Student Senate and contributions from the Quad dorms helped to pay for these issues.

Advertising and fund-raising functions will support the PASSAGE this semester.

Berstein, a geology major from Quincy, was elected editor last December after Viola Osgood announced her resignation. Bernstein stressed the unifying role that the PASSAGE plays in the Quad. However, he added, "The PASSAGE invites students from all over the campus to print their 'thing', whether it is news stories, creative work or opinion pieces."

Brain-drain In Reverse

Banks have long had a reputation of offering little but low pay and full work to young business graduates. But such is not always the case, found Careers Today senior editor Clarence E. Olson in a swing around the country talking to ex-bankers. Nevertheless, banks are experiencing more difficulty then ever holding on to recruits, particularly the more promising ones.

Olson's thought-provoking report, an article entitled "Banking's Brain Drain" in the February CT, is filled with surprises and contradictions concerning the exodus. Chief among them is that interviewees unanimously stated that "money had relatively little to do with their departure from banking."

Intransigent attitudes of senior bank officers toward established policies and operating methods was found to be one of the big hangups. "I'm positive", one 37-year old erstwhile banker was quoted as saying, "that once a man becomes a senior bank officer, he just turns off to new ideas."

Olson concluded, "All the exbankers interviuwed flet that their bank training was very valuable. Banking, especially with the newer policies, exposes young men to many clients who are apt to be out shopping for talent themselves. For this reason, going into a large bank probably is a wise move for any business-retented graduate."

Folly of the Tongue

Just who are the administration, faculty, trustees, liberal arts deans, or whoever makes the decisions, trying to kid? What is meant by kidding is the four semesters of a required foreign language. The reason why such a requirement is useless is that so little use can be made of a foreign language. Use, meaning the profit to a student by a course when he graduates. It is my belief that a very few students will ever visit a foreign country for no other reason than a few months of vacation. Therefore languages should be left to those who think languages will be of use to them and be required for all.

Not only is this situation of requirements useless, it is funny, because it defeats its own purpose. It does this in three ways.

First, it makes students change to business or some other major that doesn't require a language. Second, as students don't want to be business majors they take their language at another school, preferably a community college, during the summer when and where it is considered easier. Probably, the most tragic is the third case where students who just can't do any better than a D are forced to struggle through these two school years. Self discipline is at task here, not by diligence but a toleration of something that turns off many a good honest student.

College is not a hobby or some idealistic thing expressed in the phrase "a well rounded education." A college education is an apprenticeship to a job and it is advertised as such. Therefore why waste students' time with something that amounts to being a hobby.

It is suggested that instead of language, a year could be spent learning about the culture, political system, and philosophy of another country. This could be a multi-media polysensual education experience involving such things as folk dancing and favorite foods. This would be more real than the slight beat of a distant drum which is the language requirement.

If the Student Senate hasn't voted to remove this obviously wasteful requirement they should do so. The student body at large should also make their feelings known concerning this requirement. In any case there is always a need for more student concern

SDS-Yeah

I would like to commend the members of Students for a Democratic Society for taking another step forward in their movement for an open and responsive university. Their decision to demonstrate against the "bridal Fair" is perhaps their best yet. The reasoning behind their decision is indeed sound. it probably goes something like this.

"A coed attends the "Bridal Fair" and views the girls dressed in ornate wedding fashions. Immediately she wants to get married which she does the following week. And of course along with marriage comes children. Before you know it the kid grows up and interviews with Dow or volunteers for Viet Nam which the SDS says is a no-no.

So now that we can see the reasoning behind the actions of SDS members, we should all join them and protest the "Bridal Fair" together. It's a hell of a good idea. And maybe next week we can sit-in again and protest saturday nite dates and drinking coffee in the hatch.

Congratulations gang. You've earned it.

RALPH STODDARD

Not SDS

To the editor:

Like the article on Monday which was headlined "SDS Plans All-Day Protest of Bridal Fair," the editorial in Tuesday's Collegian was also filled with false statements (lies, even.) First, the 10 SMILE people who came to discuss Monday's article were not the same people who destroyed the Collegians. It just so happens that two students, neither affiliated with SMILE or SDS, took that action independent of our attempt to demand a retraction.

Those of us who are affiliated with SMILE (not SDS) came into the Collegian office Monday morning to complain, as you say, "that the paper had misrepresented the Bridal Fair protest's sponsor in a headline." But that is not all - not only did SDS have nothing to do with Sunday's Women's Liberation Workshop, but no protest of the sort mentioned in Monday's article was discussed.

What was resolved--during the last 15 minutes of the meeting (the rest of the workshop was devoted to discussing the issues of marriage, woman's role in society, etc., none of which was mentioned in Mr. Lane's error-filled article) --was that SMILE would set up a table in the lobby of the SU to discuss the issues of Women's Liberation in terms of the Bridal Fair, and to pass out a leaflet giving our views on these issues. Any protest that was planned beyond that was independent of SMILE; the half-dozen girls who arrived in costumes were from Smith College.

None of these criticisms were responded to by the Collegian. No one answered us in terms of the articles' content - we were only told to return later, to speak to someone else, Mr. Editor was too busy, etc.

STEVE KRINSKY

FORUM COMMENT:

Clarifying the Issues

Open Recruiting. . .Democracy

To the editor:

As sponsor of the Student Senate legislation concerning "Open Recruiting" I feel compelled to speak on the subject in the Collegian Forum.

Speakers such as Dick Gregory and William Buckley have been welcomed to the University and Strom Thurmon, a person who is considered repugnant to many including myself, has been asked to speak at the University. To my knowledge, no person has been denied the privilege of coming to this University if any group of students desire his presence.

Recruiters travel to the University of Massachusetts for their own capitalistic purposes true, but they are also here because students want their services. If no students wished recruiters, they would not be here.

It would be amost unfortunate circumstance if a minority could prevent a majority from speaking to and maintaining orderly discourse with anyone on this campus. What is equally dangerous is majority censorship over a minority. A free and open campus does not permit any group, right, left, or middle, to control any other group irregardless of the relative numerical positions of the bodies.

The Student Senate proposal permits student to speak with any recruiter who is mutally willing to speak with him. An amendment requiring recruiters to speak in an "Open Forum"'with any group of student s was defeated because it was the feeling of the Senate that there can be no "Open Forum'' where an individual is forced to attend as a prerequisite to interviewing on campus. This amendment provided nothing less than coercion and would not have been in the best interests of the Student Body. I want to make myself very clear on one thing now: recruiters are given a privilege to come to this University They are not a part of the University and have no right to be here, but it is the RIGHT of any individual student to speak to anyone he wishes to. This is a right, not a privilege.

An "Open" campus also means that the NLF or any other activity may recruit on campus as well as the corporate entities. Neither the silent majority nor the vituperative minority should be hindered in their personal desires.

If, at the request of a minority of individuals, freedom of speech, in the form of a Student's RIGHT to speak with a recruiter or any other person, is tampered with, there will be no logical reason to prevent a majority from prohibiting any activity or speaker on this campus who they disagree with., I hope that this situation never exists, but the walls supporting the freedoms which we take for granted are very brittle and if pierced from either side, they might easily collapse.

PAUL J. SILVERMAN

Corporation-like

To the editor:

The issue of military and industrial recruitment is no simple issue. The issue is not a matter of alienated radical students trying to prevent other students from obtaining jobs; the issue is not one of intellectual idealists attempting to make the University a place where "pure" learning can take place. The non-violent attack against the placement office and the demand to end all University complicity in the war against the people of Vietnam by abolishing military and industrial recruitment is an indication of a new level of political and moral consciousness.

First it indicates a rejection of the corporate structure. The University is operated in much the same way as any large corporation; all important decisions are made by a small group of men who are isolated from the vast number of people involved in the institution. The placement office symbolizes what the University has become - a training place. It produces too many people who are merely willing to follow orders.

Secondly, the demonstration indicated a rejection of the decisive role which corporations play in determining the policies of the government. These policies have brought us to disaster in Vietnam and threaten to do the same in Latin America. The influence of United Fruit has already brought American intervention in Guatamala several times and threatens to do so again. Such acts do not only threaten the freedom of the people of that country, but also threaten the freedom of citizens of this country. The selective slave system must be maintained to insure sufficient military strength for the neo-colonialist ventures of the government.

Those who oppose military and industrial recruitment recognize that the struggle against war must begin here and must involve a struggle against the war-trainers and the war-profiteers. This is not an interjection of political values into the groves of academia; the groves of academia were politicized long ago. But because those who rule the University have made the wrong moral and political choices, because they have allowed the University to become the tacit partner in the mistakes of the government it becomes the duty of the students to correct these errors by any means necessary and effective.

Michael Minsk

To the editor:

The student body was recently given a beautiful example of democracy at work when 0.21 per cent of an "academic" community decided to dictate policy on industrial recruitment to the other 99.79 per cent. In doing this they willingly and knowingly ignored several rules and laws which might have interfered with the effectiveness of their demonstration. The moral correctness of the Picketing Code or the law against trespassing were not at issue, yet 32 students apparently felt that violation of these rules could be justified in the pursuit of a higher moral good.

The trend in the nation seems to be similar. Peace demonstrators, in hastening the day when men will respect the lives of other men, threw rocks and firecrackers at President Elect Nixon's car. The napalm-murder of a live dog by SDS would have clearly pointed out the inhumanity of the Marines? This would seem to point out a fundamental contradiction in SDS's methods, but for one fact: it is permissable for the forces of Goodness and Light to commit amoral acts in the battle against the minions of Darkness and Evil. The end justifies the means employed.

It should be clear to many students now that the Students for a Democratic Society could care less about democracy. If any doubted it, look at the recent decision of SDS to demonstrate against and possible interfere with the Bridal Fair being held here. SDS has put itself in the position of safeguarding the morals of our coeds against the materialistic onslaughts of a Military-industrial Complex. Their reasons? As the Collegian reported this morning, SDS feels that the Bridal Fair is "not where it's at", and that "these models are not necessarily correct."

I applaud the arrest of the 32 student demonstrators. Fanatics cannot be allowed to interfere at will with the rights of others, no matter how correct they feel they are about napalm, the war, or the style of brides' apparel. Intelligent and sincere criticism is always welcome, and the rights of a minority must be safeguarded, but no minority has any right to trample the rights of a majority and break several other laws in the process of "demonstrating." SDS must be recognized for what it is: a group of fanatics out to reform society regardless of the wishes of that society. The obvious first step to the New Jerusalem is the destruction of the old. If SDS wishes to reform the Military-Industrial complex, then they should not use the (supposed) weapons of that dark conspiracy: The End DOES NOT justify the Means!

English Dept. Council Discusses Developments Effecting English Majors

By the Education Staff

EDUC, the English Department Undergraduate Council, met recently in its Bartlett stronghold, mostly to talk about the things they had already done.

English major s are becoming more grammatical. Their Council is becoming much better organized, and shows hope of significant changes to be made in the English Department, under the aegis of Professor Sanders, Undergraduate Studies Chairman, and Mike Quinlan, president of EDUC, and approximately 30 enthusiastic students. They have even mastered parliamentary formalities.

EDUC started last fall with a tightly-structured constitution, which has been largely discarded. The system of representatives from each area of the campus has died a happy death. Now a student automatically becomes a member by attending three meetings.

The Council's main accomplishment was the decision to set up a Grievance Committee, to channel individual students' problems to the proper authorities. It has great promise. EDUC also chose a representative to the Provost's Committee to Pick a New Dean, and discussed the grading system, distribution requirements, and the department's role in the College Honors Program to be started next year.

Also under consideration was the dying and reviving English Club, and what the Council might put in its student newsletter. This newsletter has been published once (or twice). It is sometimes distributed in classes, but copies can be picked up in the English Office in Bartlett.

EDUC seems to be levelling off to a hard core group of zealots, but new members are gradually drifting in. Its next meeting will be Thursday, March 13.

Cuba Identifies Hijacker In Effort to End Thefts

HAVANA (AP) - In an apparent move to stem the tide of air piracy, Cuba announced for the first time Thursday the arrest of a hijacker and identified him by name.

The Communist party newspaper Granma announced that the National Airlines jetliner which had been diverted from the United States to Cuba Wednesday was hijacked by a man it identified as Anthony Garnet Bryant.

The paper said Bryant was a U.S. citizen and had been arrested in the United States for robbery and drug traffic. It added that he robbed one of the passengers of the jetliner of $1,700 which Cuban officials returned to the owner.

"The author of these acts has been put under arrest in Cuba by competent authorities," Granma said.

Police records in San Francisco show an Anthony Garnet Bryant, a 30-year-old Negro born in San Bernadino, Calif.; was convicted there i n 1961 for first-degree robbery and in 1964 for possession and sale of marijuana. Both times he was sentenced to San Quentin.

Granma's announcement came after the 50th hijacking of an airliner to Cuba since 1961. All but four have taken place in the past 19 months and are reported to have become a major headache for Cuban authorities.

The plane with its 19 other passengers and crew of six was returned to Miami 4-1/2 hours after landing in Cuba.

There have been increasing signs that Cuban authorities intended to crack down on hijackers.

Until now, however, the Cubans have not published the names of hijackers or said anything about their fate. The first sign of a change in policy came last month when the State Department disclosed that Havana had agreed to let hijacked planes return to the United States with their passengers.

Hitherto, Prime Minister Fidel Castro's government had permitted U.S. air crews to fly their hijacked craft home only after passengers were transferred about 90 miles to Varadero. From there the passengers were returned to Miami, often a day later, aboard propeller planes.

Havana officials had insisted that their airport's 10,000-foot runway was unsafe for huge loaded jetliners. U.S. pilots disputed this.

Program to Make Mt. Holyoke a More Multi-Racial Community Appoints Directors

SOUTH HADLEY - A two-pronged program geared to make Mount Holyoke a more multi-racial community has moved from the discussion stage to action with the appointment of a program director and an administrative director.

The original idea for a summer program was conceived by the Mount Holyoke Afro-American Society and developed in cooperation with a number of faculty and administrators, after being given the go-ahead by the Board of Trustees of the College.

Mrs. Oliver W. Kerr, instructor in psychology and education and teacher at Gorse Child Study Center, will direct the summer program. Mrs. Kerr has a good deal of experience for this task having been in charge of three of the four previous "A Better Chance" summer programs at Mount Holyoke and serving as assistant director for the initial one in the summer of 1965.

James M. Dyer, who recently came to Mount Holyoke as an administrative associate and lecturer in economics and sociology, has been appointed administrative director. Mr. Dyer, former coordinator of On-the-Job Training of the National Urban League, Inc., New York, will coordinate all aspects of the program both prior to and after the summer program.

Mrs. Kerr came to Mount Holyoke College in September 1960. A native of Charlotte, N.C., she received her A.B. from Livingstone College and A.M. from State University of Iowa.

Prior to coming to Mount Holyoke, Mrs. Kerr was an instructor at Tuskegee Institute, coordinator and director of Green Park and Washington Heights Preschool, Tokyo, Japan, and teacher at Community Nursery School, Yellow Springs, Ohio.

She is engaged in research in connection with the ABC program on "Compensating Education for Educationally and Culturally Disadvantaged Youth.'

Mr. Dyer, along with lecturing in the department of economics and sociology, is an administrative associate primarily involved in plans and programs concerning Mount Holyoke's interest in providing educational opportunities for black students.

A graduate of Harvard University, he also studied at Cornell University where he specialized in labor relations. Mr. Dyer has been an employment interviewer in the New York State Employment Service and associate director of employment and project director of On-the-Job Training of the Urban League of Westchester, White Plains.

Two different groups of students will be recruited and integrated into the eight-week summer program which will offer academic and cultural opportunities to promising high school girls.

One group of 35 students will be recruited and financed by the Mount Holyoke community and will consist of post-eleventh grade disadvantaged students who normally would not be able to meet the admission standards of Mount Holyoke but who are considered to have the potential to undertake study at the college level if given special preparation, counseling and tutorial assistance before they are admitted.

Students selected for this group will be recruited primarily by members of the Mount Holyoke Afro-American Society, in cooperation with College officials. A number of interested groups on the campus ar e working together in the development of this phase of the program which will include special follow-up services to those students who successfully complete the program when they return to their high schools. Plans call for these students to return to Mount Holyoke in the summer of 1970 after which they will enter the College as undergraduates.

The Campus Chest, an annual fund drive led by the sophomore class, is spearheading the drive for necessary monies for the program and has set a goal of $15,000.

The second group of 35 students in the program will be recruited and supported by ABC-Independent Schools Talent Search, a group of more than 100 independent secondary schools. Students in this group will range in age from 13 to 17 and those who successfully complete the program will receive scholarships to independent secondary schools.

Teachers and staff for the program will be recruited from independent and public secondary schools and from the Mount Holyoke faculty. Mount Holyoke undergraduates will serve as resident tutors.

PASSOVER AT HILLEL 1969

Passover will begin at sundown, Wednesday, April 2, and conclude at sundown, Thursday, April 10. The first and last two days are days of full religious obligation for traditional Jews, most Reform Jews observe the first and seventh days as days of full religious obligation. The seders fall on the evenings of Wednesday, April 2, and Thursday, April 3.

Hillel will be holding seders, as last year, in North Commons line #1. and serving Passover meals, lunch and dinners, during the week. For information concerning costs, please drop by the Hillel office in the Student Union. No reservations will be made without payment. The deadline is Thursday, March 20. The office is open from 11:00 a.m. to 4:00 p.m. weekdays. A mailing has been sent to all students registered with us by religious preference card.

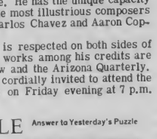
Poet Visits Project Ten

Barney Childs, one of the more unique figures in leterature and music will visit the University campus tonight, Friday, March 7 under the sponsorship of Project Ten through a grant of the Fine Arts Council. Mr. Childs will appear in an informal setting at 7 in the Lounge at Pierpont House in the Southwest Residence and will discuss music and poetry and will read from his works.



Mr. Childs was born in Spokane, Washington and holds degrees from Deep Springs College in California, the University of Nevada, Oxford University and a Doctorate in English from Stanford. In addition, he was a Rhodes Scholar. Mr. Childs has been involved in teaching English professionally, first at the University of Arizona and currently as Dean of Deep Springs College. He has the unique capacity of having studied music with some of the most illustrious composers of our times such as Elliott Carter, Carlos Chavez and Aaron Copland.

Childs' work as an author and poet is respected on both sides of the Atlantic. He has published many works among his credits are Paris Review, Approach, Western Review and the Arizona Quarterly.

The student as well as faculty are cordially invited to attend the meeting which will feature Mr. Childs on Friday evening at 7 p.m.

"Art in a Concentration Camp"

"Art in a Concentration Camp," an exhibition of paintings and drawings by inmates of the transit camp for the Auschwitz furnaces will be held at Smith College.

The exhibit will open a series of programs on the Holocaust dedicated to the memory of the six million Jews who perished at the hands of Nazi Germany during World War II. The exhibit will be on display in the lower lobby of the college's Center for the Performing Arts March 3 to 21. It may be viewed Mondays through Saturdays from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. and Sundays from 2 to 5 p.m.

Works in the exhibition were done by inmates of the concentration camp, Terezin, which was located north of Prague, Czechoslovakia. Terezin was designed by the Nazis as a "model" camp for world display to mask the horrors of other camps. In reality it was a transit camp for the Auschwitz furnaces where over two million people perished.

To expose the fiction of Terezin as a humane center, the inmates, both professional artists and children, risked their lives to create the works in this exhibit. Its 95 drawings, paintings and collages were hidden in walls and rafters and redeemed after the war by a survivor. The exhibit is on loan from the New School Art Center and the State Jewish Museum of Prague.

Warhol's "Bike Boy" To Premiere Saturday

Andy Warhol is the leading Pop artist in New York, and one of the most important artists working today. He originally started painting images unaltered; they were merely isolated from their commonplace surroundings and given a position of prestige, being presented as focal points for our attention. Later he turned to the silk screen procedure, which was more mechanical and challenged the fact that a work of art must be unique. This is very much a part of his personality. He has said, ". . . I want to be a machine. Whatever I do, and do machinelike, is because it is what I want to do." He wanted an art that would appeal to everybody, and his subject matter ranged from soup to cheesecake; Brillo to Marilyn Monroe; nose surgery to Jacqueline Kennedy.

In the early sixties, Warhol with his intense involvement in mechanical processes experimented with a cinematic approach to his art. With a camero as his paintbrush, he dynamically mirrored specific aspects of human activity. His creative interest in cinematography expanded to incorporate "life."

Bike Boy is Warhol's visual image of one particular man's life. Joe Spencer, the "Bike boy", is involved in a bizarre interlocking world of impotents, prostitutes, and homosexuals. His relations, some lonely and some threatening, raise the question of self-acceptance.

Warhol's films mean either nothing or a great deal. The choice is the viewer's, as it is with the plays of Beckett and Albee, and the films of Antonioni. If Warhol is not a social critic, his films and art, while presented in the artist's own terms, creates a social awareness.

This social commentary will be shown Saturday evening at 7:00 p.m. and 9:30 p.m. in Thompson Tower Auditorium. (I, A MAN, originally scheduled was not available.)

Juilliard Quartet To Appear Monday

Amherst - The next in a series of Juilliard String Quartet concerts sponsored by the University of Massachusetts music department will be Monday, March 10, at 8 p.m. in Bowker Auditorium.

In a concert open to the public without charge the internationally-acclaimed group will play Haydn's Quartet in B Flat Major, Opus 76, No. 4, (Sunrise); Bartok's Sixth Quartet; and Beethoven's Quartet in F Major, Opus 135.

The musicians include first violinist Robert Mann, second violinist Earl Carlyss, violist Raphael Hillyer, and cellist Claus Adam.

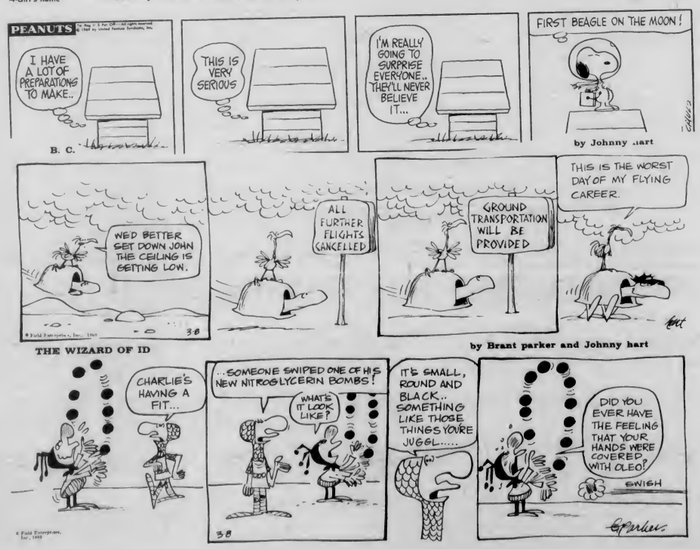
The distinguished group has been quartet-in-residence of the Juilliard School of Music for 22 years and was appointed to the same post at the Library of Congress in Washington, D.C. seven years ago.

This concert is the second in a series of three at the University. The next will be April 28.

Art Exhibit Will Open at Smith

An exhibition of 100 drawings entitled "Old Master Drawings," from the collection of Mr. and Mrs. Lester Francis Avnet of New York City will open at the Smith College Museum of Art from March 10 through April 16. The exhibition is being circulated throughout the United States under the auspices of The American Federation of Arts.

This exhibition of Old Master drawings acquired by the Avnets during the past decade presents a rare opportunity for the public to examine at first hand examples of the virtuosity of some 60 artists who reached their maturity before 1800.



This exhibition includes works from the 15th century to the 18th century and is comprised of American, British, Danish, Dutch, Flemish, French, German, Italian, and Swiss drawings.

The works range from delicate Bellini and Ingres portraits to religious subjects by such noted masters as Giovanni Domenico Tiepolo, Luca Cambiaso, Il Guercino, and Francesco Guardi. Numerous landscapes, genre scenes, historical subjects, and a rare collection of works by and done after the Danish artist Melchior Lorck create an exhibition of wide variety and interest.

International Club Strives For More Student Involvement

By JILL WALLACH
Staff Reporter

There is an organization on campus, created for foreign students, which has met with less than total success, according to members.

The International Club of UMass in an organization "that attempts to open channels of communication and create better understanding between American and foreign students." These are the words of Hatim Hussaini, president of the club. Interviewed by the DAILY COLLEGIAN, Hussaini discussed the goals of the International Club, the problems facing foreign students at UMass and the problems of the club itself.

The need for "better communication" was the focal point of Hatim's remarks. Foreign students, he believes, can offer Americans a better understanding of foreign cultures. He continued, "These students can at the same time retain their own identity and maintain contact with people from their own country.' There are 450 foreign students attending UMass. But these students, Hussaini stated, "are completely isolated from the campus community and the American students. They are discouraged from participating in student organizations and expressing their own ideas. The American students show little interest in foreign cultures and tend to ignore the presence of foreign students altogether."

Several foreign students expressed a slightly different viewpoint. Some of the Persian and Asian students told the COLLEGIAN that it "is up to the individual to create his own channels of communication with American students.' They do not feel that they are at all "isolated from the campus community," said James Thompson, a Canadian. "In my experiences living with other foreign students off-campus, people tend to socialize in their own ethnic groups. Wives of foreign students are especially shy, many of them unable to speak English. Yet, there are no programs available at the University to aid these people (wives).'

The International Club sponsors weekly coffee hours in the Student Union's Colonial Lounge. Here foreign and American students can socialize over coffee and cookies. Each week's program is devoted to a different country. A program, presented by the representative of the country of the evening, is followed by a discussion period. Club officers agree with one who said, "Our efforts to use this organization as a means of opening new channels seems futile.

A Chinese student said he regards the club as a "place to come when I have nothing better to do. Sometimes I come to meet friends I have not seen in a while.'

An Indian student summed up the club's utility for him as a "means of entertainment. Most of the activities are worthwhile culturally. But it doesn't help us much to meet Americans."

These weekly meetings are usually small and informal, students tending to congregate with their own countrymen. Other functions, held on a larger scale and drawing larger attendance, are the annual International Food Fair in December and the International Talent show on March 8.

According to Hussaini, "Foreign students want to know more Americans, though they do not want to become Americanized. They want to promote a knowledgeable understanding of their peoples and the problems facing their nations. Their only channel now is the International Club. Yet to meet with any degree of success, the club must be financed by the University to enable foreign students to plan activities at the University level. A regular newsletter would be helpful also.'

Progress in communications, though, can be made only with the interest and the initiative of the students themselves, several of them indicated.

The terminal date for applications for the 1969 University of Massachusetts' Summer School Program in Bologna, Italy, has been extended to April 1, 1969. Applications may be obtained from Miss Patricia Wilkey, secretary of the program, 714 Thompson Hall, extension 545-1330. It should be emphasized that the Bologna Summer School Program is open to students from all schools at the University and that a knowledge of Italian, although desirable, is not essential.

Grapplers to End Year With Wrestling Tourney

By BOB GANLEY
Staff Reporter

The UMass varsity wrestling team will conclude its season this weekend by competing in the New England Wrestling Tournament at Worcester Polytechnical Institute. Coach Homer Barr's Redmen will be competing along with 27 other schools, and they have hopes of finishing high. The UMass matmen are coming off the finest season in their history, having lost to only four schools in New England.

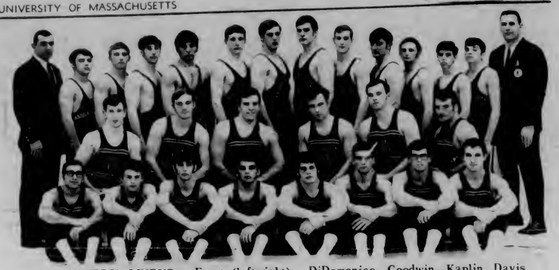
However, it is these four schools which will present the barrier between the Redmen and the championship. Springfield College, which has won the tournament every year since it started, is likely to repeat again this year. They defeated UMass, 28-9, as did Coast Guard, 23-13, MIT, 23-17 and Central Connecticut, 23-14. Barr figures that MIT should be a strong contender for runnerup honors with UMass, Coast Guard and Central Conn. fighting it out for third.

He pointed out, however, that his forces could place second if each of his wrestlers performed up to his potential. In three of their four losses the Redmen could have won if one or two matches could have been reversed. Also, in the important takedown statistic, the Redmen led their opponents 122-93.



Individually, Barr expects the top performances from Bob Freeman (145), Capt. Tom Young (160), Tom Andrewes (167) and Mike Brauner (152). Freeman, who didn't wrestle first semester, is described as the best all around wrestler on the team. Freeman has a 6-1 record with his only loss coming at Central Conn. Barr feels that Freeman should be seeded either first or second in his class and should place at the top. Freeman never looked stronger than in his 14-3 decision of Mark Maxham of MIT, last year's N.E. champ.

Young could also become a N.E. champ. He has an 11-1 record in N.E. and suffered his only loss in his opening match at Coast Guard when he wasn't really in shape. His main competition should come from Jerry Zeigler of Springfield who was a National Junior College champ last year. However, in their match this year, Young won, 11-3.

Andrewes could be the sleeper in his class according to his coach. He has a 12-3-1 record with two of the losses coming from N.E. opponents. Andrewes' main competition will come from Huch Hawkins of Williams and Dick Papella of Springfield, both of whom defeated him. Barr feels that Andrewes should be seeded either third or fourth and could possibly make it to the finals Sat. night.

Brauner is the other Redman who could go all the way. He had a 10-4-1 record, but two of the losses came on the teams' trip to Pennsylvania. He should be seeded third or fourth and last Sat. he tied Joe Hawkins of MIT, who is the reigning N.E. champ at 152 pounds. If Brauner wrestles as well as he has shown in certain matches, he could go a long way.

After these four, Barr can only hope that the rest of his troops will place high enough to give the team much needed points. Barr has high hopes for heavyweight Tim Perkins, who is just returning from knee surgery. Perkins had a 3-0 record before his injury and his coach feels that he will surprise a lot of people, maybe even defending champ Fred Andree of MIT.

Other Redmen who may be seeded are Nick DiDomenico (115), Howie Kaplin (130), Phil Davis (137) and Bob Willman (177). Di Domenico may finish as high as third, but his coach thinks he will have to perform a tremendous upset to finish higher. Kaplin was performing well until he lost his last three matches. He may have been showing the effects of keeping his weight to 130 and maybe a week's layoff will give him the strength to finish in the top four.

Davis has been wrestling well of late and may get one of the bottom seeds. He has a 10-6 record overall but has wrestled in three different weight classes. Willman also could be seeded but his four New England losses may be a factor. If he can put together a few good matches, he could make some noise.

George Zguris (191) may not be seeded but he can't be counted out. Zguris' main problem is that he hasn't wrestled enough, but he has won his last three matches in impressive fashion and has only lost four times in N.E. competition. The varsity won't have a wrestler in the 123 pound class. Barr hopes that his team of 10 sophomores and one junior will raise some eyebrows this weekend.

Coach Brosky's freshman wrestlers will be looking for a second straight championship when they go into action also at Worcester. Leading the Little Redmen will be undefeated Sheldon Goldberg (130) and Derwood James (191). Both are considered favorites to win their weight classes as Goldberg sports a 7-0 record and James has an 11-0 slate with seven pins and three forfeits.

Other Little Redmen who may finish high are Barry Godowsky, Dave Reynolds, Clay Jester, Jim Godkin, Larry Piccioli, Kent Mignocchi, Rod Loiselle, and Carl Dambman. Godkin, Jester and Reynolds have only lost once, while Godowsky and Dambman have been defeated twice.

All together, it looks to be UMass' finest hour in wrestling and could be the first of many successful years for the matmen.

Trackmen to Compete In IC4A in New York

Fresh from securing the Yankee Conference track crown, UMass tracksters will travel to New York's Madison Square Garden, tomorrow, for the IC4A championships. The IC4A brings together the top runners from the east in a warmup for the NCAA championship to be held the following week in Detroit.

Except for the weights and the two mile run all other events will have qualifying races in the afternoon with the finals in the events coming at night.

Entered in the 60 yard dash will be Walter Mayo and Dave Marble who placed second and third respectively in the Conference meet. Hurdling for the Redmen will be soph Jerry Spellman who owns the school record in 7.6 seconds. Marc Lefever will miss the meet due to an injury, leaving the hurdling chores to Spellman alone.

Representing UMass in the field events will be Cal Carpenter in the high jump and Ed Arcaro in the shot and weight. Carpenter won the Conference high jump in 6'4-3/4". Arcaro placed third in the weight in the conference but pulled a muscle and did not perform up to par in the shot.

Hoping to break the school record in the mile relay will be Steve Chase, Bob Hasselbaum, Diego Gonzalez and Spellman. The school mark of 3:22.7 set last year in New York also had Hasselbaum and Gonzalez on the team along with Dave Evans and John Andersen.

Running in one of the three sections of the two mile will be senior Charlie Lang and soph Ron Wayne. Lang won the conference two mile and set both conference and school records in the process with a 9:07.9 effort at Vermont. Wayne will be competing in his first two mile without doubling in another event as he will attempt to go under the 9:10 mark.

TRACK TALK. . .The conference title was the third indoor crown the Redmen have taken in the last four years. . .if the snow melts and the track is laid down, UMass will have its first home meet on April 12th against BU and NU. . .New Redman records were set in the 1000 (Gonzalez), mile (Wayne), dash (Mayo), hurdles (Spellman), two mile (Lang) and shot put (Arcaro); except for Gonzalez and Lang the other new record holders are sophomores... Another soph, Lee Duart, ran a 26 mile 385 yard marathon in the Cage . . . He completed the 262 lap run in two hours 45 minutes and 56 seconds.

Ski Co-captains to End UMass Careers

Co-captains Dave Kamila and Dick McHugh will end their collegiate ski careers this weekend at Cranmore. The final giant slalom is sponsored by Boston University.

This is an important race for the Redmen as the outcome will determine the runner-up in the Osborne Division of N.E.I.S.C. Amherst College has a solid lead in the conference standings, but upsurging Northeastern University is only a few points behind UMass. The team that takes the higher placing tomorrow will be second in the league.

Both Kamila and McHugh have raced for the varsity for three years, including last years N.E.I.S.C. champion team. This will be the third Boston University Giant Slalom they have competed in, the first at Mt. Whittier two seasons ago and last years race also held at Cranmore.

Rounding out the team in this race will be Jimmy Garstang, a junior and three sophomores: Ted Martin, Goober Curran and Chuck Walker. These skiers have compiled an impressive record considering that last June's graduation depleted their ranks by five.

Lederle, Healy Laud House Med School Appropriation

President John W. Lederle and chairman of the Board of Trustees, Joseph Healy, hailed the action of the Massachusetts House in approving an additional $19 million for the proposed medical school in Worcester, according to a Worcester Telegram news story.

Meanwhile, the chairman of the Republican State Committee, Josiah Spaulding, issued a statement clarifying his comments Thursday on the medical school vote.

Spaulding said, "My criticism of the procedures used in the House on Thursday to treble a capital outlay bill from $11 million to $30 million without committee action is valid. However, it in no way implies the Republican party's approval or disapproval of the projects involved.

"Certainly, any expenditure of $19 million cannot be made in this casual fashion with little or no opportunity for study by the House membership of either party."

Immediately after the House vote Thursday, Spaulding charged the House Democratic leaders with "astonishing and arrogant disdain for the taxpayers" in their support of an additional $19.6 million for the medical school.

Gov. Francis Sargent has ordered a restudy of the need for a state-operated school and is considering state subsidies to private medical schools as an alternative.

In the light of this, Healy stated his view that the school is needed. "There is no doubt about the need for a new medical school. Nothing has occurred to change that fact. We should go ahead on this important project now because it will cost so much more later."

President Lederle, in a prepared statement, said, "I would like to commend the House of Representatives for its ringing vote to fund a medical science building in Worcester.

"Over the past 20 years, study after study has shown the need for a new state medical school in Massachusetts. This new school is necessary whether or not there is an increase in enrollment in existing private schools.

"The university is carrying out its mandate to build such a school, and is at the point of construction, with $35 million of federal funds already approved.

"If we don't build this school now, we will have to build it 10 years from now when it will cost closer to $300 million. How shortsighted can we be. In the meantime, Massachusetts youths would continue to be denied equal opportunity to get a medical education. The level of medical care would be going down while the legitimate expectations of the public for good medical care would be going up. We are the only populous state without a quality public medical school.

"The medical school is already long overdue. Massachusetts taxpayers, in my view, are for good medical care and are ready to pay for a quality medical education. Money spent on the medical school represents the best tax dollars they will ever pay. Failure to proceed at this point will jeopardize our federal funding - the largest amount granted to any new medical school in 1968.

"The next time, granting agencies will favor other schools whose mandates are not being questioned."

Daily Collegian to Sponsor Poll On Open Campus Recruiting Policy

A referendum on open on-campus recruitment will be held today and tomorrow in the Student Union lobby, from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. The opinion poll, sponsored by the DAILY COLLEGIAN, is open to all University undergraduates.

"The referendum", Education Editor Richard W. Story explained, "is designed to provide the campus with a means of expressing favor or disfavor with the present recruiting policy. Up until now, all discussion on this subject has assumed that a general opposition to the present policy exists. This assumption has no base, and an accurate measure of student sentiment is a necessity before any alternatives to the present policy can be considered."

The DAILY COLLEGIAN ran an editorial page forum last week, according to Story, "to provide students with additional information, pro and con, before they make a decision on the referendum." Supporters and opponents of an open policy expressed their personal position on the issue in that forum.

Apollo 9 Astronaut Felled by Sickness

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) - Russell Schweichart's sickness in Apollo 9 indicates again that the weak link in man's exploration of the universe may be, ironically, man himself.

Scientists and engineers have understood and fixed many complex problems that developed while America's space machines were being tested.

But the most complex and vital system in the Apollo spacecraft - man himself - is the least understood.

Schweichart's sickness involved nausea and vomiting. It was not severe and ended quickly, but it was enough to cancel the major portion of the planned space walk.

The illness caught flight surgeons on the ground by surprise. They said they could only guess the cause and that they may never know why he was ill.

Frank Borman suffered a similar upset on the moon-circling flight last December, and William A. Anders reported he felt nauseated.

Dr. Charles Berry, chief of medical flight operations, said that doctors tested extensively the bacteria samples obtained from Apollo 8 but were unable to say why Borman got sick.

The most probably cause, some of the flight surgeons believe, is simple motion sickness that hits people on the highway, on the sea, or in the air.

Even though astronauts are among the most experienced pilots in the world, medical men said they are not exempt from the age old plague of explorers - sickness caused by the roll of a ship, a camel, a wagon, an airplane or a spaceship.

Another probably cause of the illness, doctors believe, is that for the first time in the American space program astronauts are able to move around in space. There was no illness aboard the cramped Mercury and Gemini spacecraft, where the astronauts were jammed in their seats, hardly able to move their legs or bodies.

On the Apollo spacecraft, however, the astronauts can move several feet and float free. Doctors theorize this movement - beyond simple motion sickness - could cause the illness.

When mission control apologized for almost fouling them up with some wrong data, Scott replied, "Hey, but you didn't. You were right on time. That's very good. That's just to get a little drama into the game, Stu."

Ground communicator Stuart Roosa, also an astronaut, chuckled, "That's right. We get everybody awake anyway."

They talked a little when mission control mentioned that the flight dynamics officer - Fide - and the guidance officer - Guide - were pleased with their performance. The officer who determines when they come to earth is called Retro.

Mission control beamed up, "Good morning from your smiling Fide and Guide."

Red China Stations Guards Along Manchurian Border

TOKYO (AP) - Red China said yesterday militiamen and peasants are patroling with frontier guards in "preparedness for war" along the contested Manchurian border where Chinese guards clashed with Soviet soldiers a week ago.

The Soviet Defense Ministry publication, Krasnaya Zvezda - Red Star - warned, meanwhile, that any renewal of "reckless provocative actions will always meet with a fitting rebuff."

This saber-rattling by the two Red rivals took place exactly a week after Chinese and Soviet troops clashed on a snow-covered island in the frozen Ussuri River separating Manchuria from the Soviet Union.

Moscow said 31 of its soldiers were killed and 14 wounded in a Chinese surprise attack. The Chinese accused the Soviets of starting the shooting and reported many of its frontier guards killed and wounded, but gave no exact figure.

Peking's disclosure of stepped up military preparedness coincided with reports in Hong Kong and London newspapers that Communist China has put five million men on armed alert. The reports said Chairman Mao Tse-Tung wanted the reinforcements along the border by Wednesday.

In a dispatch datelined Harbin, Manchuria, the official New China News Agency said that near the disputed border island "braving temperatures of more than 30 degrees below zero, the poor and lower-middle peasants and the militia there are patroling and doing sentry duty with the frontier guards.

THE NEWS IN BRIEF

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) - The Egyptian army chief of staff, Gen. Abdel Moneim Riad was killed in a three-hour artillery battle that raged across the Suez Canal yesterday, the Egyptian Middle East News Agency reported.

The agency said Riad died at Ismailia when an Israeli shell slammed into a trench where he had taken shelter.

RAWALPINDI, Pakistan (AP) - Pakistan's federal union of journalists announced it will go on strike April 2 if its demand for 35 per cent pay increases is not met.

SINGAPORE (AP) - A record 1,081,877 passengers passed through Singapore International Airport in 1968, the government announced.

PARIS (AP) - France is planning to sell gasoline at undisclosed reduced rates to foreign tourists, the government announced. French gasoline costs nearly a dollar a gallon, one of the highest prices in the world.

TOKYO (AP) - Fires in Japanese cities took a record 1,128 lives in 1968, a government report stated.

JAKARTA, Indonesia (AP) - The death toll has reached 600 in the Madjene area of Celebes Island after violent earthquakes there two weeks ago, according to reports reaching here. Madjene, on the west coast of the island, was hit by tidal waves during the quakes and most of the victims reported were swept away.

TOKYO (AP) - The Finance Ministry reported an increase in gold and marijuana smuggled into Japan in 1968. Hong Kong topped the list of countries from which smugglers brought gold, watches and precious stones, the ministry said.

WASHINGTON (AP) - Serious crime showed sharp increases in Boston in every category last year compared to 1967, according to statistics released by the FBI yesterday.

The figures also rose in most categories in Fall River, New Bedford and Springfield, Mass., and in Bridgeport, Hartford and New Haven, Conn., the only other New England cities included on the list.

College Press Guide Set For Summer Publication

The second adition of the "Directory of the College Press in America" is being prepared for publication by Oxbridge Publishing Company, New York, in June. The Directory is edited by Dr. Dario Politella, associate professor of journalistic studies at UMass and president of the National Council of College Publications Advisers.

The Directory will list the names, production details, advertising rates, advisers' names and other data for more than 4,000 college newspapers, yearbooks and magazines. Also included will be the address, zip code and enrollment of the college.

The second edition was planned to fill in the gaps in the 342-page first edition. According to Politella, "it will be the most complete compilation available of data on the college student press. It should grow to become an indispensible source of information for the growing ranks of scholars in the collegiate press."

Response to the first edition was " excellent ", according to Politella, About 1,000 copies were requested by such magazines as "Harpers", "Newsweek" and "Playboy"; M.G.M. Studios; the Peace Corps; and even Kennedy for President Headquarters, New York.

Data for the Directory is being compiled by contacting the over 2,000 colleges listed by the U. S. Government of Health, Education, and Welfare. Assisting Dr. Politella are Sally Spaulding and Carolyn Deitchman, university undergraduates.

Dr. Politella will also be moderating a panel on obscenities in the student press at the 45th annual convention of the Columbia Scholastic Press Association according to Col. Joseph M. Murphy, CSBA director.

More than 5,000 high school and college journalists will attend the convention at Columbia University in New York City, next week.

Dr. Politella is president of the National Council of College Publications Advisors, coordinator of the Commission on the Freedom and Responsibilities of the College Student Press in America, and editor of the magazine "The Collegiate Journalist." He is now preparing a book on ethics and taste in the student press.

Israel Shells Nasr Refinery

SUEZ, Egypt (AP) - Tongues of flame and columns of smoke spiraled skyward yesterday from Egyptian oil refineries shelled for two straight days in the duel across the Suez Canal between artillery of Egypt and Israel.

Four oil tanks at Nasr and Suez refineries were destroyed Saturday, touching off fires that could be seen 12 miles away. Cairo Radio said Nasr refinery sustained more hits yesterday touching off new blazes.

The Suez governor, Hamid Mahmoud, said damage to the refineries was far less than that caused by Israel's shelling of storage tanks in October 1967 in retaliation for the sinking of the Israeli destroyer Elath by an Egyptian missile.

These refineries have been hit four times since the six-day Middle East war of June 1967 - twice in July 1967, in October 1967 and in October 1968.

SWAP Committee Seeks No Requirements Experiment

By RICHARD W. STORY
Education Editor

A joint student-faculty committee, arising from the 1968 SWAP conference, has developed a proposal for a radical experiment in undergraduate education. Signed by nine participants in the conference, the proposal calls upon the University to conduct a no-requirements experiment for eighty selected undergraduates, beginning in September 1969.

Showing a close similarity to an idea advanced earlier (and independently) by Prof. Howard Quint, the SWAP proposal suggests that a group of students, to be selected at random from those applying, be allowed to work out completely personal programs of 120 credits in close association with a faculty or graduate student adviser. The students in the program would be free to choose as much or as little from current departmental programs as they desired - demonstrable academic soundness being the only criterion for selection.

The SWAP proposal has received preliminary study by some of the University's academic administration. With this first review, the committee is encouraged enough to push further with the idea, setting it forth for general campus comment. The proposal follows, in full:

A need exists at the University of Massachusetts for an experimental program in which a student will be allowed greater freedom to exercise initiative and responsibility in the learning process. We, a subcommittee of the 1968 SWAP Conference, propose a plan to be put into effect September, 1969, which will enlarge the student's opportunity to pursue personal learning goals and simultaneously foster the student's intellectual independence, imagination and desire for knowledge. The proposed plan will help the student to develop more fully through a thoroughgoing personalization and humanization of the educational process. Outstanding public and private institutions such as the University of Texas at Austin and Yale University are actively engaged in such programs.

By way of a beginning at the University of Massachusetts, the number of of students will be limited to forty of freshman and sophomore standing selected at random from applications submitted to this program of study. To give these students the necessary aid in exploring this new scope of freedom, a special advisory system should be formed. We propose that a board of twenty advisers be selected by the SWAP Committee from faculty members and graduate students. Guidelines for the selection shall be ability to understand his student's needs and desires, and his ability to interpret and relate these to the University community. To be beneficial to the student, the adviser should be familiar, not only with his own field of specialization, but also with courses and programs of study throughout the University. The student and adviser will discuss possible courses of study based upon the student's needs and desires and the adviser's experience, ultimately leaving the decision of courses to the student. If the student wishes to obtain a variety of opinions, he shall be free to consult any member of the advisory board, in addition to his own adviser.

A student in this program may obtain a degree without declaring a major field of study, though, depending on the individual student's motivation, he may or may not specialize in a chosen area. If the student selects a field of specialization, he is given the option of fulfilling the requirements of his chosen department. This type of specialization gives the student the opportunity for interdepartmental study. To receive his degree, the student must have completed 120 semester hours, with a cumulative avarage of 2.0.

Applications for this program will be sent to the entire classes of 1972 and '73. A comparison of the achievements of the students whose applications were not selected for the program, will be beneficial in giving the University the opportunity to observe and evaluate thoroughly this proposal.

FROM OUR SIDE

Crime and Punishment

Last October 14, 27 men imprisoned in the stockade of the San Francisco Presidio, a major Bay Area army base, staged a non-violent protest (a sit-in) over the shooting death of a fellow-prisoner, and over general conditions of the stockade.

The shooting victim was a mentally disturbed G.I. who had gone AWOL and been returned by his parents to the base, with the stipulation that he would be given hospital treatment upon his return. Instead, he was thrown in the stockade. When he attempted an escape from a work detail he was shot in the back.

The protest consisted merely of a sit-down strike by 27 prisoners, during which they sang and chanted. Because of the noise they were unable to hear or understand the command being read to them over a loud-speaker. Then they failed to respond to this command, the prisoners, most of whom were in the stockade for being AWOL, were then charged with mutiny.

The first three cases have been tried and the prisoners given sentences of 15, 14, and 14 years hard labor, respectively. They were immediately sent to Levenworth, to prevent any more trouble in the Presidio stockade.

Perhaps the incongruity of the punishments with respect to the crime (if, in fact, there was a crime) can be attributed to the army's policy of categorical disapproval of protest and endorsement of murder. The story seems clearly reminiscent of another era--infact, it's the old Nazi Germany trick.

School of Education

Granted, the School of Education is poorly organized. And it IS disheartening to brave that windy walk only to find out that your presence at a particular class really wasn't necessary. Oh...Dean Allen did bring a wealth of creative poeple Amherst, but failed to include the middle-men to program and schedule. But beyond the trivia of schedules, beyond the particulars of timing and classroom assignments, there's something wildly beautiful going on there. Call it revolutionary or experimental or progressive or radical, yet despite its label it deserves a chance to pass or fail.

The classical system of training teachers certainly wasn't our best. Traditional methods emphasize the ingestion of facts via a structured lecture, to be regurgitated in similar sequence. Aristotle used it, and the contemporary system still buys much of this process. The fact that retention decreases at exorbitant rates, but that yet a year later a scarce 20% of that learned can be recalled, makes the entire effort seem a viscious futile circle. Any step taken to increase retention, then would be worthy of recognition. But is retention really the problem?

After four years at a university is the graduate actually able to think? Or can be only simulate others' thoughts? Perhaps the School of Education is attempting to develop not a skill for acquiring, but for manipulating or ever creating. The theory of discovery-learning would seem to propose this.

Perhaps the most challenging aspect of the School's change-over is its attempt to deviate from an emphasis on extrinsic motivation. The system thrives on grading, and it is just the cume-crazed coed who learns, not for what she could know, but for her positive reward of those glorious twelve quality points. It is only natural that a newly-introduced system revolving around the intrinsic value of study would be misconstrued. There just aren't any built-in punishers in a self-graded course. However, the quality of the participant demands an awareness of the rationale, as well as a dedication to the goals of the program, if the system is to survive.

The blame for the attitude that education courses are not academically rigorous then, rests not nearly so onerously on the department as on the students. It is a thousand " I'll do what I have to " students that could destroy this attempt at reform.

The Sentencing

To the editor:
(The following letter was sent to Lieutenant General Stanley R. Larsen, 6th Army Headquarters, San Francisco, Cal.)
Dear Sir,

I, together with the co-signers of this letter , wish to express my horror and indignation at the sentence which has been meted out to Private Nesrey D. Sood, a soldier in your command. That he should be tried for "mutiny" because he, in company with 26 others, engaged in a sit-down strike to protest the shooting of a fellow-prisoner by a guard, is unthinkable; especially since the prisoner in question was mentally ill, needed psychiatric help and had informed the guard that he would attempt to escape. In this situation, moral protest was inevitable.

If you uphold this sentence, you will not only corroborate the argument that the American military has become a brutal, demonic force in our society, but you will also contribute greatly to the degradation of your own cause - that of the United States Army. Surely the way of decency, humanity and common sense is either to quash the verdict and sentence, or, at the very least, to reduce the prison term drastically - if only in consideration of the fact that Private Sood is the father of three children.

Sincerely yours, Robert J. Goar; Russell H. Kulas, Virginia Fishel, Stephen B. Oates, Helen Oates, Robert Fishel, David A Purdy, Pamela C. Purdy, Linda L. Kulas.

More on History

To the editor:

Editor Donald Epstein's article (March 4) entitled "Administrative Misunderstandings Key to Hunsberger Resignation" is probably as good an account of the History Department muddle as can be expected from an outsider. Therefore I merely regretted its several misrepresentations until I learned that some readers had been misled into an entirely erroneous view of the matter. Since personal reputations are involved, as well as the future of the History Department, I would like to make a few rectifications and clarifications.

Departmental problems go back several years, but the genesis of the present crisis does indeed date to May 1968 when Hunsberger appointed Potash as head of the department in spite of the fact that he opposed a new constitution that was voted in 26-11. The department acquiesced in the Potash appointment, however, because it was for only one year and we were assured that the committee searching for a suitable man from outside the university would continue to operate. Potash set the tone of his administration last Fall when he arbitrarily suspended the crucial provision of the constitution dealing with personnel evaluation and instituted the "Peel Off" system with its 'loyalty oath" overtones. Hunsberger at about the same time dissolved the search committee!

Now we come to the events of the past month: On February 11 the defunct search committee was miraculously resurrected by Hunsberger to endorse his proposal to recommend the reappointment of Potash. Not surprisingly, since most members of the committee were Hunsberger appointees, they concurred with his suggestion (though not enthusiastically in all cases). On February 13 Hunsberger announced he would meet with the full History Department on February 20 to discuss his proposed recommendation of Potash's reappointment.

On February 18 at least two persons (I am one) in the History Department received in campus mail a copy of a personnel action form showing the reappointment of Potash had ALREADY been recommended by Hunsberger (on February 6) and approved (by the Provost on February 12 and the President on February 13). Where, why, and by whom this document was reproduced and sent is still unknown, and is of no real importance except to those whose improprieties have been exposed or those who seek to divert attention from the essential fact of administrative malfeasance.

At the February 20 meeting Hunsberger was asked directly if he had already recommended the reappointment of Potash and he indignantly denied that he had. Before the full history faculty he declared that it was an insult even to ask the question because it implied that he was not consulting "in good faith." He reminded us that Board of Trustees regulations require appropriate consultation BEFORE any recommendation can be made. At this point I informed the members of the department of the true state of affairs and later that same day carried a complaint to the Provost. The resignation of Hunsberger was announced five days later on February 25.

Meanwhile the History Department had concluded its meeting of the reappointment of Potash. Absentee ballots were to be made available to those who had not been present or who had been obliged to leave before the voting, but Potash stopped the distribution of absentee ballots which would assuredly have increased the margin of opposition. Instead he polled only the tenured members of the department and predictably was supported 10-4 with one abstention. He got two more votes by asking two people whom he had recommended for tenure but who have not received it yet.

Perhaps in response to a protest that the tenured group was an unrepresentative minority, the Provost then commenced a series of interviews with all members of the department. We are presently awaiting the outcome of these visits.

In summary, the departmental turmoil and Hunsberger's resignation are not to be dismissed as tragic results of "administrative misunderstandings." What is at issue is the calculated attempt to deceive the members of the History Department in the matter of the Potash reappointment, and the blatant falsehood of Hunsberger's denial when confronted.

NOTE:
The words 'I have here in my hands a list of communists' used in an editorial entitled "Madame LaFarge" last Friday were coincidence. They were written some days before the debate with Dow; and were not intended to quote any particular member of the Ad Hoc Committee to end Military-Industrial Recruiting, nor any publication of that group.

Mafia Recruitment

To the editor:

I would like to present a hypothetical announcement which could appear on the bulletin boards at whitmore under the present recruitment policy of the University.

"The Mafia Corporation will be interviewing at Whitmore the week of March 16. They are interested in seniors and graduate students at the B.S., M.S., and Ph. D. level with backgrounds in the following areas: management, accounting, pre-law, government, computer programming, business administration, engineering, music, law enforcement, ballistics, food tech., and statistics.

Our Corporation is a sophisticated, multifaceted enterprise enjoying considerable support from organized society and government. We have legistimate interests and holdings in stocks, mortgages, juke boxes, vending machines, clothing corporations, auto dealerships, restaurants, race tracks, loan corporations, labor unions, and politicians.

We are looking for the bright, capable young man who wants to make it to the top. If you feel you have the ability and the push to contribute to our organization, make an appointment to see our representative , Joe " The Enforcer' Banannas, at Whitmore.

In keeping with the open recruitment policy, we would like to point out that anyone who attempts in an unlawful manner to obstruct, protest, or in any manner disrupt the Mafia interviews on the basis that our corporate activities are "immoral' , will be arrested by the State Police with the approval of the University President, Deans, and Administration."

Again, on Dow

To the editor:

Some say that Dow should be barred from the campus because such institutional influence only manipulates the individual thus suppressing his right of choice. Still others say that the majority want Dow to remain on campus because their rights as a majority group dictate this convenience. What kind of ridiculous situation is this? Here we are, students, arguing with one another as to what the other's rights should be or are in actuality. Both groups feel that someone has to lose, and the majority looks down at the minority for the sake of convenience. It doesn't seem to matter who is being reasonable as long as the majority rules.

Argue all you want, but neither of you will win. Neither group will get what it wants and both remain at the feet of the administration. Both groups represent individuals with a desire to determine what he wants but the administration remains supreme. Those who back the administration's actions are only saying that they agree with what the Establishment does. The students did not determine this matter, but it is the administration who just can't lose in an argumentative situation such as this. Heads they win, tails we lose! They had to be protecting somebody's rights since there are only two sides in the matter; either we have Dow on campus or we do not. If the majority wins for the sake of convenience, chalk up another point in favor of the rigid Establishment. If the minority somehow wins, then the hasty and selfish action of the administration will be rebuked but the majority will feel that the decision is not representative of the University. The students cannot win.

We are in a competitive system where everyone struggles for individual rights and no one gains them. No, not even the administration. They win many battles for "peace" but never attain their goal. Individual rights must be expressed by the individual not by competitive groups. You can't win peace and happiness by killing the enemy. The only result is temporary security which is not a part of the individual but is a part of the superficiality of suppressing the foe and the individual understanding. You may lose the next time! What does all this reflect? Only the fact that while everyone is so concerned about losing his rights, whether they be for the sake of reason or convenience, we are living in a restrictive environment placed upon us by administrative requirements for majors, jobs, etc., and all the security that society waves under our noses.

We fail as individual raindrops from heaven, each slightly different in its own individuality, only to be forced together, indistinguishable into violent competitive streams, grinding their way through the earth, turbulent within themselves and, then eventually showing down into a meandering stream after the path has been laid.

Congratulations

To the editor:

It now seems old history when Jack Leaman, coach of the Redmen appeared on the steps of the Student Union at the Sendoff Rally for the basketball team. Few people would have publically said what Leaman shouted into the screeching microphone that night: "This is the greatest team that this school has ever seen, and a lot of people are going to know it before it's over." These fiery words settled cautiously on the sparce gathering of seventy-five loyals and those just curious to find out what those search lights were doing in front of the union. Well, its all over now the Redmen are the greatest team that this school has ever seen, Jack was right! The season came a long way from a sparce rally on only a promise, to spectacular turnaway crowds at the cage. Congratulations to the whole team and especially to coach Jack Leaman. I'm glad I listened Jack, you weren't kidding.

JOE TABACCO

The "System"

To the editor:

One of the major debates within the left concerns the desirability of working within the system to produce change, as opposed to promoting structural change from a relatively detached postion. That the revolution has not arrived is a fact whose implications can ruin one's digestion. And as much as this revolution depends on individual committment, it does not materialize in proportion to intensity of committment. Is there then a paucity of new strategies to capitalize on the possible? The cooperative movement appealed to me at one time as containing within it the seeds of its own expansion, the seeds of a snowballing movement toward change in the balance of competive institutions in the society. But it has been developed only in a social-welfare sense, failing to utilize the resourses potentially available to it. One of these resourses is students. How many of us graduate yearly, wishing that there was some way of utilizing our specialized talents without being drawn into the "system". Simply stated, what are the potentials of an alternative framework for utilizing various talents and capabilities in economically productive enterprises? Could such an alternative framework be established embodying such principles as workers control, socialist distribution, participatory democracy, etc. If it were a viable and appealing alternative to many, an element of growth would be assured. But other mechanisms, essentially tools of the capitalist system, would be available. If workers controlled really touches a delicate spot in the troubles of the modern workers, its appeal could be utilized in product advertising of such industries. The I.L.G.W. and other union ads are a precident, but they perform the dubious function of reinforcing the capiotist system, at least that part which is unionized. Several cooperative production projects have been initiated by the Blacks in the South. If pursued, could such projects eventually hire engineers, doctors, scientiests, and administrators? Could such an alternative framework have a transformative impact on the organization of society.

The Greek System

To the editor:

It struck me as interesting when last semester I read of the high praise accorded the Greek fraternity system by high officials of this University. It was held that Greek houses offer an important alternative to dormitory housing, and also perform important socialization functions. What occured to me was that perhaps this campus, needs an SDS House, or Student Ad Hoc Committee House, or any house dedicated to social critticism and social action. The potential functions and benefits are many. It could be a communications and organization center for any number of radical projects. It could be an information and recruitment center for those interested in social reconstruction. It could be an experiment in social committment.

Strangely enough, both the strengths and the weaknesses of the current student movement are related to the dispersion of leftest and radical liberal students throughout the university. And anything smacking of institutionalization of the movement is suspect. But perhaps such an exercise in discipline could, at this point, produce a creative community dedicated not to exclusiveness but to openess, not to status but to social transformation.

The Lost American

To the Editor:

February 14, 1968 an American Navy pilot, while flying a peaceful mission was shot down off the coast of Hainan, an island of Red China. He was able to bail out of his burning plane into the South China Sea. A distress signal was sent and received, but Washington requested that ships stay twenty miles out in international seas. After eight hours of floating on a raft, he was believed to have been picked up by the Red Chinese.

This is a national campaign organized to collect signatures to present to Congress and the president in an effort to have Lieutenant Dunn freed. I am representing this campaign on our campus. All I need is signatures from anyone who is a United States citizen. There will be petitions in the lobbies and the lounges of the five towers in Southwest, in the dining commons, and in a few of the low-rise dorms.

If any individual can spare the time to help with this campaign, it would be greatly appreciated. If your sorority or fraternity or any group is interested in helping, please contact me. I desperately need representatives from other areas of the campus to put up petitions and return them to me. Please, I need people who are interested! Any small amount of time can be used.

This campaign was started by the sole efforts for Mrs. Maureen Dunn. Let her know that her husband is worth your time and your signature. Please stop and sign your name at any of these petitions. Each signature is desperately needed!

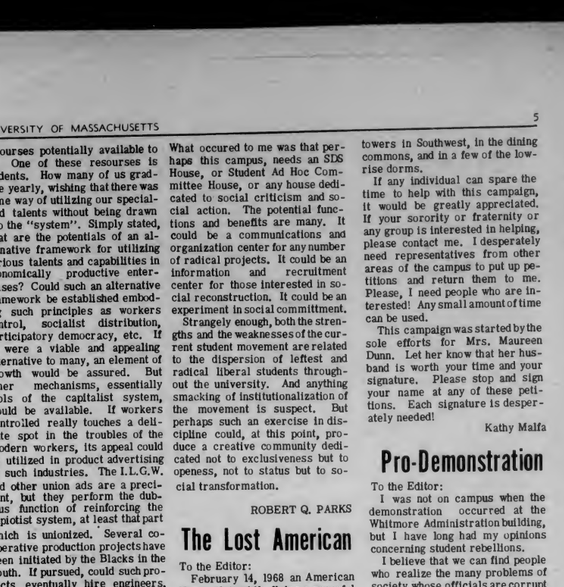
Pro-Demonstration

To the Editor:

I was not on campus when the demonstration occurred at the Whitmore Administration building, but I have long had my opinions concerning student rebellions.



I believe that we can find people who realize the many problems of society whose officials are corrupt and whose leaders know not the way of proper government. Where there is poverty and other manifestations of a poorly kept society, we will find people who care about these problems, and do so by expressing themselves in a way which best fits the situation or the particular problem which they are trying to solve. And for these reasons I fully sympathize with the students who sat in that night in protest.

Psychology Professor to Receive Godlove Award

UMass psychology Professor Harry Helson has been nominated to receive this year's Godlove Award of the Inter-Society Color Council for his work on the principle of adaptation-level and its application to the appearance of colors.

The council is composed of 32 member bodies with interests in the physical and psychological aspects of color. The Godlove Award is the highest award the council gives in the field of color. It will be presented at the annual council banquet April 15 in New York City.

Dr. Helson is receiving the award for his long-term studies of the psychological aspects of color perception. This work has been done both from an experimental approach and from a theoretical viewpoint, within the framework of Dr. Helson's adaptation-level theory, which considers psychological phenomena in relative rather than absolute terms.

A Magna Cum Laude graduate of Bowdoin College, Dr. Helson received his Ph.D. degree from Harvard University in 1924. He served on faculties of Cornell University, the University of Illinois and the University of Kansas before becoming chairman of the Bryn Mawr College psychology department in 1933. He left Bryn Mawr in 1949 to become department chairman at Brooklyn College and in 1951 became a professor at the University of Texas. He left there to join the faculty of Kansas State University in 1961 as John C. Peterson Distinguished Professor of Psychology. He joined the faculty at UMass last fall following a one year stay at York University.

He received the Distinguished Scientific Contribution Award from the American Psychological Association in 1962. He has received such other honors as the Howard Crosby Warren Medal of the Society of Experimental Psychologists and a Hogg Foundation Research Scholarship.

During the last 44 years he has contributed more than 125 publications in his field, including a 1964 book on his adaptation-level theory. He has served as editor of the Psychological Bulletin and has been a consulting editor on four other psychological journals.

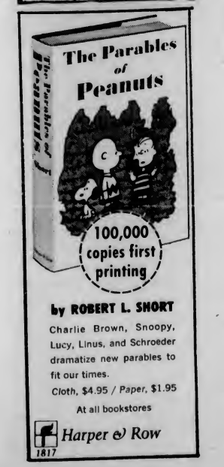
UMT to Present 'Plough and the Stars'

UMass Theatre is "wearin' th' green" for St. Patrick's Day with the production of Sean O'Casey's masterpiece "The Plough and the Stars."

Alan Eisenstock ('70) and Joe Wilkins ('71) at the light board of Bartlett Auditorium, rehearsing their lines for UMass Theatre's production of Sean O'Casey's Irish drama, "The Plough and the Stars."



Written by Ireland's greatest playwright, "The Plough and the Stars" takes place in Ireland at the time of the 1916 Easter uprising against British rule. The director of this production, Assistant Professor Harry Mahnken, has called the play "a devastating portrait of the effects of war both upon those who go to fight and those who stay behind." The suffering and the personal agonies of patriotism and war come alive in O'Casey's characterizations of civilians who are related to the fighters.

The set design and lighting are by Assistant Professor Peter Vaginas. Costumes were designed and created by Assistant Professor Elizabeth Weiss. Members of the cast are as follows: David Abraham as Jack Clitheroe, Anne Agard as Bessie Burgess, Douglas Bennett as Peter Flynn, Joseph Byrnes as Lieut. Langon, Alan Eisenstock as Corporal Stoddart, Barry Hazzard as Young Covey, Pamela Klein as Mollser, William Maker as the Bartender, Brian Marsh as Voice of Man, Stephanie Null as Nora Clitheroe, Mike Prusky as Fluther, Suzanne Rinaldo as Rosie Redmond, Joseph Wilkins as Sgt. Tinley and Judith Willner as Jennie Gogan.

"The Plough and the Stars" is a drama for our own time in history, or any time when love of country and love of family pull apart the fabric of human sanity and meaning. Performances are in Bartlett Auditorium, 8:30 p.m. March 12-15. Box office telephone 545-2579, from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. daily, or 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. on days of performance.

Concert Assoc. to Present Weisberg Chamber Ensemble

The sixth program in a series of professional entertainment by the UMass Concert Association will be the Weisberg Contemporary Chamber Ensemble. The concert is March 20, in Bowker Auditorium, at 8 p.m.

The group has won wide acclaim since being formed in 1960. Its leader, Arthur Weisberg, is a faculty member at the Juilliard School of Music and conductor of the Orchestra de Camera.

Their diversified program ranges from the classics to examples of the most recent American and European composers. Free to all UMass undergraduates, the concert is open to the public with an admission charge. Reservations on a first come-first serve basis can be made at the Student Union ticket office. Students must present an exchange ticket from their Concert Association ticket book.

Wrestlers Take Third in Intercollegiate Tourney

Bobby Freeman wrestling at 145 and George Zguris at 191 won first place trophies at the eighteenth New England Intercollegiate Wrestling Association tournament held at W.P.I. in Worcester last Friday and Saturday.

The team took a surprising third place position behind the champions Springfield, and runner-up Central Connecticut. However, nobody expected UMass to place ahead of Coast Guard and M.I.T., both victors over the Redmen during the dual meet season. UMass was the only team to place more than one champion other than Springfield who again dominated the tournament for the eighteenth consecutive time with five winners.

UMass created other impressive advances at this annual event by winning the freshmen tournament with four champions, and two runner-ups, for the second year in succession. The varsity advanced to third place this year from fifteenth one year ago. All UMass contestants are sophomores except heavyweight Tim Perkins, who is a first year transfer from Lawrence Community College.

Bobby Freeman had little trouble through his first three rounds pinning Ferg of Brandeis in 1:24 in the prelims, and Foster of Williams in the second period. After a strong 13-4 decision over Martin of Lowell Tech., Bobby was definitely in contention for the outstanding wrestler award. In the finals he ran into a little trouble with Romas of Springfield and had to settle for a 6-4 decision. Bobby scored two escapes, a takedown, and two minutes riding time, while Romas scored a takedown and a predicament. Bobby stayed in control of Romas for the last four minutes to win the bout on riding time. This was his first major tournament win, although he enjoyed a very successful career at Allen High School in Allentown, Pennsylvania. Bobby wrestled under the fear of physical exhaustion as one medical doctor actually ruled him from the tournament at weigh-in time because of a strep throat. A panel of doctors agreed to let him compete. Several other wrestlers including first seeded Tom Young suffered similar ailments during the week end tournament. Young was not his usual self, and could not finish higher than fourth in the 160 pound division.

George Zguris pulled the biggest upset of the tournament by winning the 191 pound division, and defeating defending champion John Glascock in the finals 2-1. George had only a 4-5 season, however, and finished with four consecutive wins in his last four dual meets. Glascock was an overwhelming favorite as his last five wins were by pins, and his only loss for the season was a nationally ranked Bonnat of Navy. Glascock previously defeated Zguris 4-1 in our February dual meet. In the tournament Zguris defeated Joe Scalia of Tufts 6-4 in the quarter-finals. Scalia wrestled most of the season at heavy weight scoring six falls including a fall over Zguris in our December dual meet. Scalia also won the Tufts, Amherst, UNH, UMass quadrangular held in Boyden Gym last month. In the semi finals George won by disqualification over Pat Ford of UConn. Ford was second seeded and had previously defeated Scalia, and pinned Zguris in our dual meet. Ford was disqualified on four consecutive penalties for grasping clothing. In the finals Zguris and Glascock finished the first period without scoring, however, both wrestlers were cautioned for failure to wrestle aggressively. In the second period Zguris escaped in twenty seconds to lead 1-0. Both wrestlers again finished the period on their feet. In the third period Glascock escaped quickly to knot the score 1-1. Zguris began to wrestle aggressively and the tired Glascock was penalized for stalling with 18 seconds left. Glascock drove furiously for the remaining time but could not come close to the takedown. This had to be one of the greatest upsets ever in the NEIWA history. About ten days ago George told some of his teammates that he "wanted to win" the tournament - a great example of mental attitude in athletics.

At 177 Bob Willman placed a strong third. After a bye in the preliminaries, Bob defeated Navitsky of Central Connecticut, and then lost to Barges, the eventual champion of Springfield. In his consolation Bob decisioned Batty of Brown 6-3 and then he pinned Warren of WPI in the first period for third place.

Tom Young placed fourth by defeating Thomas of URI in the preliminaries 17-3, and Eschborn of WPI 6-4, before losing to the eventual champion Tuck Stebbins of Wesleyan 7-2. In the consolations Tom advanced to the finals by decisioning Gottart of Brown 5-4. Tom then lost a heartbreaker to Zeigler of Springfield in overtime to take fourth place.

At unlimited, Tim Perkins, wrestling for the first time after a knee operation advanced to the quarterfinals with a bye, then lost to Wilson of Williams by a pin in the third period after leading at one time 9-3. Wilson then lost to Andree of MIT to keep Tim from the consolations.

The outstanding wrestler award went to Fred Snyder of WPI who defeated Fred Andree of MIT 6-4 in the heavyweight final. Andree placed fourth in the NCAA University division last year and the showdown between these two excellent heavyweights was the talk of New England wrestling all year. A full house turned out in Worcester to see the finals, and most of them were there to cheer Snyder to victory.

Wayne Stars for Redmen In IC4A Track Meet

Running his best two mile ever, Ron Wayne turned in the top performance of the UMass tracksters who traveled to the IC4A track meet in New York, Saturday. Wayne romped to first place in his two-mile heat in 9:08.8.

RON WAYNE

Walter Mayo, UMass' top sprinter ran a 6.4 second 60 yard dash to earn his way into the quarter finals before being eliminated. Also running the dash for the Redmen was junior Dave Morble who placed third in his heat but did not make the quarter finals as only the first two place finishers were picked.

Hurdler Jerry Spellman also just missed the quarter finals when he placed third in his heat of the hurdles.

Along with Wayne, senior Charlie Lang also competed in the two mile placing sixth in his heat with a time of 9:16.

UMass had two men competing in the field events with Cal Carpenter high jumping 6'4" and Ed Arcaro throwing 49 feet in the weight throw.

The Redmen's mile relay team of Steve Chase, Bob Hasselbaum, Jerry Spellman and Diego Gonzalez placed third in their race behind Harvard and St. John's, with a time of 3:27.3.

UCLA Loss to USC Breaks Streak

LOS ANGELES (AP) - UCLA's surprising basketball loss to rival Southern California to end the regular season may have been the spark the Bruins need to capture their successive title, Bruin Coach John W. says.

"This def ight help us in tournament play," said the 21-year Bruin coach after his nationally top ranked team, now 25-1, dropped a 46-44 thriller to USC on a last-second shot by Ernie Powell of the Trojans.

"However, we don't expect to see this type of play the rest of the season," Wooden said, referring to USC's slow-down tactics.

USC Coach Bob Boyd ordered his players to work the ball around and look for good shots only. Southern Cal took only 20 shots in the game and made 12 of them.

On defense, USC played 7-foot 1-1/2 Lew Alcinder closely, using 7-1 Ron Taylor to block him from the basket and whoever else was near to reduce his mobility. But possibly Lew didn't have his heart in the game.

Before the game, while his teammates took warm-up shots, Lew stood near the sidelines and yawned.

"We were not fired up. They wanted it a little more than we did," said Wooden calmly. The Bruins worked out only sparingly during the week. The Pacific-8 conference title was wrapped up the week before and the games didn't mean much - except pride.

UCLA opens defense of its national crown next Thursday night in Pauley Pavilion against New Mexico State, another slow-down type of team, in the Far West Regional Tournament.

Attention All Swimmers

The Boyden swimming pool will be open from 4 to 6 p.m. daily for intramural swimming team practice (only).

Red Sox Win Second Game

(AP) - The Boston Red Sox hammered 15 hits including three home runs, Sunday as they defeated the St. Louis Cardinals 12-4 for their second straight exhibition victory of the season.

Reggie Smith, Dalton Jones and Billy Conigliaro hit home runs for the Red Sox. Rookie first baseman Joe Hague hit a homer for St. Louis.

Smith hit his first inning homer over the centerfield fence with Jose Tartabull on base off losing pitcher Santiago Guzman, who was battered for six runs in three innings.

Jones hit a two-run homer to left off Guzman in the third, and Conigliaro, pinch-hitting for winning Pitcher Dick Mills, hit a solo homer in the fourth off John Campisi.

In addition to the home runs, the Red Sox got three doubles and a triple. Jones led the attack with three hits in four trips before leaving the game.

The Red Sox will have their exhibition home opener against the Mets with Jim Lonberg scheduled to make his first start of the season.

Hoopsters Out of N.I.T.

SENIOR REPORTER

UMass was locked out of the National Invitational Tournament Sunday as Kansas and Army were added to the 16 team field. The one remaining berth has been designated to the winner of tonight's Missouri Valley Conference playoff between Drake and Louisville.

Coach Leaman's Redmen were snubbed in favor of a 16-8 Army team which will participate in the tournament for the sixth time. While boasting the nation's toughest defense, the Cadets are a lackluster outfit to put it mildly. Army did, however, finish the season strongly with seven straight wins, the last coming on the road against Navy, Colgate, and Rochester.

Others in the field are Rutgers, Boston College, West Texas State, Southern Illinois, Temple, Tennessee, Florida, Tulsa, Fordam, Ohio, Kansas, South Carolina, and Wyoming.

The selections of two also-rans from both the Southeast and the Missouri Valley Conferences were also a blow to UMass hopes. Only the Yankee Conference champions will be on the sidelines this weekend. Every other major league has a representative in either the NCAA or the N.I.T.

Boston College, South Carolina, Tennessee, and Florida are the seeded teams in the New York City event which opens Thursday night. B.C., with a 13 game winning streak, has been particularly impressive of late with drubbings of Detroit and Dequesne, an NCAA participant.

Another UMass opponent is making the headlines these days. American International College, an early season victim of the Redmen, rolled to a 31-68 victory over Springfield Saturday night to insure a second straight junket to the NCAA Small College Tourney in Evansville this weekend.

A.I.C will open Thursday against San Francisco State, winner of the West Coast regionals. Also in the field are defending champion Kentucky Wesleyan, whom the Aces lost to, 90-78 in the quarterfinals last season, Montclair State, Illinois State, Ogglethorpe, Southwest Missouri State, and Ashland, the number one ranked college squad in the country.

NAIADS to Present First Performance

On March 13 the Naiads, the Women's Synchronized Swimming Team, will present the first of their four annual performances. The show will consist of ten numbers all composed by the members of the club. Under the guidance of Miss Esther Wallace, the girls have been working since November 13 and will present their final produce on March 13, 14 and 15. All performances will be a 8:00 p.m. and on Friday evening there will also be a 6:00 p.m. show.

Tickets will be available, free of charge, next Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, in the lobby of the Student Union.

All are welcome!

Colorado to Host Playoffs

(AP) - Pairings were announced Sunday for the NCAA hockey championships, scheduled here March 13-15.

Denver University, in second place at the end of the regular season in the Western Collegiate Hockey Association, will play Harvard Thursday night in the opening game while Michigan Tech, first in the WCHA, plays Cornell Friday.

The two winners will play Saturday night for the title and losers will play a consolation game Saturday afternoon at the Air Force Academy, north of here.

Cornell, winner of the Ivy League hockey race, has a 26-0 record and defeated Harvard in the finals of the Eastern College Athletic Conference tournament Saturday night. The Crimson have an 18-7-1 mark and finished second in the Ivy League.

Ray Pleads Guilty to Murder Charge, Is Sentenced to 99 Years in Prison

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) - James Earl Ray pleaded guilty on his 41st birthday Monday to a first-degree murder charge and was sentenced to 99 years in state prison in the assassination of Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. But he said he disagreed with the theory that there was no conspiracy in King's death.

The guilty plea means Ray will be eligible for parole on his 74th birthday. His lawyer, Percy Foreman of Houston, Tex., said he agreed to the plea "To save this man's live."

First-degree murder is punishable in Tennessee by sentences ranging from 20 years to death in the electric chair. No one has been executed in the chair since 1961.

The whole proceeding took less than 3-1/2 hours from guilty plea to sentence at 12:12 p.m. The 12-man jury which formally fixed the sentence included two Negroes.

The jury had agreed in advance to the state-defense arrangement for the guilty plea and 99-year sentence.

"Are you pleading guilty because you killed Dr. Martin Luther King in such a manner that you would be found guilty of first-degree murder under the laws of this state?" Criminal Court Judge Preston Battle asked Ray.

"Yes, I'm pleading guilty," Ray replied. One way or another, he repeated this answer four times.

King was shot once with a rifle bullet, fired from a rooming house across the street from the Lorraine Motel last April 4. The civil rights leader had come here to lead a demonstration in behalf of the city's 1200 garbage collectors, most of them Negroes, who were on strike.

That walkout, over demands for a union contract and a pay increase, was settled soon after King was slain. On June 8, Ray was arrested in London by Scotland Yard detectives - climaxing what has been described as one of the world's biggest manhunts.

Returned to Memphis under tight security after British extradition hearings, Ray has been held in a specially armored, air-conditioned cell at the Shelby County Jail.

His trial, first set for November, was postponed twice and had been scheduled to begin April 7.

King's father, the Rev. Martin Luther King, Sr., had no comment on the guilty plea and 99-year sentence.

King's widow, Coretta, was reported en route to Boston and could not be reached immediately.

The guilty plea itself was entered, while the jury, selected two weeks ago and at work in other Criminal Court cases since then, was not yet in the courtroom.

Later, when he passed sentence, the judge himself said there was no evidence of any conspiracy. But, he said, if such evidence arises, the state will be quick to prosecute.

Foreman, who took over the case on the eve of Ray's scheduled November trial, told the judge earlier in the court:

"I've never had hopes of anything except . . . to save this man's life." He took over from Arthur Hanes, former mayor of Birmingham, Ala., after Ray fired Hanes four days before his November trial was to start.

This resulted in a postponement of the scheduled trial until March 3 and thence to April 7 to give Foreman more time to prepare a case.

The first public hint of the guilty plea came last Friday. The Huntsville Ala. Times published the story, the subject of recurrent but unconfirmed rumors. Soon afterward, newsmen accredited to cover the trial - there were about 100 of them, all told - were summoned to be in court Monday morning.

There still was no immediate indication when Ray would leave his special jail cell and be transferred to the penitentiary in Nashville - or how the transfer would be made.

At Nashville, however, Harry Avery, state corrections commissioner, said at midmorning that his office had not been in contact "with the people in Memphis" concerning Ray.

James Earl Ray pleaded guilty yesterday to the murder of Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr., and was sentenced to 99 years in state prison.

State Medical School Approacches Actuality

The Massachusetts House voted yesterday, 139-83, not to reconsider legislation which would authorize an additional bond issue of $19,000,000 for the medical science building in Worcester. The move would clearly allow the Medical School architects to continue design of the building.

If costs of this design were within the authorized range, the medical sciences building could possibly go into construction by September, 1969.

The September deadline is important to the Medical School planning, as the release of $13,000,000 in federal funds is contingent upon construction beginning by that date.

The state bond issue in question yesterday would be in addition to $45,000,000 already authorized.

Yesterday's House action was not the final step in authorizing the bond issue. The measure must still go to the Senate for concurrence. The measure will be returned to the House for their two-thirds vote to make the actual bond issue possible, to the Senate for two-thirds concurrence, and then to the Governor.

Federal support for the University's Medical School totals $18,000,000 for the medical sciences building, plus $16,000,000 for the teaching hospital. The amounts represent the largest single federal grant for the support of medical education to date.

Principal arguments presented yesterday in support of the authorization bill were: the importance of saving for the Commonwealth the large federal grant already made, the necessity of providing physicians to cope with present and future health care needs, and the urgency of meeting the demand that even expanded private institutions could not satisfy.

Dean of Administration Leo Redfern had high praise for the efforts made by members of the state's labor movement, active in the bill's support, and for the Massachusetts congressional delegation.

Holy Cross May Go Coed Will Wait for Harvard, Yale

WORCESTER, Mass. (AP) - The faculty of Holy Cross College listened Monday to three study committee reports generally favorable to making the all-male school coeducational, but the session took no vote and made no recommendations.

It was announced after the closed door session that since the reports favored a coed institution another faculty meeting would be held April 14 at which time it is hoped arguments against the proposal may be heard.

"I'd hate to see Holy Cross go coed merely by default,' said a member of the college administration who asked not to be identified.

A spokesman said the college intends to poll alumni as well as students and faculty before making a recommendation to the trustees.

If accepted finally the coed plan would go into effect in the fall of 1971.

Faculty members said the study reports indicated little change in curriculum, little shift in courses and little change in the makeup of the faculty would be involved.

Some instructors suggested Holy Cross wait to see what happens if Harvard and Yale go coed. Others showed interest in the financial aspect, particularly what effect a switch to coed status would have on support by the all-male alumni. Holy Cross relies heavily on alumni support.

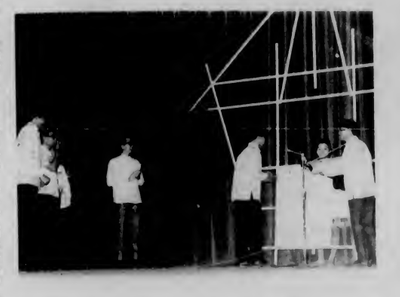
The study reports reportedly included no information on what it would cost the college to renovate for women students or to build new facilities.

Astronauts Fire Rocket; Prepare to Return Home

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) - The Apollo 9 astronauts, puzzling over a mysterious warning light from a spacecraft fuel gauge, fired their large rocket Monday to line up for a final rocket burn that will bring them home Thursday.

Astronauts James A. McDivitt, David R. Scott and Russell L. Schweickart lit the big rocket engine on the back of their spacecraft for 25 seconds, hoping to find the reason for the blinking red warning lights in the system that measures the fuel on board.

The burn reshaped the spacecraft's orbit and gave it a new high point of 287 miles while dropping the low point to 112 miles. The rocket firing also lined up the astronauts on the path they will use Thursday to return to earth.



Apollo 9's rocket burned perfectly, space officials said, but experts on ground have been unable to solve the mysterious blinking. The lights came on during earlier firings both aboard the spacecraft and in mission control.

The warnings came from the propellant utilization gauging system, a sort of fuel gauge on the spacecraft. Other data, however, showed the crew had enough fuel to finish their flight. The rocket firing was the last major activity scheduled for the crew before the Thursday burn that will bring them down.

The crew continued to probe the earth with cameras in the only unfinished experiment remaining for their 10-day flight, but spent much of their idle time chatting with ground controllers, giving high-flying weather forecasts and joking about a "dirty trick."

Using an instrument which takes four pictures at once and measures radiation of both heat and light, the crew photographed vast sections of the U.S. Southwest and adjacent Mexico.

The crew awoke from a long rest in a talkative mood Monday but were greeted with bad news about the weather in the Atlantic Ocean area where they're scheduled to land.

THE NEWS IN BRIEF

KEY BISCAYNE, Fla. (AP) - President Nixon ended a weekend of Florida boat cruises and conferences Monday, heading back to Washington to get ready to announce his decision on the antiballistic missile defense controversy.

The President was expected to approve a modified plan for deployment of the Sentinel system, probably with fewer missile sites than the 15 originally planned, and orders to place them further away from population centers.

WASHINGTON (AP) - Widespread job gains boosted this nation's total of employed workers to 76.2 million in February, and average earnings climbed to a record high of $111 a week, the government reported Monday.

At the same time, the unemployment rate remained at a 15-year low of 3.3 per cent, or about 2.9 million persons, for the third straight month. The total employment figure, adjusted for season factors, was also a record high.

LOS ANGELES (AP) - A solemn but fidgety Sirhan Bishara Sirhan heard himself described by a defense psychologist Monday as paranoic-convinced he alone is right but that the rest of the world is wrong.

"There is something driving this man" Dr. Martin Schorr, testified. "He is most anxious to convince me how normal and sane he is,' continued Schorr. "The paranoic is one who is most anxious to convince you how right he is and how wrong everybody else is."

BOSTON (AP) - John D. Coughlan, director of the Youth Service Division, resigned Monday at the request of Gov. Francis W. Sargent, who said "public loss of confidence in this agency can only be reversed by new leadership.'

Citizen groups protesting allegedly "inhumane' conditions at the Institute for Juvenile Guidance and other facilities of the division had sought Coughlan's ouster.

BOSTON (AP) - Gov. Francis W. Sargent Monday signed into law a bill authorizing an additional $25 million bond issue to pay for the Veterns' Bonus.

The bonus plan, which already has exhausted $6 million voted last year, pays $200 to any veteran with more than 181 days service since 1958 and $300 to Vietnam veterans.

Sargent signed the bill "with reluctance," and said the plan including non-combat veterans "was imprudent and lacking in foresight."

WASHINGTON (AP) - Sen. John Sparkman, D-Ala., and the National Housing Conference argued Sunday for relief fromhigh interest rates for low-and middle-income families.

The conference passed a resolution urging that the Government National Mortgage Association be authorized to buy mortgages at par value and resell them to the Federal National Mortgage Association.

"Careers Today" Observes Lack of Blacks in Industry

"Zebra Capital' , a phrase coined by "Careers Today' senior editor Ned Riley, keys his findings to the fact that the confrontation of black-versus-white could be smoothened by the amalgamation of black ambitions and white credit plus development-business know-how.

In his article, "Zebra Capital" in the February issue of CT Riley cites, as a vivid example, the case history of a young Negro who encountered problems in getting $25,000 to expand his dry-cleaning business.

"The person in question is intelligent and experienced. The record shows that a market for his business does exist. Most businessmen would've gotten the loan without fuss. But the person in question is black and his cleaning business is in Rochester, New York's run-down inner city," Riley reports. "The individual told me that if he wanted money for a car, anything to 'load him down', he would've had no problem . . . but to borrow money to MAKE money, nothing doing!"

However, Riley's "Zebra Capital" report also holds out promise by citing the fact that the big oil companies have developed thousands of black filling-station owners and operators. "But other franchisers have been slow; only lately has anybody noticed how seldom there's a black-owned corner grocery or bank in the ghetto."

T. George Harris, editor of "Careers Today," in his February issue editorial says: "After welfare and other disasters, angry black men are at last grabbing for the weapons of real power. They want the kind of development banking - public and private - that the New Deal used 30 years ago to transform the white farmer's life. But, as indicated in Riley's "Zebra Capital', only a few of the young money men who understand finance have gone into the ghetto to find black partners."

"Careers Today' is slanted toward college seniors and recent graduates and is published in Del Mar, California, by Communications/ Research/Machines, Inc., which also publishes "Psychology Today."

NSA Officer Arrested For Refusing Induction

NEW YORK CITY (CPS) - The director of the Vietnam and draft desk of the National Student Association, David Hawk, was arrested Monday in James Chapel at Union Theological Seminary, where he had sought symbolic sanctuary after refusing induction.

He is on leave from the seminary. He and some 25 other U-nion students returned their draft cards in 1967.

Five federal marshalls arrested Hawk about two hours after he entered the chapel with Yale University Chaplain William Sloane Coffin and NSA President Robert Powell.

Symbolic sanctuary is not an attempt to avoid arrest, but an effort to have it occur in a meaningful setting.

Hawk was reported released on his own recognizance for arraignment March 21.

Senate Proposal: Lower Voting Age

WASHINGTON (CPS) - Sen. Richard S. Schweiker (R-Pa.) Monday introduced a resolution to amend the U.S. Constitution to lower the voting age to 18.

He said in a speech that one of the reasons for protests is the "socially minded" young people are "cut off from the electoral process."

Over a hundred similar moves have been made in Congress since 1946, all to no avail. This year, a national lobbying group called the Youth Franchise Coalition has been formed.

Preparations of Fish and Sea Food Is Subject of Food Service Seminar

UMass will offer a 10-session seminar on "Fish and Seafoods In Food Service Establishments", starting April 1, for western Massachusetts people in all areas of the food service industry.

The series of Tuesday evening, two-hour meetings will be held at the Western Mass. Electric Co. auditorium, Brush Hill Rd., West Springfield, from 7 to 9 p.m., April 1, 8, 15, 22 and 29; May 6, 13, 20, and 27; and June 3.

The seminar is a Cooperative Extension Service educational offering of the University, developed by the department of hotel and restaurant administration in conjunction with the U. S. Department of the Interior's Bureau of Commercial Fisheries. It is being presented in cooperation with the Western Mass. Electric Co. and a number of fish industry and food service industry organizations, including member organizations of the Massachusetts Food Service Educational Council.

This is a new type of seminar, developed in Massachusetts, which was presented in the fall in Waltham and attracted nationwide attention. It has been repeated at Westboro, and the third offering is now scheduled for West Springfield. The seminar is concerned with a wide range of subjects relating to effective purchasing, preparation, service, and merchandising of fish and seafood products. It is designed to enable food service operators to increase the efficiency of their use of fishery products in their food service operations.

The seminar is designed to meet the needs of people concerned with food service management, purchasing, and preparation. Instruction will cover such subjects as the market outlook, purchasing, storing, quality control, preparation methods, merchandising, advertising, and promotion of fish menu items.

Instructors in the seminar will include professors from the University's department of hotel and restaurant administration, fisheries experts from the Bureau of Commercial Fisheries, and a number of specialists from the fisheries and food service industries.

Advance registration and payment of a fee is required. All inquiries may be sent to Charles E. Eshbach, Department of Hotel and Restaurant Administration, Chenoweth Laboratory.

Air Societies Are Honored As Best Squadrons

Delegates from Arnold Air Society and from Angel Flight recently attended a Bi-area Conclave where they each received awards for being the best squadrons in New England, "The awards are reflective of what we are trying to do," said Miss Kathleen O'Hara, Angel Flight pledge trainer and a delegate to the conclave. Angel Flight also won the "Scrap Book" Award for the third year.

Arnold Air Commander Tom Paradis won the "Commander's Award" for the New England area.

Miss O'Hara was nominated for the "Silver Wings" award. This award is given annually to the best Angel in the nation.

The conclave was held at the Statler - Hilton Hotel in Boston, Mass and was attended by delegates from the New England and New York areas. Each organization sent their commander and two officers to the conclave.

Arnold Air Society is a service organization connected with the Air Force ROTC program. Angel Flight is a "women's honorary organization" which is sponsored by the Air Society. The Air Society, aided by Angel Flight, performs such functions as ushering at football games. The Angel Flight also sponsors the "Top College Girl" contest.

Spring Poetry Festival Will be Held this Week

James Wright, Poet, will be reading his own poems tonight in SBA 120.

Spring is coming to UMass in the form of a poetry festival. The Spring Poetry Festival begins March 10 with James Wright reading from his three books of poems: SAINT JUDAS, THE BRANCH WILL NOT BREAK, SHALL WE GATHER AT THE RIVER in SBA 120 at 8:15 p.m. He will be followed by Lucille Clifton on March 12, in Mahar Auditorium at 8:15 and Robert Kelly on March 13, also in Mahar.

James Wright, originally from Martins Ferry, Ohio, has studied at Kenyon (A.B.), in Vienna as a Fulbright scholar, and at the University of Washington (M.A., Ph. D.). He has also taught at the University of Minnesota and at Macalester, and since 1966 has been with the English Department at Hunter.

Lucille Clifton is a new black poet. Her first book of poems will be published by Random House in November. It is called GOOD TIMES. Some of these will appear in a special Signature of 16 pages in the forthcoming Winter issue of the MASSACHUSETTS REVIEW. Lucille Clifton is the mother of six children and lives in Baltimore.

Robert Kelly is the author of ten books of poems, the most recent just published by Pym-Randall Press, SONGS I-XXX. He is also the author of a novel, THE SCORPIONS published by Doubleday. He edited with Paris Leary A CONTROVERSY OF POETS. University students will remember his reading at the Summer Poetry Festival, at the Student Union two years ago as one of the highlights of the Festival. Kelly teaches at Bard College.

"Underground" Radio Enjoys Freedom To "Do Their Own Thing" on Campus

By GARY HAMEL
Staff Correspondent

"Underground radio" is broadcasting to UMass and Western Massachusetts each day from 3 p.m. to past midnight through WMAS-FM, 94.7 in Springfield.

In a DAILY COLLEGIAN interview, "Lord Jim" provided information about the station's operation. Explaining his anonymority, he said he couldn't give his job a title and "don't call me a 'DJ'."

"Underground radio", LordJim says "is a radio free to experiment more than the AM stations can. Here I'm not tied to a program director and so I can do my own thing." He does it from 8 to 12:30 Monday through Saturday nights.

He continued, "Another feature of Free Radio is paying attention to the opinions of the listeners. This is what Free Radio is all about. In effect, it says 'we are your radio; what do you want to hear?' We take requests by phone and pay close attention to all mailed opinions and ideas we receive. We welcome criticism and feel the only way to run a station is to notice what the audience feels and then act accordingly."

He added, "Another very important aspect of Free Radio is that it tends to keep the record companies honest. I'm sure many people remember the typical album of 10 years ago in which a performer who had had one 'hit' record in his career put that song on an album and then added 11 junk songs - and thus cheated the buyer.

Concerning specific features of WMAS programming, Lord Jim said: "We've been on the air since last August and we're still experimenting. In fact, there are several experimental events happening right now.

One event is our 'FM Swaps' where listeners send in lists of items they would like to sell or swap and we broadcast these over the air free of charge at 8:20 at night. The only limitation is that no automobiles can be announced", said the Lord, as he is sometimes called.

"Another new thing", he went on to say, "is reading a subchapter a night out of a book by Dick Gregory."

An additional event noted by Lord Jim is that of playing a greater variety of music: "We're starting a couple of hours of jazz a week to see how the audience responds, as well as playing stuff like the Masekela album and the very very radical new album by Kim Fowley."

Israeli Socialist to Talk On Palestinian Struggles

Mr. Emanuel D. Farjoun, a prominent member of the Israeli Socialist Organization, will present a lecture entitled, "Palestinian Struggle and World Revolution" on Tuesday, March 11, in the Council Chambers of the Student Union at 8:30 p.m. and at Smith College at 4:30 p.m.

Mr. Farjoun represents the Israeli Socialist view, which envisions a Socialist revolution in Palestine and the Middle East and takes an anti-Zionist stand. This organization consists of both Jews and Arabs.

Mr. Farjoun, presently at Harvard University, has written numerous articles on the Arab - Israeli conflict and participated in international conferences as a representative of the Israeli Socialist Organization.

Search Being Conducted for Miss University Contestants

The Class of 69 at the University of Massachusetts is pleased to announce its sponsorship of the 4th annual Miss University Beauty and Scholarship Pageant which will be held during the week of April 20th-26th. The Miss University Pageant is a local preliminary to the Miss Massachusetts and Miss America Pageant.

The Miss University Pageant is unique from other queen contests because not only do the contestants have to possess beauty and poise but they must also perform in a three minute talent presentation. This year's successor to the reigning queen, Donna Lee Hayes and her runners-up will be the recipients of scholarships, prizes and trophies. The winner will also represent the University of Massachusetts at the Miss Massachusetts Pageant to be held in Attleboro, Mass. in July.

All dormitories, sororities and fraternities are urged to turn their nomination forms in as soon as possible so that the nominees can be contacted. The deadline date for all nomination forms will be Tuesday, March 18th by 5 p.m. Please return all nomination forms to the R.S.O. Office on the second floor of the Student Union.

All girls who attend the University and who are between the ages of 18 and 28 are eligible to compete. Any girl wishing to enter who did not receive a nomination may pick up an entry blank in the RSO office and should be returned by the deadline date.

Talent presentations may consist of singing, dancing, dramatic reading, writing, creative poetry, art displays, dress designing, etc. A reception will be held for all contestants where all the details of the pageant will be discussed by state and local officials. Talent suggestions will also be provided at this time.

Area Groups to Entertain At Multi-Media Ballroom

On Friday, a multi-media rock dance hall, The Woodrose Ballroom, will open near Amherst, on Route 5 in South Deerfield, opposite The Gables restaurant.

The Woodrose Ballroom is being run by several people from The Boston Tea Party. Steve Nelson, a graduate of Harvard Law School, managed the Tea Party for a year. The Road is the resident multi-media light show group at the Tea Party, and includes John and Barbara Boyd, Roger Thomas, and Ken Brown, a filmmaker from Amherst.

Live music will be provided by groups generally brought in from outside the Amherst area. For the first weekend, The J. Geils Blues Band will appear from Boston. They have been widely praised, and in a recent appearance in Worcester, they were as well received as the other group on the bill, The Janis Joplin Revue.

The emphasis at The Woodrose Ballroom will be on dancing, with recorded music when the band is not playing. The light show will also play an important part, The Road having done light shows with most of the world's top rock groups, as well as on television.

The goals of the people behind The Woodrose Ballroom are closely tied to their endeavors as artists. "We hope to strike a different balance between business and art than is usually found in this type of operation, where the goals of the management are primarily commercial. We want this not only to be a good place to go to dance and meet people, but to become a workshop in multi-media effects.'

The Woodrose Ballroom was originally known as The Gables Ballroom when built in the Thirties, and the top bands of that time played there during their tours.

The doors will open every Friday and Saturday night at 8 p.m. Admission is $2.75, and girls get a discount of fifty cents. Admission will be restricted to those at least 18 years old on Friday, but on Saturday nights there will be no age limit.

MIG Will Hold Sessions In Old Boston City Hall

The old Boston City Hall will be alive with people once again Thursday, March 20, when the delegates to the Massachusetts Intercollegiate Government hold their committee sessions in the former municipal headquarters, according to Peter Burnbomb of Harvard University, facilities chairman.

"All of the bills which are submitted by the colleges taking part in the government days will be debated in the committee sessions," said William M. Burke, student government president of American International College and founder of the Organization.

The entire two-day conclave will have the same procedures as the regular legislature. "A President of the Senate, Clerk of the Senate, Speaker of the House of Representatives, Clerk of the House, and eight committee chairmen have been selected by the standing committee at our Sunday meeting at Harvard University," Burke said.

The Parker House directly opposite the old City Hall, will serve as "MIG Central." All of the delegates will be staying at the hotel, and Burke expects that there will be a large amount of lobbying Thursday evening, as the students from the various colleges promote interest in their schools' bills.

The lobbying will be a prelude to the collegiate lobby which will be formed following the MIG days in order to promote the intercollegiate government bills submitted to the General Court, and other bills which interest the college community.

Summer Internship Program Open To Selected College Students

At the direction of Governor Sargent the Executive Office for Administration and Finance is continuing to sponsor the Summer Internship Program. Each year this program allows a few rigorously selected college students the opportunity to engage in governmental research work for a state agency.

WHO IS ELIGIBLE TO APPLY: The program is open to students attending any college or university in Massachusetts. It is also open to all citizens of Massachusetts who are attending colleges located outside of Massachusetts. Applicants must be currently enrolled in their junior or senior year in college OR attending graduate school or law school. Students currently completing their sophomore year in college are NOT eligible.

Applicants must submit a completed application form by Monday March 24, 1969 and must take an examination which will be held on Friday March 28 at 4:00 p.m. at the State Office Building, 100 Cambridge Street, Boston, second floor lobby. The examination will also be administered on the same date and at the same time at UMass.

The examination will consist of multiple choice questions dealing principally with the social sciences and current events, with a major proportion of the examination devoted to questions about Massachusetts state government. Applicants will be allowed one hour to complete the examination.

The top fifteen scorers on the examination will be required to submit a letter of recommendation from a professor in the applicant's major field of study and a transcript of academic record from all institutions of higher education attended. These high scorers will also be required to appear for an interview.

THE SCHEDULE FOR THE SUMMER: Internships will begin no later than Monday July 7 and will continue through Friday August 29. Interns will be paid $90.00 a week. Group meetings will be held, and each intern will be required to make periodic written reports on his work.

Please address all inquiries and correspondence to: Summer Internship Program, Room 268, State House, Boston, Massachusetts 02133.

Ski Patrol Gives First Aid Course

Ski patrol people, first aiders and those interested in either - ATTENTION: The UMass Ski Patrol is being re-organized with David Gold as the new patrol leader and is instituting a recruiting and training program along with its other activities. The patrol not only wants new members but wants to train others in first aid to act as a resource of competent personnel to handle accidents or natural disasters. There will be lectures from visiting doctors and nurses, films and training in areas such as cardiac massage.

A first aid course, leading to American Red Cross certification and promising to be dynamic and instinctive, will begin tonight at 7:30, George Washington Tower, 12th floor, and every Tuesday and Thursday thereafter.

Please come, with or without a knowledge of first aid or skiing - just bring a ready mind!

PASSOVER AT HILLEL 1969

Passover will begin at sundown, Wednesday, April 2, and conclude at sundown, Thursday, April 10. The first and last two days are days of full religious obligation for traditional Jews, most Reform Jews observe the first and seventh days as days of full religious obligation. The seders fall on the evenings of Wednesday, April 2, and Thursday, April 3.

Hillel will be holding seders, as last year, in North Commons line #1. and serving Passover meals, lunch and dinners, during the week. For information concerning costs, please drop by the Hillel office in the Student Union. No reservations will be made without payment. The deadline is Thursday, March 20. The office is open from 11:00 a.m. to 4:00 p.m. weekdays. A mailing has been sent to all students registered with us by religious preference card.

PLEASE TAKE CARE OF IT NOW.

FROM OUR SIDE
The Numbers Game

Once upon a time there was a large brick box through which thousands of people passed. The box contained knowledge and many people wanted to pass through the box in order to obtain knowledge. Albert and Jack were two of these people because they too wanted to possess knowledge.

Albert worked very hard to acquire the knowledge in the box and was rewarded with a high number when he got out. Jack acquired the same knowledge as Albert but he did not work as hard to get it and because of this Jack was given a low number. Everybody in the box left it with a number, some high and some low. These numbers which are given to the people are supposed to be very important and some people work very hard to get a high number. If you get a high number you are supposed to be very smart; if you get a low number very stupid.

But Albert was not smarter than Jack, nor was Jack smarter than Albert. Jack passed through the box acquiring knowledge and enjoying life. He felt his life was very meaningful and he did not care what other people thought of his low number.

Albert, on the other hand, worked day and night to get his high number. He cried if he did poorly and boasted if he did well. Jack thought the numbers game was silly and meaningless but Albert prided himself on his high number, feeling sure it would bring him success and happiness after he left the brick box.

Ten years after he left the brick box Jack was married and had two beautiful children, he was even getting a high number of money. Jack enjoyed life and was very content but he wondered what had become of hard-working Albert.

Albert was not as fortunate as Jack. Although Albert left the brick box with a high number he was now very lonely. He was still very concerned with high numbers, paying high numbers to his former wife, paying high numbers to his psychiatrist, and thinking about the high number he got when he left the brick box.

UMass Medical Showdown

The House is voting again today on a new $19 million appropriation for the University of Massachusetts Medical School at Worcester. The vote will decide whether the Legislature can be blamed for scrapping the school, for which the Federal government has already promised $35 million, or whether Gov. Francis W. Sargent will be handed the problem.

It is a problem because of two factors: the present financial bind of the state government with new taxes needed in any event, and the financial predicament of Boston's three private medical schools which has led them to urge state subsidies even though the proportion of Bay State applicants admitted by them is small and getting smaller.

A way should be found for the state to support both the private and the UMass institutions. But if a choice must be made, then surely the UMass medical school should take precedence. The basic reason for its past approval by the Legislature and ex-Gov. Volpe is the state's need for more doctors. That need is greater today then ever.

The cost, while great, would increase by more than 10 percent a year with further delay. It is not excessive in comparison to the medical schools other states are building. If the school is scrapped, Massachusetts loses its own money already spent, and even further delay would cost $13.8 million in Federal funds for the first phase if construction is not started by September.

The state has already earmarked some $45 million for the school. The new $19 million item proposed in the capital outlay budget would bring the total to $64 million. It ought to be approved.

"All I'm Asking You To Do Is Grab Hold Of The Tail"

Trespassers?

To the editor:

With the passing of yet another Dow demonstration on another campus, we have again been witness to one of the most potentially important events in the evolution of the American university. Specifically, this event highlights the issue of who belongs and who does not belong on the campus and what this means for the future of the university. Until recently, this question was masked by what seemed to be of more immediate concern to many students and faculty, i.e., the morality of the Vietnamese war. While not diminishing the importance of this concern (which was, and still is, reflected primarily in demonstrations against Dow, the producers of napalm), it should be noted that it did tend to submerge the issue of industrial recruitment on the campus.

Sensing some raised eyebrows and quizzical expressions as to why this is an issue, first it will be categorically stated that what is at stake is THE STRENGTH AND INTEGRITY OF THE UNIVERSITY. Without resorting to historical justification, it is maintained that the university's function and strength is intimately tied to its ability to adopt a morally independent stance vis-a-vis religious, political, and economic forces in the society. Only by maintaining this position can the university dedicate itself to the unfettered search for answers to the pure and applied issues that confront man. As such, some of its most salient values can be phrased in terms of freedom of exploration and creative inquiry. Concomitantly, an ongoing attempt is made, through teaching, to institute these values in the university graduates who will ultimately both maintain and change the institutions of the parent society.

Within this framework, any agency or individual which undermines these values or threatens to steer the university's policy of independence towards dependence poses a danger. One such threat is certainly the secret research at certain institutions which is financed by the military, e.g., university laboratories which are contracted to the Chemical and Bacteriological Warfare Division of the Army. Not only is secret and directed research alien to the values of the university, but economic dependence (that extra centrifuge or extra lab assistant) portends eventual control.

But how can this have anything to do with industrial recruitment on campus? After all, are not graduating seniors only being afforded a convenience? Unless one is totally naive, he cannot but note the subtle "courting" that is being transacted. One is hard pressed to uncover altruistic motives in this world of ours, least of all among major industrial corporations. What is occurring is a type of "trading off" between university and corporation. The university provides student time (excuses from class), if necessary, as well as space for the recruiter; the recruiter can, of course, then give "closer" consideration to the candidates interviewed. In the end, a mutally facilitative agreement of sorts has been established; this is a common game in our culture and in and by itself not necessarily a bad one. One only wonders whether the university, given its values and unique position, should be playing this game. Jencks and Reissman in "The Academic Revolution" imply that the university already functions as a gigantic four-year aptitude test for industry. How long before a chemistry department at some university offers a specialized course which "fits in" with the needs of graduates who may potentially be hired by DuPont or another large chemical corporation? This danger may be remote but certainly not improbable; if one is curious about the nature of the game rules when playing with the big boys, just write to Ralph Nader.

Finally, it should be recognized that industrial connections with the campus exist on various levels and that these connections and recruitment are not necessarily independent. Many, if not most, of the major industrial concerns financially support university research. While much of this research is probably not direct, i.e., the investigator need not follow the grantor's direction inconducting his investigations, one wonders about the contingency of grant money on recruitment "courtesies." Might not a university find, for example, that once it terminated recruitment privileges for any given corporation, research money was suddenly diverted to a more "deserving" project at another university? The reader can only judge for himself but will never know until some stalwart university takes the chance.

It is apparent that most industrial concerns, when recruiting, could easily afford to transiently rent an office or use a local hotel suite for interviewing. Why doesn't the university make off-campus industrial recruitment and military recruitment a standard policy? A viable answer is probably mulidetermined. But the writer would guess that a major reason is linked to the dilemma faced by gas station owners who were forced to play the car and money giveaway games. Even when losing money themselves or violating personal principles, most owners did not pull out for fear of being the only ones to do so. Similarly, most universities may be worried that they will be at a severe disadvantage (job placements for seniors, reputation, etc) if they make the first move and others fail to follow. Of course, one solution to the problem is obvious - a Magna Carta prohibiting campus recruitment signed by a cartel of university presidents. But just as obvious is the fact that solutions are vacuous unless the presence of a problem is first acknowledged.

It seems imperative that the university face squarely the problem of campus recruitment and, as a first step, make amoral distinction between the trespasser and the trespassed! The university in its broadest sense, i. e., its buildings, personnel, and values, has been trespassed. Irrespective of the various motives which are always represented among demonstrating students, the ACTIONS of these students are functional attempts to bar industrial recruiters from the campus. It is these latter persons who are the trespassers! As soon as they leave the campus, the university will have taken a major step towards fulfilling its promose - and probably also eradicate one of the smoldering sources of student unrest.

To the editor:

In the process of cleaning up the Student Union to make way for the Bridal Fair several old F.B.I. uniforms came to light. In the pockets of one of the suits were several old R.S.O. logbooks, memoes and minutes of meetings which might be of some interest to campus historians. As I and several students of history reconstruct events, the story is as follows.

There was a national order in 11884 called Sons of a Continuing American Revolution. The avowed goal of the order was to "put a SCAR on every campus". Sure enough, even Massachusetts Agge had its local chapter.

In February, 1884, a meeting was held by so members of SCAR local to discuss their involvement in the Indian Wars.

"It seems to me that we should sit-in for the Sioux," one peace-pipe smoking beard posited.

"Sit-ins, schmid-ins,"'answered another brave, "We've gotta get R.O.T.C. off campus. The cavalry is simply another part of the military-industrial COMPLEX."

Here the Commissar pounded his shoe on the table for order. "We must define, comrades, define. Anyone who is anti-redman must be made to see his error."

"better red than dead," murmured the peace-piper.

The SCAR local promptly formed an Old Left Elite which in turn formed a Committee on Anti-War Exhibitionism. Artists made up several displays, the most spectacular of which was a statue of a grim Indian, gun in hand, his left foot atop a tombstone engraved "Custer".

The removal of this statue in 1884 by the Administration was one of the big events of that year. No one know what had become of the statue until an anonymous member of the bureaucracy, the President, announced that it was being stored in an old barn. In 1948 the statue, with "Custer" chiselled from off its tombstone, and breechclout added, appeared in back of the Student Union. One other small change, a pedestal, had been added to the artwork. On the stone was engraved "Metawampe", from the Greek "Meta", meaning middle, and Iriquois "Wampum", meaning wealth. The statue now stood for the Middle Class.

Musigals to Compete For Berkshire Bowl

The Musigals, a University women's singing group, has been invited to sing in competition for the Bershire Bowl in Pittsfield, March 14. The Berkshire Bowl is a silver bowl offered each year to the singing group which is judged to be the best in the greater Springfield area. The Musigals have already been awarded two bowls and are going to Pittsfield this year in hopes of winning their third.

Musigals, begun in 1960, consists, at present, of eleven girls who sing in four part harmony. Many of the present and past popular songs have been arranged by Joan Heyman, the group's director, and presented at various events in the area, including a Casino presented by Amherst College on March 1.

Tryouts for Musigals have been scheduled this semester for Tuesday and Wednesday, March 18 and 19. Anyone interested in trying out is requested to fill out an application which can be obtained in the R.S.O. office and to sign up for an audition time.

Provost Allen at MLK Coffee Hour

Today, from 12 to 2 p.m., the Marin Luther King Jr. Social Action Council will hold its regular coffee hour with the administration in the Colonial Lounge of the Student Union.

In the past, these discussions have included such topics as the Dow demonstration, power of the Student Senate, administrative lines of command and parietals.

This week's guest will be Associate Provost Jeremiah Allen. He will attempt to answer any questions, but will probably be most helpful in strictly academic areas such as core curriculum and other requirements.

As always, the program will be open to all students, faculty, and administrators, and coffee will be served.

Supreme Court Condemns College Demonstrators

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Supreme Court brushed aside today the idea that college demonstrators have a right to a "trial" before they can be suspended by officials for their activities.

The ruling serves to uphold the disciplinary powers of administrators and bars extension to the college campus of the court's affirmance last month of the free-speech rights of passive grade-school demonstrators.

Justice Abe Fortas, in a brief opinion, said that college students who engage in an "aggressive and violent demonstration' are not protected by the First Amendment's guarantees.

He distinguished the plea of 10 ousted West Virginia college students from the case of the De Moines, Iowa, school children whose rights to wear black armbands protesting the Vietnam war was upheld last month in a decision written by Fortas because the Iowa children, Fortas said, were involved in peaceful nondisruptive expression.

Counselors Role No Longer One Of Policeman; Now Serve as Advisor

By MARC ELFMAN
Staff Reporter

Among the liberal changes occurring in the University the least noticed and one of the most far reaching is the new methods of counselor selection. The "policeman" counselor of yesterday administrators say, is gone and has been replaced by a highly trained combination psychiatrist, physician, tutor and parent-away-from home, who is capable of handling such diverse situations as being approached by a student who thinks his roommate is a homosexual or having a student slash his wrists. This improvement is due to the flexibility of the selection system.

A committee from each residential area meets to draw up a skeletal structure for the houses in it's areas to follow. In Southwest the only specific criteria is a coffee hour which acquaints the applicants with the procedure, so that there will be some method of screening, and to have the accepted applicants take part in the six week training program.

The rest is up to a committee from each area to adopt a system that will fit the specialized needs and problems of their house. For example, a house with a drug problem needs a counselor with some insight into the problem rather than a counselor who will have his whole floor arrested.

The applicants in Kennedy Tower, for example, must submit outside references and pass an interview board which marks the applicants on the following six qualities:

A. Awareness to be able to talk in an informed manner about campus, racial issues, drug culture, house government, house activities, Residential College, etc.

B. Flexibility - to ideas and beliefs of others.

C. Communication - ability to intelligently and effectively, express ideas so others can understand them.

D. Sensitivity - empathy to others.

E. Emotional Adjustment - candidate is aware of himself as others percieve him - as counselor, student, person - and seems sure himself.

F. Self - Awareness

If the applicants pass the interview they are sent to a six week training program.

Fund-Raising, Relief Services Are Goals of 'Biafra Awareness Week'

By DREW B. STERGIS
Education Staff

The local chanter of the National Biafra Relief Services Foundations is sponsoring "Biafra Awareness Week" at UMass and throughout the Amherst area, this week.

Operation under the auspices of the National Biafra Relief Headquarters in New York and sponsored by the UMass Martin Luther King Social Action Council, the local group seeks contributions for the following 3 objectives:

1. The establishment of agricultural centers for crop-growing in Biafra.
2. The establishment of rehabilitation centers to enable the 3-4 million Nigerian refugees to learn crafts and skills.
3. The construction of hospital wards and the recruitment of doctors.

The local program began Saturday with a fund raising campaign in Springfield and will continue throughout this week in the Amherst area with the following plans:

1. Monday-Saturday, 9-5, a table will be set up in the Student Union lobby for questions and contributions.
2. Monday-Saturday, 11-2, fund raising will be conducted by volunteers at street corners in Amherst center.
3. Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. on WFCR an open forum, entitled: "Is it necessary for Biafra to starve to death?"
4. Thursday, a ten-minute movie on Biafran problems will be shown in the Student Union ballroom at 6 and 8:15 p.m.
5. Friday and Saturday, 10-6, bake sales will be held in front of Stop and Shop and the First National Bank of Amherst.
6. Sunday at 4 in the Union, a panel of experts will discuss the "Political background and Implications of the Nigeria-Biafra War."

The local branch of the Biafra Relief Services Foundations was founded by its current treasurer, Sam Ajiri, a graduate student in agricultural engineering. Co-chairmen of the group are John Barbaro, a graduate student in Education, and Steve Sankey of the Northampton School for Girls.

In an interview with the DAILY COLLEGIAN, Ajiri explained that the Relief Services Foundation "in no way duplicates or conflicts with other organizations such as the World Council of Churches and the Catholic Relief Services." The Foundation is a separate organization primarily interested in the future aspects of Biafran development, rather than the sending of foods and drugs.

Volunteers are urgently needed by the foundation. Interested persons should call Sam Ajiri at 545-0781.

Petition Asks For Nat'l Holiday

Last week, the Martin Luther King Jr. Social Action Council received a petition from the Southern Christian Leadership Conference. It apparently is being circulated around the country, asking the President and Congress to make January 15, the birthday of the Rev. Martin Luther King, Jr., a national legal holiday.

To collect signatures, the King Council and Afro-Am will have a table set up in the Student Union Lobby from 8 to 5 on Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday of this week. People who would like to help by circulating the petition through dorms or dining commons may pick up copies at the table. All petitions should be returned to the King Council office in 207 Hampshire House no later than 5:00 p.m. Monday, March 17.

The petition reads as follows: "To the President and Congress of the United States of America: We, the undersigned, do hereby petition you to use the influence and instrument of your good offices to immediately pass legislation making January 15th a National Legal Holiday in memory and in honor of that great American and world statesman, Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr."

All students, faculty, staff and administrators are invited to add their names to the petition.

Space Reserved In F Lot

As of Wed. March 12, the first five rows of the F parking lot will be reserved for staff and visitor parking only. The Ad Hoc committee on parking and traffic requests your cooperation. Signs will be posted to indicate the area for staff, visitors, and student vehicles.

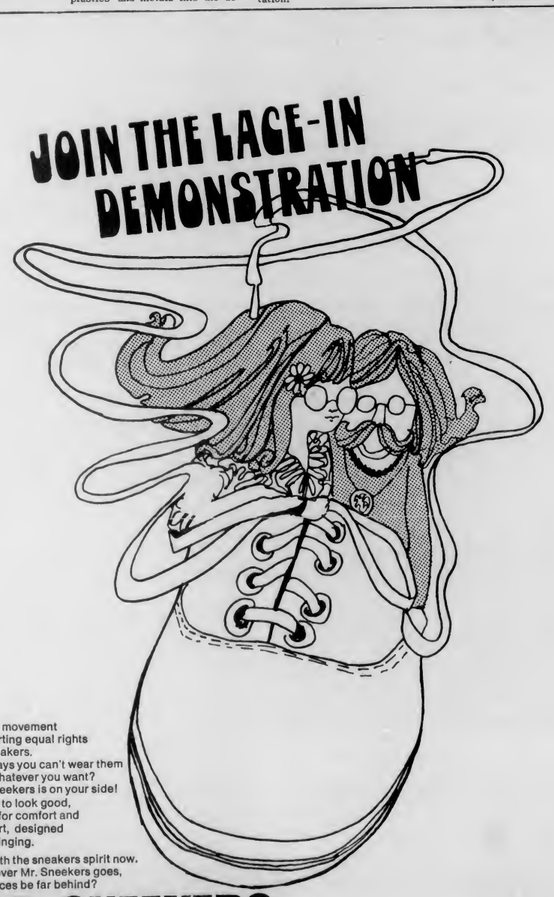
Project Themis Continues Study Of Underwater Vessels and Life

By BOB GROSCIMINSKI
Staff Reporter

Since Project Themis got its start at UMass in 1966, 20 scientists and 50 student s have plumbed new depths in a continuing study of submersible vessels.

UMass is one of 40 institutions awarded contracts by the Department of Defense to do basic research and at the same time establish a new "center of excellence" in engineering education. The 40 institutions were chosen from a field of 171 United States colleges which were competing for a share of the $70 million Project Themis funds.



By tracing the movements and feeding habits of fish with submarines, men might soon create underwater farms where schools of fish may be herded, protected from predators, and bred to give the largest amount of meat in the shortest possible time. In the future, submarine passenger and cargo vessels may ride the oceanic highways, safe from storms as the result of studies carried out at UMass.

According to School of Engineering Dean K. G. Picha, a probable result of the basic research project at the University will be to offer degrees in the newly-developed academic discipline of Ocean Engineering.

Prime movers of Project Themis at UMass are Dean Picha as project manager, and Dr. Charles Carver as technical manager. The submarine specialist of the Themis project at the Amherst campus is Professor W. Heronemus, Capt., U. S. N. Ret. a naval architect and submarine designer.

Two chemists, Dr. Lenz and Dr. McKnight, are experimenting with devices which will catalyze plastics and metals into the desired polymers. They are experimenting with lightweight plastic foam to replace the volatile petroleum products now being used as flotation materia l in deep-diving vessels. If a new plastic can be developed, it could change radically the design and structure of the experimental submarines, say Lenz and McKnight.

Meanwhile, since new propulsion systems are also needed to move undersea vehicles at low speeds or to hold the craft stationary against the current, Dr. S. Murthy is experimenting with tiny magnetic particles suspended in a gelatinous colloid which, when subjected to a magnetic field, will pass through turbine blades and recycle to be used again. The strength of the magnetic field could be varied, which would in turn vary the speed of the propeller's rotation.

Industry to Serve As Training Area

Amherst, Mass. - An in-plant industrial educational method called Micro Step Skill Training is the subject of a special article currently available from the Commonwealth Technical Resource Service (COMTECH) at UMass.

The article, "A View of Industry as an Educational Resource of Vast Potential," is part of the COMTECH Timely Topic Series a project of the state technical services program administered at the UMass School of Engineering and supported by state and federal funds. It was written by Werner E. Elsberg, senior industrial associate for Behavioral Service Consultants in West Stockbridge, Mass.

Under the Mircro Step method, factories serve as educational as well as training centers, developing an in-plant, non-school education for workers.

Limited copies of the article are available upon request from COMTECH, Dept. PR, School of Engineering, University of Massachusetts, Amherst 01002.

Businessmen Warned Of Travel Cautions

LONDON, March 6 - The British Government is bluntly warning businessmen who travel to Communist countries against sexual adventures or other personal indiscretions that may lead to blackmail and eventual recruitment by enemy espionage networks.

The warnings are in a five-page pamphlet, "Security Advice about Visits to Communist Countries," which is being issued to traveling businessmen by the Board of Trade.

Increased business and other contacts between Western and Eastern Europe are " a most welcome development," the pamphlet says.

Project 10: Past, Present, Future

College Education as Total Experience Is the Goal of Project 10 Community

By ROSE L. MILLER
Staff Reporter

(Editor's Note: The following article is the first of a two part series.)

Porject 10 has been functioning for the past year, but the general campus community seems to still wonder what it really is out to accomplish. Some members of campus do not have the faintest idea what its unique qualities are; if one asks its members or originators, the answers usually given are "a sense of community" and "to develop a more creative type of student," but no one has bothered to ask, rathe r rash judgments and rumors have spread. This is the story of Project 10, as described by its Head of Residences and Undergraduate Teaching Assistants.

To begin at the beginning, with any project there is a catalyst, in this case, it was John Hunt, the present Master of Southwest and Mannie White, presently a UTA in Moore House, envisioning a college education as a total experience based on the belief that students should to a certain degree be able to decide the content and hoping to put the classroom experience in a social context. The ingredients, the availability of two dorms to house the new endeavor, and the willingness of others to help forge a new road in UMass' development, add 260 students and the experiment, Project 10, becomes a reality.

Summer orientation started the job of organizing 2 nto working entity. Mrs. Walter Silva, Head of Residence at Pierpont, described how the use of facilitator-method quickened the process of getting to know students. One student interviews the other student and in this team of two, the student just interviewed, in turn, interviews the former interviewee. In this way, along with group discussion at the end of the dual sessions, interest groups and activities were beginning to shape up for September.

In September, the problems of setting up a co-existence between Project 10 gals of Pierpont and the Project 10 guys of Moore House were tackled. The solution decided upon was a town meeting type of government instead of the usual executive committee and various other separate dormitory committees. The town meeting has a moderator who is elected for a monthly term, and a town meeting can be called by any student who has an issue of dorm importance, which he wishes to present for discussion and voting. Voting is by secret ballot and is taken 24 hour s after the town meeting in order to insure further debate and thought on the matter. Mrs. Silva explained that each faculty member involved in the Project, as well as Heads of Residences, has one vote, or an equal voice, as does the student himself.

S.U. Members To Attend Meeting

Three members of the Student Union staff and two SUG Board members are planning to fly to Denver, Colo. to attend the convention of the Association of College Unions - International at the Denver-Hilton Hotel, March 23-26.

They are Warren T. Grinnan, manager of the Student Union - Campus Center; Gerald Scanlon, assistant dean of students - coordinator of student activities; Mrs. Robert Frey, student activities program adviser; Miss Susan Brady and Sander Ross, chairman and chairman-elect of the SUG Board, respectively.

The ACU-I membership includes most of the U.S. colleges and universities. Mrs. Frey told MDC that the purpose of holding the convention n is to bring its members together to exchange thoughts, experiences and ideas. The two SUG board members are attending to compare UMass programs and policies with other colleges of comparable enrollment and facilities. They would also like to discuss problems that might be encountered with the future opening of the new Campus Center, they said.

Scanlon explains that the convention will have three or four main speakers to open the four-day event. The topic that will take priority at the 1969 convention will deal with student unrest on college campuses. He also notes that besides participation in the formal proceedings of the convention, "one of the most beneficial aspects of the trip will be the chance for all professionals to meet one another on an informal basis where they are able to relax and just talk in general about their jobs and some of the problems they have encountered.'

Supreme Court Refuses To Hear Students' Case

WASHINGTON (CPS-TELEX) - The Supreme Court Monday refused to hear the case of 10 students suspended from Bluefield (W. Va.) State College who had challenged the school's right to punish them for off-campus protests without full due process.

An opinion by Justice Abe Fortas, the only elaboration, said the Bluefield students had been suspended for "violent and destructive interference with the rights of others," contrasted with the "peaceful, non-disruptive expression" upheld by the court two weeks ago.

The students were suspended in 1967 after participating in a protest march and allegedly making threats to the school president. They contended in a brief that full procedural safeguards had not been observed by the school during disciplinary proceedings.

The Bluefield campus was hit by bombs this year.

In another case, the high court vindicated black comedian - civil rights organizer Dick Gregory and 39 others who had been arrested for disorderly conduct when they refused to end a march around the home of Chicago Mayor Richard J. Daley in 1965. Police had said they feared a riot. Chief Justice Earl Warren, in striking down the conviction, said there simply was no evidence that the demonstrators had been disorderly.

Another decision overturned the conviction of the Rev. Fred L. Shuttlesworth of Cincinnati for parading without a permit during the 1963 Easter marches in Birmingham, Ala.

Frosh Grapplers Capture Second Straight N.E. Title

Reynolds, Jester, Mignocci and James Score Firsts

by BOB GANLEY
Staff Reporter

The UMass freshmen wrestlers won four individual championships and two second places as they won the New England championship last Saturday at Worcester Polytechnical Institute. It was the second year in a row that the Little Redmen have won the crown as last year's frosh moved up to varsity level this year and placed third.

The frosh defeated rival Springfield College and also avenged their only loss in New England by placing ahead of Central Connecticut.

Leading the Little Redmen in triumph were individual winners Dave Reynolds, Clay Jester, Kent Mignocci and Derwood James.

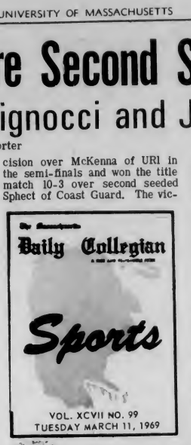
Reynolds breezed through the 123 pound class. He defeated Noonan of Brandeis 5-2, and pinned White of Wesleyan in the semi-finals. In the final on Saturday afternoon, Dave scored a quick victory when he pinned Garber of UConn at 2:49.

Clay Jester gave the frosh their second champ when he won the 137 pound class. Clay pinned Silva of Rhode Island College in the quarter finals and won by an easy decision over Wesleyan's Halsey in the semis. Clay had to work hard for the title, however, as he edged Madsen of Springfield in the final by a 2-1 score.

Kent Mignocci won the 167 pound class by defeating Musser of Dartmouth and Orciani of Springfield as he worked his way to the final. In the title bout he squeezed by Gavin of Wesleyan, 2-0, in a very close match.

In the 191 pound division, top seeded Derwood James came through as predicted to give the Redmen their final champion. He had a tough opening match with Sieg of Springfield. They tied 1-1 in regulation and than James won by default in overtime when Sieg hurt his shoulder.

Derwood then won an easy decision over McKenna of URI in the semi-finals and won the title match 10-3 over second seeded Sphect of Coast Guard. The victories gave James a 14-0 record for the season. Reynolds and Jester finished the season with one defeat each.



UMass lost another probable champion when undefeated Sheldon Goldbert was unable to wrestle due to a knee injury. Dave Thone took his place in the 130 pound class, but couldn't get by the first round.

Jim Godkin, a 152-pounder, and heavyweight Carl Dambman reached the finals before losing, and picked up valuable points for UMass. Godkin knocked off Lowell Tech's Bauch and Beers of Wesleyan in the preliminaries, and he defeated Hageman of Brown in the semis. However, in the final, he got caught in a cradle position and was pinned by Gayosh of Springfield. It was only the second loss for Jim on the year.

Dambman had to fight in every match en route to the finals. Carl edged Pritchard of Dartmouth on a split decision of the referees as they tied in regulation and again in overtime. He defeated Hooks of Connecticut in the semifinals, 5-4, but his good fortune ran out in the final. He ran into Sklaver of Amherst, a very impressive heavyweight, and lost a 12-2 decision.

Rod Loiselle, at 177 pounds, won an overtime bout from Podojil of UConn, but couldn't get by Peachy of Bowdoin in the semifinals. Rod had to use all of his energy in his first match and didn't have enough left in his second match.

Larry Piccioli lost his first 160 pound match by a 10-9 score to DeFazio of Wesleyan, after being ahead 9-4 in the third period. Other preliminary losers were 115-pounder Barry Godowsky and 145-man Steve Jones.

Skiers Are 2nd in NEISC After Edging Northeastern

Outlasting Northeastern University in a late season struggle, UMass skiers captured second place in the N.E.I.S.C. The Redmen gave a good team effort in finishing behind conference champion Amherst College.

Northeastern, which loomed as a possible threat for second place honors, came apart at the seams. Five of their six skiers crashed, thus making it no contest for UMass.

Coach William P. MacConnell's "backwoods philosophy" deserves some notice as a factor in the team effort. Under the knowledge of having him break out his steel-toed kicking shoes if anyone fell, the Redmen finally overcame the inconsistency that has plagued them and turned in their best performance since the Dartmouth meet.

Dave Kamila placed third in the 45-gate giant slalom. The winning time by Don Marsh of Tufts was ten seconds faster than last year's time over the same terrain.

It was the third consecutive year that Marsh posted the fastest time in this race. Peter Flaccus of Amherst was second.

Although coach MacConnell will miss Co-captains Dick McHugh and Kamila, he was heartened by the performance of two sophomores, Ted Martin and Goober Curran.

Both of these rookies wrapped up their first season with good runs and will be called upon to provide a nucleus of talent in next year's campaign.

UMass Bowlers Dominate Tournament

UMass bowlers dominated the action at the Annual Trinity College Tournament of Champions, held last Saturday at Hartford.

Over 150 bowlers represented 30 New England college teams. The UMass team members were captain, Gary Damon, John Quinn, Bruce Allen and Frank Lentine.

Competition consisted of three events of three games each. The three events were singles, doubles and team competition, with an all-events trophy being awarded to the man achieving the highest score over the full nine games.

The morning action saw Brigham and Quinn notch a third place finish in the doubles event, highlighted by Quinn's 671 series. The 671 was a result of individual games of 223, 181 and 267. In the 267 game Quinn had ten strikes out of a possible 12.

In singles competition Allen and Brigham finished eighth and ninth respectively, both averaging close to 200 for the three-game set.

In the team event the Redmen bowlers left no doubt as to their superiority. They rolled individual games of 932, 985 and 878 for a 2794 series, an average of over 186 per man. The team effort was sparked by Quinn's 263, Brigham's 255 and Damon's 229.

Finally Quinn captured the all-events championship and was awarded his trophy. His total score for the nine games was 1816 for an average of 202.

UMass is traveling to Lowell on March 23 and Providence, R. I. on April 4, for upcoming tournaments. It is expected that they will make good showings as they have not finished lower than third since last November.

Redmen Riflemen Tip WPI In Championship Tilt

On Saturday the UMass riflemen travelled to Worcester to decide the championship of the New England Rifle League Southern Division. Both UMass and W.P.I. were unbeaten in the division and this was the final match.

W.P.I. shot their highest score of the season but still fell short of a strong team of Redmen, 1247 to 1271. UMass thus gained first place in the division with an unbeaten record for the second year in a row. W.P.I. by coming in second, joined UMass in the New England finals at M.I.T. in April.

High man in the match was UMass sophomore Bern Armata, with a fine 258 out of 300. Strongly backing up Armata was captain John Lacouture with 257. John has been outstanding all season for the Redmen and his average of 264 should place him high in the New England individual championship.

The W.P.I. match was the last regular season contest for the riflemen and gave them a record of 9-0, their best ever. On the average, they outshot their opponents by 102 points.

McCovey, Marichal Close to Signing
Giant Stars Seek Giant Salaries

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) - Willie McCovey, who revealed that he is asking for a three-year contract, and Juan Marichal, still dickering about the "plus" on his $100,000-plus contract, remained holdouts at the San Francisco Giants' spring training camp Monday, but both said they were close to signing.

McCovey, who led the National League with 36 home runs, 135 runs batted in and a .545 slugging average in 1968, finished a two-year contract that called for $60,000 per season and is now aiming for the highly-unusual three-year pact.

McCovey wouldn't reveal his asking price, but said of reports that it is $75,000, "I wouldn't even attempt to play for that."

He said, "I want the security. If I sign a one-year contract and have the same kind of year I had last year, I'll be in a position to make more money than anyone on this club. I'm taking a chance asking for a longer one."

Willie Mays is the highest paid Giant with a $125,000 pact.

McCovey said he and Giants' vice president Chub Feeney had come fairly close to an agreement on a contract in a meeting Sunday, but didn't lessen the gap any in a brief meeting Monday before the Giants' exhibition game with the Chicago Cubs here was rained out.

"We're about $5,000 and one year apart," McCovey said. "He said he's gone as far as he is authorized to go. I guess he'll have to get authorization to go higher."

Marichal, who led National League pitchers with 26 victories, also said he and Feeney were close to agreement. Marichal received a reported $100,000 last year.

"I think everything is going to work out," Marichal said. "We're not too far apart. I didn't ask for more than I wanted at the start. I think they understand that."

Marichal said he was not interested in a long term contract and indicated he was not asking for as much money as Mays gets.

"Willie's been a great star for 18 years," Marichal said. "I know he brings people into the park. But I think I bring some in, too. I think 26 wins is worth something too."

Senate Committee will Present Petition to Raise Student Wages

By MARK SILVERMAN
News Editor

A subcommittee of the Student Senate Services Committee, will present a petition signed by 1136 student workers, calling for an increase in the minimum student worker's wage to $1.60 an hour, to the Student Senate and to members of the Administration.

Calling itself SORE (Student Organization Regarding Employment), the subcommittee will present its proposal to the Senate Services Committee at its meeting Thursday at 8:00 in the Norfolk room of the Student Union. Spokesmen for the group say they will speak with several Administrators early next week.

HERE ARE SOME of the petitions containing 1136 signatures of student workers. The signers want to increase the student wage from $1.30 an hour to $1.60 an hour as do non-student workers. (MDC photo by Bill Dickinson).

Senator Mark Brenner explained, "We are not demanding anything which could be considered less than necessary. . .the wage we are seeking is a basic right."

He went on to say, "There is now a $1.30 an hour minimum for student workers, but non-student workers at the University receive a $1.60 an hour wage. . .this discriminates against students.'

It was pointed out that this wage scale follows U. S. minimum wage standards which prescribe $1.30 wage for students and $1.60 for all other workers.

"However", Brenner added, "there is no reason for the University to follow a basically unjust federal policy."

The University plans to raise the student minimum to $1.45 an hour, effective next September, but this, Brenner, argued, "still does not make all campus workers equal."

Student workers' signatures on the petition were obtained in the pay line at Whitmore Friday. The petition read in full, "We, the undersigned student workers, believe that the $1.30/hr. campus minimum wage is not an eqitable wage, and are in favor of a 30¢ increase in the present University rate to $1.60/hr. by September."

Provost Allen Cites Possibilities For New Student Initiated Courses

By RICHARD W. STORY
Education Editor

Associate Provost Jeremiah Allen was the guest of the King Council yesterday, at their regular Tuesday noon coffee hour. Provost Allen responded to questions ranging from student-initiated courses to life-spans of university presidents.

On the subject of new degree programs and student-initiated courses, Allen has some encouragement to offer as regards existing machinery for special course material. While authority for approving entire degree programs remains with the University Trustees, there is presently some appreciable freedom for designing particular study programs through the provisions of the "Special problems" number available in many departments.

The avenue of "Special problems" courses is available now to any student who can find a faculty member willing to undertake the direction of such a custom-made course. This approach would be valuable for integrating small amounts of special study into regular degree programs.

The path of course creation and submission is also open, technically speaking, to student-initiated course proposals. While this method of establishing a new course has seldom, if ever, been used by students, there is presently nothing which would bar the creation and presentation of a formal course proposal by students. Such a proposal would be heard up through the established channels; and the proposal, if well supported, might stand a fair chance of acceptance.

Responding to questions about the appointment of an acting dean for Arts and Sciences, Provost Allen indicated that he rather expected a decision this week. At the time of his consultation with student groups last week, Provost Tippo felt that a decision would be made within a week - that deadline is slightly past now; but Allen felt that it would not be too much longer before the appointment was announced.

Student unrest is a factor contributing to a marked lowering of college and university presidential life-spans in these times, said Allen. He reported one recent study which tended to indicate that at least one way to lessen chances of student protest would be to deny admittance to any applicant with an SAT score above 450. This seems to run counter to what faculty have been urging over the years, however.

Provost Allen concluded his two hour discussion by responding to questions about the foreign language requirement in Arts and Sciences. He reported that an ad hoc committee created last fall has now reported to the Dean's office, recommending the continuance of the present language requirement. Speaking personally, Allen thought that a somewhat better case could be built for a language requirement by phrasing the requirement more strictly in terms of individual departmental programs

Committee for Univ. Forum To Hold Open Meeting Sun.

The Committee for a University Forum will hold an open meeting Sunday in Mahar at 3:00 for discussion of required courses and curriculum changes.

The Committee is organized to promote a "peaceful revolution", defined by Forum members as a "meaningful dialogue with students, faculty and administrators on such matters as curriculum changes, the military-industrial complex, and student life in general."

The Committee holds regular meetings ever Monday and Thursday nights in Thatcher house in the Quad.

Temporary University housing will be available on a limited scale to residents who have legitimate reasons for requesting accommodations for spring vacation, March 22 - 30.

Students who need housing accommodations must make an appointment in the Central Area Coordinator's Office in Baker House (545-2041) prior to 5:00 p.m. Monday, March 17, 1969.

Sirhan Said Incapable Of Premeditated Malice

LOS ANGELES (AP) - A defense psychologist said Tuesday that Sirhan Bishara Sirhan lacked the mental capacity to premeditate the assassination of Sen. Robert F. Kennedy with malice aforethought.

Premeditation and malice are required to convict the 24-year-old Jordanian Arab of murder, which carries the maximum penalty of death.

Dr. Matin Schorr wound up a long analysis of Sirhan by describing him as a Jekyll and Hyde personality - "one personality doesn't know the other exists and vice-versa."

Earlier the psychologist testified that Sirhan re-enacted in his mind's eye the assassination of Kennedy but with a different target - Moshe Dayan, Israeli war hero.

Dayan, now Israel's defense minister, was the hero of the 1967 Israeli military victory over the Arabs, a victory Sirhan testified left him deeply distrubed. The defendant has told of being angry at Kennedy for a campaign declaration by the senator that he would sell jet fighters to Israel.

'Silent Majority' Favors Present Recruitment Policy

By KEITH M. BROMERY
Executive Editor

Nearly half of the students participating in the Daily Collegian's referendum on open recruitment Monday and Tuesday declared themselves in favor of unlimited open recruitment.

Out of a total of 1490 students who voted, 694 felt that the University's present policy of unrestricted open recruitment was all right as is. A number almost as large, 442, voted to allow open recruitment for all groups except such quasi-subversive groups as the Nazi party or the Klu Klux Klan.

By and large only a small percentage, 16%, of those who participated felt that no recruiting of any kind should be allowed.

The forum was conducted in order to establish the true sentiment of the campus to the question of open recruitment. "I thought the turnout was very representative," said Mark Siverman, News Editor of the DAILY COLLEGIAN. "With almost a 10% turnout of the campus, I believe that we have established a basis from which to see exactly where this campus stands regarding on-campus recruitment."

Collegian Editor-in-Chief, Donald Epstein, commented, that the vote "clearly represents the view that the students on this campus want it to remain an open campus." He stated further that the turnout of people demonstrates that the "so-called silent majority on this campus wants to continue the present policy of allowing any organization to come to the campus for purposes of recruitment."

THE NEWS IN BRIEF

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) - Mission control is staying with plans to bring Apollo 9 home on target and on schedule Thursday, despite astronaut worry over churning seas and the chance of one of the roughest landings to date.

(AP) - Reactions to a President Nixon statement indicate that the possibility the United States may name an envoy to the Vatican isn't as controversial as it used to be.

CORONADO, Calif. (AP) - The USS Pueblo's skipper, Cmdr. Lloyd M. Bucher, said Tuesday his crew lacked proper training on the U. S. Code of Conduct for men taken prisoners - and that he had had none at all.

VIETNAM (AP) - The North Vietnamese sprang three attacks northwest of Saigon. U. S. officers say a new phase of the enemy offensive is under way.

Project 10 Makes Plans for 1969 150 Freshmen Expected to Enroll

By ROSE MILLER
Staff Reporter

The freshmen who volunteered for Project 10 were not thrown into the program without consultants. The Undergraduate Teaching Resident (UTR), besides performing the regular duties ascribed to a dormitory counselor, provides the vital linkup between student and faculty, classroom and dorm.

The UTR must attend one of the Project's classes, do the assigned course work, though not taking the exams, and set up outside activities related to course work.

To illustrate what an open approach to education can mean to creativity, Mrs. James Leheny, Head of Residence in Moore House, discussed her husband's last semester English 113 class. Originally scheduled to be a early morning class, the students and her husband felt more could be accomplished in a night class. The night class turned out to be a better arrangement showing an improved attendance and enthusiasm. The group at first was too large to work effectively, so it was decided to split into two smaller separate groups. The smaller unit was so creative that it produces a film a spoof of Project 10. In another English class, students suggested comparing modern drama, not assigned as the usual 127 course, with the syllabus of Greek drama. These are but a few examples of creativity fostered in Project 10's atmosphere.

SW Patriots Will Expand on Cultural And Academic Lines

By ANNE HILLERMAN
Staff Reporter

A plan to revamp the Southwest patriots into an organization geared along cultural and academic lines is currently underway in Southwest.

"We want to expand the whole idea of the patriots," said spokeswoman Patti Cruiskshank, " and use the organization to build up a true residential spirit among the students living in Southwest."

Under the new proposals the patriots will sponsor a wider variety of activities, including such things as a speaker series, Sunday afternoon concerts and guest performances and ever an area Brother-Sister Dorm college bowl. The patriots hope to enlarge the Freshman orientation program which they began this year.

"We'd like to give incoming students not only a look at the buildings but an introduction to campus personalities and issues. The organization will continue its promotion of intermural sports and the nightclub they sponsor, The Glass Onion.

A meeting is scheduled tonight in Southwest for all prospective new patriots and for regular members. Saturday the patriots will present their Glass Onion in Hamden Commons. All interested people are invited to come and see for themselves what the patriots are up to.

"We are looking for people with ideas and enthusiasm who are willing to work hard," Miss Cruiskshank said. "The patriots are going to become a real moving force in Southwest."

Militants Moving Between Campuses May be Prosecuted

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Justice Department said Tuesday it plans to prosecute militants who allegedly travel from campus to campus to foment disturbances among college students.

Asst. Atty. Gen. Jerris Leonard said investigations have produced evidence of "individuals and organizations" who may have violated federal laws against crossing state lines to incite riots.

As an example, the spokesman cited Atty. Gen. John N. Mitchell's intervention last month in grand jury action against both civilians and policemen involved in violence during the Democratic National Convention in Chicago.

Leonard would not identify the persons and organizations he says have been responsible for much of this winter's college unrest.

But he contended there are adequate grounds, once investigations are completed, for prosecution under the antiriot section of the 1968 Civil Rights Act.

Northampton Volunteers Focus on Resocialization of Patients

By MARGARET ANDREWS
Staff Reporter

Imagine yourself in a room. It is a crowded room because there are about forty others in the room with you. The walls are painted, but bare. The only pieces of furniture are chairs lined against the walls and two round, wooden tables at one end of the rectangular room. The room is very hot, but you must spend most of your day in this room. You look outside through the bars on the windows and cannot remember what it is like to walk in the fresh air. You have spent five, ten or perhaps twenty years of your life here.

Every Wednesday night, a busload of UMass students enters this world, as volunteers to the Northampton State Hospital. The UMass Volunteer program is part of a nine-college program, organized in 1961. AIC, Smith, Amherst, Mount Holyoke, Greenfield Community College, Our Lady of the Elms, and Northampton Commercial College are the other participating schools.

There are four types of programs which a Northampton Volunteer may take part in; the ward activity program on Wednesday nights or the case aide, arts and crafts or music programs on weekdays.

Most volumteers take part in the ward program. After orientation, which includes a tour of the hospital and a discussion period, the students begin to work with the patients on the wards. There are nine women's and three men's wards in Memorial Building where volunteers work at Northampton. Students choose the ward they want to work on. Two of the women's wards are closed but the others are all open door.

The job of student volunteers is basically to become friends with the patients. For many patients, the volunteers are the only visitors they receive. Patients stay up later than usual for the volunteers' visit; the day begins at 5:30 a.m. in the hospital and normal bedtime is 8:00.

A cooking project has recently been organized as well as plans for a variety show. Patients from each ward who have a talent to offer are being organized for a show which will be presented to all the patients on May 1.

In addition to working with several patients on a ward, a volunteer may assist an individual patient during the week. Case Aide requires a large amount of preparation on the volunteer's part and he must have previously participated in the ward activity program and must provide his own transportation to qualify.

In the Arts and Crafts program, students help an occupational therapist with projects which the patients use in development of manual skills and social responsibility.

In the music project, students share whatever musical talents they have with patients under supervision of a music therapist, teaching appreciation of music, instruments or giving voice lessons.

The ultimate goal of the volunteer program is resocialization of the patients. It is often difficult for a student to tell whether or not he is helping the patients, according to participants, but Mr. Button, a hospital supervisor, said the staff who sees the patients for forty hour s a week can observe definite changes for the better in the patients.

In the school year of 1966-67 the organization began receiving funds from RSO. In 1968 the entire nine-college volunteer program received the Lane Bryant Award, a citation given to four individuals and four groups.

According to Button, the total enrollment in the nine-college program has remained at about 280 since it was initiated. This figure averages out to about 30 regular volunteers for UMass.

Campus Comment

FROM OUR SIDE

Referendum Apathy

What significance have the fourteen hundred and ninety votes cast in Monday and Tuesday'2 on-campus recruiting referendum? A quick glance at the results reveals over two thirds of the ballots being cast in favor of propositions one and two, making it quite evident that most students are in favor of open recruitment by members of the military-industrial complex. In fact, nearly seven hundred votes were for proposition one, for open recruitment in its purest state, with any organization being allowed if it is willing to comply with standard procedures. The general outcome, however, was hardly what one could call unexpected.

Let's take a look at the poll from another angle, reading it in a different light. Not as nine groups of votes (the ninth being write-ins and comments) expressing nine opinions, but in its bulk form. Fourteen hundred and ninety ballots representing fourteen hundred and ninety undergraduate students who bothered to vote. In comparison to last year's Vietnam referendum one would have to classify this as a success. However, would this comparison change if the number of ballots cast was to be contrasted with the undergraduate enrollment of over eleven thousand? It now takes on the appearance of less than fifteen per cent of the undergraduate student body. Hardly a turnout to brag about.

Now, who can we find to blame for this?' The Collegian, perhaps? For what? For starting a publicity campaign some two weeks an advance of the referendum. For conducting it over a two day period, eight hours each day. No, the blame belongs elsewhere. The Fickle Finger of Fate Award goes to those nearly two thousand students who have opinions on everything, but can' be bothered with such trivia as stopping to vote. I say "stopping", because most of them must have been in the immediate vicinity of the Student Union at least once during the two day period. Today they're probably talking about how "we" showed "those hippies". One wonders what would have happened if "those hippies" had shown "them", if the results of the referendum had been the opposite. We'll probably never know. It always seems that the apathetic ones are in the majority, that someone comes through and is willing to be bothered for something he considers to be of value. Everyone's luck runs out sooner or later, their's will too. Hopefully they'll wake up before it's too late.

The Dow Debate

Two thoughts remain plagueing me after last Thursday's Dow "Debate' . The first one was the attitude of the Dow representative, Dean Wakefield, I became immediately apparent after his "lengthy" opening statement that he was of the attitude that it was useless to debate when the students already had their minds made up. His answers, therefore, were short and with little explanation. Reflective of the statement that he made in the middle of the debate, that he wasn't here to justify Dow or Napalm. Apparently my conception of the purpose of the de..ate and his were different. I'm sure that many students came as I did, wanting to find out the why's of both sides. Those of us who did, ..t disappointed.

My disappointment was doubled by the displays of immaturity put on by members of the audience, two in particular. In interrupting speakers who held different opinions than their own, they displayed the maturity of two year olds. How can one expect world peace when he refuses to accord a person the respect and rights due him in a mere debate. Their arguments, even though good, seemed to lose something in light of their actions.

Two suggestions for the next debate. Get a representative who's not afraid to discuss the issues and hear him out. Who knows, maybe there will be some valid points in his arguments.

Democratic Drill Team Investigate

To the editor:

See the Debate with Dow. It is a democratic discussion. See the students against open-recruitment. They want intelligent discussion of the issues. See them wave their anti-war signs. They are democratic. See them call the administration and Dow liars. They are so tactful. See the other student. He is wearing a jacket and tie. Hear him say he believes open recruitment is right. See the students against open-recruitment. Hear them snicker, jeer and cut the student off. They only want their side heard. They are democratic?

Ronald D. Kurtzman

Gratitude

To the editor:

In the beginning of this semester I went to my first class of English 135 and was told "this section (the only 135) is cancelled because only 17 enrolled" - only 17. So with buff, green, and yellow cards I ran around for 5 days till I got into a section of 136 (without having the prerequisite) with the instructor being Professor Lowance. This class being the proper size of 42 students, the English Department saw fit to provide it with one of its 98 faculty members. Professor Lowance split the class into two equal sessions to provide a smaller and more informal class. He is giving up his Tuesday nights for the other half of the class with out extra pay or compensation, other than the fact that some student might get turned on with English.

No words can express the gratitude which all students have for a man of this sort, one who feels that 17 is a proper number, one who feels that English can involve the student, and one who feels that a teacher has an obligation to do more than he has to. Professor Lowance is a vibrant, dynamic, and sensitive individual in spite of the Department he works for.

Reasons

To the editor:

Professor Ware's recent letter to your paper regarding improprieties in the History Department makes it imperative that Mr. Potash publicly state his reasons for having terminated the contracts of seven of his faculty effective this September.

The impression I have received is that they were fired for trying to reform certain onerous aspects of Mr. Potash's regime. Furthermore, I happen to have audited a history course last term taught by one of the seven. I found him to be an exceptionally good lecturer.

Mr. Potash should be required to account for the curious rationale behind his decision to eliminate these men.

Stephen Boyle

To the editor:

For the past two years, the Flying Redmen Drill Team has worked to overcome the apparent stigma of affiliation with ROTC and to win support from the student body. We are no longer affiliated in any way with the departments of Military Science or Aerospace Studies, except as they are willing to remain as our advisors and allow us to use their office space. Approximately one-half of the team is not now enrolled in an ROTC course.

Since we don't work for the ROTC departments on campus, then what do we do? We represent the University at drill meets along the east coast, in much the same manner as our football and basketball teams represent us. The Flying Redmen also perform in parades to spread the name and good standing of our school.

Winning competitions is no easier for us than winning is for any other University team. We spend long hours practicing every week to prepare our drill routine. The staff, besides marching, puts in a great deal of time planning and making arrangements for trips, as well as making almost half the money we spend to go to the competitions.

This year we are entered in five competitions and three parades. We already won a first place trophy in the first competition we entered in Buffalo. We have a winning team and a winning routine, but no student support.

Besides representing the University in competitions, the Flying Redmen are also interested in showing the University what we can do. We march at football and basketball games. This Thursday, March 13 at 8:30 in the Colonial Lounge of the Student Union, the Flying Redmen are sponsoring a coffee hour to promote interest in our organization and explain our purpose and scope of activities. We hope the student body will be interested enough to come and give us its support.

Real Men?

To the editor:

Concerning Peter Horton's letter which appeared in the Collegian on the 27th of February.

I love your real men, Peter. They're the kind our country is famous for. Two broken windows do not equal these damned crazy thinkers!

KARLA BONDRIK

To the editor:

On Monday, we were informed that the quotation in the Madame La Farge editorial (Friday, March 7) was not intended "to quote any particular member of the Ad Hoc Committee to End Military-Industrial Recruitment, nor any publication of the group." The question which immediately comes to mind is how did that editorial come to be written and why was it written? If the statement, "I have a list of companies in my hand" was not a quote, why was it in quotation marks. If the quotation was not intended to be from the Ad Hoc Committee, why was the name of the committee so closely juxtaposed to the quotation? Are the COLLEGIAN editors in the habit of making up quotes for people? In any case, the Madame La Farge editorial represents a new low in the history of collegiate journalism.

A question of another order is why was this made-up quotation juxtaposed to the famous statement of Joe McCarthy. The intent would seem to be to at least compare the Ad Hoc Committee with McCarthy. If not why were the quotations juxtaposed? In fact, the intent would seem to be to charge the Ad Hoc Committee with McCarthyism. But the Collegian tells us the Ad Hoc Committee WASN'T BEING QUOTED. It seems clear that it is the COLLEGIAN Editors who have adopted a technique tried and tested by Senator Joe McCarthy, a technique commonly known as a smear.

I further want to accuse the editors of simple bad faith. I was assured on Friday that the explanation of the La Farge editorial would be entitled "An Apology." No such apology was given by the COLLEGIAN editors. The explanation was entitled "Note." If the COLLEGIAN wishes to make clear that the La Farge Editorial was not a deliberate smear, they should print their apology with the same prominence given to the original editorial.

The editors breech of every journalistic code warrants a full scale investigation by the Student Senate. One hopes the Senate will not linger in beginning.

Sid Finehirsh

Guest Soloist to Play Hard Trombone Concerto

Larry Weed, guest soloist of the University of Massachusetts Symphony Band, will perform in a piece entitled CONCERTO FOR TROMBONE by Gordon Jacob at a concert given on the 16th of March at 3:00 p.m. in Bowker Auditorium. The CONCERT FOR TROMBONE was written in 1956 for Denis Wick, the principal trombonist of the London Philharmonic Orchestra. It is a three-movement work demanding a four octave range from a normally two and one half octave instrument and a wide variety of articulations, playing styles and dynamic contrasts. It ran ks as one of the three most difficult trombone concertos.

Mr. Weed received his B.M. at Oklahoma City University and was elected to Who's Who in American Colleges and Universities, his M.M. at Eastman School of Music, University of Rochester, New York, and is presently working on his Ph.D. at the University of Michigan.

Previously Mr. Weed has played with such groups as the Oklahoma City Symphone, Eastman Wind Ensemble Institute, Eastman Philharmonia, American Wind Symphony, Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania. Poetry Recitation Concerned with Inner City Blacks

Lucille Clifton will read her poems at Mahar Auditorium tonight at 8:15 p.m. Mrs. Clifton is the third poet to appear in the current Fine Arts Council Spring Poetry Festival. Her subjects are black men and women living in the inner city; her theme is endurance, and the staying power of the black community. Her book, good times, will be published by Random House in November. Sixteen of the poems will appear in the Winter issue of the MASSACHUSETTS REVIEW.

Julliard String Performs Superbly

By JAMES W. WADE
Fine Arts Staff

The Julliard String Quartet is perhaps the finest precisioned group of instrumentalists performing in the world today. Everything they do is exact - from the downbeat of a piece to the bows they take at the end of a performance. They certainly lived up to their reputation Monday night by presenting a concert of works by Haydn, Bartok, and Beethoven at Bowker Auditorium. It was some of the finest quartet playing ever heard this side of Budapest.

The concert opened with Haydn's Quartet in B flat Major, Opus 76, No. 4 ("Sunrise"). Despite a few below-pitch tones in the first movement, it was excitement throughout. From the brisk vivacity of the first movement Allegro con spirito to the sheer lyricism of the Adagio, the Quartet turned in a polished, well-balanced performance.

The technical demands of Bartok's Sixth Quartet are next to impossible. Yet the Julliards never missed in dynamics or precision. Bartok's wit and near hilarity was clearly illustrated in both the second and third movements. Yet the last movement was completely opposite in tone and stunned the listener with its mystery and tragically beautiful dischords.

The second half of the program was devoted to Beethoven's Quartet in F Major, Opus 135, the last quartet that Beethoven ever composed. The third movement Lento assai is perhaps one of the most pensive and haunting melodies that Beethoven wrote.

Costumer Designer Tells Backstage Secrets

"It was a fluke of nature!" says Liz Weiss about how she became involved in her career. Liz is the UMass in-resident costume designer who is in her second semester here. She was a theatre major at the University of Evansville, Indiana.

During undergrad school she worked summer stock as an assistant under a prominent designer at Wesleyan University. Then, mainly because of her interest in sewing, Liz took an assistantship at the University of Wisconsin and then decided that she wanted to get a Masters of Fine Arts in Costuming. After she finished her degree program, she applied at UMass as a costumer. Her background experience includes working tech in either designing or crew for eighty shows and acting in thirty shows. Now, besides designing for all UMT shows, she teaches History of Costume, a seminar in costume design, and a special problems course in makeup.

According to Liz, costume designing involves "research, artistic ability and a sense of the theatrical.' The most important thing and also the most difficult problem is "deciding what you're going to do. The costume designer has to talk with the director, and come up with a concept for a production that's also agreeable with the scene designer.' Then the costume designer must research her period costumes for the production. The usual source for designs comes from paintings. The designer copies body and dress shapes but the color scheme and the details of the costume are left to her ingenuity. "Sometines you have a play you can't put in any specific period. Then you use whatever might happen to help you come out with a design, like metal work, cubism, or sculpture.'

Liz feels that two weeks is an ideal time to prepare for a production. The designer must have time to think about what she wants to do, and to sketch her renderings, which are the basic design shapes. This must be completed before a show is even cast. After casting is finished there is no time to "mess around with design.'

Liz has very definite ideas about costumes and feels that costume designing is most often left unrecognized. "The problem is that people take costumes for granted. They know that someone had to make the set, because there it is sitting on the stage. In a "modern" show, like the recent production of AWAKE AND SING set in the 1930's, "People look at the costumes and say 'Where did you get them?' We didn't get them! We made them! The purpose of designing is not only just to make costumes but to give the graduate and undergrad students a chance to learn to sew. That's why we made three men's suits for AWAKE AND SING. Even during CHANGELING we had people ask us 'Where did you 'get' the costumes?' They thought we rented them, which is a big waste of time and money."

The importance of stage makeup, according to Liz, is also neglected. "The directors assume that everyone can do their own makeup, which is not true! It's just like saying that anybody can act, which is not true again. Acting is a trained profession', a fact which most laymen also disparage. Since makeup training has been neglected at UMass, Liz formed a seminar group this semester on special problems in makeup.

The basic concept for PLOUGH is regulated by the period. Liz and the set designer have tried to make a sort of tintype feeling for the set and costumes. Their aim is to have the stage look like old photographs. Therefore Liz has stayed within the color ranges of browns, beiges, and some greens. "The brightest thing in the show is pale blue, and that's for the prostitute!'

The particularly challenging problem for the show is in the third act, when the men come in after they have been fighting for five or six days. "We have to make them LOOK like they've been out fighting for five or six days! This includes ragged edges, bloodstains, and just plain dirt! But it has to be artistic dirt. We just can't let the actors go out in the mud and get dirty. We have to get them dirty where we want it. So we are going to paint dirt on the costumes in specific places.'

Here Liz Weiss adds finishing touches to the costumes for PLOUGH AND STARS.

Watch for our Spring Fashion Prevue Magazine next week!!!

At the present time, Liz is working on PLOUGH AND STARS, a Sean O'Casey play about the 1916 Easter Uprising in Dublin, Ireland. The production begins this evening and runs through Saturday under the direction of Harry Mahnken.

Leaman Sums Up Varsity Hoopmen: 'Our Greatest Team'

By PETER PASCARELLI
Sports Editor

"I said this would be our greatest team and they have gone ahead and proved they were best.' Thus did UMass basketball coach Jack Leaman sum up his team's 17-7 Yankee Conference title season.

However, the third year Redman mentor, who has compiled a 42-32 record to put him third on the all-time school coaching listings, could not help sounding a bit disappointed and bitter about his team's absence from the National Invitational Tourney.

"We set our goal at the start of the season as being the sole Conference champions," Leaman went on, "and we accomplished that. I also thought we could win 16 games and the team exceeded that. It was just a terrific job."

The Redmen broke fast from the gate this season with successive wins over Rider, A.I.C., Vermont, Rhode Island, New Hampshire, Connecticut and Maine. While none could be considered upsets, the road victories at Vermont, Connecticut and Maine, always trouble spots for visitors, plus having five Conference wins quickly under the belt, were encouraging signs.

Big performances in this stretch were a 21 point performance by Ken Mathias in his first varsity performance, Ray Ellerbrook's 24 against A.I.C. and what would be a season high output of 31 against Maine, Dennis Chapman's performance against Rhode Island and Peter Gayeska's steady double figure outputs.

Three of these first seven wins were played without Joe DiSarcina, who was absent due to a family death. However, the Redman co-captain returned against Maine, and set a school assist record with 15 setups in the Redmen's only 100 point ballgame.

However, things suddenly turned sour, as UMass entered what Leaman called, "the low point of the season." Vacation period proved disasterous for the Redmen as they lost two games in the Evansville Christmas Tourney, one a single point overtime defeat to Tennessee Tech. Ellerbrook was honored with the Sportsmanship Award in the tourney.

UMass then came to Boston during intersession and lost to Boston University, in what proved to be the roughest game of the year and bowled to Northeastern in a tight struggle. Leaman said of these losses, "The time we were away from practice because of exams and the holidays took away our edge. You take away those four games and a great season would have been a lot greater.'

But basketball, just like all sports is a game of momentum and from the low point, the Redmen rose to their high point. They traveled to Providence to meet the always tough Friars and won with their finest performance in years. Gayeska was especially strong in this encounter.

The return to a record Cage crowd of 5500, say UMass crush nationally ranked Fordham by 13. The final score was misleading. They should have won by more. Chapman had maybe his finest ballgame in this one leading all scorers with 22. A week of success continued with a road romp over Syracuse.

Thus the stage was set for the biggest tilt in years, a battle for New England supremacy with Boston College. UMass stayed close all the way and led on several occasions, but with Gayeska sidelined with fouls the Eagles moved away and won, virtually camping on the foul line in the closing minutes.

A costly win came next as the Redmen defeated Vermont but lost the indispensible DeSarcina for what would be almost a month. His absence showed in a decisive defeat at the hands of an overpowering Holy Cross five. However, it was here in the next weeks, that the team proved its worth.

Playing without their leader, the new tourney-hungry five rolled to five straight wins, including a big road win at Navy. Leaman said of these wins, "We won these games without Joey and the guys who did the job were JohnShockre, Bill Greeley, Bob Dempsey and Dick Starsiak. They filled in when they were needed and helped out at a crucial time."

Then a great season was shadowed by a one point loss to Rhode Island. It was a tough one to take. The defeat snapped a 13 game conference win streak, ended hopes for an undefeated conference season, dispelled hopes of a new school win record and by all future events, destroyed hopes for an N.I.T. berth.

The season, an excellent and successful season, ended in the ludicrous setting of Durham, N.H., as 90 people watched the curtain close on UMass' finest basketball team.

Coach Leaman is blunt in his N.I.T. evaluation. "We were slighted. I think we deserved it what with our 17 wins, and a major conference title. But things like this, run into politics I guess, and involve things other than basketball. But I know this team deserved a chance to show what it could do."

The N.I.T. snub failed to dampen Leaman's enthusiasm for his team. When asked for any surprises, Leaman, said, "Chapman was a pleasant surprise, especially in the middle of the season. Also, the overall steady play of Mathias was a welcome sight.

"And then of course there was Gayeska. He was simply unbelievable. He played as good as anyone in New England."

Leaman was not surprised by Ellerbrook, who led the team in scoring with an 18 point average, not to mean he took anything away fro m the classy southpaw. "I knew and everyone else knew that Ray was going to have a tremendous year and he disappointed no one,' said Leaman.

The already mentioned Greeley, Shockro, Dempsey and Starsiak, plus the valuable relief work of Dick Samuelson, and the spot performances by John Dreyer, all combined for a team effort.

"Everyone picked up when he was needed," said Leaman, "and this has to be the greatest thing about the season. We lost Joey for 10 games. Dennis had some illness in the family that hampered him, but the rest of the team just picked up the slack.'

The 1968 69 Redmen set many marks to be shot at by future teams. Their 17 wins tied the school record, while the nine Conference wins set a record. The squad set a new team record by shooting .453 per cent from the field. The team was outrebounded in only four games.

Maybe statistics could tell the story. Gayeska's .568 field goal percentage, a new record, his 15.8 points a game and 11 rebounds. Chapman came through with 11.3 while Mathias had 10.5. The incomparable Di Sarcina averaged 8.5 and as usual paced in all assists, with eight a game.

But statistics aren't that important, if you believe the N.I.T. committee. So a UMass season that should still be in progress, but was stalled by selections of suc h teams as Fordham, ends. Well in a sense not, as Leaman will coach the New England all star game Sunday in Boston, with Gayeska and DiSarcina participants.

It sounds like there should be mourning because of the N.I.T. snub. But just disappointment. And as good as this year was, as many as the thrills were, a look at the returning veterans, a peek at the freshman team, and the addition of some promising transfers, the best may be yet to come.

Little Redman Cagers Win 'Em All in Spectacular Year

When a team goes 15-0 and outscores its opponent on the average 86-62, not much more can be said. But this year's UMass freshman basketball team has to go down as the finest frosh crop of hoopsters in the school's history.

Statistically, this team was simply overpowering. The Little Redmen, who are the first undefeated UMass frosh hoop team, shot 48 per cent from the floor. They rebounded at a 41 per game clip. They shot 70 per cem from the foul line.

Coach Peter Broaca, who recruited in a large part the talent of the freshman team, besides coaching it, said, "This is as good individual talent as I have ever been in contact with. I have coached some fine players in the past, but never so many of them on one team.

The season started with four romps over A.I.C., in which the Little Redmen went over the 100 mark for the first time, Westfield State, Rhode Island and Chamberlayne Junior College. Chamberlayne Junior has since proved its ability by going to the finals of the regional national junior college tournament.

UMass then traveled to Connecticut for its last game before intersession and the holidays. It proved to be one of the roughest all season. The Little Redmen rallied by as much as nine points with only 13 minutes to go, but rallied behind Julius Erving and John Bettancourt to pull out a 67-65 victory.

After a two month layoff, the frosh returned to play another tough one, as they took until the last moments before going out in front of a talented Dartmouth frosh team and eked out a 61-57 win. Guard Mike Pagliara was the hero in this one, scoring some late hoops and making key steals.

It was forward Rick Vogeley's turn to star in the balanced attack as he scored 22 in an easy win over New Haven College. Then came possibly one of the big moments.

Before a capacity crowd that was seated when the frosh game started, UMass kept on winning by routing previously unbeaten Boston College 99-67. It was a superb team effort, and the first UMass freshman win over the Eagles since 1966. Broaca said of that game, "The kids played the game of their lives that night."

After an easy win over Amherst College, UMass travelled to Holy Cross and ran into a cannon by the name of Buddy Venne who popped in 31 points. However the second half scoring of Bill Keegen, who missed the first half of the season due to an ankle injury proved the difference as UMass chalked up with number ten.

After slaughtering Westfield again, this time to the tune of 101-46, and crushing Connecticut, the Little Redmen faced their two toughest tests back to back.

They travelled to Hanover, N.H., to meet Dartmouth. After leading by as much as 18, UMass blew the lead and was tied at the buzzer by the Indians. However, the frosh came back in overtime and won, 84-79.

The following evening at the Cage, Broaca's charges met Rockwood, a prep school averaging over 100 points a game. Rockwood led for most of the contest, as UMass was kept in the game by Vogeley's excellent shooting. Then Erving began to go to work and UMass pulled in front to win a thriller 94-86.

For Broaca these two games were the highlight of the season. "We blew a lead at Dartmouth and came from behind on the road and then the very next night came back to win against a talented Rockwood team. The kids proved a lot in these two games."

The team finished the season with an easy rout of St. Anselm's, 105-70, the third time they broke the century mark.

Broaca was reluctant to single out any one man. He said of Erving, however, in regard to the exciting forward's play against Dartmouth and Rockwood, "His performance in those two games was a fine a job as any I've seen."

The coach also said he was a little surprised by the shooting of Vogeley, who shot at a 52 per cent clip. "It was a pleasant surprise to see his shooting so good and he did a good job all year."

UMass used three men at the center spot, Kesgen, Coffin and Tom Austin. All did the job when needed. Broaca said, "Whenever something was needed from that fifth spot they came through.'

Not enough can be said about the guard tandem of Pagliara and Bettancourt. They complimented each other well, Bettancourt a more daring type, with Pagliara playing the role of playmaker. Both could score, averaging 13 plus a game each. Pagliara, in addition, shot 22 per cent. There was no better freshman backcourt in New England than these two.

Vogeley averaged eight rebounds to go along with his 15 points a game. Coffin shot 63 per cent from the field while averaging eight points. Austin chipped in with six a game, along with a lot of defensive potential while Kesgen averaged seven, hampered by a lot of missed time.

And then there was Julius Erving. He scored 18.2 points a game. He averaged 14.2 rebounds a game. He blocked seven or eight shots a game. Erving did not play against a better player this season. Maybe a testament to his performing was up at Dartmouth, where, following a superb effort, Dartmouth players and fans shook his hand after the game.

But the 1968-69 freshman basketball team has at least seven players of definite varsity potential and not many freshman teams can beat that. It's the hope of anyone who saw them that there will be three more years of play for all.

Afro-American Organization Is Focal Point of Senate Business

By RICHARD LANE
Senior Reporter

The Afro-American organization was the focal point of several amendments acted upon by the Student Senate last night in its first three hours of business. The Senate was still conducting Budgets Committee action before going on to the rest of its agenda at the time of DAILY COLLEGIAN deadline.

Concerning Afro-Am, the student governing body passed an amendment calling for SWAP (Students Workshops for Activities Programs) as a group to come before the Senate for its budget rather than individual organizations such as Afro-Am doing so. Senate Vice President Rick Hartwell stated that the Senate should, "consider SWAP as a unit organization with its own administration.'

The Senate next defeated an amendment which would strike funds for the Black Arts Festival to be held in Springfield. Rationale behind the amendment was that of opposition to spending money for an activity to be held off campus. Arguments against the amendment were that the Festival is one of the most important activities in which Afro-Am is involved and that it also provides a service to the community and indirectly to the University. One Afro-Am representative told the Senate that the Black Arts Festival is "a cultural program,' and that it is "important that we (the UMass Afro-Am chapter) are part of the Seven College Alliance" which includes seven major colleges and universities in the Springfield area.

Another defeated amendment regarding Afro-Am was that of striking books of Black culture and Black history to be made available to the University. There was no expressed rationale as to why these books should not be available.

Ad-Hoc Committee Demands Students be on Board of Trustees

Monday, March 3 at 1:00 p.m., 15 members of the Committee to End Military-Industrial Recruiting presented to President Lederle the following demand:

"We are all agreed that the true practice of democracy is the direct participation in and control of the institutions which affect the lives of the people involved. If we are to achieve a more meaningful democracy, we must begin within our community, within our university. The school may belong to the commonwealth, but to whom does the commonwealth belong? We therefore demand that members of the Committee to End Military Industrial recruitment be allowed to meet with the members of the board of trustees at the next formal meeting of the board. We also request that students in substantial number become full participating members of the board. To show good faith, it would be appropriate to have ALL trustees meetings henceforth open to students. The students present must have speaking rights and should be chosen by democratic process established by the Student Senate.'

President Lederle's response to this statement seemed positive. It should also be noted that legislation proposing the addition of students to boards of trustees has been introduced in the Massachusetts legislature, and given a hearing by the joint Committee on Education.

A petition in support of student membership on the University's Board of Trustees has been in the lobby of the Union this week; and so far has gained nearly 400 signatures. The petition will be available for signing through Friday of this week.

The statement of the petition does not necessarily embody the goals of the student committee presently advocating the measure, but simply states, "The following favor student participation on the Board." The precise form of participation is yet to be determined.

The petition will be presented to the Board of Trustees sometime in the near future.

Nixon to Hold News Conference On Sentinel Missile Shield

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Nixon, weighing a final decision Wednesday on the controversial Sentinel antiballistic missile shield, called a nationally broadcast news conference for noon Friday.

Press secretary Ronald L. Ziegler said Nixon will meet with leaders of Congress on the antimissile dispute Friday morning before the "general press conference" in the East Room of the White House.

Asked if Nixon would announce his decision at the news conference on whether to go ahead with the $5,5 billion Sentinel, Ziegler replied: "He'll answer any questions that's asked him."

Whatever Nixon's decision, Senate leaders both Democratic and Republican said any vote on continued funds for the "thin" antimissile system would be extremely close.

As opposition to the project mounted, however, it seemed more likely he might give only a limited green light to Sentinel and call for deploymet in areas removed from population centers, where some citizens fear accidental detonation of anti-missile warheads.

But having put off a decision beyond his once announced deadline of early this week, Nixon's final judgment on the subject was at this point a matter of speculation. Republican congressmen said they had gleaned no clue to his thinking.

Some critics say the cost of the Sentinal project could be better spent on domestic problems. Some say deployment of the Sentinel might escalate the arms race with the Soviet Union.

Nixon spent much of Wednesday morning discussing the ABM matter with members of his staff, notably Dr. Henry A. Kissinger, his special assistant for national security affairs.

He will meet Thursday with Secretary of Defense Melvin R. Laird, a backer of Sentinel deployment, who has just completed a personal inspection tour of the South Vietnam war zone. The ABM controversy is to be taken up at that session.

University Forum to Confront Olin-Matheson Vice-President

By JEAN MCANDREWS
Staff Reporter

The university will "moralistically" confront the Olin-Matheson corporation Monday night, March 17, in the form of an open forum at Bowker auditorium at 8:30.

The forum panel will ask three questions of Everett Bellows, vice-president of the Washington Office of Olin-Matheson, as springboards into a discussion of the military-industrial corporation. The three questions conern the responsibility of (1) the individual employee and (2) the individual stockholder for the activities of the corporation, and (3) the nature of the responsibility between the military-industrial corporation and the university.

Olin-Matheson is a large chemical corporation which owns Winchester Arms and is doing some work for the government.

The panel will include Isidore Silver, moderator and assistant professor of business law; Dean Field; Mr. Bellows; Robert Glucksten, department head and professor of physics; and John Medeiros, a student and a member of the ad hoc committee to end military recruitment on campus. Professor Gluckstern will explain the forms and procedures of research grants.

Lynn Santner, associate director of the placement office, said yesterday that he and Dean Field found the corporation, which has already sent recruiters to UMass, very cooperative and willing to send a representative to discuss these questions.

Santner, speaking for Dean Field said that more forums and debates may be arranged later if necessary and if the students want them, as long as they don't simply re-hash arguments already discussed.

"Apple Power" Asserted By Orchard Hill Residents

By NEAL NOVACK
Staff Reporter

The Grayson Lounge on Orchard Hill last night was the scene of a high-spirited meeting of some 250 residents of the Hill.

The purpose of the meeting was to organize a unified government on the Hill and to exert a show of student power.

The meeting led by Joe Tabacco and other student leaders on the Hill proposed that a constitution be drawn up and presented as soon as possible to the Student Senate. In light of this action Student Senate President Paul Silverman said last night that an Orchard Hill Constitution will be temporarily recognized if presented to the Senate today.

In a rhetorical, emotional presentation Joe Tabacco, who was elected Chairman of the meeting, said that, "we on Orchard Hill need to unite. There is a need for student government on the Hill, and our voice must be heard. Orchard Hill tonight has seen this birth of a central government."

The essential grievances discussed at the meeting include: 1) the construction of a dining commons on Orchard Hill and that the Hill receive an equal appropriation of the dining commons fees charged to students, 2) the realization of expensive athletic facilities promised by the administration four years ago, 3) that Orchard Hill be provided with the University bussing system, and 4) a paving of E and H parking lots and other necessary paving for facilitating access to the cen-

THE NEWS IN BRIEF

International

TEL AVIV (AP) - Israeli troops traded shots with Egyptian soldiers again Wednesday along the Suez Canal, now the prime hotspot of the Middle East ceasefire lines.

There was a brief flurry too in the Jordan Valley.

Israeli occupation units suppressed riotous demonstrations by stone-throwing Arab students in Nablus, north of Jerusalem, and in the Gaza Strip, on the Mediterranean.

VATICAL CITY (AP) - Confessing a desire to become a father, a prelate in the household of Pope Paul VI had decided to give up the priesthood and marry, an associate said Wednesday.

Thus Msgr. Giovanni Musante, 50, becomes the closest man to the pontiff to quit the priesthood for marriage in the current controversy in the Roman Catholic Church over priestly celibacy.

National

WASHINGTON (AP) - The House Republican Policy Committee endorsed Wednesday a $12 billion temporary increase in the national debt ceiling. This is the bill produced by the House Ways and Means Committee, which turned down a request by President Nixon for a redefining of the ceiling.

Nixon had proposed a change in the system which would have increased the Treasury's borrowing power $17 billion above the present $365 billion ceiling.

LOS ANGELES (AP) - Sen. Robert F. Kennedy was assassinated because Sirhan Bishara Sirhan saw in him a "symbolic replica" of his own father, whom he hated, a psychologist testified Wednesday.

This chilling picture of an utterly random shooting came from Dr. Martin Schorr. For the third day, he testified as a defense witness at the 24-year-old Jordanian Arab's trial for his life on a first-degree murder charge.

WASHINGTON (AP) - The presidents of the three major networks reported to Congress Wednesday on efforts being made to curb crime and violence on television. They were told to do more in the future to cut the filth and gore.

All described efforts being made by their networks to cut violence and get away from "action - adventure" programming. They venture' programming. They said they would cooperate fully with a forthcoming study by the surgeon general on the effect of television violence on children.

WASHINGTON (AP) - Chairman James O. Eastland said Wednesday his Senate internal security subcommittee is investigating direct information it received of conspiracy in the slaying of the Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King Jr.

"There are some things about this affair that indicate to me ther e may have been a conspiracy," the Mississippi Democrat said in announcing the probe by subcommittee staff members.

James Earl Ray pleaded guilty Monday to assassinating King in Memphis, Tenn., last April 4. He was sentenced to 99 years in prison and began serving the sentence in Nashville Tuesday.

BOSTON (AP) - Richard Cardinal Cushing, 73-year-old Roman Catholic archbishop of Boston, remained in St. Elizabeth's Hospital Wednesday for rest and treatment of a bronchial condition.

The cardinal, who has a history of bronchial ailments, was admitted to the hospital Monday.

The hospital said Cushing's condition remains good. He is being given a general physical checkup, a spokesman said.

BOSTON (AP) - The deputy division chief of the Corps of Engineers in New England said Wednesday he now has authority to do emergency work on private dam systems if other agencies cannot do it.

Co. Franklin R. Day told a flood preparedness conference of northeast states and federal officials that the Engineers already have prepared their own 34-dam New England flood control system for possible high water this spring.

Supreme Court Justice Upholds Marijuana Laws

FRAMINGHAM, Mass. (AP) - Attempts to legalize and regulate marijuana "must be opposed with massive resistance," Superior Court Chief Justice G. Joseph Tauro warned Wednesday.

"It is my considered judgment that the greatest danger lies in the possibility of marijuana being legalized and regulated,' Tauro told a state Drug Dependency Conference.

"Although the actual campaign in this direction presently has low visibility, its gaining momentum is due to the support derived from users of marijuana and from those experts who minimize its harmful qualities.

"If this trend is not reversed, the day will come when 'big business' will take over and shunt aside the misguided proponents," Tauro said.

"A great new industry will come into being equipped with modern technology and vast economic powers.'

Tauro, in a test case, upheld the state's laws outlawing marijuana, and his decision was sustained by the state Supreme Court.

Tauro told the conference there is "no substantial controversy' among authorities on nine areas regarding marijuana, and "that on the basis of these areas of agreement alone, it should be obvious that marijuana is a dangerous drug . . .". He listed the areas of agreement as:

- It is a mind-alerting drug, producing various stages of intoxication labeled "euphoria."
- It is used in the United States explicity to induce intoxication.
- The intoxication can lessen coordination and distort time, distance and space.
- Habitual use of it is prevalent among marginal personalities with mental disorders.
- It might have disinhibiting effects, exaggerating pre-existing mental states.
- It is not part of any recognized Western religion.
- It has no accepted medical use.
- It has growing attraction among the young.
- No one can guarantee that continued use of it will not cause permanent injury.

Tauro, said defendants in court frequently offer "the need to support a drug habit as an explanation for their criminal behavior."

Senate . . .

Am has said that one of the purposes of this organization is "to make the University aware of the presence of the Black students and also to provide students with information concerning Black history and Black culture."

The final amendments concerning Afro-Am pertained to rent, and both were defeated. One amendment called for R.S.O. groups not to have to pay rent for office space, and hence funds for this to be removed. Another amendment called for funds not to be released unless it is found to be absolutely necessary to pay rent.

Senate President Paul Silverman stated that, "I think there should be some kind of uniform policy,' concerning rent for RSO groups. Sen. Larry Marcus called for a substitution of the last amendment declaring that "Unless all groups are required to pay rent-none should." After lengthy debate over the use of Mills House in Central Area for Afro-Am and other groups Marcus's substitution was defeated.

After the Afro-Am amendments the Senate went on to the Rugby Club and Precisionettes budgets. The latter group had its original budget request of $6000 cut down to $300, enough for uniforms and other activities pertaining to the campus, with its meal and traveling expenses cut completely. The question of the Precisionettes value to the campus was debated with the final outcome expressed by Silverman that "I don't think it is our job to allocate funds to it,' (other than uniforms).

In its first action of the night the Senate tabled a bill sponsored by Sen. Brenner calling for a hike in student minimum wages to $1.60. Brenner pointed to 1100 student signatures on a petition and said that "the students are behind this thing." He continued that the students "deserve more and should be paid more."

A representative of the Administration said a student wage increase would "hurt them more than help them," pointing to jobs where students are paid for doing literally nothing.

Cance House To Initiate Co-op Dorm

By ED SLOAN
Staff Correspondent

In September, 1969, Alexander E. Cance House will begin a new program to improve dormitory living. The basis for the program is an "integrated academic and social atmosphere" which will attempt to attract responsible students able to govern themselves in a cooperative manner.

The cooperative operates under these conditions: (1) cooperative responsible students, (2) a quiet orderly study atmosphere, (3) responsibility for administrative affairs lying in the dormitory government, (4) faculty advisors for class, consultation, seminars and discussion sessions, (5) graduate students for consultation and class as well as individual study initiated by the students, (6) the absence of the counselor and his singular authority image, (7) the reduction in staff members and the transfer of authority to the students.

All of these considerations and the concentration of authority and responsibility in the individual student is intended for the development of a residential college atmosphere.

The "coop" will be governed by a Tenants Association consisting of five members at large and one member elected from each floor and a chairman elected at large. All administrative duties and the usual paper work of the dormitory will be under the jurisdiction of the Tenants Association. This means that the traditional position of Head of Residence is freed from administative ties. In the "cooperative" this central position will be used to coordinate all education activities in the dormitory.

There will be four faculty offices provided for faculty members who wish to spend a good deal of time working in and developing the residential college program. All courses will be devised by students interested in particular areas of study within larger general fields.

The students of the dormitory will be selected out of all applicants, graduate and undergraduate. The student will be responsible for initiating classes and seminars and for developing community groups based on social and academic ties. Students accepted will be expected to be quiet during study and class hours and responsible toward their environment as well as ACTIVE in SOCIAL AND ACADEMIC AFFAIRS. The purpose is to make the dormitory a good atmosphere for study without making it into a silent tomb.

King Council Makes Plans, Holds Open Meeting Tonight

The Martin Luther King Jr. Social Action Council will hold an open meeting for all members of the University community today at 6:30 p.m. in SBA 116.

At this meeting, Gil Saik, Executive Secretary of the King Council, will review current programs and talk about plans for the future.

"We have a few things in mind now," Saik said, "and we're looking for ideas other people may have. For instance, we might conduct a teach-in on the Anti-Ballistic Missile system, or on the Presidio mutiny case. We need ideas on the best way to deal with these issues - ways to get the most information out to the greatest number of people on campus."

Commenting further, Salk said that a major purpose of this meeting would be to simply toss out ideas about programs the King Council wants to present. Then, people who are interested can form committees to set up the programs. "This was how 'Night of Inquiry' and the curriculum reform teach-in got started," he said.

The King Council also plans to talk about new programs which are just being started, and for which people are needed for ground-breaking operations.

Roy Mansur and Keith Bromery are working on plans for a Martin Luther King Jr. Memorial Week immediately after vacation. Folksinger Eric Anderson will be performing April 3, a day of workshops and speakers is planned for April 4, and other events will be going on all that week. According to Mansur, "We'll need people in the next two weeks to set up workshops, make arrangements for speakers, and help with publicity."

Paul McCartney Wed

LONDON (AP) - Beatle Paul Mc Cartney and American divorcee Linda Eastman married Wednesday after sobbing girl fans kept an all-night vigil at the gate to the pop star's home.

"We are very happy. Everything's gone very well," said Mc Cartney, the last bachelor Beatle.

"It's great. It's very groovy," said Linda, blonde daughter of Lee Eastman, a New York lawyer and art collector.

The couple met in New York last year when Miss Eastman was photographing the Beatles for an American teen-age magazine. They became constant companions after McCartney's long romance with actress Jane Asher broke up last summer.

Contemp. Chamber Group To Perform in Bowker

The Contemporary Chamber Ensemble conducted by Arthur Weisberg will be presented in concert on the campus of the University of Mass. as the sixth event in the Concert Association's 1968/69 series.

The group was established in 1960 by Mr. Weisberg in order that music of our time would be performed professionally on a permanent basis and that avant garde music would be available to the broader public. In 1965, Mr. Weisberg received a Rockefeller Foundation grant of $265,000 which resulted in the groups residency on the campus of Rutgers University in New Brunswick, New Jersey. The Ensemble has appeared in concerts at various colleges and universities and has made several recordings. In addition, the Contemporary Chamber Ensemble gives workshops and seminars on various aspects of contemporary music.

For their program at the University of Massachusetts on Thursday evening, March 20 in Bowker Auditorium, Mr. Weisberg will lead members of the Ensemble in a program including the works of Niccolo Castiglioni, Donald Martino, Gyorgy Ligeti, Joel Chadabe and Fredric Myron. This program is open to UMass undergraduates without charge and is presented through the Fine Arts Council.

Course Requirements

A campus referendum on recruitment on campus has been taken, and the results are in. However, I suggest that another referendum be taken to determine the students' motives for attending this or any other university. It would be interesting though its outcome probably would not be surprising.

Why? Because it seems that the days of pure idealism are gone; if they ever existed. For example, we do not fight wars for freedom but to secure a foreign policy. If there is a time when this country has to fight for its freedom, it will be for all or nothing.

Without any difficulty, we notice that the times are changing and thus we come to the subject of education, a degree and the university's attempt to give us these through its system of requirements. It could very well be that the present system of higher education was good back in the fifties, but it is questionable now. Two reasons can be mentioned; one is the general dissatisfaction with education brought about by the language requirement and other such obstacles. Secondly, is the fact that when you do graduate your employer usually send you back to school to learn a little "specialization."

This second point is of considerable interest because the days of men who could master several fields is over. Disciplines other than your present major are so complicated that two semesters of introductory courses hardly scratches the surface of any area of knowledge. It seems that the faculty on this campus do not realize this, because they persist in keeping these requirements. It is the faculty recommendations that are usually followed in these questions.

One could protest that it is the faculty who live in the ivory tower of education and do not realize the problems of this world. One does feel that the faculty desires to keep their captive audiences.

This criticism is justified by my feeling that a majority of students are not here for a "well founded education." A degree almost guarantees a good job with promotion when that person specializes. Thus a student interested in economics really does not need to be hindered by Astronomy 100.

It does seem that the term "military industrial complex" is as vague a term as "liberal arts education' . The men who make up the requirements for such a degree are as conservative as they come.

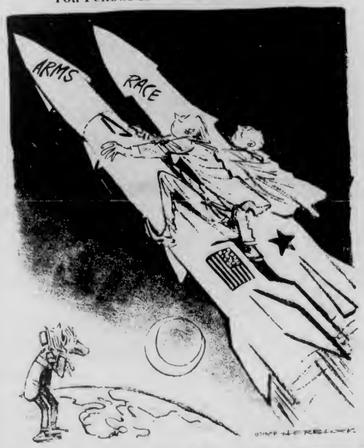
Skin Deep Liberals



The recent undergraduate poll taken by the COLLEGIAN concerning on campus recruiting was quite indicitive of the majority feeling of the students on this issue. There was actually little doubt over what the results would be, for the majority vote reflected the majority attitude.

There are few, if any, real honest people on this campus who would dispute the point that the majority of students here are both apathetic and conservative. The conservatism was reflected in the vote, and the apathy was displayed in the turnout (10% - not bad for a topic so lacking in any "meaning" to the student body in general!?). But ultimately we must push aside the excuses and look at the facts as they stand no matter how ridiculous they may evolve to be.

The facts are that there was an election, and the majority vote did for the most part back the administrations' present stand on recruitment, baring the distinction made between "quasi-subversive' group exemption and the present University policy, well over 70% of those voting backed the administration's policy. Liberals most of us like to call ourselves, but for most part, our political philosophies are only skin deep.

Dissent

To the editor:

I find the recent events in the history very distressing. Is the University community at large willing to sit by while yesterday's liberal and today's conservative runs the department? Is the willingness to conform going to be established as the criteria for being a member of the History Department? Is there no room for dissent in the History department? The entire University community not just history majors has something to lose. This entire matter should not be allowed to pass by unquestioned. I feel that an investigation should be initiated to bring to light the facts. This investigation should be under the auspices of the Student Senate as the student body has the greatest at stake, its educational spectrum.

JOHN SCANLON

Leaders?

To the editor:

The argument that elected student "leaders" are not truly representative of the student body which is currently being discussed in the University community was aptly illustrated in Monday's Campus Comment section of "The Daily Collegian". Eight of the nine letters published that day addressed themselves to matters of serious campus and national concern. The ninth letter was written by Joe Tabacco an elected student politician. Tabacco's relevancy and representativeness is well illustrated by one of his sentences:

"Well, it's all over now the Redmen are the greatest team that this school has ever seen, Jack was right!" (sic)

I submit that Tabacco as he reveals himself in his letter and many other elected "leaders" are representative only of the Lowest Common Denominator.

JAY FOLEY

Support

To the editor:

The officers and representatives and the student body of the Student Senate, Stockbridge School of Agriculture affirm their support of the actions of the President of the University and the other members of the faculty and Administration who were involved in coping with the recent sit-in protest in the Whitmore Administration Building.

The students and other persons who occupied University premises in clear violation of University regulations and in acknowledged violation of the laws of trespass did so with foreknowledge of the penalites attaching to the action.

The University Administration acted firmly, but with restraint and a minimum application of force, to return the occupied premises to normal University uses. The arrest of the demonstrators was carried out only after repeated opportunities had been offered to the occupant s to clear the premises without the sanctions of enforcement.

Those who occupied the building went far beyond the limits of free speech and petition, they acted through force in an effort to compel the University to reverse decisions that had been arrived at by regular, lawful procedures. The response of the University was responsible and the penalties with which the occupiers are faced are reasonable in relation to the seriousness of the offense. Reversal of the Administrative decision at this point would jeopardize the future capacity of the University to carry out its normal functions whenever any group of whatever size decided to take action to disrupt the University.

This decree won the unanimous support of the Stockbridge Student Senate on March 11, 1969.

Donald R. Bridges
Stockbridge Senate President

Racism

To the editor:

We wish to take exception to the phrasing of your open-recruiting ballot in the COLLEGIAN. First of all, the Black Panthers, who you refer to patronizingly and with unconscious (?) racism as a "quasi-subversive" group, are not subversive. Black Panthers struggle for the right of black men to be free and proud, to control their own lives and destinies. They fight for rights that must belong to ALL citizens. As a liberation force against an occupying colonial power, they must use any means necessary to liberate America's twenty million steppin-fetchit serfs.

The Panthers run schools and give Oakland's poor black children free hot breakfast; is this "quasi-subversive"?

The second point of contention is this: you failed to list an alternative whereby community organizations (i.e. Vista, Peace Corps, Black Panthers) and purely political groups (i.e. communists, Nazis, PL) could recruit, while banning industries and the armed forces.

Huey Newton is in jail today because of the paranoid classification of the "quasi-subversive" given to the Black Panthers.

This indicent is one more example of the DAILY COLLEGIAN's perverted idea of news reporting.

Harvey B. Novack

alone is enough to dissolve any respect I might have for your poll.

Thirdly, your exclusion of graduate students is unfortunate. They are as concerned with and have as valid opinions about recruitment as the undergraduate body.

Finally, I cannot participate in this referendum because it is being conducted by an organization I do not want to support in any manner. Just as I must resist illegitimate authority, I must not legitimatize a press that claims to be free and responsible while it takes little care to report responsibly, little care to edit responsibly (the slander on last Friday's editorial page), little care to serve students (demanding the Committee to End M-1 Recruitment pay to have press releases appear), and little care to report to this isolated community vital news (the wide spread unrest in colleges, high schools, U.S. military bases, etc.).

Although I am writing in the first person singular, I am not alone. We think the Massachusetts Daily Collegian is a joke from a bygone day.

David Aronow

All letters to the Collegian should be addressed "to the editor" and typed at sixty spaces. The Collegian reserves the right to condense and delete all letters for clarity and space requirements.

Referendum

To the editor:

As you begin to count the ballots in your campus recruitment referendum, perhaps you are surprised that the results are too much to your liking.

One reason for this may be your assumption that there are nine attitudes towards campus recruitment. My own attitude, that military-industrial recruiters have no place here, while political groups such as the Black Panthers and the White Citizens Council should be allowed, is not listed. If you felt this way, you might be able to choose stereotype number four, but I do not think that is a useful compromise.

A second reason, closely related with my attitude toward recruitment is your labeling of the Black Panthers as quasi - subversive. Such unconscious McCarthyism

Former Senate President Collins Moves to the Administration Side

By KARON THOMPSON
Staff Reporter

"What's it like moving to the "other side"? What's it like to be a student at UMass and then to become an administrator? Jim Collins, assistant area coordinator in Northeast, and former Student Senate President said there is "no real dichotomy between sides, no real sharp distinction."

Collins graduated from UMass in 1968 as a government major, and is now working for his Masters. As a former student he has more insight into student demands, and says that he works as "a member of the University community, NOT as an administrator."

His role as assistant coordinator has three functions: counselor, e ducator, and administrator. As the latter he sees that the area can function physically.

The other two, however, are of primary importance. As counselor he deals with personal student problems, as well as those concerned with drugs, finances, and academic affairs. His duties as an educator involve student government, and working with students so that they themselves can build better living places. Collins feels that the most meaningful part of the University is out of the classroom.

Most of the thirty hours a week spent at his job entail direct work with students, many meetings, and counselor training groups. Collins emphasized the "new" role of counselor, as opposed to the old "policeman" viewpoint. (He applied for counselorship in his sophomore year, but was turned down.)

Although UMass students have more power in dorm government than at most colleges, Collins stressed that they still don't have enough. "Present dorm governments aren't very representative. They have been too strict; there is not enough freedom for students."

The main elements of a University are reason, logic, and compassion. Interaction is very important. Collins defined student power as the "right of students to take part in the decision making process in a logical way".

Commenting on the decision of Dwight House to abolish their dorm government, Collins said they achieved something for a period - "A real feeling of community within the dorm". However, this venture failed because no adequate provisions were made for the minority, who were thus forced to seek aid outside of the dorm. But "all in all, it was good. We should see more of it."

There is apathy on the part of many students; they are unaware of many dorm rules and regulations. Not enough communication exists. Much of the educative process goes unnoticed, such as dorm cultural and scholastic events.

Collins advocates decentralization of student goverment so that decisions can be as close to the students as possible. He praised Deans Field and Noffsinger for allowing diversity in their departments, and said the student personnel staff at the University is very good.

Improvements that he would like to see initiated are -

1. The placement of students on the selection boards for hiring, firing, etc.

2. A University governing board set up. This would leave the faculty and student senates intact, but bring together a higher board for matters pertaining to the whole university.

3. Student participation in the Board of Trustees, with representation and voting rights. The voice of the students is very important.

The "biggest in Boston of any film currently running" became even bigger yesterday, through a judicial hangup and attachment of a "banned in Boston" label.

Amherst College's Kirby Theatre Stages "Camino Real" by Tennessee Williams

In its last production of a major play this season, Amherst College's Kirby theater opens March 7 with the Masquers presentation of CAMINO REAL by Tennessee Williams. Six evening performances of the play directed by Prof. Walter Boughton are scheduled for March 7 8, 9, 14, 15, 16 at 8:30 p.m. Thereafter, Kirby will present a number of student directed plays.

The cast includes Amherst College's Steve Collins as Kilroy, Toby Webb who plays Jacques Casanova, Jonathan Alper as Lord Byron, and Craig Dunkerley as Don Quixote. Suzanne Richardson of Mt. Holyoke College plays the part of Camille, and Ezmeralda, the gypsy's daughter, is played by Sigita Kondratas, also of Mt. Holyoke.

CAMINO REAL, the most theatrical of Williams' plays, takes place at no particular time or place, although the setting is distinctly tropical. The play is concerned with a dozen people who have reach ed the end of their lives and who wish to escape the realities they have brought upon themselves.

Consequently, the title of the play itself holds the key for a proper interpretation: depending on how one chooses to pronounce the work "real", it can mean either real or used in its Spanish sense, royal. At various times in the play, both pronunciations are used. Williams borrowed his title from the days of Spanish rule in Mexico, when a major highway was referred to as a "camino real" or federal road.

Tickets for all performances of CAMINO REAL will be available at the Kirby Theater Box Office daily beginning February 28 from 10 a.m. until noon and from 2-5 p.m., or by telephone 542-2278.

Tape Recorders: Link Students and Executives

Can busy corporate executives, who have reached the high plateaus of top and middle management and are presumably "organization men" in general agreement with the Establishment, talk frankly with today's student leaders on our college campuses - and also listen?

"If they can do so without having to "clear" what they say," says Wallace Thorsen, director of Tape-A-Letter League (TALL), "and can get a no-holds-barred continual pipeline going to and from the campus as it really thinks, feels and plans - yes." TALL has created the "Campus/Corporate Dialogue" project to make this possible, Thorsen announced recently.

The "Campus/Corporate Dialogue" has these basic aims:

1) To provide a continuing practical method of communication between individuals, behaving as individuals, on the campus and in the corporation.

2) To permit such communication to be frank, uninhibited and with cumulative understanding in depth.

3) To improve the climate of the United States into which the emerging student must orient himself, and which is partially populated and considerably influenced by the participating executives.

4) To improve the machinery of recruiting and career-seeking by all types of employers and by all types of students.

Utilizing the new cassette-type tape recorder, "C/C D" supplies recorders and blank cassettes, labels and mailing cartons, to all participants - an equal number of students and corporate executives. The students get theirs free - to use in any way they wish during the academic year, and to gain title to it on completion of the program. If they drop out or otherwise fail to complete the program, the recorder and blank cassettes are returned to TALL and another student takes their place.

All dialogue will be "blind" - that is, neither side will know the last names or affiliation of the other, mailing their tape letters each month (precoded) to TALL for copying and transmailing. No disclosures of identity will occur without the express written permission of the respondents themselves. This will permit free-wheeling comment, criticism and probably some shouting on both sides.

Only 100 Charter Member corporations will be permitted to join Campus/Corporate Dialogue its first year (the 1969/70 academic year). Each of 600 students will "tape talk" with 3 executives in 3 separate member corporations.

Details may be secured by writing to TALL, 11 North Ave., Norwalk, Connecticut, 06851.

NES Volunteers Plan Enrichment

Last Saturday 16 children came to UMass from Springfield to see what they could find. The N.E.S. Cultural Enrichment volunteers showed them around the campus with special emphasis on the School of Agriculture.

The N.E.S. Cultural Enrichment program hopes to find volunteers to work Saturdays on a regular basis. Plans have been formulated to have field trips like the one to UMass last Saturday and also, more important, to have volunteers work with, play with and teach children in Springfield.

Anyone who is interested, especially anyone with skills in arts and crafts and music is asked to consider the program. You can volunteer through the Martin Luther King Council in the Hampshire House.

This Saturday the program will include working in the different centers to determine what activities will be best for the children there. In the afternoon a concert will be given at the Dunbar Community Center by campus folk music talent. The bus will leave from the Student Union, 10:30 a.m. Saturday, March 15. Regular Saturday activities will start the first week after Spring Vacation.

UMass Coed Studies At a Detroit Institute

Among the undergraduate students at The Merrill-Palmer Institute in Detroit for a semester's work is Susan P. Flagg, a junior at the University of Massachusetts. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Francis H. Flagg of 718 Bedford Street, Elmwood, Massachusetts.

The Merrill - Palmer Institute is the only center of its kind devoted to research, teaching, and community service in the special fields of human development and family life. Its world-wide reputation is based upon almost 50 years of pioneering in the study of individuals and families and their relationships with each other and with the community. Located in Detroit's Cultural Center in the inner-city area, the Institute's urban setting gives its students opportunity to observe and study firsthand the dynamics and problems of a modern city.

Students in education, the behavioral and social sciences and related fields come from all over the world and from 120 cooperating universities and colleges across the United States. They receive credit for their work at Merrill-Palmer toward degrees at their cooperating intitutions.

UMass Computer System Expands

By BOB GANLEY
Staff Correspondent

Available to all 16,000 UMass students is easy access to a computer for their own personal use.

According to David Musante, assistant director of the UMass Research Computing Center, more than 50 teletype phones are scattered over the campus for the use of students and professors. These teletypes also serve the four-college area. The center has a professional operating staff as well as student employees, who are getting experience in the field of computer science. Located in the Engineering Lab building the Center is open seven days a week, 24 hours a day.

The Research Center, which began operations in September, 1967, has two CDC 3600 computers which can be reached through either the closed shop system or the time sharing system. The closed shop system, Musante said, is for users who have large programs which won't fit into the memory of the time sharing system. The input and output are much faster than the teletype method. A person can leave his program and pick it up anywhere between 10 minutes and three hours later, he explained.

The time sharing method is used by students in virtually every department on campus. There are 36 teletypes on campus and 16 more in the ELab building. A person can use a key punch, punch paper type or magnetic disk or drum storage. The teleptypes also serve an educational function as they teach programming much better than the closed shop system, according to Mr. Musante. Only one person can use a teletype at a time, but the center's administration is planning to have 100 teletypes at various locations feeding into the same computer.

The single computer time sharing system allows an average of 30 students to in-put at one time. Approximately 4,000 students and 40 faculty members are being served by one computer especially devoted to the time sharing system.

The Research Computing Center owns one of the computers, which sell commercially for $2.5 million. The other computer is rented at $28,000 a month. The center gives grants to researchers who are not part of the university community and it can also sell time at $250 an hour. This is not a standard system bought from Control Data Corp. but is the invention of members of the center who developed it for the use of UMass.

The center also has a library of 600 programs in a check-out basis for the closed shop program and 30 programs for the time sharing system and more to come, Musante said.

Frosh Puckmen Show UMass Hockey is On Way Up

By STEVE SHAMBAN
Sports Day Editor

The season that was. A successful season. A 10-2 record. A promising future. For frosh hockey coach Ben Smith and his Little Redmen this past season is all this and more. It is also frustration. A 6-3 loss to the Yale frosh in the first game. But it is the first game. Then, easy wins over Amherst and UConn.

Next, Salem State. A good team, not a great team. Dave 'Thunder Thighs' Murphy gives them a 3-2 overtime win. This hurts the Little Redmen. A loss they want back. It is a fluke. But look at the schedule. The season's last game will be at Salem State. Something to point for.

But don't look too far. Boston College is next. The Little Redmen refuse to succumb to the intangible forces of Eagle prestige and tradition. They skate into McHugh Forum like a flock of Banshees and emerge with a decisive 3-0 win. A big win. An important win. BC frosh lost to whom on Forum ice? UMass?

Seven straight wins follow, many of them overwhelming. AIC falls. The Yale JV's are disgraced on their own ice. New Prep, a tight one at Harvard JV's, Deerfield, AIC and Amherst again.

Word spreads through out New England about the Little Redmen. A good team, a winning team, tough anywhere.

Boston University, undefeated, the best frosh team in the East. They hear about the Little Redmen. They also hear about the loss to Salem State. Salem State must be strong. We play them don't we? BU wins, 13-1.

The Little Redmen gird their armor for the last game. A revenge match. Meanwhile, nobody will play them. Who needs the embarrassment? Holy Cross cancels twice, UConn bows out. Still, there is Salem State.

Then comes the storm. Roads blocked with snow. Travel is unsafe. Salem State decides to call it off. There is no revenge. Only frustration. The old adage. Wait 'till next year. But it is the truth.

The coach is pretty much satisfied. "I was impressed with this team. It had both ability and spirit. When you have four lines, five strong defensemen and two goalies you can't complain. (Varsity coach) Jack Canniff has done a great recruiting job and has a lot to look forward to next year."

But he is a coach. "With the amount of shots on net we had, we should have scored a lot more goals. ." The nature of the position requires that he never be completely happy and Salem State pops up again. "We got overconfident a few times, particularly against them when we did get gaught. But we certainly bounced back at BC." The coach always stands up for his charges.

The coach is a freshman too. This is his first year. "It's funny, but I finally discovered, on the overview, what my college coach (Cooney Weiland) was always talking about. Wait for the breakplay defensive hockey."

The coach of the team. The team, A collection of individuals unified into an organic whole with a common goal.

The Big Line. Jack Edwards, Bob Whelden, Dan Reidy. Big, Strong, Scrappy. Edwards has the hard shot. 14 goals. Whelden uses his size well. 14 goals. Reidy skates helter-skelter around the ice. In the corners, behind the net, all over the place. Does he have a plan? Only he knows. 13 assists.

The Scooter Line. Charley Donovan, Mike Waldron, center Bruce Winter. Finesse and cunning. Donovan has the good moves, skates beautifully. Could use more size. Waldron is the quick one. Opportunistic. Winter seems to find himself at center. The line does well after the exams.

Gangbusters. Bryan Sullivan, Eric Scrafield, center Dennis Grabowski. Mad Dog, Red Baron and Go-Go. They like to soften up the opponent. Sullivan, good skater, throws weight around. Scrafield, not fast, but knows the game. Grabowski, always in the right place. He wins a one round TKO versus AIC. The line camps out in the offensive zone. They allow one goal in 12 games.

The fourth line. Jim Brewster, Glen Hale, center John Morganto. Brewster is tough. Hale fills in capably when Waldron can't play against AIC. Morganto. The penalty killer, Smart. The coach wishes there was enough time to give them the play they deserve. What can he do?

Defensemen. A solid corps. They have to do their jobs well.

Jack Byrne, Bob Bartholomew. Arlington boys. Arlington is to hockey as Milwaukee is to beer. Byrne. The best all-around in the corps. Clears the puck well. Strong skater. Bartholomew. The captain. Steady. The spark plug. He's a quarter back on the ice.

Al Nickerson, Ken Steeves. Nickerson is the surprise. The coach doesn't know what to expect in November. His quick shot nets five goals. Plays the man nose to nose. Steeves, a good skater for his size. Has the most potential says the coach. Plays tremendous game at BC.

Bill Brown. Has the best shot of the group. Byrne injures the knee at BC. He's out for the come?

The Little Redmen have built a reputation. They have earned it. But there's more to come. The old adage. Wait 'till next year. It will be worth it.

The team lives or dies with the goalies. P. J. Flaherty, Bruce crawford. P.J. is the ringer. He has all the moves. He plays forward in summer league. The coach feels P.J. could be the great one. For Crawford it is tough to play behind him. Crawford is from Long Island. He lacks the ice experience the others have. But he is good on the fundamentals and the coach has faith in him.

This is the team. A lot of hopes ride with this crew. Massachusetts is the hockey hot bed and the state university should be strong.

Smith knows this. He and Canniff want to see a strong team. "The frosh have a big time schedule right now," he says. "Harvard and BC (among others) visit us next year. The varsity is gradually building a strong schedule." The tradition starts now.

"We're moving in on BC's recruiting territory, but there's room for the both of us. We expect some good freshmen next year but we need a rink." The rink is the selling point. When will it

Rosenthal is New Ski Capt.

Peter Rosenthal, a junior from Weymouth, has been elected Captain of next years ski team. Rosenthal has been a member of the varsity ski team for the past two seasons, but has been out of action since the first weekend of competition this year due to injuries sustained in an automobile accident. Ironically, the only race that he competed in turned out to be the one race that UMass was able to top powerful Amherst College.

The knee injury that has kept the captain-elect off the snow for six weeks is coming around. Rosenthal has been tuning up with light training for the past week and is expected to compete in several post season races, including the U.S.E.A.S.A. giant slalom at Mt. Sunapee this weekend. His ability to ski the new French way should be a solid asset to next seasons racing program.

Coach William P. MacConnell was especially pleased with the selection of Rosenthal for team captain. "In skiing it is imperative that you establish a team thing", said MacConnell, "With the bumper crop of sophomores and a few freshmen moving-up, I need a man like Pete to help me plan strategies and keep the boys in line." Rosenthal's big job will be overtaking Amherst College for the number one spot next season.

UMass Girls 4th in USA

UMass girls participated very successfully in the National Intercollegiate Championships held March 8-9 at Springfield College. From the sixth position last year, the team leapt into the fourth place, behind Springfield College, Southern Illinois State College and Centennary College from Louisiana.

In the individual championships, held the last day of the 3 day event, Margie Sims placed fourth on the balance beam, fifth in side horse vaulting and fourth again in floor exercise. A fall off uneven bars kept her from winning another medal, and the same fate happened to Sue Clancy, another potential high finisher in that event.

First, second and third places in all events were taken by Olympians Linda Metheny from U. of Illinois, Kathy Gleason from Buffalo University, and Marie Billings from Arizona State. Patty Corrigan from Springfield came in fourth in vaulting and fifth in uneven bars.

In the most prestigious All-Around event Linda Metheny took first, Kathy Gleason second, Marie Billings third, Terry Spencer from Southern Illinois fourth, Margie Sims fifth and Patty Corrigan sixth.

This makes the end of a very successful season for UMass girls gymnastics team. They won 8 meets, loosing only one, came in second in Regional Championships and fourth at the Nationals.

Coach Kitty Kjeldsen and assistant coach Dave March can be very proud of their team.

Announcements

The Boyden swimming pool will be open from 4-6 p.m. daily for intramural swimming team practice only.

SOFTBALL

Rostees for intramural softball are due Wed., March 19.

UMass Gymnasts Head for Regionals

By JAN CURLEY
Assistant Managing Editor

Noon today is departure time for the gymnastics team as they leave to compete in the regional championships. The outlook for the team is basically the same as it was when the season started: they could place anywhere from third to sixth place. The team has a 3-4 league record.

With this record, the team is tied for fifth place with Navy in league competition. The competition will come from Army and Springfield College in addition to Navy. What happens to these teams in competition will have a great deal to do with the final standing of the Redmen.

"Army, Springfield, Navy and us are all close," said Coach Erik Kjeldsen. As it shapes up, if Navy places ahead of Springfield and Army, UMass could gain an undisputed third place.

Tomorrow the team championships, preliminaries for the individual championships and optionals for the all-around men will be held. Saturday afternoon the individual championships will be held.

Joe Reed and Norm Vexler are competing in the individual all-around championships. Nine individuals are entered in this event with the stiffest competition to come from Bob Emery of Penn. State. But Kjeldsen is optimistic that his men will have a chance.

Dick DelGallo will be competing in the rings. Last year he was second in the East in the event and according to the Coach has "a possibility to be league champ." His strongest opposition will come from Paul Vexler, Del Gallo's teammates brother, who is the defending champion from Penn State.

Kjeldsen feels that UMass has a strong possibility to make the finals in the team competition. The strongest contender will be Del Gallo in the floor exercises. Reed and Bill McAuley have a good chance also to make the finals.

Rich Riley and Vexler are entered in the side horse competition, Reed and George Seibert in the rings, Steve Cary on long horse, Cary, Reed and Vexler on the parallel bars and Reed, Scott Stover and Seibert on the horizontal bars.

Coach Kjeldsen sums up the outlook for his team very succinctly: Anyone could easily make the finals.

For the Redmen, seniors Del-Gallo and Seibert will be concluding their competitive years in the Eastern League, although Del-Gallo could qualify for the NCAA in April.

Bucky Waters Is Duke Coach

DURHAM, N.C.(AP) - Raymond C. "Bucky" Waters, basketball coach at West Virginia University the past four years, is returning to Duke University as head coach.

President Douglas M. Knight of Duke made the announcement yesterday, shortly after Waters made public his resignation from West Virginia.

Waters, 33, a Duke assistant coach from 1960-65, succeeds Vic Bubas, who resigned to accept a position in the Duke administration.

300 Orchard Students Act To End Discrimination

By NEAL NOVACK
Staff Reporter

Apples and "Apple Power" seemed to be in season yesterday at 7 a.m., as some 300 Orchard Hill students, Head Residents, and Area Coordinator, Don Tepper, assembled inside the Quad and proceded to march down to the North Dining Commons. Once inside, an open meeting was held to inform and students with the newly formed OH constitution and to discuss and relate the purposes of the grievances committee to be formed.

The dining commons personnel, in trying to show their willingness to cooperate, especially prepared adequate food to meet the extraordinary load of students (the breakfast count having been tripled over the usual expectancy) and allowed students to leave their trays on the tables.

While five petitions heading specific OH problems were passed among students for their support, student leaders, Joe Tobacco, Dick Palomba and Rosanne Fritz, read the constitution to the breakfast assemblage. Joe Tobacco, stressing the importance for the students to sign the petitions, outlined also the manner in which action should be taken by saying: "Right now, it's my belief and the belief of the majority of students on the Hill that we can get things done by asking for them and going through the proper channels."

In response to this meeting, Mr. Joel Stoneham, Director of Food Services at UMass, stated that, "We're delighted with the way they are behaving this morning. We are ready to feed as many students as there are up on the Hill. The Student Food Service Committee is the normal means of communication for discussing general policy, but if the students have special problems, we are here to serve them as best as possible."

The initial purpose of the OH Committee for Equality is to formulate a strong central government, who can deal with the problems which have remained unresolved over the past four years. This committee was formed to act as the result of an ad in last week's COLLEGIAN stating that students living in Southwest now have transferable meal tickets. The committee was aroused to the fact that OH students do not have this privilege.

The writing of the OH constitution was completed on Thursday at 3:30 a.m. The constitutional committee who drew up the document included Dr. Luther Allen, a member of the Government Department and Faculty Resident of Webster House, Dick Palomba, Danny Slosek, Rosanne Fritz, Larry Turner, Joe Haebler and Peter Naldalbian. On executive order by Student Senate President Paul Silverman, the constitution was temporarily ratified early Thursday morning, and will be brought up for official ratification after Spring vacation.

Among the requests being made by the OH students are: 1) the construction of a dining commons on the Hill, and the proper use and distribution of students' food service fees; 2) the paving of E and H parking lots; 3) the extension of University bussing service to the Hill; 4) the providing of extensive recreational-athletic facilites, and 5) the construction of a path and the necessary lighting behind Webster House providing students easier access to the central campus area.

Citing reasons why these requests have not been satisfied, Joe Tabacco stated that, "Trivial rivalries have split students in the past three years. Blame for existing conditions may be placed upon OH students who have graduated during the past four years and students presently living on the Hill. We are three years behind Southwest and a year behind the Northeast and Central Areas. Commenting further on petition issues, Joe Tabacco said: "We don't even have one area, one auditorium within OH, a residence college, that can accomodate at any one time one-tenth of the students of the Hill. Parking lots in Southwest have lights - they're paved, yet this money comes from a residence hall fund which all of us pay so the students of Southwest can have lights in their parking lots."

Following up on these issues, a meeting of OH House Residents, Area Coordinator Don Tepper, Dr. Leon Barron, Master of the Orchard, and other interested Head's of Residence and faculty was held yesterday afternoon with representatives of the Physical Plant, Treasurer's Office and Landscape Architecture Department. They discussed four basic issues: 1) bus service, 2) parking lots on the Hill, 3) recreational-athletic facilities. It was decided that the Hill will be provided with the bussing service hopefully by next Wednesday and that immediate bulldozing and paving of E lot take place. A temporary path behind Webster House will also be constructed as soon as weather permits. The newly formed area government presented these grievances to the representatives present with a mutual air of understanding.

Yesterday's "Apple Power" activities were concluded with a meeting last night in Webster House Lounge to discuss and refine the OH constitution.

Lederle Agrees To April Meeting Declares Support For Dorm Autonomy

By MARK SILVERMAN
News Editor

President John W. Lederle agreed yesterday to meet with students from John Adams Upper, Middle and Lower houses on April 8 to discuss "the strengthing of dorm government and student responsibility in the direction of dorm autonomy."

Joining the President at the forum-type meeting will be Dean of Students William F. Field and Provost Oswald Tippo.

The President agreed to the meeting after 8 students, representing the three dorms, presented him with 500 petitions signed by John Adams Tower residents, requesting more dorm control over open-house and alcoholic beverage regulations. These petitions Student Senator Paul Johnson explained, "represent the desire of students to bring decision making procedures down to a grass-roots level."

The petition from Upper house stated, "I would like to recommend a general liberalization of the present conditions. . .(this would) result in an increase in both responsibility and maturity among the members of this house in an atmosphere governed and regulated by students." It went on the recommend implementation of findings of the 1967-8 Alcoholic Beverages Committee, which would allow students of drinking age to "use alcoholic beverages in a friendly, sociable manner" on campus.

The other houses' petitions contained the same proposal for open house liberalization, calling for each house to formulate its own regulations apart from any university standards.

Johnson explained that the petitions were designed to show a large number of students want a dialogue with administrators on dorm self-regulation and increasing dorm independence. Lederle agreed to the meeting, saying, "We want to be sure that there is unified student support behind proposals before we bring them before the Board of Trustees."

He went on to say, "I assumed much of this discussion was already going on. . .toward the enlargement of student responsibility. . .but I think whenever students want an open forum on house government, it is a good thing."

The President added that he would discuss the petition's requests with the Board of Trustees at the Board meeting in Boston today. "as far as I'm concerned," he concluded, "the more responsibility and independence students have, the better."

Faculty Senate Votes To Accept Report Of Ad Hoc Committee On Ombudsman

By RICHARD W. STORY
Education Editor

The University's Faculty Senate voted unanimously yesterday to accept the report of the Ad hoc committee on the Ombudsman, thereby passing the motion contained therein establishing a University Ombudsman. Similar legislation is presently under consideration in the graduate and undergraduate student senates.

The report underwent minor wording changes on the floor of the Faculty Senate; but all essential provisions of the motion were retained, following some discussion. An attempt was made to broaden the class of records which would have been excluded from the ombudsman's review; as the motion passed the senate, however, only legally and medically privileged records are excluded from review.

The ombudsman act provides, in summary outline, that the ombudsman shall be either a faculty member, a graduate or undergraduate student, an administrator of the University or an educator not a member of the University community. He shall be a person of the highest integrity, and shall be familiar with academic life. The ombudsman shall be appointed by the president of the University upon the recommendation of a joint selection committee of faculty, students, and the dean of students. He shall be appointed for a term of two years, and may not serve more than two consecutive terms in office.

The function of the ombudsman shall be to assist any petitioner in the procurement of a just settlement of a grievance or to conduct, on his own initiative, any investigation of importance to the University community. The ombudsman shall have fairly broad access to records; all members of the University community shall cooperate with the ombudsman in the discharge of his duties.

Complaints shall be submitted in writing, and if, after their consideration by the ombudsman, he decides that there is some substantive matter to be resolved, corrected, or adjusted, he shall make requests and recommendations to appropriate parties. He may, in his discretion, decide not to investigate. In all cases, however, he shall report to the initiating party on his actions - either on his recommendations and suggestions for action, or on his reason for not taking any action.

The ombudsman shall submit a written report at the end of each school year to the faculty, graduate, and undergraduate senates.

The Ad hoc committee on the Ombudsman was established some time ago, and charged by the Faculty Senate with the task of investigating four basic questions concerning the feasibility of an ombudsman at the University. The committee held six meetings, pored over much of the vast array of literature on the subject, consulted with numerous people on campus, and solicited information from several ombudsmen at other institutions.

Senate Passes Nuclear Treaty

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Senate ratified the nuclear non-proliferation treaty Thursday after rejecting all attempts to set conditions on U. S. participation.

The agreement is intended to keep nuclear weapons out of the hands of countries that do not now have them.

THE NEWS IN BRIEF

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Nixon conferred with Secretary of Defense Melvin R. Laird Thursday as the hour approached for Nixon to decide what to do about the highly charged antiballistic missile program.

Although opposition appeared to be mounting on Capitol Hill against resuming work on the Sentinel antimissile system, one Senate critic said "it would be tough to beat him" if the President comes out strongly for going ahead with the project.

PARIS (AP) - The Viet Cong's delegate to the snarled peace talks hurled a defiant warning Thursday at President Nixon's threat of "appropriate response" to the Communist Command's offensive in South Vietnam.

The enemy drive in South Vietnam has been going on 40 days while the peace talks here are in a stage that can be described only as at a dead halt.

SAIGON (AP) - A slackening of the enemy offensive caused American battle deaths to decline last week to 336, but this figure is still double the average killed weekly in 1969 before the drive began Feb. 23.

TEL AVIV (AP) - Artillery duels between Israel and Egypt flared up and down the 103-mile Suez Canel for 2-1/2 hours Thursday, and Cairo claimed its anti-aircraft guns brought down two Israeli helicopters.

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (CPS) - The leaders of the Black Student Movement (BSM) and teaching assistants at the University of North Carolina campus here threatened Thursday night to ruin the school if demands of striking non-academic employes are not met.

Preston Dobbins, head of the BSM, told concerned students, faculty, and workers that "we're not running from anyone. If we had the helmets and the guns, we'd get every hog and pig on this campus. If the workers' demands are not met, we will destroy this university."

Jack Hicks, representing graduate student TA's, said "If the state doesn't deal with the workers fairly, we will stop this university. It won't be worth a dime in academic circles."

The presence of police earlier in the day had forced nearly a hundred students to leave a deserted campus building which they had been "occupying" for 13 days.

Perfect Atlantic Landing Caps "Successful" Appollo 9 Mission

ABOARD THE USS GUADALCANAL (AP) - The Apollo 9 astronauts landed safely in the calm Atlantic Thursday in a perfect ending to the riskiest space flight yet. Their triumph brought America a huge step closer to a moon landing.

Air Force Cols. James A. McDivitt and David A. Scott and civilian Russell L. Schweickart landed their six-ton spacecraft within world-wide television view of this waiting aircraft carrier, a setdown as precise as the flight itself.

Joyful space officials at the Houston Space Center called the flight "as successful . . . as any of us could ever wish for."

"When all the data are in, we'll be set for the final night to the lunar landing," said Dr. Robert Gilruth, director of the Manned Spaceflight Center.

The astronauts were hustled into sick bay for medical examinations and a midafternoon report from flight surgeon Dr. Clarence Jernigan said they were in good condition.

"I am very pleased with the way the astronauts look,' said the doctor.

The Apollo 9 spacecraft, valuable now only to engineers, was brought aboard the carrier. Officials said it seemed in good shape.

The astronauts will stay aboard the carrier until early Friday when they'll fly by helicopters to Grand Turk Island in the Bahamas. They'll transfer to a space agency jet, fly to Cape Kennedy to refuel and then on to Ellington Air Force Base, near Houston and the Manned Spacecraft Center.

Apollo 9 orbited the earth 151 times during its 10 days, covering more than four million miles.

The critical part of the 241-hour flight came in the first 100 hours when the three crewmen for the first time tested America's moon landing machine.

Schweickart and McDivitt transferred from the command module three times to the attached lunar module. On the third transfer, they separated the moonship and flew more than 100 miles from the mother ship. They found the command module in space, rendezvoused and transferred back.

The rendezvous was a test vital to America's plans to land men on the moon in July. The spider-like lunar craft must be able to link up with the command module, which is left to orbit about the moon, for the moon landing crew to return safely to earth.

Rays Brother Claims Conspiracy

(AP) - James Earl Ray's brother said Thursday he was convinced that there was a conspiracy in the assassination of Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., to which Ray pleaded guilty in Memphis Monday.

The brother, John Larry Ray, was interviewed by the St. Louis Post-Dispatch, which quoted him as saying he was sure that Ray first was approached by conspirators in Canada.

"I am not the only one in on this,' Ray was quoted as telling his brother. "My brother said there was someone else in on this 'deal,' but it had been hushed up by the Federal Bureau of Investigation," the newspaper quoted the brother as saying. "I didn't press him on what he meant."

The guilty plea has been represented as the only way Ray's lawyer, Percy Foreman of Houston, Tex., felt Ray could escape the electric chair. But Ray was quoted by the Nashville Tennessean, second-hand, as saying he has now had second thoughts and wishes he had taken his chances on a trial and a life term.

Under the 99-year term, he will be eligible to seek parole in 1999. Had he been sentenced to life, he could have sought parole in 1982 - earlier if he were given maximum good behavior time.

Meanwhile, two groups announced plans to hold memorial marches in Memphis on April 4, the first anniversary of King's assassination.

Late Senate Action Reforms Fine Arts Council's Make-up

SENATE VICE-PRESIDENT Rick Hartwell, whose bill it was, discusses proposed ammendments to the bill changing the Fine Arts Council into the Fine Arts Committee. (MDC Photo)

The Student Senate, in late business Wednesday night, passed a bill to reorganize the Fine Arts Council into a Fine Arts Committee. This action, based on a bill sponsored by Senate Vice President Rick Hartwell, means that the Senate will set the groups SATF appropriation.

The bill was amended twice, both amendments serving to give the Committee more student control.

The first amendment, proposed by Senator Larry Marcus, allowed that the Chairman be appointed by the Senate. In the bill's original form, the chairman would have been chosen by the Committee's members.

The second amendment, proposed by Senator Bruce Balboni, provided that the Committee be composed by 6 student and 5 faculty members. This made the committee in one Senator's opinion, much more student - orientated than the original composition of 5 students and 5 faculty members would have been.

It was recommended that the Massachusetts Legislature provide the University Medical School with the funds which have been recommended for it. This recommendation was proposed by Senator John Dubois.

And Senator Joe Kilmartin's bill to censure any Fraternity or sorority practicing descrimination was put off indefinately, in a hotly contested vote.

Security Deposit Guarantees Room

The office of Student Affairs has presented a proposal to the Student Senate Services Committee to institute a Room Security Deposit system at the University for the fall semester, reasoning that this step will insure full occupancy in the residence halls and guarantee normal occupancy to students who reserve a room at spring room choosing.

Under this proposal each student within the residence hall system must have a $30.00 deposit on file with the Cashier's Office by May 31, to insure his room assignment. The deposit will be paid when a student enters the residence hall system, and kept in escrow to assure fulfillment of room reservation commitments. The full amount will be refunded to the student, however, when he gives advance notice of intent to terminate residence hall occupancy, when eligible, or leaves the University. Failure to notify the Registrar's Office of intent to withdraw from school, prior to May 31 or December 1, or to notify the Housing Office of cancellation of room reservation prior to May 31 for the fall semester will result in forfeiture of the deposit.

Senate Ratifiess Treaty Calls for Negotiating

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Senate ratified the nuclear non-proliferation treaty by a vote of 83 to 15 Thursday.

Sen. J. W. Fulbright, D-Ark., chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, noted the treaty to curb the spread of nuclear weapons also contains a provision requiring good-faith negotiations on reducing nuclear arsenals of nations that have them.

"I can't believe that the President of the United States, in the face of that vote, will proceed with deployment of the ABM," Fulbright told the Senate.

The spirit of the treaty's Article VI, calling for negotiations to end the arms race, bars "any substantial increase in our arms in the nuclear field,' Fulbright said.

Exchange Club To Meet Monday

The Exchange Club will hold a mass meeting March 17, at 7:30 in S.B.A. 120, for all students interested in applying for the program. Dean Tunis, Director of Admissions, and Mrs. Marjorie Rogers will be present to explain the program and to answer questions.

Past and present exchange students will be present for advisory purposes and for answering questions about their schools. Catalogues of each of the participating colleges will be available. Applications may be picked up at the meeting.

In addition to University of New Mexico and University of Southern Florida next year, the Exchange Program is being extended to Illinois State University, Montana State University, Paterson State College, Portland State College, State University of New York-Albany, University of Alabama, University of Montana, and University of Oregon.

Students Take Over But It's All Academic

SWARTHMORE, Pa. - "I was bored with the way college had been going," said Jonathan Barber, a 19-year-old sophomore at Swarthmore College. "I was bored with prep school before that, and I thought I was wasting my parents' money.'

To awaken his interest and get value for his parents' money, Mr. Barber met with friends and then put up posters inviting Swarthmore's students to list courses they would like to study and run for themselves.

About 100 signed up, inventing numerous courses for their delectation - from beat poetry to mystical religions.

Mr. Barber and his friends then obtained an office opposite the official registration headquarters to organize the students.

Such student enterprise is one result of the national student clamor for more relevance and less tradition, for more ties to life and fewer bonds to what many regard as the "lifeless" areas of classic textbook learning.

At Swarthmore, the cry for student-run studies has the approval of the academic authorities.

Concerned about updating the institution, the officials had set up commissions that examined programs and policies.

The faculty has approved most of the recommendations, including No. 13, which urges "that the college permit a group of students to propose a topic to an instructor for single credit and to run their own course with a reading list approved by the instructor and a final examination administered by him but with no further involvement of faculty."

Where this leaves teachers is unclear.

Said Mr. Barber:

"We were hoping that if the faculty got involved, they'd be involved as participants rather than as people guiding courses according to what they thought was more important. In taking them out of that situation, it might be possible to change the traditional situation of the faculty member."

A Few Rotten Apples

The demands being made by some Orchard Hill residents are legitimate and reasonable: construction of a dining commons on the Hill, bussing service, paved parking lots, and realization of promised athletic facilities.

We see no reason why anyone on the Hillshould notback up the above requests. There is absolutely no excuse for apathy pertaining to these core problem areas which need the support of every Hill resident.

I do, however, understand the feelings of these Hill students (and there are more than a few of them - many more) who have been turned off by the the actions of the "Apple Power" Committee, headed by Joe Tabacco.

First, the signing of petitions was a good idea. But I think Tabacco's emphasis on the fact that the signing of petitions was merely the beginning of a large commitment on the part of the student caused several potentially interested students to hesitate, for fear they they would be expected to do more than they actually desired. Result: not so many signatures as there possibly could have been.

Also, since the meeting lasted until late at night, many of the students who did not attend the meeting (84% of Hill residents at least) were unaware of the committee's plans to wake up the entire Hill at 7:00 a.m. and march down to the Dining Commons. Thus, many negative attitudes were created in the minds of students who perhaps had been cramming for exams until the wee hours of the morning and who had not planned on being awakened at 6:45 by the boisterous protesters' screaming for everyone to get up.

Furthermore, many residents on the Hill were probably dismayed and even angered over the fact that a "Constitution of the Orchard Hill Residential College" had been "ordained and accepted by the consent of the area population" when the "area population" was, in actuality, sleeping.

But, although many feel that some very grave blunders have been made by Tabacco and other staunchly independent committee leaders who were not really representative, the fact remains that Orchard Hill DOES need a suitably located dining commons, that it DOES need paved parking lots, that it DOES need bussing service.

So let not the "leaders' who you feel may have erred deter you from firmly supporting these essential, long-needed goals.

'Soul on Ice'

"The souls of black folk,"' writes critic Maxwell Geismar in the introduction to Cleaver's work, "are the best mirror in which to see the White American.."

To read American history as reported by most whites, America has had unparalleled success as a bastion of freedon, justice, and opportunity. It is voices like Cleaver's that reflect the hideous shadow of a nation that has preached one thing and practiced another. Frederick Douglass, the famous 19th century black orator, knew it and in eloquent tones put it where it's at:

"To him (the black man) your celebration is a sham; your boasted liberty, an unholy license; your national greatness, swelling vanity; your sounds of rejoicing are empty and heartless; your denunciation of tyrants brass-fronted impudence; your shouts of liberty and equality, hollow mockery; your prayers and hymns, your sermons and thanksgivings, with all your religious parade and solemnity are, to him, more bombast, fraud deception, impiety, and hypocrisy - a thin veil to cover up crimes which would disgrace a nation of savages. . .'

Cleaver's is a voice out of the wilderness of society's most oppressed jungle. From its confines he has climbed to the tops of the trees, listened, head nodding to the beat of faint drumbeats from afar, sucking in fresh breezes from our most penetrating thinkers; and now he confronts us with a wild cry of independence.

His voice is matter-of-fact, clear, and authoritative. Describing a day in the life of prison inmates or the link between white oppression at home and neo colonialism abroad, he impresses his readers with the same cool logic found in Malcolm X's AUTOBIOGRAPHY.

True, he is not a college graduate, and occasionally his lack of disciplined intellect sends him out on some very shaky limbs. Yet his brilliantly eclectic analyses of the psychological stereotype constructs of whites, as well as of emasculated blacks, is nothing short of the kind of self-taught genius of Frederick Douglass of Malcolm X. The depth of his work will not yield, even before such truly scientific works as Franz Fanon's BLACK SKIN, WHITE MASKS.

In an age when writers' careers are, for the most part, controlled directed, and manipulated by a clique of New York syncophants; where mediocrity and acquiesence to the established order are hustled into the best-seller lists, SOUL ON ICE is a strong, healthy breeze from the West Coast.

His keen insight is nonetheless devastating. Whether cracking on James Baldwin or Elijah Muhammad, he possesses an intellectual, critical honesty from a vewpoint that has, for so long, been mislabeled "uneducated," "low-brow," or just plain "Negro protest literature," in order to compromise its truth.

If he is at times only a mediocre re-hash of what we have read elsewhere, the totality of the book is nonetheless valuable; for there are so many still "spiritually dead," who need his rapping to get them to ideas critics and reviewers might have heard more eloquently someplace else.

No matter how much "progress' is acclaimed by "Negro leaders," no single black leader strong enough to stand up to the police and the political system behind them has escaped murder or jail. Slaveowners always warned that to educate a Negro is dangerous - they either sicken and die, or have to be killed. Cleaver is the modern parallel.

He cannot go back to purposeless destruction or Saturday night cutting; neither can be mute his voice or limit his resistance to the daily oppression that is a reality to poor black people, up South or down.

Cleaver's skill is an unpolished gem, all the more beautiful, all the more valuable, for having escaped the crushing vise of Black Muslim orthodoxy, all the more necessary for eluding the middle class's bumbing caress. If his edges are rough, they can be honed to a finer instrument. We hope he lives long enough to make IT finer.

On the "Hill"

To the editor:

Wednesday night, under the leadership of sophomore class president Joe Tabacco and contributing support of the four house presidents of the Orchard Hill Residential College, a meeting was held to express grievances regarding certain University services and to form an Orchard Hill Government through which the student voice would be heard.

Early Thursday morning a large group of Orchard Hill students met in the North Dining Commons in order to reaffirm their interest in an area government and to emphasize their concern over many college problems and a willingness to help solve these problems. The meeting was orderly and demonstrated the responsible, but powerful, way that our students plan to approach these issues.

Thr formation of a government which stresses due process (with out delay) will lead to badly needed reform in many social and academic areas. With this government lies the hope of an Orchard Hill Residential College in which students have an equal voice in making their college experience meaningful and fulfilling.

I would like to publically express my firm support and enthusiastic response to the formation of this government which can have unlimited benefit to the students of the Orchard Hill Residential College.

Fire One

To the editor:

The most logical way of solving a problem is to attack its source directly, however more is sometimes accomplished by making use of an indirect means. That is the reason I am writing this letter to the Collegian, rather than the Registrar himself.

Recently a somewhat annoying fact was brought to my attention concerning the operation of the Records and Transcripts Office in Whitmore Hall. It is not a fact known to many students, but it could drastically effect every undergraduate of this University.

The University has grown immensely over the past few years. Because of this growth, most academic and administrative departments have found it necessary to make numerous changes and adjustments. However, like most rapidly expanding institutions, certain elements in its structure are unable to accomodate the rapid change. I feel that the Records and Transcripts Office, which is under the jurisdiction of the Registrar, falls into the category of being one of these lagging elements.

My complaint is the fact that the Records Office has only one transcript of my academic achievements. This record is made of cardboard and is highly flammable. The Registrar will argue that each major department has a record of its students' academic performances. If the transcript has been misplaced by the Records Office, they can request for the supplementary copies held by the student's major department.

What would happen if some pyromaniac were to break into this office, and burn all 15000 transcripts? I suppose that could never happen? Last year, some records at Holyoke Community College were destroyed in a fire. A month or so ago, a number of radicals broke into the Records Office at a large University, forced all the secretaries and officials out of the office, and threatened to destroy the records unless their demands were met.

Graduates, dropouts, students who have flunked out, all have their records on microfilm, but actively enrolled students only have one available transcript. I guess the Registrar thinks he could adequately and simply replace 15000 transcripts.

I am a senior, and find this fact a little scary. What would the University do if they lost my academic history? Would they give me a certificate of attendance? I suppose my prospective employer will take my work that I have had an adequate education? What would the University tell him? I came for a degree, like the other 15000.

Courses

To the editor:

At a meeting of the National Intercollegiate Honors Council in Seattle in the fall of 1968, a dean from the University of Iowa reported that students at his university had come to feel a sense of good will towards the faculty and administration as a result of a program for student-initiated courses.

The idea should be considered for adoption at Massachusetts, in my opinion. So far, except for the reconciliation of the administration and dissatisfied Negro students, there is little evidence that the University is doing anything to meet here the growing alienation of students so evident everywhere one looks. The Iowa plan might have other benefits, too. I can see it as helping to reduce the apathy that seems to be a characteristic of too many Massachusetts students.

The plan I should like to see studied would require the creation of a student committee, perhaps a sub-committee of the Student Senate Academic Affairs Committee, of some fifteen students. This committee would prepare a list of some twenty-five three-credit, upper-level courses to be offered on an experimental basis. This list, with supporting descriptions, would be submitted to the (Faculty Senate Academic Matters Committee, which would select what it considered the best fifteen courses. It would then be the responsibility of the Associate Provost to negotiate with deans and department heads to offer as many of the courses as feasible - at least ten.

At Iowa many of the courses have dealt with contemporary problems, and I suspect that the same pattern would develop here. At Iowa as many as half the courses offered have subsequently been adopted by departments as regular offerings. This option should, it seems to me, be part of any such program here.

Clearly the University of Massachusetts would find it time-consuming and difficult to adopt the program I propose. But something ought to be done to bring faculty, students, and administration closer to the matter that is most important here: the content of the courses offered. The faculty and the administration have a tendency - a dangerous one, it seems to me - to respond to student pressures and needs only when they have become very powerful. I believe that some scheme such as the one I have described will eventually be adopted here. The best time for it to be developed and stability.

EVERETT H. EMERSON

Growth

To the editor:

Yesterday's letter from a student in Professor Mason Lowance's English 136 section seems to assume that the English department is immune to the enormous pressures created by the rapid growth of the University over the past few years. Courses proposed nearly a year in advance of the first actual meeting cannot be expected to guage accurately student interest in certain subjects. An educated guess led us to propose a section of English 135 - a voluntary evening course for both students and instructors - for the fall semester.

When pre-registration figures were completed in August, we were confronted with enrollments well over our estimate in one course and under our estimate in English 135. We therefore asked the department member scheduled to teach English 135 to take on an additional section of the over - loaded course, which was in his area of specialization. He agreed, and we then offered to reassign English 135 students, 17 of them, to sections of the same course meeting during the day (English 125). Apparently the writer of the letter was one of the few who could not be accommodated, to our regret.

Of course we are grateful to such faculty members as Mr. Lowance. He is not the first to divide a large class into two smaller sections for more effective discussion. But I think it is unfair to impugn the administrative integrity of the entire department of English when, to coin a phrase, we were operating under "circumstances beyond our control.'

"Plough and the Stars" Not Up to Par

By DON MORLEY
Fine Arts Theatre Review

Sean O'Casey's dramatic portrayal of the Irish Easter uprising of 1916, "The Plough and the Stars," opened Wednesday night at Bartlett Auditorium. This realistic drama by Ireland's most famous playwright was performed by the UMass Theatre under the direction of Assistant Professor Harry Mahnken.

Mr. Mahnken has called the play "a devastating portrait of the effects of war both upon those who go to fight and those who stay behind." The personal torments and conflicts of patriotism and war are well characterized by O'Casey. His personal experiences with laborers are shown in the speech and idiosyncracies of Fluther Good, a carpenter, The Covey, a fitter, and Peter Flynn, a common laborer. Although difficult to understand at times, the Irish dialect adds rich vitality to the dialogue.

Douglas Bennet, Anne Agard, and Mike Prusky all give fine performances in their portrayals of Irish townspeople caught in the midst of civil strife. Prusky, as Fluther, gives a good representation towards the end of the third act as a drunken looter during a skirmish. In the preceding scene, however, when Jack Clitheroe, a Commandant in the Irish Citizen Army, is forced to choose between his wife and a dying comrade, touches of "soap-opera' melodrama are found which detract from the total impact of the play. Stephanie Null, as Clitheroe's wife, gives her best performance in the fourth and final act while revealing the effects of war upon wives and lovers tossed aside for patriotic duty to country.

Elizabeth Weiss, the costume designer for UMT productions, produced a tintype effect, as in early twentieth century photographs, with her use of sombre and muted tones. Combined with the setting and lighting, the costuming enhanced the rather gloomy aspect of the drama.

As in last December's enactment of Middleton and Rowley's "The changeling", the UMT performance fails to achieve the polished finesse one might expect in a college production.

Karpel Concert Well Received

By GLAE SAKARIS
Fine Arts Staff

On Sunday, March 9, Pianist, Alan Karpel, gave his graduate recital in Bowker Auditorium.

He opened with the Bach Chromatic Fantasia and Fugue. This work was very tastefully performed. The lines were precise and the musical intent was clear. Mr. Karpel displayed a fine tone and an accurate attack.

The Barber Excursions for piano went very well. Mr. Karpel seemed to have relaxed more for these compositions. He kept a steady beat and showed good tone and fine contrasts. The 'Blues' section of the excursions was the least good of the four parts for it was not subtle enough.

The final piece before intermission was the Chopin Ballade in G Minor. Unfortunately this was not performed on the high level of the Bach and the Barber. The Ballade was very unmusical and was performed too fast. All the phrasings were alike, the melodic line was not good and usually the dotted rhythms were not precise. The Ballade is a very romantic work and Mr. Karpel's performance of it lacked in romanticism.

After the intermission Mr. Karpel concluded his program with the Appasionata sonata by Beethoven. This is one of the more difficult Beethoven sonatas and it requires the softest pianissimo to the strongest forte in order to be performed well. Mr. Karpel's fortes were always there but he did not seem to be able to get a true pianissimo out of the instrumeat all evening. Because of this the apassionata was not dramatic. The runs were even but the repeated notes in the first movement were not and the second movement did not have a clear sense of direction.

UMass Concert Program Changed

The Concert Association of the University of Massachusetts in Amherst announces a change in the program which will be offered next Thursday evening, March 20. On this occasion, the Contemporary Chamber Ensemble will be presented at 8:00 p.m. in Bowker Auditorium under the direction of Arthur Weisberg.

The revised program for this concert will include Joel Chadabe's "Prelude to Naples"; Edgard Varese "Density 21.5 for Solo Flute; "Nach Bach", a fantasy for piano by George Rochberg and "Three Pieces for Clarinet' by Igor Stravinsky. In addition, listeners will have the opportunity to hear Gyorgy Ligeti's "Adventures", "Trois' by Niccolo Castiglioni and Fredric Myrow's "Songs from the Japanese'. This concert, the sixth in the current season of the Concert Association will bring to the University campus one of the nation's most respected groups performing contemporary music. The Contemporary Chamber Ensemble lists many well known soloists among its membership including Arthur Bloom, clarinet; Gilbert Kalish, piano; Phyliss Bryn-Julson, soprano; Jeanne Benjamin, violin and Jacob Glick, viola. Thursday evening's concert is open to UMass undergraduates without charge. Reserved tickets at $1.50 are available to the public and may be obtained by contacting the Student Union Ticket Office. Remaining tickets will be available at the door.

A Real Experience

By SUSAN SCHMEHL
Fine Arts Staff

Last weekend the Amherst Masquers presented, as they will again this weekend, Tennessee William's "Camino Real". True to their fine standard of acting the troupe possesses talents unbeknown to those who have only been exposed to University Theatre productions.

For those who are familiar with Amherst College theatrical endeavors, "Camino Real" is again a most gratifying experience. Take the time to indulge yourself in a meaningful evening - explore the many talents waiting only a short walk away.

"Chitra" at Smith

"Chitra," a play written by the Indian poet and playwright Rabindronath Tagore, will be presented at Smith College this weekend. The drama will be offered in Wright Hall at 8 p.m. Saturday and on Sunday at 2 p.m. Admission is free and the public is invited to attend.

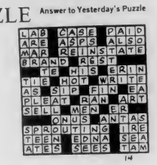
Mortar Board Provides Volunteer Services

By Ernie Reis
Staff Reporter

The Mortar Board is one of those organizations that seldom gets publicity but provides many volunteer services to the campus. There are nearly 200 chapters throughout the nation, The Isogon Chapter is the University's part of this honor society. The organization is composed of senior women who have been of service to the University and have maintained a good scholastic record. Presently, membership to the Mortar Board is sixteen but can be as high as twenty-five. They were established here in 1955.

The accomplishments through the years of the Mortar Board have been many and varied. When the Student Union was near completion they helped in establishing the original S.U.G. Board. They also helped in establishing an International Student Organization Later they sponsored a trip to the United Nations for the foreign students on campus.



Applications are in process for the Mortar Board but any junior woman who believes she is qualified (3.0 or better grade point) and has shown interest in service to the university should apply before the Spring Vacation. This is one organization that examines its applicants on achievement alone. Applications should be sent to the Mortar Board, Box 402, RSO, Student Union.

Puckmen Compile 9-12 Season, Big Improvement Over Last Year

By WALT STACHURA
Senior Reporter

The UMass hockey team concluded its second season under the reins of Jack Canniff with one of its best seasons ever, tying a Redman record for most wins in a season and showing definite improvement over last year's 4-14 team.

In the nine wins that UMass piled up during the year, the biggest surprises were the pair of 4-3 wins over Middlebury and Bowdoin in the early part of the season. Also, UMass played close games with annual Division II powerhouses Norwich and Colby, losing by a narrow one goal margin to each of them.

As usual, the season was split into two parts by the Christmas vacation, finals and intersession. UMass played 11 games in the first part of the season and then had a mont h layoff before completing its schedule with 10 games. This kind of a schedule makes for some bad playing dates as the Redmen played four games in four days just after Christmas.

The first half of the season was an up and down affair as the Redmen split their first 10 games winning five and losing five. However, a six game losing streak at the start of the second part of the season finished any chances the Redmen had for a 500 season.

UMass got off to a flying start as they pounded new opponent Lowell Tech, 11-2 at Orr rink. Charlie Hanifan with a hat trick and Bob Madore with two goals led the UMass attack.

The Redme n proved that they would be no pushover as they gave Colby a scare before bowing 2-1 at the Mules home rink. Colby later moved into the ECAC Division II post-season tournament but were beaten by eventual champ AIC.

UMass returned to the friendly confines of Orr rink and added to the losing streak of Amherst by a 4-0 score. Larry Walsh had 18 saves in recording his only shutout of the campaign.

Vermont dropped into Orr rink for their first meeting of the year and downed the Redmen 6-3. John Hartnett was the star for UMass with two goals. UMass bounced back on the winning track with a thrilling 4-3 upset of Bowdoin as Jim O'Brien scored the hat trick.

AIC proved to be too strong for the Redmen as they beat UMass 6-1 at Orr rink. In that game, UMass was down only by 1-0 with five minutes to go in the second period but the Yellow Jackets showed their offensive power that was to make them Division II champions in the final twenty minutes.

UMass continued to play at a .500 clip as they edged Middlebury, 4-3 in a thriller at home. Hartnett with two goals and Tom Babson with the winner were the stars.

UMass moved into the tough part of its schedule with the playing of the Yankee Conference at Vermont just after Christmas. In the first round, the Redmen ran into nemesis Vermont and lost, 4-1. However, UMass took consolation honors the next night by beating UConn 7-3.

UMass had a long road trip to make as they moved into the Boston Arena the night after the UConn game for the Cod Fish Bowl tournament. After the long trip, the Redmen were tired and got bombed by Boston State. In the consolation game the next night, UMass gave a credible performance in a 3-1 loss to Bowdoin despite playing their fourth game in four nights.

After a month long layoff, the Redmen skaters were rusty and dropped their next four games to Penn, Army, Vermont and Williams. UMass broke the six game losing skein in a convincing 12-3 trouncing of hapless Amherst. Tom Babson and Bod Madore paced the attack with hat tricks.

The Redmen continued their high scoring ways as they dumped UConn, 7-1, at Storrs. Hartnett and Babson had two goals apiece. The skaters continued to roll as they battered Holy Cross, 13-2, piling up their highest score of the season. Jeff Sanborn led the onslaught with a hat trick while nine other UMass players turned on the red light.

The three game win streak was broken by Norwich as they nipped the Redmen, 7-6 after UMass led 4-1 after the first period. Norwich used this game as a springboard into the Division II tournament which they lost in the finals to AIC, 7-6.

UMass gained its ninth and final victory of th e year with a 9-1 triumph over Holy Cross in Worcester. A seven goal second period clinched this game for UMass as they tied a 38 year record for most wins in a season. The Redmen tried to gain their tenth victory at New Hampshire in the season finale but the tournament bound Wildcats defeated UMass, 7-0, before 3,500 cheering fans.

Several individual records were set during the season. Jeff Sanborn became the top man on the career scoring list with 81 points on 41 goals and 40 assists. The 40 assists is als o a record.

Sanborn also became the first UMass hockey player to be awarded a place on a weekly ECAC all-star team. Defenseman Billy McMann received a berth on the last week of the season making two UMass players to achieve that honor for the first time.

Offensively, the team was well balanced with Canniff able to send out any of his three lines during a game. Sanborn topped the scoring list with 29 points. Second line center John Hartnett was second on the list with 25 points. His 15 assists topped the squad and tied Hartnett with Sanborn for third spot for assists in a season.

First line wing Hanifan picked up 17 points during the campaign which gave him a career total of 49, good for eighth place in Redmen career points. Other top scorers for UMass were Madore and Babson with 20 points apiece.

Defensively, UMass showed some good goaltending from Larry Walsh as he led Division II goalies in average for a while and ended up with a 4.00 average. The defensive pairings of Doug Powling and DiCicco, McMann and Rocky Stone were steady defensively and scored surprisingly well. Mc Mann had 7 goals and 9 assists which game him six spot on the Redmen scoring lists.

Prospects for the future look bright as the Freshmen had their best team ever and the varsity is losing only six lettermen. Returning next season will be Hartnett, Madore, Ed and Paul Riley, on the offense while McMann and Powling will return to form the nucleus of the defense along with Walsh.

The schedule next season will be a little tougher as the Redmen will drop both the Yankee Conference and Cod Fish Bowl tournaments in favor of games with Merrimac and Hamilton, both strong Division II teams and Division 1 opponent Brown.

To do well with this tougher schedule, the Frosh will have to supply the depth that will be lost with graduation of Sanborn, Hanifan, DiCicco, Stone, Babson and O'Brien. If the Frosh can supply the necessary talent, the Redmen should have an excellent opportunity to make the Division II post-season tourney.

Matmen Post Best Card in UMass History

By BOB GANLEY
Staff Reporter

Wrestling coach Homer Barr had a pleased expression on his face when he reflected on the performance of his matmen over the past season. "We had a great year," Barr said when thinking of the vast improvement of the team. "We had a 9-6 dual meet record, which is the best in UMass wrestling history, and in one year, we moved from fifteenth place to third in the New England tournament.

Bob Freeman and George Zguris won individual championships and they will have a chance to represent the school when they go to Utah later this month to compete in the nationals." Barr also lauded the performance of coach Maurice Brosky's freshman team which won the N.E. title and boasted four N.E. champions.

Actually, the season got off to a poor start when the Redmen lost a 13-23 decision to Coast Guard early in December. Barr felt that the team wasn't really in shape and due to weight problems, he was using a makeshift lineup. However, the Redmen bounced back to defeat Tufts, Amherst and URI before the Christmas break. The Amherst win was very important because the Redmen hadn't defeated the Lord Jeffs in recent memory, and they looked very strong in their 44-5 victory.

After finals, Barr took the team down to Central Conn. for their toughest meet to date. Central Conn was one of the teams Barr figured would give UMass the most trouble and he was right. The meet was very close but the Redmen finished on the wrong end of the 23-14 score. They then proceeded to go from bad to worse as their next opponent was defending N.E. champ Springfield. They lost 28-9, but the highlight of the meet was the victory of Capt. Tom Young over defending National Junior College Ziegler by an 11-3 score. Young was injured in the bout but came back to completely dominate his adversary.

UMass chalked up two easy victories in their next two meets as they knocked Williams, 35-8 and UConn, 25-18. The victories were costly, however, as they lost the services of Freeman and Bob Willman due to injuries. The injuries caused both wrestlers to miss the Pa. trip, where the Redmen were soundly defeated by East Stroudsburg and Wilkes-Barre. Howie Kaplin was the lone UMass winner on the trip and Young and Tom Andrewes picked up points on draws.

The Redmen returned home a much tougher team and finished the season strong. They defeated an under-manned Dartmouth team and then proceeded to win a quadrangular meet held with Tufts, Amherst and UNH. During the final week of the season, they knocked off WPI and BC before closing out the season with a close loss to an MIT team which finished second in N.E. last year.

Individually, the outstanding wrestler had to be Freeman. Although he didn't wrestle first semester, he finished with a 10-1 record through the N.E. competition. His only loss was to Henry Marchetti of Central Conn. in his first varsity match. He also boasted a win over defending 145 pound champ Joe Maxham of MIT, 14-3. He is very strong and aggressive and may surprise some people in Utah.

If Freeman was the most outstanding, then George Zguris was the most underated. George entered the tourney with a 4-5 record and even his coach didn't expect any miracles out of him. But when the smoke had cleared, there was Zguris as 191 pound champ. His key to success is that he is very hard to takedown and he also gained confidence by winning his last four dual meets. Overall he finished with a 7-5 slate.

Young also had an outstanding year. His dual meet record was 11-2-1 and he was the number one seed at 160 pounds in the tourney. However illness struck him down as he could only place fourth after losing a very close return bout with Ziegler. Andrewes had a 12-3-1 record and led the team with four pins. His tournament hopes were shattered when he lost in the quarter finals on a referees decision. Mike Brauner also was a very consistent performer with a 10-4-1 mark. His top performance came against Norm Hawkins of MIT as he tied the defending N.E. champ 1-1.

Other fine seasons were turned in by Nick Di Domenico with a 9-6 record at 115 pounds and Phil Davis (10-6) wrestling at three different weights. Howie Kaplin, 130 pounds, also did a fine job as he made the team second semester and finished with a 6-6 record. Willman had an up and down season but came back very strong after his injury to place third in the tournament in addition to his 7-4 record. Other Redmen to see considerable action were Tim Perkins (3-0), Brian Urquhart (7-3), Tom Callaghan (3-4), Bill Goodwin (4-2) and Glen Cummins (3-6). Statistically, the Redmen led their opponents in takedowns 122-93 and in pins 30-18.

Coach Brosky's frosh matmen also had an excellent season. Dave Reynolds, Clay Jester, Kent Mignocci, and Derwood James won New England championships. James, wrestling at 191, had an outstanding season. He had an 11-0 dual meet record and finished with a 14-0 overall. Reynolds (123) finished at 6-1, Jester (137) was 9-1 and Mignocci (167) was 7-2 in dual meet competition. At 130, Sheldon Goldberg was 9-0 but a knee injury kept him out of tournament action. Jim Godkin (152) and heavyweight Carl Dambman placed second in the New Englands and had respective 6-1 and 9-2 records. Fine seasons were e also turned in by Larry Piccioli with an 8-3 slate, Barry Godowsky (5-2) and Rod Loiselle (4-5).

Other frosh to see action were Steve Jones (2-4), Bob Parent (1-1-1) and Mark Thone (1-1). Overall the Little Redmen were 8-1 on the season and led their opponents in falls 3-5 and in takedowns 90-44.

Board of Trustees Name Shapiro Acting Dean of Arts and Sciences

By RICHARD W. STORY
State House Bureau

BOSTON - Dr. Seymour Shapiro has been named Acting Dean of the College of Arts and Sciences by the Board of Trustees, it was announced Friday by Provost Oswald Tippo.

Dr. Shapiro, professor and head of the department of Botany, replaces I. Moyer Hunsberger who resigned as Dean March 1. Dr. Shapiro, who will assume the new position immediately, will head the University's largest academic unit, Arts and Sciences, with more than 6800 student s enrolled in 21 departments.

Provost Tipps, in making the announcement, said, "This is a most important appointment. During the last two weeks I consulted with every department head within the College, and with student and faculty committees before the decision was made. It became clear after discussing the situation with those concerned with the College that Dr. Shapiro is the man we have been looking for."

Dr. Shapiro, 44 years old, received his B.S. nd Ph.D. from the University of Michigan. He came to the University of Massachusetts in September 1964. He has taught at the universities of Oregon and Michigan, and at Brooklyn College. Shapiro is known in his field as an outstanding research scientist, whos e special interests are radiobiology and the developmental physiology of woody plants.

He serves as a visiting lecturer at a number of colleges for the American Institute of Biological Sciences, and has been a special lecturer in radiation biology summer institutes at Duke, Adelphi College, and Univ. Michigan. He became a consultant to the NSF's division of biological and medical sciences in 1961.

In the only other major business handled by the Board in its brief 37 minute meeting Friday, a joint contract for the construction of a dormitory complex off Eastman Lane was awarded to Daniel O'Connell's Sons and the Aberthaw Construction Company.

The dormitory complex, expected to be ready in September 1970, will contain "suite" type rooms.

With no further dormitory construction planned after 1970, the Board heard discussion on the feasibility of more emphasis on off-campus housing in the future. President Lederle told the Board that more construction of off-campus housing should be encouraged. "We are coming to the end of the road with the use of the present type of dormitory. We want to develop a greater variety of living accommodations, and to avoid overbuilding a particular kind.

Board chairman Joseph P. Healey presented a certificate and inscribed gavel to retired chairman Frank L. Boyden, in appreciation for Boyden's 10 years of service as chairman of the Board of Trustees.

Richard W. Story, MDC Education Editor, has also written a background story on Dr. Shapiro which deals with some of the problems the acting dean will face in the months to come. The story appears on page 2 of today's MDC.

Deans, Students Discuss University Requirements

By ANNE HILLERMAN
Staff Reporter

The Committee for a University Forum presented a discussion on curriculum, requirements and the purpose of the University yesterday afternoon at Mahar Auditorium, to an audience which made up in enthusiasm for what it lacked in numbers.

Approximately twenty students heard Deans Livingston and McFarland from the college of Arts and Sciences, Dr. Albert Reh from the German department and students Marc Freeman and Ron Kosnicki explain their views on the language requirement and curriculum in general.

During the last 10 years, said Dr. Reh, universities have made the mistake of basing their language instruction on linguistics. A primary purpose of an elected language course is to open new perspectives on other cultures to a person, and, consequently, give him a new insight into his own culture. College language classes should be regarded as doing more than teaching the student to understand and respond to the spoken foreign word. A distinction is definately needed between those courses designed for language majors and general classes for the non-major, according to Reh.

"Before recommending the abolition of the language requirement, we should investigate senseless language courses and see what the student response to them will be.' Dr. Reh also mentioned the University Curriculum Committee has voted in favor of eliminating the general University requirements, leaving the decision up to the department heads in the individual colleges.

The forum members also discussed the idea of required courses in general and their place in a University curriculum.

"Sixty credits of requirements is too much," said Dean McFarland. "I know of no faculty member who's going to say we need all the required courses or more required courses.'

McFarland suggested that he would like to see a broader range of majors available to students, including some proposed by a student himself and inter-departmental majors.

Members of the forum frequently brought the discussion back to the idea that the University should provide a breath of encounter for students - and opportunity for them to examine a wide range of courses. Required courses give a framework for and education of this sort, they said.

UNIVERSITY FORUM - The members of the discussion presented by The Committee for a University Forum are: Albert Reh, of the German Department, students Ron Kosnicki and Marc Freeman, and Dean Livingston, also of the College of Arts and Sciences. The discussion was held yesterday at Mahar Auditorium. The topics covered by the members of the forum were curriculum, the requirements and purpose of the university.

STROM THURMOND - The Republican senator from South Carolina will speak Wednesday night at Curry Hicks Cage as part of the distinguished Visitors Program. The program will begin at 7:30.

D.V.P. Sponsors Strom Thurmond

As part of the Distinguished Visitors Program, Senator Strom Thurmond will speak at Curry Hicks Cage, Wednesday at 7:30 p.m.

The sixty-six-year old Senator from South Carolina has been the most outspoken "hawk" on American foreign policy. He has advocated major escalation in Vietnam, unspecified but strong retaliation for the Peublo seizure by North Korea, and dispatch of nuclear weapons to West Germany.

A former "tough as nails" state judge, Thurmond refers to Supreme Court decisions as: The chief fountain of lawlessness in this country today. Thurmond took a leading role in the successful fight to ban Abe Fortas from membership to the court.

Thurmond ran for President in 1948 as the candidate of the States Rights Democratic Party. Although defeated by Truman, he set the precedent for Wallace's bid for the Presidency in 1968.

The Senator later worked for Johnson's candidacy at the 1960 Democratic Convention. In 1964 he allied with Barry Goldwater, finding t necessary to repudiate the "party of our fathers."

'n 1968, however, the Senator was thrust into the envious role of "kingmaker" at the Republican Convention. It was his control of the large Southern block which enabled Richard M. Nixon to gain his party's endorsement.

One of the most controversial figures in American politics today, Thurmond was rated by the Conservative Americans for Constitutional Action as 100 per cent in their "consistency index", for "safeguarding God-given rights, promoting sound economic growth, by strengthening constitutional government against 'group morality', socialized economy, and centralization of government power.' The liberal Americans for Democratic Action rate his as zero.

Concert Association Changes Program

The Concert Association of U-Mass announces a change in the program which will be offered next Thursday evening, March 20. On this occasion, The Contemporary Chamber Ensemble will be presented at 8 p.m. in Bowker Auditorium under the direction of Arthur Weisberg.

The revised program for this concert will include Joel Chadabe's "Prelude to Naples"; Edgard Varese "Density 21.5 for solo flute; "Nach Bach", a fantasy for piano by George Rochberg and "Three Pieces for Clarinet" by Igor Stravinsky. In addition, listeners will have the opportunity to hear Gyorgy Ligeti's "Adventures"; "Tropi" by Niccolo Castiglioni and Fredric Myrow's "Songs from the Japanese".

This concert, the sixth in the current season of the Concert Association will bring to the University campus one of the nation's most respected groups performing contemporary music. The Contemporary Chamber Ensemble lists many well known soloists among its membership including Arthur Bloom, clarinet; Gilbert Kalish, piano; Phyliss Bryn - Julson, soprano; Jeanne Benjamin, violin and Jacob Glick, viola. Thursday evening's concert is open to UMass undergraduates without charge.

Reserved tickets at $1.50 are available to the public and may be obtained by contacting the Student Union Ticket Office. Remaining tickets will be available at the door.

Alpine Cable Car Traps Tourists

MUERREN, Switzerland (AP) - Emergency brakes halted an Alpine cable car midway on what is normally an eight-minute run Saturday and, holding fast, trapped the 76 excursionists 300 feet above the Bernese Oberland for up to 11 hours.

Rescuers working with rope and pulley freed the last of the group at 4 a.m. yesterday.

"No one panicked," said Real Gosselin, a Canadian. "We all took it good naturedly. And the Swiss people looked after us beautifully."

The Redmen were a great basketball team, who inspired spirit and loyalty into their fans this season, as Mr. Foley would know if he had followed them. (I assume he did not since he cannot see their "relevancy".) I submit that Joe Tabacco did speak for a good share of the student body when he expressed his thanks to the team and Coach Leaman for their "job well done.' I would like to join him in his admiration.

I also suggest to Mr. Foley that he start reading the COLLEGIAN front page because Orchard Hill is going to make headlines, and its going to make them because Joe Tabacco spoke for the residents there and united them into an organized body working toward basic needed goals for Orchard Hill.

What's so special about Beechwood Ageing?

We must be bragging too much about Beechwood Ageing.

Because we're starting to get some flak about it. Like, "Beechwood, Beechwood . . . big deal." And "If Beechwood Ageing is so hot, why don't you tell everybody what it is?"

So we will.

First, it isn't big wooden casks that we age Budweiser in.

But it is a layer of thin wood strips from the beech tree (what else?) laid down in a dense lattice on the bottom of our glass-lined brewing tanks. This is where we let Budweiser ferment a second time. (Most brewers quit after one fermentation. We don't.)

These beechwood strips offer extra surface area for tiny yeast particles to cling to, helping clarify the beer. And since these strips are also porous, they help absorb beer's natural "edge," giving Budweiser its finished taste. Or in other words, "a taste, a smoothness and a drinkability you will find in no other beer at any price."

Ah yes, drinkability. That's what's so special about Beechwood Ageing.

But you know that.

Budweiser. is the King of Beers.
(But you know that.)

FROM OUR SIDE

The Presidio Mutiny

Many people throughout the country are up in arms about the proceedings of the Presidio mutiny trials in San Francisco, and rightly so.

The supposed "mutiny" took place on October 14 of last year. It consisted of a sit-in lasting less than one hour, protesting the general conditions of the stockade, (which was more than justified, considering the shocking conditions) and the killing of a fellow prisoner two days earlier. Nineteen-year-old Pvt. Richard Bunch was shot in the back by a shotgun wielding guard at a distance of twenty yards, with no verbal warning. This act of murder was ruled "justifiable homicide" by the Army within the day, even though any of the other guards could have stopped Bunch without a shot.

On December 7, after the pretrial hearings for the "27," it was recommended to Lt. Gen. Stanley Larson, the Commanding General of the Sixth Army, that the charge of mutiny under Article 94 does not apply to the case of October 14. To charge these men with mutiny, "which has its roots in the harsh admiralty laws of previous centuries, for demonstrating against the conditions which existed in the stockade, is, in my opinion, an overreaction by the Army and a misapplication of a statute which could lead to a further miscarriage of justice." It was recommended that the men be tried by a special Court-martial, or, as an alternative that they be separated from the Army with less than an honorable discharge. This recommendation, made by Captain Richard Millard and the five other men involved in the first investigative hearing, was rejected by Capt. McMahon, Post Commander, Col. Garnett, Sixth Army legal office, and Lt. Gen. Larson. None of the three gave any reason for the rejection.

So far, eight men have been tried, and the first three were given an average of 15 years hard labor. These men have already begun serving their sentences at Fort Leavenworth, although there is some hope for an appeal if there is enough public reaction.

There are several ways which each of you as an individual can show your disapproval of the course of action taken by the Army so far:

FIRST, you can write or telegram Senators and Congressmen, and Stanley Resor, Secretary of the Army, The Pentagon, Washington, D.C.; or, Lt. Gen. Stanley Larson, Commanding Gen., Sixth Army, The Presidio, San Francisco, Calif., 94129; or, Secretary Melvin Laird, Secretary of Defense, The Pentagon, Washington, D.C. In these letters demand that the convictions be reversed and the charges dropped, and request a Congressional investigation and a complete re-evaluation of military court procedures;

SECONDLY, letters can be written to all local newspapers as well as national magazines such as TIME and LIFE, which have carried articles on the events at the Presidio;

THIRDLY, you can sign the petition which will be in the Student Union lobby next week; and FOURTHLY, you can participate in the vigil to be held on the Amherst Common, Tuesday, March 18, from noon to six, which will be part of a nationwide demonstration on that day.

Since this travesty is not a controversial or political issue, but one of humanity and justice, everyone should feel it his duty to help the cause in some way, no matter how small, because, "only a real display of profound public outrage over the shambled state of justice in this country can save these men."

On Liberalism

To the editor:

We would like to take exception to the editorial by Keith B. Bromery on March 13, 1969 entitled "Skin Deep Liberals." Just because someone "back(s) the administrations' present stand on recruitment" doesn't make him a conservative. It seems to us that the more liberal stand is to allow everyone the opportunity to choose for himself what groups he will join, what industry he will work for, what people he will talk to, and what ideas he will be exposed to, than to exclude particular views from being represented. It is not the majority who are "skin deep liberals," but, rather, those who want to impose their view of morality on others.

Stockbridge Senate

To the editor:

The officers and representatives and the student body of the Student Senate, Stockbridge School of Agriculture affirm their support of the President of the University and the other members of the faculty and Administration who were involved in coping with the recent sit-in protest in the Whitmore Administration Building. The students and other persons who occupied the University premises in clear violation of University regulations and in acknowledged violation of the laws of trespass did so with fore knowledge of the penalities attached to such action. The University Administration acted firmly, but with restraint and a minimum application of force, to return the occupied premises to normal University uses.

The arrest of the thirty-three persons was carried out only after repeated opportunities had been offered to the occupiers to clear the premises without the application of sanctions; at which point the intervention of the State Police was requested no effective alternatives seemed to remain open to the Administration.

Those who occupied Whitmore went far beyond the limits of free speech and petition; they acted through force in an effort to compel the University to reverse its decisions that had been arrived at by regular, lawful procedures. The response of the University was responsible and the penalty with which the occupiers are faced is reasonable in relation to the seriousness of the offense. Reversal of the Administration's decision at this point would jeopardize the future capacity of the University to carry out its normal functions when ever any group of whatever size decided to take overt action to disrupt the University.

This decreee won the unanimous support of the Stockbridge Student Senate on March 11, 1969.

"Metamorphism"

To the editor:

As you are, I am sure, well aware, events of the past few weeks have brought into the light what appears to be a massive communication gap at the University of Massachusetts. Some thought - and even some concern - has focused on the issue of public debate and communication on campus. How can one effectively present his point of view to a large portion of the University community?

At present, only two points of view concerning change, reform, relevancy and all else that this implies, are being widely heard on this campus. A moderate viewpoint is being presented by the MASSACHUSETTS DAILY COLLEGIAN. And, what seems to be a sensationalistic, revolutionary point of view is being presented by the Students for a Democratic Society and similar groups.

In the University today a rational view of what can be considered essentially "radical" change is not being presented in any meaningful, authoritative way. One seems to hear only revolutionary rhetoric or 'go through the system" (try subcommittee X of committee C), when one talks of change. Yet, many seem to acknowledge that a real change is needed - a radical change within the system. The same people will acknowledge that radical change comes only through radical, activist oriented thought. We need radical thought that will promote alternative to the present institutions of our social system - or perhaps, thoughts on an entirely new alternative system.

An attempt is now being made to establish a voice for those who do not conform with either the "Establishment" or revolutionary thoughts on political action. Hopefully, a gap will be at least partially filled.

Present plans to fill this gap will be centering on the DAILY COLLEGIAN. The COLLEGIAN has consented to give a group of interested students one page a week for presentation of radical opinion on campus. They will have enough autonomy so that all that will be asked about articles is "Is it 'relevant' and responsible?" This page will be under a separate headline, probably METAMORPHISM. This will give the page an identity of its own.

The COLLEGIAN is being used for several reasons. It offers the advantages of already having a wide distribution system, and a wide readership. The COLLEGIAN will offer more of an opportunity for a forum - like flavor - this is primarily because it is a daily newspaper.

Present plans - or perhaps hopes - are that beginning next September, METAMORPHISM will be an independent, weekly journal of public opinion and campus-wide debate. Financing may come through the Student Senate, a foundation grant or sales of the paper - or possible combinations. Interest will, again hopefully, come from the entire campus.

We are now soliciting material from any interested person. Our aim is to have perhaps a two-two-one distribution of students - faculty-administration articles. We are asking only that writers focus on problems concerning change, things that need to be changed, how to change something - or essentially anything along this line of thought. Our main concern is only that something submitted be logical, responsible and at least a little bit "relevant' to something.

Manuscripts, typed and double spaced may be submitted to METAMORPHISM, in care of the MASSACHUSETTS DAILY COLLEGIAN, Student Union, University of Massachusetts, Amherst, Mass. Our deadline for the first issue will be April 1, 1969.

Editorial Comment

To the editor:

May I comment on the editorials in the March 13 COLLEGIAN? Although Mr. Reis's arrogance is offensive, he presents forcefully a basic issue. If all a student wants from a university is financial security in a less than top level job in business and industry, then required courses outside his special field are a waste of time. Is it true, however, that most students share Mr. Reis's view: that they find no satisfaction in knowledge for its own sake; no enjoyment from studying works of art; no excitement in sharing the thoughts of the great minds of the past; no lift of spirit from contemplating the struggles, past or present, of those who have dedicated themselves to mitigating the sufferings of human individuals and to creating a society where needless suffering will not exist? (I ask pardon of my students for omitting illustrations, in the interest of brevity.) My answer is "No."

As for "skin deep liberals," I am unwilling to give up the notion old fashioned though it may be, that "liberalism" means freedom for EVERYBODY to say what he wants to say to whoever wants to hear him; for EVERY group to recruit on campus according to established procedures; and for EVERY individual or group to express opposition - except by force. Those who think the military-industrial complex is evil - as I myself do - must of course oppose it; but to use force is to surrender the issue, and accept the definition of "justice" as "the interest of the stronger." I recommend to Mr. Bromery the reading of Mill's essay "On Liberty." And I close with a quotation from Wendell Wilkie: "whenever we take away the liberties of those we hate, we are opening the way to loss of liberty for those we love."

Apple Power

To the editor:

An Orchard Hill dining commons? Think twice. Sure, it is great to be able to step out our doors to breakfast and then tumble back into bed, but did you ever consider having to walk UP the hill to lunch or, if you have evening classes, to dinner, especially if your schedule allows less than an hour for eating? I have talked to students in Southwest who have the dining commons right outside their doors; they still don't bother to go to breakfast if they don't have early classes. Who says Orchard Hill students will be any different?

I suppose that the ideal solution to the up-down hill problem would be to build a dining commons half-way up the hill. Unfortunately, the hill itself is a drumlin, made of a fairly mobile substance called till. Anyone who has seen the mudslides along the path down to North Commons will wonder how long a dining commons perched half-way up the hill will remain there. Of course, there is one semi-flat place, the field behind the infirmary, but then one wonders how the patients in the infirmary will appreciate the sounds of construction outside their windows? I know students who moved to the Orchard from Southwest because they couldn't take the construction there. We in the Orchard are proud of its peacefulness. Are we going to have its quiet broken at 7:30 a.m. by the sound of a bulldozer?

Apple Power is great. But Orchard Hill students must act with more brains than apples.

The Boyd Lecture

To the editor:

Having been present at the Malcolm Boyd "lecture", I have been led to a surprising, if not unnovel, idea.

We are living in a time of fantastic progress, both scientifically and morally speaking. As a result of this fast pace, more and more information is required in order to "know" a substantial amount in any area or field of study.

So to my point: At the Boyd gathering, one facet of the university community was most outstandingly not present - those members of the administration with whom some of you have been recently struggling, for the right of mental breathing. I must ask: were any or all of these men "invited" to attend this speaking? If not, why not? You see, like medicine, chemistry, engineering, bricklaying, education should not be stagnant. If it wishes to be, it CANNOT survive (as we may observe) as it has lived. But the Boyd meeting would have been an opportunity for those present to indirectly, but meaningfully, "confront" university administration, THROUGH a member of its own community with national fame and respect. That this man had time and energy enough to come and speak to us, is sufficient indication of the way education should be progressing. Mr. Boyd came to this campus to teach, but more importantly, TO LEARN. This all intelligent beings must be prepared to do. We, also, must be prepared to teach. (I have discovered, in the business community "learners." I do not ignore a well-suited, neatly polished accountant, but rather I attempt to communicate my thoughts to him in his words. And I have succeeded!) We may barricade ourselves till kingdom come in a building, and if we could not be evicted, another building would rise to replace it.

We found, last night, one man through whom to act constructively on our university system and its representatives. If a dean had been present, he could never again deny us honestly, either orally or in print, our meaningful search and the sincerity with which we are searcing.

The university, rather than being the top of a ladder, has become only a step up. (I do not minimize its necessity or accomplishment.) It is becoming obsolete as a place of learning because those who direct it appear to have finished learning! - in direct contradiction to the principle on which the university was originally founded.

I say to those men: if indeed you have NOT finished learning, and should you NOT be "invited" to a creative learning experience - gatecrash! We, as students, could not help but love to have you.

Jeanne Reed

In Defense

To the editor:

I would like to comment on the letter in the March 13 COLLEGIAN concerning student leaders and Joe Tabacco in particular. Mr. Foley submits that Joe is not a true representative of the student body because he did not address himself to a matter of "serious campus and national concern.' I grant that basketball may not be a "serious" matter, however, if the Massachusetts State Legislature and the Canadian Parliament can take time from their duties to pay tribute to Boston Bruin Phil Esposito than Joe Tabacco is certainly eligible to congratulate the Redmen.

Are you looking past tomorrow?

Since cave drawings of the Ice Age man, people have struggled to communicate. With stories, maps, legends, paper, spoken words of love and fear. This business of communications . . . meaningful dialogue . . . is still chief among today's preoccupations. And it's one we at Western Electric, indeed the entire Bell System have worked at since 1882.

Cable, microwaves and satellites have brought nations face-to-face across continents and oceans. Closed-circuit TV helps educators penetrate barriers of slum and tar-paper shacks. In fact, our whole way of life in America is being enriched simply by advances in phoning.

Whether basic or brilliant, each advance must arrive when it's needed. And each must be economically producible whenever it's needed. At Western Electric we specialize in production and logistics. It's our job in the Bell System ...to help men overcome communication barriers with dependable service at low cost. To this end we need an ever increasing number of new fresh ideas. Your ideas. Ideas that look past tomorrow.

THE NEWS IN BRIEF

WASHINGTON (AP) - Israeli Foreign Minister Abba Eban said yesterday he is convinced the war in the Middle East is not imminent, and believes it is not inevitable.

He said his opinion is based on two factors:

"No Arab state can rationally believe it can achieve anything by generalizing the war, and no great power is encouraging any Arab state to put its trust in war."

BOGOTA (AP) - A Colombian airliner hijacked Saturday night with 39 passengers and five crew members has landed at Camaguey, Cuba, the Civil Aviation Board reported yesterday.

The plane, a DC6 of the Aerocondor Airliner, was hijacked by a man armed with a pistol, the board said. A woman with a child in her arms was believed to be his companion.

TOKYO (AP) - A mild earthquake shook Tokyo and northern Japan early today. The Central Meteorological Agency reported no damage or casualties.

AVVELINO, Italy (AP) - Mario Capobianco and Anna Farisiello left yesterday on their honeymoon after a shotgun wedding of another kind.

Capobianco still nursed a shot wound on his arm, while 13 others from the wedding party were suffering from light pellet injuries.

"I did it for jubilation," explained farmer Annibale Toto, 66, who said he was merely observing a centuries-old southern Italian custom, by shooting up a storm as the wedding party procession came out of the church Saturday.

He was charged with "shooting in an inhabited area and causing light injuries,'

WASHINGTON (AP) - The government said yesterday it costs an average of about $9,570 a year for a city family of four to keep up a "moderate" standard of living.

THE HAGUE, Netherlands (AP) - The international jury of the World Press Photo Contest announced yesterday that the best picture of the year, taken by Eddie Adams of The Associated Press, was given 168 points of a possible 190 by an international jury of 10.

The award - a prize of $1,250, a camera and a golden medal of the city of The Hague - was presented to Adams Saturday night by G. Verhoeven, director-general of the Netherlands Ministry of Recreation and Culture.

CAS Problems Confront Acting Dean

By RICHARD W. STORY
Education Editor

The appointment of Professor Seymour Shapiro as Acting Dean of the College of Arts and Sciences comes at a crucial time in the College's history. There seem to be more currents and moves afoot in the College than for quite some time in the past. Dean Shapiro will be dealing with all of these, together with whatever he may initiate himself. Who is he, and with what will he be dealing in the year or so ahead?

Behond those details of his past academic life (for which, see story page 1), Dr. Shapiro is a man of great understanding of where it is that the contemporary university U.S.A. is, and is heading. As both an individual and as a particular campus academic figure, Dr. Shapiro was deeply involved with the Dow sit-in in Whitmore recently - he participated in the President's 5 p.m. meeting, lending his compassion to the discussion on that occasion. He spent some time talking with students sitting in the building. He heard and understood what they were saying.

Dr. Shapiro has given generously of his time in assisting student academic groups on campus. He has given his advice and counsel to the Academic Affairs committee, in their grapple with curriculum revision. Together with Mrs. Rowland (the first Trustee ever invited), he sparked some long and particularly fruitful discussion at last fall' s SWAP conference. From these and other occasions, and from his classroom contact each semester, Dr. Shapiro takes a clear look at where students are today, particularly in arts and sciences.

As he moves into the second-floor front office in South College, Dr. Shapiro will come firmly to grips with a variety of pressing issues before the College today. Matters of College reorganization, curriculum reform, and College government will be clamoring for immediate attention.

Interviewed by the MDC Saturday, Dean Shapiro said that, first, he would need some time to come to grips with the full scope of the Dean's job, with the departments where he knows fewer members, with the plans of the Student Senate, and with other recent business of the College. He said that he would, quite soon, meet with the department heads in the College.

He did not discount the possibility of a meeting of all College undergraduates. Pending their presentation to department heads and faculty, however, he declined to elaborate publicly on his plans and ideas for the College.

The principal issues confronting Dean Shapiro, and on which we should expect to see him move during this semester, are College reorganization, curriculum change, and the government of the College.

The issues of reorganization and College government are not new - each was raised by former Dean Hunsberger a t the start of this year. In his convocation address to the College faculty, Dr. Hunsberger raised the issue of restructuring the College. Faced with the steadily increasing size of the University, he asked whether we might not be well advised to consider breaking into different, more related areas of study - biological sciences, engineering and physical sciences, communications, and so forth. There has been little action on this suggestion through this year, but the matter is still alive within the University. Barring curricular reorganization, the related question of a purely administrative reorganization, perhaps of simply splitting the present College of Arts and Sciences into three main areas, remains in the wind. This related issue is one which confronts Dean Shapiro.

The large (and growing) size of the College faculty is beginning to present problems in decision-making within the College. The present practice of open forum-type faculty meetings, at which issues, later to be put to a mail ballot, are aired, may be approaching the end of its usefulness. Return rates on mail ballots are averaging 50 - 55%. In his address last September, Dean Hunsberger introduced several outline proposals for College assemblies, senates, or other representative bodies. The question of student membership on these suggested bodies is still open; but is one on which we should expect to see some discussion this year.

The third principal issue - that of curriculum reform - is coming rapidly to a point where substantial changes will be introduced to the College faculty. Given a particular impetus by Dean Hunsberger, several groups, including the Student Senate, are preparing curriculum reform proposals, some of which are to be expected in the Dean's office during April. The recently-formed Committee for a University forum has already held some open meetings, and plans to do more as the spring wears on. The Adademic Affairs committee is rapidly completing its plan, under development since September. It will be submitted early in April. Meanwhile, Dr. Hunsberger's own "breadth-depth-proficiency' approach is awaiting further development by interested parties. One faculty member has called it the most radical proposal made to date for the College. It is an issue that is alive, and will become much more so, in the coming year.

Two major reports, commissioned last September, on rhetoric and the foreign language requirement, have been made to the Dean's office, and under review by the faculty at this moment. They will be issues facing Dean Shapiro.

This, then, is a sketch of the background situation facing the Acting Dean.

Random student opinion gathered over the past few days by the MDC has been strongly in favor of Dr. Shapiro. He seems to be widely admired and respected by students of all kinds, as a completely approachable person. He received strong endorsement from those student groups consulted by the Provost in the selection process.

His appointment was presented to the Board of Trustees last Friday, and was approved unanimously. There was a longer delay in announcing the appointment of the Acting Dean than had been first expected, however. Provost Tippo had this to say on the subject of the consultations, and recommendation to the Board:

"Well the reason was that we wanted to consult with so many people, that's all. When you want to consult with the Executive Committee of the College, all the department heads, then representatives from three levels in the departments - junior faculty, senior professors, and a student representative from each department - and as you know the Student Senate had a committee, the Graduate Senate had a committee - this takes time to get all these people together, coordinate them, get their opinions, and so on. Then furthermore, it happened that the Board of Trustees' committee on faculty and educational policy was meeting last Wednesday, and so it seemed like a logical thing to take the matter there and get their counsel. And then, since the Board meeting was coming up on Friday - take it to the Trustees and get everybody in on the act.'

"The students we met with were very effective. I really learned a lot from them. I thought it might be some duplication; but the students really know a lot about the University - I was surprised at how much they knew," said Tippo.

JUNK
By Mark Silverman
News Editor

(ED. NOTE - Today marks the debut of a weekly column by Mark Silverman, MDC News Editor, which will run the gammit of odds and ends on campus.)

THE DISTINGUISHED VISITORS PROGRAM, after lying dormant for a few months, is breaking into the big time this week as South Carolina Senator Strom Thurmond visits the campus Wednesday night in the Cage at 8:30. The South Carolina Republican is credited by many people with being the man behind the movement to make Spiro T. Agnew Richard Nixon's running mate. His speech will be the first of three to be given by major politicians this semester on campus. . .the other two will be delivered by former Vice-President Hubert H. Humphrey, who will come to UMass in April and in May. . .Another big name scheduled to speak at UMass this semester is Jimmy Breslin. The journalist turned Hollywood script-writer is being brought here by D.V.P. and A.P.G., the campus journalism fraternity, next month.

STUDENT SENATE ELECTIONS are this Wednesday night. Running for President are Bruce Balboni and Dan Madden. . .Cindy Olken and Steve Walt are running for vice president; Alan Gauthier and Sue Bacon for treasurer and Pat Beharry and Sharon O'Brien for secretary. Elections are open to the public, as are all Senate meetings, and will be held at 7:30 in the Council Chambers of the Student Union. . .Speaking of the Senate, one wonders why seemingly constructive legislation, like Senator Joe Kilmartin's bill to censure any fraternity or sorority which practices discrimination, is rarely passed. Kilmartin's bill was put off indefinately at last week's meeting.

THE APPOINTMENT OF SEYMOUR SHAPIRO as acting dean of the College of Arts and Sciences seems to have pleased most students and faculty members for the time being at least. The test of the acting dean's popularity will come when Shapiro, along with Provost Ozwald Tippo, decide the fate of the chairmanship of the History department. . .a decision which will come in about a month.

Teacher of the Year Nominations Open

The deadline for submitting distinguished Teacher Award nominations has been extended to Friday, Mar. 21, due to a lack of student response, according to Richard Conklin of the Provosts office.

Nominations may be made by any member of the University community and should be based on the following criteria:

1. The Ability to Stimulate Students Through Challenging Ideas and Effective Communication Techniques.
2. Thorough Knowledge of Subject Matter in His Discipline.
3. The Ability to Interpret and Relate the Results of Contemporary Scholarship Through His Teaching.
4. Ability to Relate to Students and Colleagues in Such a Way as to Advonce the General Purposes of the Academic Community.
5. Sincere Interest in Counseling Students.
6. Evidence of o Consistently Distinguished teaching Record for o Period of Years at the University of Massachusetts.

Hard Work, Sacrifice Paid Off for UMass Trackmen

Season's Goal Accomplished With Championship

By DAVE EVANS
Staff Reporter

"In the first week of the season the boys got together and set as their main objective the winning of the Yankee Conference Championship," stated Redmen coach Ken O'Brien in discussing the seasons highpoints. This goal, which remained foremost in the team's sights throughout the indoor campaign, at times caused the season to be a frustrating one.

To win the conference meet meant that the team would have to make more than the normal sacrifices. It meant working through most of the dual meets, and UMass, has a very tough dual meet schedule. It also meant possibly losing to teams and competitors early in the year so that the team would be in top shape at the end of the season and in a position to win the big meet.

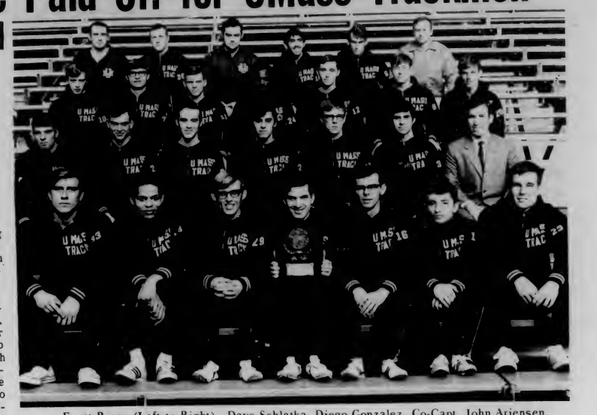
The strategy paid off well indeed for the Redmen. While they occasionally took their lumps during the season the team was more than adequately rewarded with the championship and many school, fieldhouse and personal records set during an outstandingly competitive dual meet season. UMass dropped early meets to Dart - mouth and Northeastern. At no time throughout either of these meets were the Redmen out of contention in battling both of these New England powerhouses. N.U. later went on to win the New England title.

Following these first two contests the tide began to turn more in UMass' favor. Travelling away from home, as they did all year, Coach O'Brien's men met UConn at Storrs, Conn. The Huskies had "peaked" for this meet hoping to shake up the Redmen and any conference hopes they had. UConn squeaked by, winning by the narrowest of margins, two points. This only seemed to make the team more determined then before to take the conference crown.

The last dual meet of the indoor season found a good U.N.H. club confronting O'Brien's team which was beginning to pick up momentum. As the coach said, "Those early losses and that close one to UConn served to bring all the fellows on the team together into a tight knit group. It brought out a real desire and determination in them. The Redmen rolled over UNH by more than thirty points.

That big win provided all the spark that was needed, and the following weekend UMass surprised almost everyone but themselves as they took the championship.

This years edition of UMass indoor track is largely a Sophomore team. In fact, this year in all the meets, the sophomores as a group outscored the rest of the team combined, so there is plenty of promise for the future. Many records were set and broken during this indoor compaign. Four were set by sophomores, one by a junior and two by seniors.



Leading the list was soph hurdler Jerry Spellman, as he set both the 55 and 60 yard hurdles records. Spellman ran 7.0 and 7.6 respectively. Also setting a hurdle record was Junior Marc Lefever in the 45 yard hurdles in 5.8 seconds. Lefever sustained a strained hamstring muscle later in the season. Other sophomore record setters were Ron Wayne in the mile as he ran 4:13.0 Wayne also just missed the two mile record by one tenth of a second. Sprinter Walt Mayo set a new 50 yard dash record of 5.4 seconds in the conference meet. Mayo was undefeated in dual meet competition, and in fact has not lost in a dual meet since high school.

In the shot put, Ed Arcaro, under the guidance of first year weight coach Gary Schwartz set a new standard in the shot as he heaved it 52'6-1/2''. Rounding out the record setting were two seniors, Diego Gonzalez and Co-capt. Charlie Lang. Gonzalez broke the existing record in the 1000 yard run twice during the season. He recorded a final time of 2:12.8. The old record was set by Coach O'Brien back in 1963 when he was an undergraduate here. Lang came up with a thrilling performance in the conference meet when he won the two mile run and set a new school and conference record of 9:07.9.

The team was a well balanced one with many men contributing to the scoring. The high jumpers were consistent point scorers all season. Leading the group was soph Cal Carpenter, strongly backed up by Co-capt John Ariensen and Paul Nyman. All three placed in the conference meet at Burlington.

Providing stiff competition for Mayo in the sprints were junior Dave Marble, who placed 3rd in the conference meet and Ed Heywood, another sophomore sprinter. Giving UMass strength in the other running events were Bill Donalson, in the 600,1000 and mile relay, Steve Chase in the mile relay and sprints, and senior Paul Hoss in the two mile run. All three of these men placed for the team throughout the season in addition to placing in the conference meet. Senior co capt. Bob Hasselbaum was the leading 600 yard runner in the conference as he moved up from his second place finish of a year ago to take first place honors this year.

Also competing well this year and providing extremely valuable points were long jumpers Dave Canterbury, Clarence Gaynor and Rip Dyer. Canterbury took fifth spot indoors at Burlington.

Gymnasts Make Strong Showing Place Third in Eastern Competition

By JAN CURLEY
Assistant Managing Editor

The varsity gymnastics team returned from Eastern League competition this weekend with a third place overall finish in the League. Dick DaGallo was outstanding for the Redmen in individual competition by defeating Paul Vexler, the defending ring champion in the League from Penn State for first place in that event.

The team placed fifth in championship competition, preceeded by Penn State, Temple University, Navy and Springfield. The Redmen had 101.9 points in competition. Army, Pitt and Syracuse placed sixth, seventh and eighth respectively behind the Redmen.

Penn State placed first in the league competition and will now represent the East in the NCAA meet to be held in Seattle in April. Temple was second, UMass third, Navy and Springfield tied for fourth, Army sixth and Syracuse and Pitt tied for seventh.

In all-around competition, Joe Reed was sixth with a score of 87.8. His teammate, Norm Vexler, placed eighth in spite of the fact he competed in only 10 of the 12 events. Due to his shoulder injury, he missed the competition in the rings.

In winning the ring championship in the East, DelGallo posted an 18.95. Both DelGallo and Vexler were tied at the end of the preleminary competition with 9.45. DelGallo achieved a personal ambition to tie Bob LaClaire, who was graduated last June and also held the existing school record for highest score on apparatus.

Other Redmen in the finals were Joe Reed who finished eighth in both the high bar and ring events. Scott Stover finished seventh in the long horse vault competition.

The three critical events were the side horse, rings and high bar for the Redmen. But all three teams "did a fine job," said Coach Erik Kjeldsen. The team of Frank Dean 8.1, Rich Riley 8.15 and Vexler 8.35 helped put UMass into a third place finish in side horse competition on the league. Temple and Penn placed ahead of the Redmen.

Going into the horizontal bars, UMass led Navy by 1.1. As Kjeldsen says, "A slip could've cost us our third place standing," but the Redmen finished third with 25.77, Reed had an 8.7, Seibert an 8.6 and Scott Stover an 8.4.

Outstanding individual performers for the Redmen were Bill McCauley with 8.5 in floor exercises, Steve Cary 8.75 on the parallel bars and Seibert.

Seibert, in his final competition for UMass, missed the finals by one place in both the rings and horizontal bars.

DelGallo will be going to the NCAA meet in Seattle to compete on the rings April3,4, and 5.

DICK DELGALLO will be going to Seattle early in April to compete in the NCAA meet. He won the ring championship of the Eastern League last weekend.

WAA Nominations

Nomination papers for officers of the Women's Athletic Association for '69-'70 are now available from Mrs. Sherman at WOPE. The WAA Board consists of President, Vice President, Secretary, Publicity, Communications and Managers of intra-mural and inter-collegiate sports. Any undergraduate woman is eligible to apply. Completed forms must be returned to Mrs. Sherman by Wednesday, March 19. Elections by '68-'69 participants in WAA activities will be held after spring vacation. If there are any questions, contact Joan Nartowt or Ellen Buffington in Johnson House. (5-2308, 5-2309)

Women Skiers Second

On Saturday, the UMass Women's Ski Team concluded this season of the Women's Intercollegiate Ski Conference by placing second in the Wheaton College Giant Slalom held at Cannon Mountain. The women finished only three seconds behind Radcliffe College, again the Conference winners, with Judy Fuller leading the field of forty racers with the best individual time. Susan Arnold placed fourth, and Barb Bund twelfth to made up the team score.

At the final banquet, which was held at the Town and Country Motor Inn in Gorham, New Hampshire, it was announced that the UMass women skiiers placed second in the Conference for the season, and that Judy Fuller and Susan Arnold had the second and third best times respectively in the conference. Also, Judy Beers was awarded the Recognition Award, decided by the teams on the basis of personality, sportsmanship and contribution to the Conference. Susan Arnold was elected a member at large for the 1969-1970 season.

For Judy Beers and Barb Bund, this was their last Conference race, as they are graduating this year.

Mermaids Surprise All With 4th Place Finish

The winner of the 24th annual Eastern Intercollegiate Women's Swimming Championship was no surprise to anyone. West Chester State completely dominated the meet and finished with a total of 83 points to runnerup Trenton State's 24 points. But, a big surprise to many was the 4th place finish of UMass (21 points) who took a meager 4 swimmers and 1 diver to Philadelphia for the championships. Incidently, West Chester and Trenton State both carried squads of twenty swimmers or more, and their depth made them invincible.

Sprinting well for UMass was captain Janet Schockley, who swam her two best races of the season in the 50 and 100 yrd. free styles. Jan placed second in the 100 but, won the 50 with a time of 0.26.5 beating out former Olympian, Martha Randall, for the first time in a century. Another UMass finalist was frosh Janet Reid, who captured a fourth place berth in the 50 fly with a time of 0.30.5. UMass's medley relay team posted their season's best with a very close fourth place finish. The team of Marie Witwicki, Sue Berger, Jan Reid and Janey Schockley, clocked a 2:08 for the medley well under their New England Championship time of 2:10.8. All in all, the season was highly successful and the gals have decided that maybe all those stares in the dining com nons were not so bad after all. People will have to become accustomed to wet locks!

Olin-Matheson Debate Questions Effect of Military on Morals

By LOU DIMONACO
Staff Reporter

A n open forum was held last night between the University and the Olin-Matheson corportion. The debate centered around the question of military-industrial-recruitment with in the university.

The forum panel consisted of Everett Bellows, vice-president of the Washington Office of Olin-Matheson; Isidore Silver, assistant professor of business law, action as moderator; Robert Gluckstern, department head and professor of physics; John Medeiros, a member of the ad-hoc committee to end military recruitment; and Dean Field.

The debate began at 8:30 in Bowker auditorium. Each member of the panel had the opportunity to explain their position toward military industrial recruitment. Medeiros was the first to speak, explaining that, in his opinion, the majority of Americans were in favor of the Vietnam war, the foreign policy of the government, and the role of government in military industrial recruitment.

He went on to state that the majority is wrong and warned against military authority becoming superior to civil authority. Medeiros also said that the production of arms was a major part of the economy of the country, and that this situation is difficult to alter.

Bellows was the next to speak, saying that he thought the military industrial complex existed, but that its influence was "out of proportion". Refering to the statement by Medeiros that the military industrial complex was "trying to change our lives", Bellows replied that "the home mores of your society are by no means effected by military industrial complex to the extent you suggest."

He went on to say that the corporation is an entity in a legal sense, but it has a diversity of views.

Speaking on recruitment, Bellows said that to prevent one organization from recruiting would mean that all organizations should be prevented from doing the same.

Gluckstern explained the role of government in the area of research grants. He said that the government plays an important role in adding strength in the grant program, and that the student chooses his line of work because it interests him and that he doesn't tailor interests to suit government requests. To the possibility of classified grants within the University, Gluckstern said that to his knowledge there "are no classified research grants to the university.

Dean Field stated that it is difficult to develop perspective in regard to the influence of military industrial recruitment.

After the panel had spoken members were available to questions from the group of fifty students assembled. When one student asked if "making bullets is an ethical decision", Bellows replied "no". He clarified this by saying that the majority of people in this country supported the government and that the decisions of the government should also be supported.

Michigan Paper Seen "Too Radical"

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (CPS-TELEX) - The Black Students Union (BSU) at the University of Michigan demanded Monday that the university suspend publication of the student newspaper, "THE MICHIGAN DAILY, because it feels the paper is too radical.

The BSU charged the paper failed to cover activities of black students and "unfairly" refused to endorse their candidate for an upcoming student government election.

The blacks charged THE DAILY encourages "sensationalism of the militant activities of blacks."

BSU representatives met with University President Robben Fleming and three top DAILY editors for more than two hours. The blacks want Fleming to conduct an investigation of the Daily's policies and practices.

G.O.P. Calls on Nixon To Supply Youth with Service Opportunities

The progessive Republican research group, the Ripon Society, today called upon President Nixon to put young people in the forefront of a national campaign of volunteer social service through endowment of an independent National Foundation for Youth Service.

In a 4500 word position paper, "Nixon and the Youth Volunteers," Ripon also urged a tax credit of $10 a year for contributions to social and political organizations, a plan the group said would particularly appeal to young people, most of whom have small incomes and do not benefit from tax deductions, but would like to give various causes financial support.

The Ripon paper praised the commitment the Administration has made to stimulate the provate, non-profit sector of society, but warned that the success of new programs would depend on a fuller explanation of the concept of voluntarism and a greater role for young people i n the planned programs.

The National Foundation for Youth Service would be endowed rather than subsidized, b y the federal government. It would operate no service projects of its own, but would assist those in operation and serve as a clearing-house of information and techniques. On the principle that "service serves the server as well as the served" the foundation would grant fellowships to poor youth "who would like to take a meaningful job with service significance, but who have to have some financial assistance to afford it."

The foundation Ripon proposed would also help youth in service with travel costs and would assist the youth hostel program which is popular in Europe, to develop in this country.

Ripon criticized some parts of the volunteer sector - and its Congressional watchdogs - for undue wariness towards controversial projects. If private foundations don' undertake them, Ripon noted, private economic interests or government will, and with less bias. It also criticized the tendency of foundations to want to turn over programs to the federal government once proven successful. Rather, Ripon said, the volunteer sector should seek to become a balance to the government as a societal power source.

Ripon did not urge new social service programs within government itself - and strongly attacked compulsory National Service schemes. But the young intellectual group did urge that those programs in existence (VISTA, Peace Corps, Teachers Corps, etc.) be combined in a Youth Service Agency within the Administration, as propsed by Mr. Nixon in a radio broadcast last October.

Black College Enrollment Lags; UMass Increase Called "Dramatic"

By MARK SILVERMAN
News Editor

Massachusetts Colleges and Universities are still far from reflecting a racial make-up proportional to the Nation or the State, dispite a few dramatic but isolated cases, according to the U. S. Office of Civil Rights.

According to figures submitted by most of the State's colleges to the Federal Government, a handfull of Colleges, including UMass, have made measurable strides toward establishing a racially balanced campus.

The number of blacks at UMass rose from 64 to 158 in the past year. At UMass/Boston, a 98-215 rise was recorded this year. Other schools recording important rises during the same period included Boston College, which saw its Negro enrollment rise from 13 to 69, Boston State college, which rose from 34 to 94, Tufts, from 50 to 86, Boston University from 381 to 507, and Brandeis University from 39 to 63 black students.

In addition to the rise in Black enrollment, several Universities, UMass included, have made major financial committments to black students, in the form of loans and scholarships. Also, several schools have instituted tutuorial programs, like the service UMass provides for many of its black students.

The total of all Federal and State aid to black students in Massachusetts last year was $38 million.

But, overall, blacks made up only 1.99% of the total undergraduate enrollment in the State. This is only slightly higher than last year's 1.5% figure, and is well below the estimated 4.7% blacks in the State, and is not even close to the national proportion of 11%.

This year's Massachusetts figures show 3,019 black students in a total enrollment of 151,023 at 80 colleges and Universities. Last year there were 2203 blacks out of a total of 145,691.

The U. S. Office of Civil Rights a division of the department of Health, Education, and Welfare began to compile these statistics as a part of its drive to eaforce the federal regulation which stipulates that no schools can receive federal funds if they are found to discriminate racially.

McGovern's Viet Criticism Hit by Senators in Both Parties

WASHINGTON (AP) - Sharp criticism of President Nixon's Vietnam policy by Sen. George S. McGovern Monday brought rejoinders from Democratic and Republican senators that the President should be given time and leeway to set his course.

McGovern, the South Dakota Democrat who unsuccessfully sought his party's 1968 presidential nomination, recalled the political turmoil of last year and President Lyndon B. Johnson's withdrawal from the race. And then he declared:

"The new commander in chief must grasp what his predecessor learned to his sorrow - that in any continuance of the war in Vietnam lies the seeds of national tradedy and the certainty of personal political disaster."

McGovern said Nixon is continuing Johnson's policies, and added:

"I believe that the American people had every hope and expectation that the Paris talks would bring a military disengagement, that we would minimize clashes with the enemy."

THE NEWS IN BRIEF

WASHINGTON (AP) - A three-man federal panel - expanding a Supreme Court school desegregation ruling into a new area-held Monday that segregated housing is no excuse for segregated schools.

The Department of Health, Education and Welfare's Review Authority rejected a Radleigh, N.C., plan for setting up attendance zones without regard to race to integrate its schools.

The Review Authority, citing a Supreme Court ruling of last May that "freedom of choice" desegregation plans are acceptable only if they work, said the same test must apply to zoning desegregation plans.

Although the Supreme Court mentioned only "freedom of choice" plans, the Authority said, it established the doctrine that desegregation plans must be judged by results, not intentions.

BUDAPEST, Hungary (AP) - Top leaders of the Soviet bloc, who hastened to Budapest for a Warsaw Pact summit, prepared Monday to return to their home capitals after the heralded meeting which lasted barely two hours.

Leaders of the seven pact nations wound up the shortest summit in the Communist organization's history after signing a declaration and final communique that apparently had been drawn up before they arrived.

Informants said the declaration called for peace in Europe and dealt mainly with the German question which has long preoccupied Moscow. They exprressed belief that the communique dealt also with the question of Vietnam and the mounting crisis in the Middle East.

WASHINGTON (AP) - If you live in Greater Boston, you are spending more and enjoying life less and wondering why. The U.S. Labor Department has the answer: the Boston area is the second most expensive place to live in the continental United States.

In a report issued Monday, the department said a family of four now must spend about $10,500 a year to maintain a moderate standard of living in Metropolitan Boston.

A similar report issued in the spring of 1967 said the same family would have had to spend $9,973 to maintain a moderate standard of living that year.

Only the New York area is more expensive than Boston, the department said. Honolulu also is more costly, but it lies outside the continental United States.

Hayakawa, Students Clash Over San Francisco State Newspaper Ban

SAN FRANCISCO (CPS - TELEX) - The campus newspaper at San Francisco State College will continue to publish despite having been suspended by Acting President S. I. Hayakawa.

The "Daily Gater" has been a strong supporter of the four-month-old student strike and a harsh critic of Hayakawa, but he denied he suspended the paper because of its political views.

He said the reason for the suspension is that there is no functioning publications board. Members of the board says it does exist but Hayakawa maintains it has not fulfilled its function because it has not submitted reports to the administration and has not dealt with the problem of Open Process, a campus weekly suspended last year but still publishing as a supplement to the Gater.

Hayakawa said they will appoint a new interim board composed of three faculty members and three students. The present board consists of four students, one faculty member, and one administrator.

He said many faculty members and students are unhappy with the Gater because "it doesn't represent the opinion of all of the students. At most it represents about half."

Hayakawa claimed he is acting "in the interest of a free press" by setting up the new publications board, which would "liberate the Gater to publish all views" as soon as possible.

The paper appeared Tuesday despite the suspension. It included an editorial accusing Hayakawa of "intensifying his policies of institutional racism and intensifying his police state methods" and a cartoon depicting Hayakawa in diapers burning the Bill of Rights.

The Gater editors, accompanied by several other students, tried to enter the administration building to give Hayakawa a copy of the paper but were stopped at the door by six police. Later one Gater editor slipped into the building and left a stack of papers in Hayakawa's outer office.

"If Hayakawa wants to silence us," said Gater Editor Dikran Karagueuzian, "He'll have to throw his body on the wheels of our printing press."

Hayakawa said the administration is also considering taking disciplinary action against those students who are putting out the paper.

Earlier the Gater's funds - along with all student government funds - were frozen by a court order sought by the administration. The paper has continued to publish, however, thanks primarily to their printer, who agreed to wait to be paid for his work. A court hearing will be held today on a request by the Bank of America, which now holds the student funds, to free $40,000 for various student organizations, including the Gater.

The San Francisco State campus remained quiet Tuesday, as it has most of the time since the second semester began Feb. 17. Monday a group of black students staged a brief march through the administration building but there was no confrontation with police. Last week one student was arrested for firing shots on the campus and another was badly injured by a bomb he was allegedly planting.

White strike leaders have recommended that the strikers go back to classes for a while to try to build support for the strike. The Third World Liberation Front and black student union have been holding a number of meetings on tactics but are apparently still undecided on their next move.

Small Turnout Makes Jr. Meeting

Thirteen Junior Class members stopped by the Student Union Ballroom to attend the open class meeting last night to discuss "the roll of class officers, class government, and why nobody attends class meetings.

The meeting was marked with frequent disagreements between Secretary Ina Goldstein and President Steve Weisman.

Class Advisor Dr. James Ralph displayed concern over the poor attendance and asked why there were not more Executive Council members at the meeting. Weisman said that there were "a lot of factors" affecting the attendance, but he couldn't list anything specific. He did say, however, that he did not use any "gimmics" to attract members, but that the next time he would "put a few articles in the paper."

The meeting adjourned after an hour of this "open debate," with nothing settled about class government except that very few people attend class meetings.

MLK Publishes Letter Condemning Administration's Action on Dow

At a recent meeting of its Board of Directors, the Martin Luther King Jr. Social Action Council discussed and approved the following statement condemning the use of State Police in the recent Dow demonstration at UMass.

"The Martin Luther King Jr. Social Action Council condemns the use of State Police in dealing with a non-violent, non-disruptive campus protest. The use of force in response to peaceful conduct is repellent to the values of a University community; it is especially so when the experiences of the administrations of Brandeis and the University of Chicago in declining to 'escalate' their confrontations are considered. The King Council is appalled by the administration's failure to even offer to meet with the protestors and its cavalier dismissal of the consequences of its ill-timed and ill-advised action. Clearly, it failed to exhaust all reasonable means of dealing with the situation prior to its occurrence and manifested bad grace and churlishness in declining to intercede with the court to request that charges be dropped after the event. Although the actions of the demonstrators may have been ill-advised, they posed no imminent threat to the ongoing functions of the University. Under those circumstances the King Council must condemn the administration's decision to substitute force for reason, without justification therefor."

Gil Salk, Executive Secretary of the King Council, in commenting on the statement, said that it was not intended to reflect the feelings of the Board on the issue of recruiting on campus nor is it meant to condone the actions of the demonstrators.

"In any confrontation situation, the administration has at least two choices," Salk said. "One is to deal with the demonstrators. The other, more mature and ultimately more realistic choice, is to deal with the issue which caused the confrontation.'

The statement refers to the February 13 demonstration at Whitmore when 33 students sat in protest of the University's complicity with the military-industrial complex. Nearly 90 State Police were summoned to arrest the protestors.

Strom Thurmond, the South Carolina Senator who Lyndon Johnson termed, "the leader of the dixicrats", will deliver a D.V.P. address in the Cage tomorrow night at 8:30.

Yorty Mayorial Opposition Seen Toughening Up

LOS ANGELES (AP) - Sam Yorty, who has ridden a political roller coaster for nearly 33 years, is bidding for a third term as mayor of this sprawling city - and at least 13 citizens thinks he's vulnerable.

They're running against him.

But Yorty is rated a slight favorite to survive allegations that some of his appointees are corrupt, that he travels unnecessarily and that he has accomplished little.

Yorty, 59, has his incumbency going for him as well as good financial support, lack of any really big names in the field against him and a reputation as an outspoken fighter.

Only three of the 13 rivals are given a chance for the nonpartisan post in the April municipal primary. They are Thomas Bradley, an ex-policeman who became the first Negro elected to the City Council.

Metawampee Award Nomination Papers Due by April 4

Wayne Thomas, President of the Senior Class, announced Monday that the Metawampee Award Committee would be formed this week. Chaired by Neal Whitman, Class of 1969, the committee will be comprised of one freshman, one sophomore, two juniors and three seniors. The Metawampee Award is a one thousand dollar stipend to an outstanding faculty or administrator of the year.

Nomination papers are available in RSO until Friday, April 4. Chairman Whitman stated that he hoped that "the University Community will nominate a number of individuals who not only excel in their academic or professional discipline, but who also have been involved with students." He added that this involvement "could be either on a large scale with a student movement or on a smaller personal level with students."

Britain Threating Action Against Island Uprising

LONDON (AP) - Britain assembled a task force of 200 paratroopers and police Monday night to take over the Caribbean island of Anguilla unless its leaders swiftly abandon their rebellion.

More than 140 men of the Red Devils Regiment moved out of their Aldershot headquarters. About the same time the 40 member Commando Squad of the Metropolitan Police left Scotland Yard.

Both headed toward an unannounced destination, believed to be a Royal Air Force station at Lyneham Wiltshire. They are expected to fly soon to Antigua, 70 miles from Anguilla.

The word from British authorities was that a formal Cabinet decision still is awaited.

Continuing Open Houses

After almost six months a virtually unlimited openhouse policy that was fought for so hard may be completely rescinded. And if this policy is revoked one can only bet that all the screaming will be done at and fingers pointed at everybody from heads of residence to the Board of Trustees for rescinding it. But who will be to blame? Look at the mirror, that's the person to blame. For flagrantly and willingly violating existing open-house policy this campus may very well be forced to take one step backwards to the puritanical policies of old. And if this happens many will naively ask why.

When thirty-five violations of the existing policy are counted on one week-end in one dorm that's being irresponsible. When a head of residence in a male dorm finds a room open with six girls in it at 3 a.m., that's not only being irresponsible, that's being foolish. If we felt that we were responsible enough to enjoy but not abuse this open-house policy, then these example and innumerable other violations prove we were sadly mistaken. Hopefully all is not lost just yet.

For those who believe that a better way to solve the open-house problems would be to allow dorm autonomy in deciding their open-house policy, they may be right. But at present we are living under a non-autonomous open-house policy and unless we can regulate ourselves under this policy it is extremely unlikely we'll ever have the chance to use a dorm autonomous policy.

A Volunteer Army?

Since only about half a million of the 3.5 million American s now in uniform are draftees, according to Sen. Mark Hatfield (R-Ore.), there may be some logic in the argument that the proposal to abolish the draft in favor of a volunteer army is much ado about nothing.

Sen. Hatfield, one of the nine sponsors of the proposal, puts the question in compelling perspective, however:

"Conscription is involuntary servitude plain and simple."

It is hard to get around this, especially since the base pay for enlisted personnel starts at the slave level of $102.20 a month. Moreover, the services of draftees certainly are involuntary, and such servitude is reprehensible without regard to the number victimized.

That both hawks and doves and Republicans and Democrats are sponsoring the proposal makes it all the more entitled to serious consideration. Add, too, the fact that such a proposal was one of President Nixon's campaign pledges, although he would wait until the end of the Vietnam war and the current bill would go into effect six months after its enactment.

The philosophy is the same in both cases. This is that compulsory military service in peacetime (which this officially is) is an essentially un-American device imported from Europe where historic and permanent pools of conscripts contributed nothing at all to peace if they did not actually lend themselves to the eternal provocation of conflict.

Young men would still have to register, which is perhaps objectionable, and the President would be free to ask that the draft be reauthorized in an emergency - just as happened in 1940 when peacetime conscription was adopted for the first time in American history.

It is estimated that a volunteer army would cost an additional $3.7 billion a year in pay increases. This is not an inconsequential sum in a tight budget, but it could be a small price to pay for the removal of such tensions and divisions as can be traced directly to the existing draft law.

Inequality

To the editor!

The report of the National Advisory Committee on Civil Disorders has stated that there are "two societies, one black, one white - separate and unequal. . .White institutions created them, white institutions maintain it, and white society condones it." The commission further states that unless a change is made, further turmoil is imminent.

In order to change or reconstruct what the white institution has created, we must alter that which is its foundation. I believe this feeling of white supremecy, which is impressed on and present in both Blacks and Whites, is due to our cultural conditioning. If so, we must destroy this conditioning which obviously fosters prejudice. Lets look at our education. Do we see any significant recognition of blacks in any of our courses. Very rarely. This is part of our subtle cultural conditioning which causes us to believe that blacks are not worthy of regonition.

By not including awareness of blacks in the curriculum at American schools, we are depriving the Blacks, as well as the Whites, of the chance to be cognizant of the tremendous effect blacks have contributed to the history of mankind. In essence, it is depriving everyone of "historical" and even "educational" truth. In my opinion, the educational system in this respect, is another very potent vehicle used to infuse into the black and white mind misconstrued white values supported by the myths of the past. The "system" subjugates blacks to a white history that tells them that they are not worth mentioning. The system has blinded the whites from the fact that blacks were an integral part of the past, are an integral part of the present, and will definitely be a vital part of this society's future. The "system" must be changed and the best way is to start where it is most flexible (the university).

It has come to my attention that Afro-Am is presently working on a plan instituting a separate department, touching upon areas of education where black awareness is needed. However, information is very vague. Afro-Am is in a fluid state and perhaps it hasn't formulated any concrete ideas or positions. However, I would like to know whether this department is solely a means to develop black identity and pride; a means to make education relevent to the black community. Or is it also sensitivity training aimed at the breakdown of white culturally conditioned prejudices? I believe the department should fulfill these purposes and furthermore, we shouldn't stop here. We should also attempt to revamp the traditional curriculum with regard to black awareness. Why keep black awareness compartmentalized? We should have it not only set up in one department but also incorporated in our traditional Government, History, Economics and Psychology courses. The problem, however, is IMPLEMENTATION. Can incorporation be feasably implimented within the traditional curriculum?

It is my opinion that Afro-Am should not be voiceless with respect to black studies. We need to know what their ideas are. Academic affairs is also working on a complete overhaul of the curriculum. Has the need for black awareness been incorporated? Both organizations are working somewhat along the same lines. I think that in the best interest of the "concerned" student body and both Academic Affairs and Afro - Am, communications between these two organizations, in the form of a liason committee be established. At least both organizations will have a chance to exchange and make public their ideas on the need and place for black awareness in the curriculum. To reiterate, I believe that there is a definite necessity for a separate department of Afro-Am studies, in addition to the incorporation of black awareness in the traditional curriculum. The liason committee can solve, or at least discuss, the whole problem of implementation. I feel that Academic Affairs has everything to gain and nothing to lose by establishing communications. I also feel that if Afro-Am made their intentions more public (through a liason committee), the student body would support them more readily. The lack of white involvement last November can be partly attributed to an immediate reactionary feeling one gets when a previously quiet organization marches up to the Administration Building and flatly presents a list of demands. In this sense, the establishment of a liason committee will make the university community come to the realization that the intentions of Afro-Am are for the improvement of the entire educational system.

Poor Head

To the Editor:

I was angered beyond reconciliation when I read the title of an article written by me in last Friday's COLLEGIAN.

The title of MY article, as I had it, was SUPPORT ORCHARD HILL. The heading which appeared in the COLLEGIAN was "A Few Rotten Apples" --- precisely the antithesis of the meaning the article was intended to purport.

Now, to clean up a mess for which the COLLEGIAN is totally responsible, I repeat: the title of my article, as I wrote it, was SUPPORT ORCHARD HILL. My purpose in using this title was twofold: 1) to present a positive, optimistic heading in order to effectively overshadow the gripes which many "anti-Tabacco," "anti-committee-leaders" students held, and 2) to bring back into the fold, and thus regain the support of, those turned-off students, by recognizing the fact that, although errors may have been made by the "leaders," the demands were and are essentially legitimate and reasonable.

A part of my original text read: "I see no reason why anyone on the Hill should not back up the above requests." This statement, however, was stupidly changed by the Collegian to "WE see ..." -- another, unnecessary wrongdoing by the COLLEGIAN.

One of the objections which I mentioned in Friday's article pertained to the absence of a prefacing page of the "Constitution of the Orchard Hill Residential College" stating that the subsequent Constitution was merely a proposal, to be ratified by the students at a later date. However, it was recently pointed out to me by a member of the drafting committee that this problem was rectified by Article VII of the Constitution, which states that the "Constitution shall become effective when ratified by 3/4 of those polled by the Section Representatives of the four dorms..."

The heading caused one student to ask me if "A Few Rotten Apples" was used as dry wit to imply that "a few rotten apples spoil the whole bushel," and if I was thus implying that the whole Hill was rotten. I patiently replied that my original heading had been changed without my knowledge. Another student congratulated me for implying that Joe Tabacco was a rotten apple. I again replied patiently that the title was not mine, and that I did not think Tabacco was a rotten apple--maybe a dumb banana, but certainly not a rotten apple. But it was quite difficult trying to be patient and witty under the circumstances.

And in conclusion, I assert that this article should serve both to rectify the errors made by the COLLEGIAN in last Friday's article and also to unite all Hill residents in support of the demands being made. This established unity shall be maintained, unless, of course, someone wishes to again shatter it by submitting to this page a letter which attempts to refute this article.

Harold Koltin

Apple Sider

To the editor:

Mr. Koltin's editorial of Friday, March 14 (A Few Rotten Apples) gives us a fine example of the use of false "facts" and the views of a person whose home base is in the dark ages.

First, the march at 7:00 a.m. was known to the vast majority of residents of the Orchard. All section representatives of dorm governments were instructed to hold corridor meetings and let the whole Orchard know what was to happen. Besides this, the idea was not formed by the committee, but by a person in the crowd at the Wednesday night meeting of all interested residents.

Second, Mr. Koltin states that there shouldn't have been a commitment to the cause attached to the petitions; a person should have been able to sign the petition and feel that he'd done his part. This philosophy went out with cavemen. A signature is more than ink on a piece of paper without a commitment from whoever signed it. There may be a few less signatures, but there is more power behind it because each of those people who signed are committed to the cause.

Third, Mr. Koltin had best take a course in the forming of constitutions. Wednesday night, many students went without sleep in order to write a consitution for the Orchard. This was not a final draft, only a base from which to work when an open meeting was held the night of March 13 (where were you, Mr. Koltin?). Even this final draft has to be ratified by the residents themselves.

I thank Mr. Koltin for his support of our goals on paper, but why doesn't he give us the support of his efforts as well (Mr. Koltin DOES live in the Orchard).

UMass Wins Outstanding Service Award For Advancement of Economic Education

The Western Massachusetts Economics Education Council has presented outstanding service awards to the Labor Relations and Research Center (LRRC) at UMass and the Northampton National Bank for outstanding service to schools in the advancement of economic education.

Prof. Ben B. Seligman accepted the award on behalf of the Labor Center at UMass.

Prof. Seligman, long in the forefront of the movement to upgrade economic education through his service, is a trustee of the National Joint Council on Economic Education and has provided services to schools and colleges participating in programs of the Western Massachusetts Economic Education Council.

Mr. Richard S. Holden, President of the Northampton National Bank, is Treasurer of the Council and one of its original trustees. Through his efforts several in-service courses in economics for teachers in the Hampshire County area have been established and financed through the Massachusetts Bankers Association, the Federal Reserve Bank of Boston, and regional business and labor organizations.

The Western Massachusetts Economic Education Council is an association of educators and leaders from various fields that sponsor research assisting local colleges in the Western Massachusetts area represented on its Board of Trustees.

Amherst, Mass. - Richard S. Holden, President of Northampton National Bank, left, and Prof. Ben B. Seligman of the Labor Relations and Research Center at the University of Massachusetts, center, receive awards for outstanding service to schools in the advancement of economic education from Lynn Clark, Superintendent of Schools in Westfield and president of the Western Massachusetts Economic Education Council.

Vigil to be Held On Amherst Common

A vigil to express support for 27 men facing a 15 year hard labor sentence for singing "We shall overcome' in a military prison will be held today on the Amherst Common from noon to 6 p.m.

The men were charged with mutiny when, on October 14, they sang the protest song to protest the shooting of a fellow prisoner by a guard the day before. Most of the men involved were being held for being A.W.O.L. During their protest, which consisted of a sit-down strike for less than an hour, the prisoners attempted to present a list of grievences to the officer in charge. He in turn immediately charged them with mutiny.

Twelve of the men have already been tried and sentenced to 15 years of hard labor; the remaining 15 come up for trial this week.

Sponsors of the vigil say that similar demonstrations of "opposition to the brutality and lack of democracy in the (armed) services", will be held across the nation today.

Dr. Darity to Succeed Dr. Gage As Head of Public Health Dept.

University of Massachusetts professor of public health William A. Darity has been appointed head of the department of public health by the University Board of Trustees, effective Sept. 1 of this year.

The department is now headed by Dr. Robert Gage, who has a joint appointment as director of University Health Services. Effective Sept. 1, Dr. Gage will be full-time health services director with a concurrent appointment as UMass professor in the department of public health.

Dr. Darity came to UMass in 1965. He was director of the North Carolina Fund, a privately-financed anti-poverty program with offices in Chapel Hill, N.C. He is a native of North Carolina, a graduate of Shaw University in Raleigh and holds a Ph.D. from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

During his career, Dr. Darity has been a public health educator for local government agencies in North Carolina and Virginia and has served the World Health Organization as consultant, adviser, and professor of health education at the American University of Beirut, Lebanon.

He is a fellow of the American Public Health Association, the Society of Public Health Educators, of which he is President-Elect, and the American School Health Association. Dr. Darity is also a member of the International Union for Health Education and is a charter member of the American National Council of Health Education of the Public.

He is a director of the Planned Parenthood Federation of America and of the Sex Information and Education Council of the U.S. Dr. Darity is a member of the National Institutes of Health Grant Review Committee, which is responsible for reviewing and recommending all Public Health Service traineeship grants.

A graduate of UMass and the Harvard University Medical School, Dr. Gage has been director of health services at UMass since 1960. He received last year's Metawampe Award, an honor given by the senior class for dedication by a faculty member in and out of the classroom. The award recognized his continued efforts in health counseling with young people.

Banks Raise Rates Of Interest Again

NEW YORK (AP) - Major banks Monday raised their prime rate-interest charged big borrowers-to another all-time high of 7-1/2 per cent from 7 per cent. It was the fourth boost in four months.

Bankers said the action was taken because available lending funds have dwindled in the prevailing tight money situation.

The immediate effect will be to make it more costly for corporations to borrow to finance expansion. The probable longer term result would be to increase the cost of financing purchases of homes, cars, appliances, furniture and other consumer items.

A New York banker gave these reasons for higher interest costs:

- Money markets have been very tight - the Federal Reserve Board is pursuing policies of restraint.

- Banks with London branches have been borrowing heavily in the Eurodollar market. Eurodollars are dollars held abroad, and interest charges on these funds have climbed to 8-1/2 per cent.

Despite anticipating that the 10 per cent income tax surcharge enacted last June would put a brake on economic growth, demand for loans for corporate expansion and consumer purchases has grown.

Writing Workshop to be Offered This Summer on Nantucket Island

An accredited three-week Summer Workshop Course in Imaginative Writing will be offered from June 9 to June 27 at the UMass facilities on Nantucket Island.

Novelist Richard Kim of the UMass English department, whose works include "The Martyred" and "The Innocent", will be principal instructor. A visiting staff of professional writers and editors will furnish supplementary literary and technical direction in both the novel and the short story.

Guest lecturers will include Miss Phoebe Larmore of the John Cushman and Associates Agency; Michael Mazzis, editor, Alfred Knopf; Richard Todd, editor, Houghton Mifflin; and James Landis, editor, William Morrow.

Enrollment will be limited to twelve students in residence and to four day students who will be responsible for obtaining their own housing somewhere on the island. Residents will be housed in the UMass living facilities located on a private, half-mile beach in the middle of a game preserve.

Writers from any disciplinary background are eligible, provided that they qualify for upperclass or transient graduate status at the University and have work in progress. The course will require intensive writing. Students will work with their own manuscripts and may enroll for three credits in either graduate or undergraduate English.

Deadline for applications is May 15. All applications must be accompanied by samples of the student's work in prose fiction only. The admissions committee will answer all applicants by June 1.

Fees, including tuition, board, room and linen, will be $250 for Massachusetts residents and $265 for others. Day students will be charged $165 and $185 respectively. All students are expected to bring typewriters.

Applicants are advised to make their travel reservations early because weekend transportation to the island is heavily booked. All questions and application requests should be sent to Professor John H.Mitchell, Department of English, UMass, Amherst.

Ellerbrook and Gayeska Earn All-Conference Statis

Coaches Pick DiSarcina As Honorary Captain

Ray Ellerbrook of the Yankee Conference champions from UMass and John Fultz of the runners-up from Rhode Island were unanimous choices for the all-conference team, it was announced today. The votes were by the coaches at the six New England state universities.

Ellerbrook, a 6'1 junior guard from Hawthorne, N.J., who had a personal high of 31 points against Maine, averaged 18 points a game as the Redmen tied a school record by winning 17 and losing 7 and recorded their best mark in conference play by winning 9 and losing 1.

Fultz, a 6'6 sharpshooter from Natick, Mass., who led the Rams on a late season surge when they won 6 of their last 8 after a dismal start, had a high of 46 points against Connecticut as he captured the conference scoring crown with an average of 29.3 points per game. He was one of the top free throw shooters in the country with a percentage of 86.3. Fultz is also a junior.

Rounding out the first five were Peter Gayeska, 6'9 senior pivotman from Somerville, Mass., who averaged 15.8 points and 11 rebounds for UMass; Jim Stephenson, 6'3 senior from Bangor, and the University of Maine, and Claude English, a 6'4 junior from Columbus, Georgia, and Rhode Island.

Stephenson had high point nights against New Hampshire (44), and Rhode Island (33), in posting a conference game average of 25.6 for runner-up honors to Fultz. English played the last 14 games, most of them against conference foes, with a badly jammed right wrist, averaging 11 points per game.

In an unprecedented move, the coaches voted to make Redman Joe DiSarcina, an all-conference choice a year ago, honorary captain of this year's team. DiSarcina, who missed some games early in the season because of a death in the family, also had to sit out several games at the end because of injuries.

The second team comprises Frank Martiniuk and Dave Lapointe of Vermont; Ron Hrubala of Connecticut, Jeff Bannister of New Hampshire, Hugh Campbell of Maine and Bob Staack of Connecticut.

Crew Team Comes Out of Hibernation

By JAN ČURLEY
Assistant Managing Editor

The activity on the Connecticut River in South Hadley seemed incongruous with the weather last weekend. The snow was frozen and after a few weeks, was dirty brown and the river was frozen over. The motor boats and other pleasure craft that usually dot the waters around The Sportsman's Marina in the spring and summer are still in the boat houses. But a hardy group of rowers were chopping through the ice to launch their shells. Outdoor rowing was underway for the UMass crew team.

As protection against hitting ice floes, the crew team was using the older shells which have double skins. If the shell strikes an ice floe, the damage will be minimal.

Varsity coach Mike Faherty has been putting his rowers through their paces all winter long. Presently the team is on a five day a week program. During spring break, they will be rowing twice a day. After vacation, the crew will be on a seven day a week program.

Faherty will be stressing more long rowing in the weeks to come. So far the team has been averaging about six miles, but soon he will work them up to 10 or 12 miles a day. The coach has been using four men at a time and occasionally eight. This spring the team is renting a bus for transportation to and from South Hadley.

In the last three or four weeks, Faherty has lost four veterans due either to injury or to personal reasons. He still has a strong core of rowers, two seniors, 12 sophomores and seven juniors. Of this group, only four are newcomers. Two of the sophomores are over 6'3.

The freshmen under Coach Kurt Betchick have been working out during the winter months. He has already had to cut his candidates once, and now with 12 remaining, he will have to cut again. None of them have ever rowed before, and they are taller than last year's frosh team even though their average weight, 182, is less than that of last year's frosh boat.

Prospects for the continuation of crew at UMass have been enhanced by its recognition as a formal varsity sport by the Athletic Council. Two candidates are now being considered for coach, and the Athletic Department will give some financial support to the crew. A new shell is due to arrive as well as new oars with shovel blades.

Formal competition at home opens Wednesday afternoon, April 9, against Notre Dame. The varsity and junior varsity will be rowing in this one. In all of the remaining races, the freshmen will also be competing. The Harborow Regatta is April 12 in Middletown, Conn., against Wesleyan and WPI.

April 19 the team will travel to the Kerr Cup in Philadelphia to compete against Georgetown, the most formidable opposition, Marist College, Williams, Drexel (the sponsor) and Wesleyan. After that, it's a race in Hartford, Conn., at Trinity with George Washington also competing.

Last year, G.W. and Trinity finished in the top finals at the Dad Vail. May 3 UMass will host its own race, the Alumni Cup, which will become an annual event. Williams, Holy Cross and URI will be here.

The season will end May 9 and 10 with the Dad Vail in Philadelphia. The Vail is the largest college regatta in the United States. It will be limited to 36 schools this year with over 80 boats competing.

FIRST SIGN OF SPRING?! - These UMass crewmen appear on this icy scene long before any Robin would. Not out to catch the first worms, the Redmen crew team is preparing itself for the upcoming '69 Spring com season. (MDC photo by Ken Emery.)

Enthusiasm Reigns High For Intramural Wrestling

This year's Intramural Wrestling Championships, to be held tonight at Boyden should provide many thrills and excitement for the interested spectator. Because of the increased number of entries and the great enthusiasm shown during the preliminary matches, this year's championships are expected to be the best to date.

In the 128-pound class, there should be an interesting battle fought between Buba Tung of the Hamlin Pied Pipers and Paul Perrault representing Phi Mu Delta. Tung is virtually untested, as he pinned one man and won the remainder of his matches by forfeit. Perrault, on the other hand, has won all but one match by pins.

Frank Brucate of the Adams Smashers, in the 137-pound class, has defeated four opponents by pins and one by decision. Challenging Brucate will be Brian Abbott, representing White Heat - White Light. Abbott has two pins and two decisions to his credit. This match should be rated a toss-up.

In the 147-pound class, Ed Jazab of the Adams Smashers, who has won all four matches by pins, will meet Dick Randall, who has a record of two pins, one decision and one win by injury. Both men are strong wrestlers and should display some excellent wrestling skills.

One of the better matches of the evening could well be found in the 157-pound class, where Jim Peters of Phi Mu Delta will square off with Bill Martin of the Cnadbourne Maroons. Peters has to his credit two pins, two decisions and one win by forfeit. However, Peters will have his work cut out for him for Martin has had three pins and one decision.

In the 167-pound class, Mike Bisel battled his way into the finals by winning five straight matches, three by pins. His opponent will be Dave Castricone of the independent Bulldogs. Castricone won all but one contest by pins. This should be one of the best matches of the evening.

The 177-pound class is highlighted by the matchup of Dick Platts of the Wheeler Trojans and Paul Rufa of White Heat - White Light. Platts won five straight matches with one pin and four decisions. Rufa won four matches by pins in addition to a close decision, 5-3 in overtime. This should be a great match.

Ron Young of Phi Mu Delta has won his way into the finals of the 187-pound class by virtue of three pins and two decisions. Young's opponent will be Dick Cook of Phi Sigma Delta, who has won five straight matches, four by pins and one by decision. This match should pit skill and experience on the part of Young, versus toughness and raw strength on behalf of Cook.

In the 197-pound class, Jim Kleider of Theta Chi has won four matches by pins and one by forfeit. His opposition, Dan Kelley of Tau Kappa Epsilon, has won five matches, three by pins, one by decision and one by forfeit. Kleider is strong and steady; Kelley seems to have the edge on skill.

The match that everyone has been waiting for is featured in the unlimited class, where Kappa Sigma's Paul Toner tangles with Rich Donlin. Toner is quick, strong and likes to mix it. Donlin, who weighs over 300 pounds, takes his time and uses his strength and weight to flatten his opponents. Toner, at 225 pounds, will be giving away 75 pounds, and this could be an advantage to Donlin.

Toner has won his five straight matches by pins. Donlin, on the other hand, has won four matches by pins and one by forfeit.

Attesting to the quality of the competition in this year's championships is the fact that only one man, Dick Cook, who competed in the '68 finals, is returning for a stab at a '69 title.

NBA Tosses Tomorrow

NEW YORK (AP) - The long-awaited coin-tossing ceremony deciding which National Basketball Association team will have the right to draft UCLA All-American Lew Alcindor will be held Wednesday, it was announced Monday.

The toss will take place in the office of Walter Kennedy, the NBA commissioner.

The toss will be between the teams finishing in last place in the circuit's two divisions, currently Milwaukee in the East and Phoenix in the West.

The toss will be held at 11 a.m., EST.

Alcindor had been reported drafted by the New York Nets in a secret draft by American Basketball Association teams. This was denied by both the league and the Nets.

However, ABA officials have stated the league would go to virtually any lengths to acquire the towering star of UCLA's top-ranked college basketball team, including a $1 million contract.

History Department Unrest Affects Faculty, Students

By RICHARD S. KLINE

(Editor's Note: Mr. Kline is a former DAILY COLLEGIAN News Editor and the following story is an in depth report on the history department compiled by him.)

The academic atmosphere of the University of Massachusetts has seemingly degenerated because of pressures within the faculty structure. The history department in particular has a group of professors disgruntled and dismayed at the way their department is being run.

Many of these professors would protest publicly the alleged inequities but claim to be afraid of reprisals from the older members of the department that might injure their careers or possibly cause them to lose their jobs. The atmosphere, they say, is one that causes a number of faculty members to do their research and keep up with their teaching duties because of the mental distraction and time consuming politics."

A substantial group of faculty members of the department, which has come to be known as the "Young Turks" and of whom only four are tenured, is challenging the "politics" of the so-called "Old Guard" group which now controls the department. According to the "Young Turks," though this controlling faction consists of only 10 or 12 members, nearly all of them are tenured and are in the position to dictate policy.

The resignation of the University's Dean of the College of Arts and Sciences, I. Moyer Hunsberger, Tues. Feb. 25, was at least partially the result of the conflict in the history department.

Hunsberger was in favor of the reappointment of Professor Robert Potash as history department head for a three-year term, while the majority of the current department members have been seemingly unhappy with his performance as head.

"Unofficial" minutes of the History Department's Feb. 20 meeting, which were mysteriously provided to every member of the department (official minutes appeared only yesterday), reported that a poll of the department "resulted in a vote of 18 opposed to Professor Potash's reappointment and 14 in favor." According to associate Professor R. Dean Ware, one of the tenured members of the "Turks", if absentee ballots had been counted the vote "would probably have been close to 30-16 against the reappointment."

This was not, however, how the vote was seen by all department members. "What it boiled down to," said one, "was essentially a vote against Hunsberger" and Potash's association with him.

"I wasn't there to defend myself or even show my position," stated the department head. Furthermore, "included in the vote were people who will not be in the department next year. A majority of those that are going to be here next year stated that they want me to continue as department head."

In the anonymous minutes of that meeting (that were deemed "very accurate" by many of those in attendance but which have been objected to for "ommissions and distortions" by others) it was reported that one professor charged that "the last seven years had been years of serious mismanagement in the department . . . and that the department's management did not observe professional standards in arriving at decisions . . . Junior members of the department," he concluded, "were disregarded and their talent stifled."

Preceding Dr. Potash as Department head was Professor Howard H. Quint, now a strong Potash supporter. Quint was appointed Department head in 1961 and announced his resignation from that post in Sept. 1967, effective July 1968. It was at that time that Potash took over as Department Head.

"In the last three or four years," according to one professor, "over 20 faculty members have resigned from the department, and an additional 10 or 12 did not have their contracts renewed." Most of these people, the professor asserts, "left the department in various degrees of alienation."

Revisions in Speech, English Requirements are Possibility

By DREW B. STERGIS
Education Staff

Currently under consideration by the administration and faculty of the College of Arts and Sciences is a proposal to revise the introductory English and Speech requirements.

The present curriculum requires most students to take 4 credit-hours of Freshman English and 2 credit-hours of Speech. The new proposal is to change this requirement to a series of 3-credit courses of which the student is to take two. The courses would be devoted to several aspects of training in reading, writing, and speaking.

The proposal for the reorganization of rhetoric requirements was presented in the recent "Report of the Dean's Committee on Rhetoric in the College Curriculum." The chairman of this committee is Walker Gibson of the English department.

The following paragraph from the report is a brief description of the proposal:

"We propose that all students (except Advanced Placement students) take two three-hour courses in Rhetoric, and that they enjoy a degree of choice in pursuing interests they prefer. In general, during the first semester of this sequence, student s will confront language theory and language practice in broad terms, with stress on oral OR on written communication. During the second semester - and the requirement need not necessarily be completed during the freshman year - students will choose from a variety of studies in which particular styles of communication are scrutinized. These include (at least in our present proposal) a study of the performing arts, a study of modern media, a study in close reading of literature, and a study of the rhetoric of a particular academic discipline, such as physics, sociology, or fine arts."

More specifically, the committee proposes six possible courses. The following are brief descriptions of the options proposed:

First semester (choose one):

Rhetoric 1. Language in Use. Influences on linguistic choice. Expressive and communicative behavior.

Rhetoric 2. Principles of Spoken Communication. Emphasis on the spoken language.

Second semester (choose one):

Rhetoric 3. Close Reading of Literature. Intensive reading of poems, fiction, and plays (mostly modern).

Rhetoric 4. Criticism and the Performing Arts. A study of critical approaches to film, theatre, concert, television, etc.

Rhetoric 5. The Media. A study of 3 or 4 works that have been presented in several media (e.g. THE CAINE MUTINY).

Rhetoric 6. Language of an Academic Discipline. This course is to be offered by any department wishing to participate. It is addressed to the rhetorical problems of a particular discipline.

It is emphasized in the report that "All courses require frequent practice in reading and writing, and some offer practice in speaking as well. All attempt to involve the student as directly as possible in his own education, so that particular exercises in writing and speaking can emerge from dialogue between teacher and class."

The report explains that "these courses will require considerable direction and supervision . . . The Director of Rhetoric, who oversees the entire program, should be assisted by an Advisory Committee on Rhetoric appointed by the Dean, and, since this is an inter-departmental operation, the Director should answer to no one department, but directly to the Dean with the consultation of this Advisory Committee.'

The members of the Committee on Rhetoric which prepared the report are Herman Cohen, Donald Freeman, Walker Gibson, Ernest Hofer, John Mitchell, Gary Stewart, and Karl Wallace.

Editors note: A news analysis on the foreign language requirement is printed on page 3.

Balboni, Madden Vie for Senate Pres.

By CHRIS MCGAHAN
Student Government Editor

This evening's Student Senate meeting will see that annual pageant of pyrotechnical oratory and political persuasion and maneuvering known as Senate elections. The elections are being held about a month earlier than in the past this year, as provided in S 120, passed at the Constitutional Convention of February 26. This legislation, introduced by President Paul Silverman, states that "The officers of the Senate shall be elected in March," where it previously had read "April", "and shall be installed at the first Senate meeting in April," where it had previously read "May."

President Silverman claimed that the extra month would allow the in-coming President a greater opportunity to adjust to the job before leaving campus for the summer recess.

Tonite's election is the first in three years in which there are contests for all four positions. The campaign period has been characterized by an alleged "conservative-liberal" split between the candidates and even charges of two ideologically opposed tickets. The "ticket" charge has been categorically denied by all 8 of the candidates, and the ideological split has been denounced as "pure bunk" by all but two of the candidates, who coincidentally are running on the so-called liberal side.

The candidates for Treasurer are Senator Susan Bacon and present Treasurer Alan Gauthier.

Sue Bacon, a petite, self-assured red-head, known as "J.B." to her colleagues in the Senate, was elected in the general election of October, 1968. Although she has been in the Senate for only a year, her experience includes membership on the Ways and Means Committee, the Student Government Affairs Sub-committee on the Constitution, and the Ways and Means Freshman Class Advisory Sub-committee. She is also a member of the Faculty Senate Library Committee, and she serves as Chairman of the JFK-RFK Memorial Library Committee.

Miss Bacon claims that, because of the increasing work loads of the Senate President and Vice President, "it is no longer possible for (them) to handle the job of liason to Whitmore adequately. The other two officers will have to be used." She hopes to use the office of Treasurer to effectively coordinate the activities of the three Senate financial committees so they will not work at cross purposes as they occasionally have in the past. Win or lose, she expects to work to see her ideas implemented in the functioning of the Treasurer next year.

Al Gauthier, a personable guy with an omnipresent smile, was first elected to the Senate from Grayson House in the Fall of 1967. His first committee assignment was the Services Committee, of which he later was appointed Chairman by President Jim Collins. He was elected Treasurer last April, defeating present and then Budgets Committee Chairman Brad Johnson. He has also served as a member of the Alcoholic Beverages Committee and the Budgets Committee.

Treasurer Gauthier is running on his record. During his incumbency he, in cooperation with RSO Business Manager Bud Demers, revised the RSO bookkeeping procedures, eliminating the Blue Book system in favor of computerization. He has revised the Senate Financial Policy Booklet; and he has begun negotiations for a comprehensive insurance program for Senate-sponsored organizations.

Gauthier regards all these as substantial contributions to the more efficient functioning of RSO. He hopes to continue in office to help firmly establish the new RSO bookkeeping system, as well as to bring to completion the insurance negotiations. In an MDC interview Gauthier said, "I think that on the basis of my record and qualifications I deserve to be re-elected. I hope the Senate will place its confidence in me for another year, as there is still a lot of work I want to do to improve general Senate financial functioning."

Running for Secretary are Senators Patricia Beharry and Sharon O'Brien.

Pat Beharry, who has been in the Senate almost as long as she has been at the University, was

THE NEWS IN BRIEF

WASHINGTON (AP) - A group of young critics said Tuesday the Federal Trade Commission should be abolished unless it receives new funds, more authority and a chairman willing to "galvanize the consumer forces behind him.'

The critics, four law students and a recent law graduate, told a Senate subcommittee about reaction to their recent critical study of the FTC. They said it included a "hysterical" eight-page document from Chairman Paul Rand Dixon and a memo advising employes, among other things, to "cover up any lunch imbibing with breath mints.'

SAIGON (AP) - In one of the war's largest operations, about 10,000 U.S. troops launched a drive through the battle-scarred plantations northwest of Saigon Tuesday in an attempt to shatter an expected enemy thrust toward the canital.

The U.S. infantrymen and tanks kicked off the sweep, called Operation Atlas Wedge, in and around the sprawling Michelin rubber plantation about 40 miles from Saigon.

Their goal is to block the North Vietnamese 7th Division, believed to be moving through the area along the Saigon River toward the capital.

LOS ANGELES (AP) - A defense psychiatrist admitted under cross-examination Tuesday that he took much of his description of Sirhan Bishara Sirhan's mental condition from another man's book on murders. But the witness said he developed the diagnosis himself.

(AP) - Israeli and Egyptian artillery thundered along the Suez Canal for two hours Tuesday in a renewal of the duels that have broken the quiet of that sector of the cease-fire line the past two weeks.

(CPS) - Federal Judge James Doyle ruled today that the University of Wisconsin Board of Regents violated the constitutional rights of three students when they suspended them without a hearing on March 6th. The judge ruled that the summary suspensions were abridged due process which is protected by the 14th amendment. The judge ordered that the three students be reinstated with full rights and privileges pending an outcome of a hearing into their alleged misconduct which will begin today.

Appointments,,Committee Reports Dominate Graduate Senate Meeting

A five-member ad hoc judiciary committee was named by the Graduate Student Senate at its latest bi-weekly meeting last Monday night.

Appointments to the proposed Civilian Review Board and to the University Library Committee were also made at a meeting otherwise dominated by committee reports.

Ethan Roberts, GSS treasurer, Senators John Matteson (biochemistry) and C. Vernon Gray (government), and Brad Whipple (sociology) and Sam Ajiri (engineering) were selected from a list of seven candidates for posts on the ad hoc judiciary committee.

The committee will consider any charges brought before it by the university administration against graduate students. It will use the proposed graduate student procedural code as its guide in considering cases and making recommendations, recommended findings to the office of the Dean of the Graduate School. The proposed code was reported out of the Graduate Student Senate last spring.

President Thomas Minogue reported that the Graduate Student Senate had participated in the selection of Prof. Seymour Shapiro, head of the botany department, for the post of Acting Dean of the College of Arts and Sciences. Minogue reported that academic affairs committee had evaluated the final list of four candidates at an open meeting. Full consideration by the GSS was not possible because of former Dean Hunsberger's brief notice of resignation. Dean Shapiro had been the committee's first choice for the post, Minogue said.

Sen. Herbert Nichols (computer science) was named the graduate student representative to the proposed Civilian Review Board. A board to review complaints about the behaviour of the University's security forces was requested last fall by the Afro American Club. This request was backed by other university groups, including the GSS.

Nichols reported that the administration has taken substantial steps toward the formation of such a committee. As planned, the board will consist of five persons representing graduate students, undergraduate students, faculty, the office of the Dean of Students and the Treasurer's Office.

Sen. Arthur Kluge (chemistry) opposed Nichols' selection. He was defeated 14-7.

Sen. Robert Bullivant (labor relations) and Bill Wilkinson (sociology) were named graduate student representatives to the University Library Committee. The appointments were necessitated by the creation this winter of two graduate student seats on the committee, coupled with the resignation of the previous graduate student delegate Alain Chartier. Chartier resigned due to an increased study load.

Michael Rosen, chairman of the social committee, reported that as the result of the last social event in February, his committee had almost run through last fall's appropriation of $200. Rosen's request for an additional $100 with which to back a social event in late April was passed by a vote of 14 to 6 after the Graduate Student Senate had attached a rider requiring that the format of the proposed event be approved by it.

The next meeting of the Graduate Student Senate will be on Monday, March 31 in the Student Union. Meetings are open to the public. Further information is available at the GSS office in room 216 of the Student Union. Office hours are 12:30 to 3 p.m. Mondays through Thursdays.

Debt Ceiling Increase Gets Bipartisan Support

WASHINGTON (AP) - A $12 billion temporary increase in the national debt ceiling appeared Tuesday to be assured by bipartisan-if not enthusiastic-support.

House Republican Leader Gerald R. Ford of Michigan - whose GOP cohorts voted to a man on one occasion last year against a debt limit increase - predicted "a good Republican vote for the bill" when the House takes it up Wednesday.

Both at Ford's news conference and at a Rules Committee hearing clearing the bill for House action questions were asked about the difference in Republican attitudes toward authorizing more government borrowing when Republicans rather than when Democrats control the executive branch.

Ford said the Republican reaction this year will be different because "we now have faith in the administration concerning fiscal responsibilily.'

"You know the people, their philosophy and their statements even though they have been in broad generalities," Ford added.

"The administration philosophy is that they will be working with the economy bloc in the House and Senate."

But in the Rules Committee, Democratic Chairman William M. Colmer of Mississippi, a leader of the economy bloc, remarked he is disappointed in the Nixon administration's economy performance to date.

"So far, I haven't seen any indication the new administration is going to cut back any expenditures," Colmer said. "The programs, the poverty programs and others, are going on about as they did under the former administration. When you realize those programs have built-in escalation clauses, you must realize some curtailment is needed if we are to have a balanced budget."

Foreign Language Committee Fails to Reflect Campus Sentiment

By DREW B. STERGIS
Education Staff

As the Committee on Rhetoric was preparing its report on the revision of introductory English and Speech requirements, another committee was presumably studying the Foreign Language requirements.

The Committee on Foreign Language Instruction recently submitted a report to the College of Arts and Sciences administration and faculty, as did the Committee on Rhetoric. Here the similarity between the committees ends.

While the Rhetoric report was full of concrete, specific proposals, the Foreign Language report was full of abstract, impractical, and general views of the role of foreign language training in the modern world.

The committee holds in its report's introduction that it "has taken a fresh look at the concept of a foreign language requirement and at the position accorded foreign language study in the curriculum of the College of Arts and Sciences." Then begins a wordy, 8-page document with only two innovations.

The report says that "Education and monolingualism are incompatible."

The introduction continues: "in addition to providing all students with skills in the use of at least one appropriate alternate language, educational institutions have a further responsibility in the area of language and communication arts: they must provide a meaningful and contemporary understanding of some of the complex and subtle technological, theoretical, psychological, and philosophical aspects of the general problem of human communication."

And it continues: "We are also concerned, and deeply so, with foreign language learning as in itself essentially a liberating and humanistic decuational experience. This experience at its best can provide a unique kind of enlightenment, and in two directions. It can provide a means of crossing linguistic, national, and cultural barriers and of approaching an understanding of foreign countries, civilizations and cultures. And, by opening new perspectives it can cause the student to reflect back upon himself, his language, and his culture."

The following are the committee's proposals for a series of courses (which finally appear on page 3 and 4 of the report):

- The present four course foreign language sequence.
- Divisional reading options on the 130-140 level of the four course foreign language sequence. "These courses will not aim at proficiency in the four skills (reading, writing, listening comprehension, and speaking) but will instead concentrate on reading." That is an exact quote from the report.
- An intensive two semester language sequence. Meeting 8-10 hours per week and receiving double credit.
- A semi-intensive two semester foreign language reading course.

Next, a few minor recommendations are made: "In order to increase the foreign language options available to students in the College, we strongly support efforts presently being made to expand the offerings in Oriental languages. At the same time we recommend the initiation of courses in one or more African languages, especially in the light of a new interest on this campus in Afro-American studies."No specific details about these recommendations are given in the report.

On page 5 of the report it's back to the philosophy behind the suggestions. (The writer suggests that the few suggestions offered are limited in themselves, especially when compared to the detailed, applicable proposals of the Rhetoric Committee).

The report drags on: ". . .in order to maintain the respectability and integrity of the degree of Bachelor of Arts granted to students completing the curriculum in the College of Arts and Sciences, we have decided unanimously in favor of retaining a college-wide or universal requirement administered by the College itself. We feel strongly that the abolition of such a requirement would be detrimental to the very existence of our college as an institution of liberal education and would lead the way to excessively departmentalized pre-professional specialization. We submit that if any requirements are to be retained in the College the foreign language requirement which we are proposing here is just as valid and viable as the rhetoric requirement, the literature requirement, the history - philosophy requirement, or the social and natural science requirements." (The writer suggests that this last sentence is highly debatable).

The report then proposes the following ways of fulfilling the foreign language requirement:

1. By attaining an approved score on the College Entrance Examination Board foreign language test taken in the senior year of high school.
2. By attaining a similar score on a University administered placement or proficiency test.
3. By completing one of the sequences of foreign language study outlined in the above list on pages 3 or 4.

The Committee goes on and on to say it is interested in improving secondary school language training and also language counseling.

After many more words, the report concludes with the suggestion of combining its requirement with that of the Rhetoric program, perhaps calling the whole thing the "Languag e Arts Requirement."

The Committee of Foreign Language Instruction is "made up" of the following members: Irving P. Rothberg (Chairman), Robert L. Bancroft, Micheline Dufau, Peter Fischer, Nancy Lamb, Gilbert Lawall, Maurice Levin, Albert Reh, Harold L. Smith, Jr., Thomas F. Sousa, and Zina Tillona.

The question of the foreign language requirement on this campus promises to receive a considerable amount of attention in the near future. It is this writer's opinion that the report here discussed fails to meet the general campus sentiments toward a reduction in requirements and a more significant choice of courses. The subject is now thoroughly open to debate.

Darity Discusses Problems of Latent Racism

By ROSE MILLER
Staff Reporter

The problem of latent racism on campus was discussed by Dr. William A. Darity, professor of public health, and students in Melville, Monday night. Darity opened the discussion by contending that, "everyone has racism inside of him, instilled by society.'

The meeting topic was originally scheduled to be "Racism on Campus, Fact or Fallacy,' but Darity changed the format, since he believes the roots of racism manifest themselves only when the problem is brought to the individual to deal with.

Darity stated that he is opposed to a separatist state, because he believes "the heart of racism grows from the idea of maintaining a pure race by forbidding intermarriage."

Reflecting on his role with CCEBS, Darity explained the rationale for having 128 black student s live on Orchard Hill. This was done to facilitate the tutorial program which those students participate in. However, as sophomores, the students can choose whatever dorm they like, since the black tutorial program lasts only through the freshman year.

Darity said black togetherness if often misinterpreted. It is an attempt by the black man to find identity. This, he stated, is important, "since in the past the black man has been defined in white man's terms.'

Disagreeing with the Kerner Report's prophecy that society will be split in two, one half white, one half black, Darity felt that people accept people for what they are, and blacks and whites can do that as individuals.

Alumni Send Governor Resolution To Support Medical School Bill

Associate Alumni has forwarded a resolution to the Governor and Massachusetts Legislature calling for support of the Medical School bill, H-4730.

The 24,000-member organization urged swift approval of the legislation by lawmakers and immediate funding so that construction can start on the first phase shortly.

Among the reasons cited in the resolution were:

—The critical need for doctors in the state now and in the immediate future.

—Massachusetts is the only populous state without a public medical school.

--The medical school has been granted $35 million from federal agencies for this construction which would be lost if it is not built.

--Qualified young men and women from Massachusetts are being turned away from medical schools in this state and in other states.

--Because of escalation of construction costs, it would cost more to give money to private medical schools to expand their facilities than to build a state school, and it would delay the graduation of new doctors.

--The cost of the University of Massachusetts Medical School is not out of line with other medical schools being constructed in other states.

The resolution concluded, "The education of our youth and the health and well being of our citizenry require full support for the state medical school."

Senate President Maurice A. Donahue met with University of Massachusetts officials and leading Worcester citizens Friday to discuss progress in building the medical school in Worcester. (Left to Right) President Donahue, James Laughlin, Secretary-Treasurer of the Massachusetts State Labor Council (AFL-CIO), Medical School Dean Lemar Soutter and State Senator John Conte of Worcester.

Old Guard, Young Turks Speak on History Department

Professor Potash noted that "In a department of this size such a turnover is not unusual, and especially so in a department that expanded so rapidly at the lower levels."

"Of the 30 or so members that have left," one professor said, "several were persons of national reputation and others have demonstrated outstanding achievement in publications and in being elected chairmen of their new departments." Professor Potash noted, "Most of those people went to less distinguished schools than UMass and in other cases factors unrelated to departmental politics influenced the decisions to leave."

"I have not fired anyone since assuming the headship," Dr. Potash flatly stated. He added that in four of the six instances of non-renewal decided last year, "University policy left no alternative since the individuals had still not completed their doctorates after three years." Another member of the department asserted, "Most instructors asked to leave would have been asked to do so in any major institution."

Even some faculty members who are leaving the department; however, are afraid of speaking out against what they consider injustices. Professor Robert W. Kern, a historian of Spain now at the University of New Mexico, in his two years at the University was an outspoken critic of departmental policy and was one of the members that "resigned in protest."

Contacted at his home in Albuquerque, New Mexico, Kern told the DAILY COLLEGIAN that although he already had the position in New Mexico last year, Howard Quint attempted "to ruin my career by writing the University of New Mexico and telling them not to hire me as I was an 'irresponsible, insubordinate,' person."

The charge is completely without foundation," commented Professor Quint. "For one thing, I was simply passing a comment to a friend of mine after Kern had been hired. It's an absolute mendacity."

According to a current history department faculty member, "Under the Quint-Potash administration harassment of people who could not be easily gotten rid of took the form of petty annoyances, which seriously affected morale." Another professor added that the students are "being hurt simply by the fact that the better professors are being driven off."

Dr. Potash, on the contrary, asserts that "These injustices are completely imaginary. I have scrupulously tried to follow a policy of fairness and equity in all departmental matters." Another professor who was consulted pointed out "there is no way that re-

Contact lenses were designed to be a convenience. And they are up to a point. They're convenient enough to wear, once you get used to them, but, until recently, you had to use two or more different lens solutions to properly prepare and maintain contacts. You needed two or three different bottles, lens cases, and you went through more than enough daily rituals to make even the most steadfast individuals consider dropping out.

But now caring for your contacts can be as convenient as wearing them. Now there's Lensine, from the makers of Murine. Lensine is the one lens solution designed for complete contact lens care preparing, cleansing, and soaking.

Just a drop or two of Lensine before you insert your lens prepares it for your eye. Lensine makes your contacts, which are made of modern plastics, compatible with your eye. How? Lensine is an "isotonic" solution. That means it's made to blend with the eye's natural fluids. So a simple drop or two coats the lens, forming a sort of comfort zone around it.

Cleaning your contacts with Lensine fights bacteria and foreign deposits that build up during the course of the day. And for overnight soaking, Lensine provides a handy contact canister on the bottom of every bottle. Soaking your contacts in Lensine between wearing periods assures you of proper lens hygiene.

Improper storage between wearings permits the growth of bacteria on your lenses. This is a sure cause of eye irritation and, in some cases, it can endanger your vision. Bacteria cannot grow in Lensine. Lensine is sterile, self-sanitizing, and antiseptic.

Let your contacts be the convenience they were designed to be. The name of the game is Lensine. Lensine, made by the Murine Company, Inc.

Are you cut out for contact sports?

'. . . I just can't think about academics.'

prisals can be made." He added that he felt "there have been no harassments or reprisals. We are free, to appoint, to say what we want to say."

Approximately a dozen vacancies will occur in the history department by the end of the 1968-69 academic year. As far as is known, only four appointments have been made to fill these positions. Professor Potash declared, however, that "recruitment has been directed primarily toward attracting senior scholars, which is a much more difficulty task than finding junior faculty - Berkeley now has to make 10 offers to fill each major position. Judged by the quality of the men appointed thus far," he added, "the department has done very well indeed. Any institution in the country would be proud to have the two new full professors joining us next fall."

Says one tenured member of the department, "We would not keep a person merely because he was a good teacher - nor would we fire anyone for being a bad one." One current member of the department stated, "I was told by Bob Potash when I came here that teaching didn't mean a thing in terms of promotion, and that it was publications that counted."

"This is just a brutal statement of what academic life is," proclaimed another professor. "Potash is concerned with teaching." Some department members feel that "for all their faults as administrators, the people in charge (Potash and Quint) gave the students what they wanted" in terms of curriculum reform.

It is a matter of record according to one "Young Turk;" that of the members of the "Old Guard" three have published no books, two more only their dissertations and another person only one book "that was panned in the AMERICAN HISTORICAL REVIEW."

In the "opposition" several books and many articles have been published by assistant professors as well as senior men. "At least three or four of these works are outstanding pieces of work," said one member of the group. Another stated, "We publish as well as teach and . . . given the extra years that they have been working, they have little enough to show for it."

Professor Potash, when asked to comment, laughed. He pointed out that "two of the three have books in the press and have many other works to their credit, that the publishing of a dissertation is much to be desired, if it can be turned into a good book and that in the two instances cited, Princeton University Press, one of the top presses in the country, was the publisher. One of these books was even submitted by the Princeton Press as a Pulitzer Prize candidate. Fortunately it didn't win, for if it did we would have lost the author to the Ivy League."

Of particular interest in light of current trends is the situation of the proposed history department Afro-American history course. Several professors in the department have indicated that earlier this year Potash would consider only four or five persons in the country qualified for the teaching position. All these persons, however, are connected with major institutions and virtually impossible to get. Recently, they have begun to search for an accessible person, but several members of the department question "whether we'll have the person that we should have had."

Another professor, when asked to comment, noted, "It was Dr. Potash who took the initiative in obtaining departmental consent to offer the course." He added, "While it was not easy to obtain the ideal person, the department believes it will be in a position to offer the course."

"My side wants a participatory democracy in the department," claims Professor Ware. "Although some of the men are older, all should be equal in the right to express opinion; and these opinions should be judged for their merit rather than by the rank of the man involved." Another professor adds, "Among the "Young Turks" there is a vast divergence of opinion on most issues of substance. There is, however, a general sense that the department can be run with more democracy."

One of the major issues in question is the method by which promotion is given and tenure granted. The department has an executive committee set up for this purpose, but its role is merely advisory. The committee consists of three full professors, three associate professors and three assistant professors.

"Potash tried to work out a compromise" with the two major factions in the department in the formation of this committee. The committee itself "is only advisory. The Dean of the College of Arts and Sciences has the power to revise what the department head or anybody else does," said one professor.

"We were required to sign an option form at the beginning of the year stating whether we wanted to be considered by everybody on the committee, those of our own level or above, or by only those above," reported one department faculty member. "Therefore, an instructor has to be considered by everybody while an associate professor can be considered by only three people." Or in the case of a full professor who is on the committee, his case is considered only by the other two full professors. In fact, one full professor on the committee had tenure recommended for him by his two colleagues in this way.

Commenting, Professor Potash stated, "The option form was introduced to permit each depart-

History Problems

The problems that have developed within the UMass history department are not unique to this campus. They are problems that are confronting every institution of higher learning in the world. In our case, however, the basic issues are clouded by personality conflicts.

One professor stated that, "The people quarreling most bitterly are not concerned with the basic issues." Unfortunately, this has come to be true to a great extent. But, what must be kept in mind here was stressed by another history department faculty member: "What's wrong it the structure - not any particular people." Certainly there are good people on both sides of the conflict, as well as those caught in the middle.

Perhaps "basic issues exist only in the abstract" and "in reality there are no basic issues," as some choose to believe, but this is not true. The issues are clouded, but they are there.

What is in question is the entire organization of the academic system as it exists today. It is this system that prompts such a "brutal statement" as; "It's a professor's publication that counts in his evaluation. This system provides little haven for the non-publishing professor, regardless of how good a teacher he may be. Both sides of the fence in our history department have both of these types. The personal antagonism, however, cloud this mutal problem for both sides.

In the past it has also been true that there has been a tradition for non-democratic departments. But, if new professors were carefully scrutinized before they came, and in this way we only got high-grade people, there would be less apprehension toward democracy in departments. "You really don't even need formal democracy," stated one professor. "all you need is concensus." Unfortunately, he found it necessary to add, "I don't know why you can fault the department for non-democracy when the whole University has operated that way for years."

We must take pains not to "stifle" the young, talented professor merely because he is younger than many of his colleagues. His teaching merely a Western Civilization course and nothing in his particular field, for example, is stifling.

While the split within the history department may now seem "unbridgeable" to many of those involved - it is not. Certainly it may involve some radical changes in philosophy for a number of people and a radical break from some of the archaic traditions of the academic world,. There must be a willingness to compromise on both sides.

It may, however, take a full scale purge and perhaps blood-letting of the department to ease the current tensions. These tensions have been built up over a period of years and now cloud issues with personalities. The two must be separated if there is to be reform, and this can only be realized when both sides in the department realize and acknowledge that the other has valid and important points to make.

Fearfully, it may already be too late.

RICHARD S. KLINE

Collegian's Voice

A question that continually pursues a college newspaper concerns the voice that it should take. Should a student-supported paper, such as the Collegian, reflect the views of the majority of the students? Does reliance upon the student body for operating funds imply the obligation to print only that which certain students deem acceptable? Then, who should be given the power to judge what is acceptable?

In yesterday's Collegian the question was again presented. Two separate articles delt with campus papers being under fire for their policies. The University of Michigan's MICHIGAN DAILY was charged with being "too radical" by the Black Students Union for "unfairly" refusing to endorse their candidate in an upcoming student government election. The illustrius Dr. Hayakawa suspended publication of San Francisco State's DAILY GATOR because of it's political views. In his words, "it doesn't represent the opinion of all the students. At most it represents about half."

One not directly associated with these occurances, an outside observer, is often able to evaluate the situation more objectively than those involved. The "free press" that we clamor for would be non-existent if every group that ran a candidate for office could demand endorsement for its candidate. On a campus as divided as San Francisco State, a paper that "represents about half" is as much as can be realistically hoped for.

The charges seem ridiculous, the demands outrageous. Yet, how many of you who are now reading this editorial, will turn around and expect the same from the COLLEGIAN? It's astounding how many things people can find wrong with an article. What's even more amazing, the paradox of the matter, is how often these criticisms contradict each other. An article on an SDS demonstration appears on the front page. SDS complains that, as usual, the article is openly prejudiced against SDS, the coverage is too limited, and completely inaccurate. Joe Establishment, however, bemoans the fact that his money, in the form of the student tax, is being spent by the Senate to support a "hippy" newspaper. "Stick SDS in the Comic Section where it belongs."

In would be impossible to satisfy both elements, the paper would have to be biased to meet either group's standards. Somehow, though, people fail to understand this when they're involved in the issue. One's line of vision seems to be straight ahead, with no deviation to either side. A newspaper realizes that there must be deviation, that the campus community represents a composite of people with different ideals and values. The COLLEGIAN attempts to be reflective of this composite. Does it succeed? Not always. However, next time when you have a criticism, try to discuss it with someone of the opposite viewpoint. Compare notes, Chances are the COLLEGIAN'S position will be somewhere between.

Protests

To the Editor:

Donald Epstein's news article entitled "Administrative Misunderstandings Key to Hunsberger Resignation" which appeared in your issue of March 4 states that a secretary in the Personnel Office sent the "personnel letter by campus mail to Potash. Someone, somewhere, intercepted the letter, made the Xerox copies of it, put the original in a different envelope, and sent it on to Potash."

Professor R. Dean Ware, in a letter published in your March 10 issue, appears to confirm the above by acknowledging that:

> On February 18 at least two persons (I am one) in the History Department received in campus mail a copy of a personnel action form showing the reappointment of Potash..... Where, why, and by whom this document was reproduced and sent is still unknown, and is of NO REAL IMPORTANCE except to those whose improprieties have been exposed or those who seek to divert attention from the essential fact of administrative malfeasance.

The opening and Xeroxing of the contents of personal communications whether sent by campus mail from the Personnel Office or from any other source or by regular mails is a manifest malfeasance destructive of the minimum of good faith for the maintenance of academic (or any other) community. As one of many with a mailbox in Thompson Tower, I strongly protest Professor Ware's effort to sweep under the rug this malfeasant practice in the name of the single cause of alleged administrative malfeasance.

Courses

To the editor:

It has come to our attention that the majority of courses offered at the University of Massachusetts do not include any mention of the Black community, or at best an insignificant comment or two. We feel that this situation is detrimental to both black and white students, for it perpetuates a one side racist attitude where it doesn't belong. We are aware that a black studies program is being instigated by the Afro-American society; however, even if this curriculum is instigated by the Afro-American society; however, even if this curriculum is instigated, more must be done if any meaningful change in the racism of this school is to be affected. It is our opinion that black history should be entered into all history courses where pertinent (Western Civilization) United States History, etc.), the place of black people and ideas in our government should be brought out in all government courses, black poets and black authors should be studied in English courses as a whole, rather than just "special black authors" type courses, and the place of black people and black ideas in other social sciences, the biological sciences, the physical sciences, and right on down the line of all University courses, where applicable. If one might consider laughing at the thought of necessarily bringing Black scientists and their ideas into physics courses, say, then while he is laughing, let him ask himself if he has heard any Black names mentioned along side ideas and if not, why? For Black people, being an integral part of this society, have certainly been involved in all facets, just like white people, and should be given credit therefore.

If the function of the University is to develop well rounded, intelligent, and interested members of this society, with a realistic view of life in our society, then this is what it should be doing, and not giving people a one sided point of view. Education is one facet of the answer, and perhaps this society's best chance to avoid year round "hot summers", but a purely white education will in no way suffice.

We would appreciate your reading this letter at your next faculty-senate meeting and inform us of the results and reactions. Might we suggest you set up a committee to study this problem, but we urge that something be done very soon. Thank you for your time and consideration.

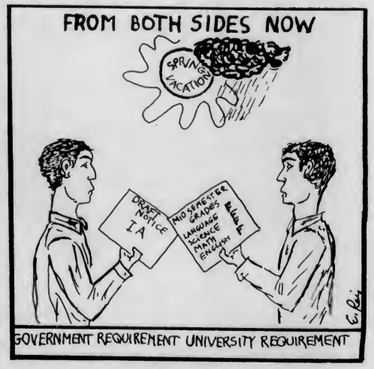
Inaccuracy

To the editor:

The undersigned found it very disconcerting to read the review of Alan Karpel's March 9 Graduate Recital. I feel I must take strong issue with that member of the Fine Arts Staff of the Daily Collegian, who expressed much disfavor with the concert. Those in attendance will, I am sure, attest to the fact that Mr. Karpel was nothing short of impressive.

For this latter reason, I seriously question either the musical intelligence or the critical ability of the author of that highly inaccurate article.

PAUL SHERRY



Paternalism

To the editor:

A number of professors in graduate departments appear to interpret the relations between a student and his department (especially in the face of student dissatisfaction) as primarily personal relations, and conflicts as primarily personal conflicts. This, it appears to me, is a somewhat unhealthy situation. It becomes difficult to recognize problems affecting all graduate students, and to participate collectively in their solution. It becomes difficult to recognize a legitimate base (outside the personality in real life) for conflict, and the necessity for institutionalized means of compromise, and reconciliation of real conflicts of interest. We can easily grant that the pressures of academic life, as well as its focus, makes the achievement of an absolute sense of security and identity somewhat difficult - perhaps rightly so. But it is just such a situation which produces the tendency to interpret conflicts as personal or personality conflicts. While there are organizational escape mechanisms which individual professors may utilize in establishing their identity and power, these are not uniformly available to faculty members. Thus we are faced with two problems: the institutional and organizational setup as an impediment to action consistant without needs, and the psychological factor as an impediment to recognizing these needs.

But students also, perhaps moreso, subject to seemingly uncontrolable pressures and problems of identity, we are also prone to interpret conflicts in terms of personality, and this hinders recognition of our real group interests. The focus of interest must not be on the difference in role conception and personality type between those who accept "paternalism" and those who reject it. We must not be concerned primarily with the personalities of individual professors, but on the system which reinforces those role preceptions and attitudes to which we react.

elected in the Fall of 1967 and re-elected in the Fall of '68. Regarded as a forthright and frankly sincere Senator, Miss Beharry has served as a member and presently as Chairman of the Finance Committee. She was appointed to that position by President Paul Silverman in the Spring of 1968. She is a member of the Student Life Committee and was a member of the Alcoholic Beverages Committee. As a freshman she was Vice President of Patterson House; she is presently president. She also serves as a member of the Class of '71 Executive Council.

For secretarial experience she cites a summer as Executive Secretary to the President of a Madison Ave. public relations firm and nearly a semester as Secretary of the Alcoholic Beverages Committee. Asked by the MDC why she wanted to be secretary, Miss Beharry replied: "Because I want to serve students. I have been involved and concerned since I came to this campus, and I think I can competently fulfill the office of Senate Secretary and continue to guard the students' interests. I think the job is what the person makes of it. I hope I am going to continue to influence as a voting senator legislation and policy, even though some don't consider the secretary's job a policy-making position. I certainly am going to continue speaking out."

Sharon O'Brien was first elected to the Senate from Crabtree House in the Fall of '67, filling a vacancy created by former MDC Senate Reporter Pat Petow's change of constituency. She lost her re-election bid in the Fall of '68 to a BX commuter sweep, but was recently elected (March '69) to finish an unexpired term.

She has been a member of the Student Matters Committee from the Fall of '67 to the present. She was secretary of this committee during 1967-68, and she is currently a member of its Subcommittee on Open House Policy Revision. Miss O'Brien is presently secretary to the Budgets Committee and chairs its Sub-committee on Rent Payments by RSO Groups. She was a member of the Academic Affairs Committee in the Spring semester of 1968. Her other Senate assignments include membership on the SGA Committee-Sub-committee on the Constitution and the secretaryship of the JFK-RFK Memorial Library Committee.

As further secretarial experience, she has been employed for the past two summers as a secretary for the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Miss O'Brien, who is one of the two candidates who claim there is an ideological difference between her and her opponent, noted she is running "primarily because of the difference in our political points of view. I know I am competent and qualified for the job, and I hope the Senate will go beyond pure mechanical qualifications in reaching their decision."

In the contest for the second spot in the Senate heirarchy, Secretary Cindi Olken is being opposed by Student Matters Chairman Steve Walt.

Miss Olken was first elected to the Senate in January of 1967, winning re-election in the Fall of '68 in the general election. She has served as a member of the now-defunct Women's Affairs Committee, as a member and then secretary of the Public Relations Committee until her appointment as Senate Secretary after Secretary Audrey Wyke's resignation. She has been secretary and chairman of the Services Committee and chairman of its Food Services Sub-committee. President Silverman appointed her to the Fine Arts Council in the Spring of 1968, she serves that body as secretary also. She has been a member of the Student Life Committee since last Fall.

Miss Olken says: "I am running for Vice President because I have always been concerned for student rights and protecting students' interests. I think Steve and I have a different philosophy of what the Vice Presidency is supposed to be. I think next year the Senate will be better helped by a Vice President who is concerned with the committee structure of the Senate so that it can be re-vitalized and made more efficient. I don't think the Vice President should take the initiative to act as a second President, although I think he should be more than willing to function that way if asked."

Senator Walt first won election to the Senate in the Spring of 1968 to finish an unexpired term. He was re-elected that Fall. He has served as a member of the Budgets Committee. He has been a member and is presently chairman of the Student Matters Committee. His other Senate duties include membership on the College of Arts and Sciences Academic Honesty Committee, the SGA Constitution Sub-committee, and the Fine Arts Council.

Vice President - Steve Walt and Cindy Olken.

Treasurer - Sue Bacon and Allan Gauthier.

Secretary - Sharon O'Brien and Pat Beharry.

As has been noted, Walt claims that length of service should not be a criterion of judgment. He also feels that the Veep should not limit his involvement in Senate business to purely internal matters. He feels the Vice President " should know, in terms of a general over-view, where the Senate is, where it is going, where it should go, and why. Contemporary American educational institutions are moving towards more and more student involvement in the decision-making process and even towards student control. I agree with this trend and think we should set our sights in that direction."

In the race for the top spot in the Senate, Public Relations Committee Chairman Bruce Balboni is opposed by Ways and Means Committee Chairman Daniel Madden.

Senator Balboni's career in student government began in the Fall of 1966, when he won election to the Senate as freshman Senator-at-large. The following Spring the Sophomore Class elected him President. He served as President until April of 1968, when he won re-election as Senator-at-large. While he was still Class President he was appointed Chairman of the Public Relations Committee, a post he retains at present. In addition, Balboni has served on the SG Committee as Elections Sub-committee Chairman.

Senator Madden was elected to the Senate in the general election of October 1968. Since his election he has been appointed a member, then chairman of the Ways and Means Committee. He is one of two undergraduate representatives on the Faculty Senate Library Committee. In addition, he is a member of the Student Matters Committee, chairing the Discipline Code Sub-committee. He also serves as a member of the SGA Constitution Sub-committee. Provost Tippo recently selected Senator Madden to assist on an informal committee in screening candidates for permanent Head of the University libraries.

Interviewed last nite by the MDC, Madden commented: "The crux of the President's job is communication. He must communicate effectively both to the Senate and through them to the student body and also to the Administration in Whitmore. He is the representative of the Senate to the outside - the Faculty and Administration - and his presentation of ideas to them is important. I also feel that the President is influential in directing the thrust of Senate business.

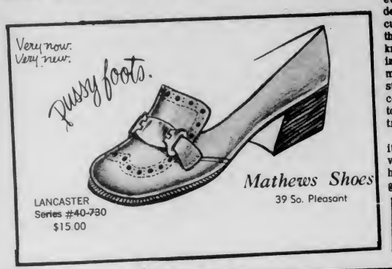
"Sexual Revolution" Results in Increased Infirmary Concern

There is a wide spread opinion that we are in the midst of a "sexual revolution". The growing number of illegitimate births has been used as an index of this revolt. Is this opinion true?- or is it more precise to say that we are in a "Sexual Evolution" rather than revolution?

On the University of Mass. Amherst campus it is estimated that 5% of the co-eds become pregnant out of wedlock each year. The question is whether this growing percentage is due to increased promiscuity or to an improvement in reporting pregnancies to the health service? The latter is more probable.



It is believed that more girls have been coming to the Infirmary for help because they now realize that the infirmary can and will assist them in confirmation of pregnancy, medical care and counseling.

Establishing a good relationship with the students as well as meeting their needs is a concern of the Health Service. It has been difficult for the physicians to get across the idea that they do care about the overall health and welfare of all students.

This concern can be felt in every aspect of the care offered. The physicians, psychiatrists, counselors, and nurses consider confidentiality to be of prime importance. Women now seem to realize that anything concerning their health, mental or physical, is kept strictly confidential. Parents and future employers are never informed or able to get the information.

Studies have shown that the percentage of pregnancies goes down as the students receive more relevant sex education. Many students have indicated in the discussions held at dormitories that there are wide gaps in their sex knowledge, and that they are looking for the answers. Both the mental health and the infirmary staffs have and will continue to come to the dorms upon invitation to discuss anything from birth control to child bearing.

The real issue in curbing illegitimate births seems to lie in providing broadly based preventive help involving medical, psychological and educational dimensions.

WATCH FOR PZAZZ!!! IN THURSDAY'S COLLEGIAN!!

Squaw Talk

Fraternities. Rah Rah Rah

Most of you fun-loving girls have taken in the show at one of the many local chapters of the backbone of the college community, ye olde Fraternity. For those of you who have not, the purpose of this article is to entice you to go and see for yourself what a good time really is. For those of you who have, we are now going to traverse the legendary memory lane, and freely allow nostalgia to do its subtle work.

Long ago, when we were all freshmen seeking our fulfillment and self-expression in the pleasures of drink and weed, we managed, along the way, to travel in hordes to fifty cent exchanges, where we reveled in the glow of purple florescence and basked in the attentions of many fine, polite young men, who milled around us like flies and begged to escort us home. We were young then, and these simple pleasures had their charm, but with the years we graduated to the level of Saturday night at The House.

Do you remember the night you went out with the bartender? You had such a good time swimming in the beer while your date exercised his brotherly duties in taking care of the date of the guy who passed out? How about the toga party when your date forgot to tell you to definitely wear something substantial underneath your toga, and most of the other people forgot to, too?

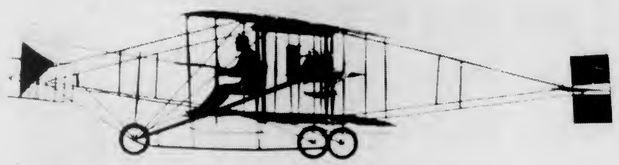
Probably one of the most exciting experiences was catching pneumonia during band breaks. Equally exciting was having the back of your neck kissed and breathed on by the super-sexy guy who happened to be the only guy in the house without a date.

A lot of the fun, besides your attentive date of course, are the wonderful people that you meet. The best place to meet people is in the line to the bathroom. If you linger there for about twenty minutes you're guaranteed an encounter with everyone in the house and a few off the street.

The next best place is in the corner by the beer. Everyone is so concerned about who you're with and why he's been gone so long, that someone is sure to become conscientious enough to invite you to come upstairs with him while you're waiting.

Another good place to wait if you're an exchange, is on the stairway from the playroom. You have a ringside seat as you get dizzy side-glancing at the boy you're kind of with but kind of not with mingle merrily with both the upstairs and the downstairs crowd, while his beer slowly fizzles in your hands. But you're content because you have a full view of the go-go dancer, and what's more, if it weren't for all those guys in the middle, so would all the other girls.

Sometimes, interesting people single you out, whether or not you happen to be in your date's room waiting patiently for your date, who also happens to be assistant manager of house jobs, to inspect those jobs. Next time this happens be on the lookout for that one dateless guy who appears out of nowhere and coaxes you, slung over his shoulder and kicking, into his room to peruse his blacklight, fishnets and the stars on his ceiling. The stars are really all right, but watch out for those fishnets.



Well, anyway, girls, this is just a little plug for those great Greeks out there who made it all possible. Do yourself a favor and drop in sometime.

ShelleyOn Love

What is love? Ask him who lives, what is life. Ask him who adores, what is God? Thou demandest what is love? It is that powerful attraction towards all that we conceive, or fear, or hope beyond ourselves, when we find within our own thoughts the chasm of an insufficient void, and seek to awaken in all things that are, a community with what we experience within ourselves. If we reason, we would be understood; if we imagine, we would that the airy children of our brain were bor n anew within another's, if we feel, we would that another's nerves should vibrate to our own, that the beams of their eyes should kindle at once and mix and melt into our own, that lips of motionless ice should not reply to lips quivering and burning with the heart's best blood. This is Love.

Ever feel you were born too late to get in on anything really big?

You're mistaken.

All the super opportunities aren't a matter of history.

The biggest is only fifteen years old:

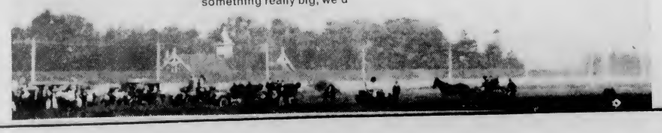
The computer industry.

And by 1972, its $15 billion in installations will more than double.

Honeywell, "The Other Computer Company", has created a post-graduate program in the concepts, techniques and applications of computer systems. This is the only program of its kind that requires a college degree.

It's very intensified and very complete. The instructors are the best computer pros. And Honeywell is equipping them with the latest computers.

Sessions begin in June and September. Each lasts three months. In Boston.



It's well worth the tuition.

If you'd like to get in on something really big, we'd like to send you the details. Just fill in the coupon. Or call us (617) 235-7450 Ext. 362 (reverse the charges if you're calling from a distance).

SDS Conference Refused Facilities At UTexas, Court Suit Being Filed

AUSTIN, TEXAS (CPS) Students for a Democratic Society (SDS) Tuesday filed suit in Federal District Court here seeking an injunction to force the University of Texas to allow it to hold a national conference on the campus next week.

The suit was initiated by the SDS national office after a surprise decision Saturday by the University board of regents overturned an agreement with the student union board made nearly six weeks ago which granted the use of the facilities.

Explaining the ban, University president Norman Hackerman said, "It is clear through rules of the University that approval of such a request would make the University a co-sponsor of the meeting. The University will not enter into joint sponsorship of any program or activity in which the educational implications are not self-evident and which does not directly supplement the educational purposes of the University.

Meanwhile, some of the 1,200 people expected for the conference have already begun arriving in this small, tranquil city situated on the edge of the green hill country of central Texas. Local SDS members have spent the last four days in a desperate search for another site here, without success.

Work was begun immediately on the court suit, which claims $10,000 in damages, because many SDS members fear that if the university here can succeed in breaking its contractual agreement, that could lead to the organization being prevented from holding future national conferences on other campuses.

Committee Draws Up Nomination Forms For AHEA Officers

The Ad Hoc committee for the College chapter of the American Home Economics Association met yesterday to draw up nomination forms for the offices of President, Vice President, Secretary and Treasurer, for the term of office starting April 12, 1969 through February 1, 1970.

Any of the 100 members are eligible to run for office if they meet the qualifications. There will also be an appointed Advisory Board consisting of one member from each of the four departments within the School of Home Economics, a program chairman and a person in charge of hospitality.

Nomination forms will be available in room 120 Skinner Hall this Thursday, and will be due in by April 2. The elections will be held the week of April seventh.

For further information see Miss Vaznaian or the members of the Ad Hoc committee for conducting the election who are Marilyn Mulsky, Jann Perkins, Lynn Russell and Sue Gerson.

ment member to choose for himself how he wanted his personal matters to be treated by the committee rather than impose the view of one group or another." He felt, "The fairest and most reasonable solution was to allow individual choice to prevail."

After interviewing everyone in the department "they wrote up a report, the contents of which are unknown - except, apparently, they had some severe criticisms to make." Another department member added, "We all believe that the report is very damaging and that it indicates that under the present management the department is 'unsalvageable'." The report has not been made public nor has it been discussed within the history department. Its contents were however, summarized by Dean Hunsberger in spring 1968 to a group of about a dozen department members. Apparently, it is still in the possession of Hunsberger or filed somewhere at the office of the Dean of the College of Arts and Sciences.

The schism in the department has become so great that "the situation has forced even those members with no interest in academic politics to take sides to defend themselves . . .," the DAILY COLLEGIAN was told. One member of the department, who feels caught in the middle of the situation, expressing the toll tha t this has had on his teaching, said: "I sat in discussion section recently and stared out the window for much of the period. This thing has me so upset I just can't think about academics."

School Aid Program Receives Extension

WASHINGTON (AP) - The House Education and Labor Committee approved over Republican objections Tuesday and a 5-year extension of the Elementary and Secondary School Act. The GOP members said the 5-year extension, carrying the legislation through President Nixon's current term, would prevent the Nixon administration from presenting a school aid program of its own.

The vote on the bill, which carries an authorization of $5 billion for the next fiscal year, was 21 to 13. Two Republicans, Ogden R. Reid of New York and Alphonzo Bell of California, voted with the Democrats in favor of it.

But Rep. Albert H. Quie, R-Minn., accused the Democrats of slamming the door on the administration and Rep. William H. Ayres, R-Ohio, the committee's senior Republican, predicted the bill would be altered substantially on the House floor.

Chairman Carl D. Perkins, D-Ky., who has prodded the committee to get the bill out, said he hopes the House will act on it before the Easter recess beginning April 3.

The bill would continue without any major changes the program launched by former President Lyndon B. Johnson in 1965 to provide federal aid for special educational services for children from poor families.

UMT Production, 'Plough and the Stars' Comes Out on Top Despite a Few Lows

By JACK DEAVER Department of French and Comparative Literature

Poetized realism is the essential quality of Sean O'Casey's "The Plough and the Stars" which the current University of Massachusetts Theatre production has chosen to emphasize - and correctly. The play's very title, with its plough of realism and its romantic stars, suggests that the drama is about the difficulty of living on that vacillating continuum between individual aspiration and pragmatic reality, where dreams die painfully.

Director Harry Mahnken brings those dreams - and their death - to life, spasmodically, when the curtain opens on the first of Peter Vagenas' four finely conceived settings, the mood of poetic realism is conjured up immediately by shades of grey, nuances of colorlessness, a squalid decor against which individual destinies will reach momentary heights of solitary grandeur.

As the expositional first act unfolds, one is aware of O'Casey's adroit revelation of character and situation, much less obvious that the often sloppy exposition of Chekhov and Ibsen, where the seams of the drama sometimes show as servants simply state situation. O'Casey plunges the spectator into 1915 Dublin, carefully throwing pieces of the mosaic of character and situation at the assimilating audience.

Sheer human dynamism surges out of four idiosyncratic Dubliners who give this production its strong underpinning. As The Covey, Barry Hazzard strides, spouts Marxist slogans, and rises to peaks of moving emotionalism with his trionic authenticity. As Fluther, Mike Prusky provides a finely nuanced character portrayal, excellent in its details, as he charmingly seeks credit for having repaired a door, as he struts around the room biting his lip, looking like some hybrid crossing of Charlie Chaplin and James Joyce!

The play comes most alive, however, when Mrs. Gogan and Bessie Burgess collaborate in genuine ensemble playing. As Mrs. Gogan, Judith Willner brings vocal finesse, effective mannerisms and quiet strength to an important role. And Anne Agard makes Bessie Burgess a narpyish Valkyrie infused with a demon of poetry; a mammelled Tiresias, she handles O'Casey's difficult alliterative lines with assurance. When she hikes her shawl up around her shoulders, cranes her neck and opens magnificently vituperative lips, she curls them around poetic syllables with unadulterated skill. The stage sparkles with vitality when these two ladies cross paths, eyes, or tongues. Their hen-fight in Act II, with the helpless Fluther hemmed in between them, is the comic high point of the performance. They are alive, and, consequently, the play is, buoyantly.

These four character roles dominate the evening, and the central dilemma - Nora Clitheroe's loss of her husband Jack in the war and her consequent madness - pales by comparison. Stephanie Null and David Abraham bring more youthful impetuosity than psychological insight to these central roles. Act III's dramatic climax - a dying soldier, Jack's leaving Nora - is not fully realized because one becomes curiously aware of the actors as actors. If we are not to smile at Jack's repeated line, "Let me go, Nora," we must feel acutely that the desperate woman is approaching delirium as she frantically tries to hold her husband back from death. We do not feel this and, consequently, the drama evaporates.

In her Act IV madness scenes, Miss Null has chosen to be a somnambulist rather than a demented Ophelia, and she is nowhere more effective than in her final moments when she watches, uncomprehending, the death of Bessie Burgess.

In deed, Director Harry Mahnken has superbly staged the ending, bringing to a poignant, ironic close this drama of individuals destroyed by social forces beyond their control or understanding.

All four sets and Liz Weiss's fine costumes, evoke the O'Casey atmosphere. A few technical corrections could sustain completely that atmosphere. In Act II, an orator occasionally appears behind the scrim of the bar window, speaks, is applauded by an unseen audience. He should be behind that scrim and the crowd noises should continue throughout the scene for it to be effective. Occasionally, as now staged, the onstage actors stop, the orator mounts his platform and attention is focused on him for his few lines, then onstage action recommences. As now staged, the orator's speeches break continuity as O'Casey did not intend; as written, the scene demonstrates the unseen enemy, war, which hovers just beyond, above the characters onstage, threatening their stability.

ENTERTAINMENT

'Hello Friend' Does Its Own Thing

Students who have an interest in folk music know about the Hello Friend Folk Society. But let it be known to the campus at large that the talent involved in this amorphous group is as goodas money can buy. The fact is they perform free and for the pleasure of it. Programs the Society holds vary from the traditional ballad to the mysterious lyrics one hears in a Bob Dylan tune.

Hello Friend is a student organization that reflects student interests. Last weekend Karen Silverman, Bernie Kaplan and Al the bongo player went to Springfield to play for the N.E.S. Cultural Enrichment Program. This student feeling reflects in the atmosphere that usually surrounds the concerts the Society gives. There isn't that rigorous line standing, ticket grapling and uncomfortable seating you find in the Cage. Hello Friend sets up a coffee house atmosphere where one can sit with a date or friend as compared to sitting next to them at the Cage.

Hello Friend was established last summer although its formalization as a group was not conceived until late last semester. It is not closed to anyone. If you like folk music and company attend one of the concerts. If you want to play bring your guitar. To become a regular part of Hello Friend call Daniel E. Martin at 546-7518. You will not be turned away from doing your own thing.

When your all time leading scorer is returning, when you have a host of veterans returning, and possibly the finest crop of sophomores ever vieing for jobs, things should be rosy. Such is the predicament of UMass lacrosse coach Dick Garber, but he isn't ready to predict an undefeated season just yet.

The Redmen posted their finest record ever last spring, notching 10 wins against one defeat. The stickmen set records for the most goals scored in a season as they placed second in New England college division ratings.

UMass opens its regular season April 9 at home against Wesleyan, but may face its toughest opposition during a spring exhibition trip. The Redmen will travel to the Mecca of lacrosse, Maryland, where they will face Bowling Green, Loyola of Baltimore and another visitor, Dartmouth. They will also face Princeton and Harvard during the vacation period.

Garber has to be looking forward to the season. "We have worked outside for only three or four days but we have been conditioning since February.

"Overall I am of course optimistic, but I think we were all lulled into feeling over optimistic and thinking that we would not have to work hard. That of course is wrong because fundamentally, we are not that good. However, we do have outstanding potential."

GARBER

When pressed for naming a strong point, Garber listed his attack, defense and goal positions as all being very promising.

Attack looks downright overpowering right now. Consider the fact that a two year starter and one of the school's leading scorers, Gary Vassar, is being hardpressed to start and that gives you an idea of the attack strength.

Of course, leading them all will be Kevin O'Connor. A bonafide all-American, the "Fox" holds virtually all UMass scoring records as he begins his senior year. He'll have a lot of help up front this season too.

In one spot with O'Connor will probably be junior college transfer Tom Malone, who only led the country in scoring last year. Garber said of him. "He works very well with O'Connor."

Also expected to start at crease attack, and in addition, to see action at center midfield is big Carl Schultheis. He is expected to complement the other two well and give the Redmen, as Garber put it, "a great scoring threat.'

But that's not all. There is of course Vassar, who will see much action throughout the year and there are two senior backup men of the past two years, Brad Herling and Don Agnoli. If that is not enough, then throw in three sophmores Mike Henry, Ed Sacco and Steve Herschcopf, all of whom are given a good chance of displacing their senior mates, and it gives you a deep, strong attack.

O'CONNOR

At goal, two year veteran Mark Scholossberg is back. He was an All New England and All-Division pick last season. The thing is that he is being hard-pressed by sophmore John Orr who has been brilliant in early drills. Garber expects both to play extensively this season.

Defensively, the Redmen look equally as impressive. Leading returning stars are last year's starting backline men, Tom Tufts and Bill Devore. Both were outstanding a year ago, and are expected to be as good again. Probably joining them in the starting group will be last year's fourth defenseman, Fran Bositis.

However, right behind the veterans are four sophomores who, in Garber's opinion, can all start. These are Al Ruggiano, Mike Hinman, Joe Smith and Roy Condon. This gives the Redmen seven strong defensemen.

This leaves the midfield position, which Garber says "is the guts of any lacrosse team.' The coach says of his present crop, "We have good depth but my concern right now is getting the best possible combinations together at the right time.'

Garber will have a lot of talent to pick from. Leading the list will be Steve Connolly and Gerry Forgit, both good scorers from a year back, Steve Anderson and Steve Chambers also fine performers from last spring, Bob Florin, Parker Simonds and Bob LaChance.

The coach said, "We should have two good midfield combinations from this group, but I want a good third and fourth one also, if possible, and I think we have the talent."

The coach expects to be picking from John Hartnett, Tom Brennan, Greg Stillman, Tom Gannon and Bruce Fulton for his third group with Brad Tilly, Larry Diamond and Gale Dakikis.

This is obviously a promising and potentially great team. It will be out to avenge its sole defeat of a year ago to Amherst and in the process garner the Taylor Cup, emblematic of New England College Division supremacy. Don't be against them.

Netmen Seek to Retain Title

by Steve Ross
Staff Reporter

Even though there is plenty of snow still on the ground, the UMass tennis team has been working out for the past week on the courts behind Boyden. The netmen were the only team to win a conference title last spring.

Unfortunately the tennis team won its championship after the Collegian wrapped up for the semester, and the championship was a fact known only to family and friends. This year the Redmen have four of the six men who turned the trick last year.

Captain Carl Clem leads the returnees. Seniors Tom Johnson and Scott Sheppard, both conference champions in their respective singles flight, are also back. Junior Mike Katz is the other letterman. Gone are Al Davis, the number one singles man, and Steve Cohen, conference champ at sixth flight.

Last year the Redmen went 7-3 in dual meets, and took a one-point win in the Conference. Rhode Island, last year's runner-up also appears to be strong. The tennis team, over the last decade has compiled the strongest record of any team on campus.

Several sophomores will be in the running for some of the vacancies left in the line-up by the absence of Davis and Cohen. Junior John Quinn and senior Tom Babson will also try to crack into the first six.

The Redmen play a nine-meet schedule in addition to the Yankee Conference meet at Storrs on May 2-3. The three opponents that bested the Redmen last year all appear on this year's agenda; MIT, UConn, and Holy Cross.

The nucleus of the team looks to be in top shape. Katz and Sheppard have been experimenting with steel rackets, but are undecided if they will stick with them. Coach Steve Kosakowski is not exactly wild about the metal racket, and it would not be surprising if the two returned to wood for the season.

All four looked to be much sharper during the fall as a result of much concentrated action last summer, Clem appears to be ready for a really big year, after a disappointing season last spring.

Kosakowski also greeted 14 candidates for the frosh team. The frosh, as in the past, play a very limited schedule. However the Kosakowski diet of lots of work for everybody has always had top-level ability ready for the varsity.

This year the tennis team may be even more important than usual as far as the Frank W. Keaney Trophy is concerned. UMass has won it the last three years, but this year is being heavily pressed by Connecticut, currently 1/2 point back. A win by the netmen would be a big step in the direction of securing the beautiful trophy for another year.

PMD WINS TEAM CROWN

IM Wrestling Gains Ind. Champs

The intramural wrestling season ground to its close last night as individual champions were crowned in the nine weight classes. The matches were, for the most part, quite close as competitive desire forced the contestants to their utmosts.

Paul Perreault (PMD) pinned Buba Tung (Pied Pipers) at 2:20 for the 126 pound crown. It was a case of Perreault simply overpowering his opponent. Brian Abbott (WHWL) won a hard fought 11-5 decision over Frank Brucate (Smashers) for the 137 pound title. This was a close match until the last period when Abbott finally asserted himself.

Dick Randall (BKP) won in the 147s when he pinned Ed Jazab (Smashers) at 2:01. Randall dominated throughout. Jim Peters (PMD) had much the same experience as he won the 157 pound title by pinning Bill Martin (Marroons) at 2:00.

In the 167s. Mike Bisel (Trojans) emerged the winner by decisioning Dave Castricone (Bulldogs) 5-1. The first period was scoreless but Bisol gained three points in the second and two in the third with Castricone getting his point in the third.

Paul Rufo (WHWL) became the 177 pound champ by pinning Dave Platts (Trojans) at 2:24. Rufo was leading 4-0 up to that time. Ron Young (PMD) won a very close 8-7 decision over Dick Cook (PSD). Young was almost pinned in the second period but came on to outskill his opponent.

Dan Kelley (TKE) decisioned Jim Kleiber (TC) 5-0 in the 197s. This was a close match until the third period. Big Richard Donlin (TKE) took the unlimited crown when he pinned Paul Toner (KS) at 2:43. Donlin made good use of his weight advantage.

IM TIDBITS - PMD won the school team championship as well as the frat division by amassing 270 points over the season. Dean of Admissions William Tunis presented them with their trophy. Chadbourne Maroons won the dorm division with 200 points while WHWL won in the independents with 160.

UMass New England wrestling champs George Zaguris (191) and Bob Freeman (145) presented trophies to the IM victors.

AFL Reaches Deadlock

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP) - Opposition within the American Football League to retention of the present setup of the present septu of the American and National leagues for 1970 grew yesterday, threatening to force a delay in an agreement until May or later.

At the same time, Pete Rozelle, commissioner of pro football, disclosed there was some minor opposition in the NFL to the plan unanimously recommended by the joint study committee on alignment Monday.

The committee, composed of three owners from each league, recommended to the 26 owners that the leagues retain their present alignment - 16 teams in the NFL and 10 in the AFL - and include an unspecified number of interleague games in the 1970 schedules.

Three AFL voters had expressed their opposition to this plan even before arriving at this desert resort for the meetings.

Paul Brown of the Cincinnati Bengals, Gerald Phipps of the Denver Broncos and Joseph Robbie of the Miami Dolphins all insist the merger agreement of June 8, 1966, flatly states that the leagues will realign for next year.

No one was talking, but it was learned that this trio had gained support from the New York Jets and possibly the San Diego Chargers.

"There are differences of opinion within both leagues,' Rozelle told a news conference at the end of the second day of sessions.

"There is some minor opposition in the NFL to the 16-10 plan and also some differences of opinion in related areas, such as the number of inter-league games."

Soggy BoSox Bolster Pitching With Kelso

WINTER HAVEN, Fla. (AP) - The sun finally broke through in the Boston Red Sox training camp yesterday - but it was too late.

Heavy rain forced Manager Dick Williams to cancel a scheduled morning intra-squad game and only batterymen managed to get a workout, drilling in a covered cage.

It was the third straight "postponement" for the Red Sox.

In hopes of making up for some lost time, the Red Sox will play two games against the Houston Astros in Cocoa Wednesday. Veteran southpaw Dick Ellsworth will start the morning "B' game while Jim Lonborg will open against the Astros in the regularly scheduled game in the afternoon.

The Red Sox, looking for right-handed relief help, bolstered their bullpen crew Tuesday with the purchase of Bill Kelso from the Cincinnati Reds ... Kelso, who is 29, was a standout with the California Angels in 1967 before going to the Reds in a deal which enabled California to get Sammy Ellis ... Kelso was assigned to the Boston farm team at Louisville in a tactical maneuver to protect the 40-player roster ... However, it appears a sure bet he'll be promoted to the parent roster as soon as the major league clubs can start farming out young players March 25.

Remember Tracy Stallard?

FORT MYERS, Fla. (AP) - Tracy Stallard, a refugee from the coal mines and a one-time cowboy, is on a comeback.

Stallard, most noted for negative baseball exploits, rode out last season as a ranch hand on an Oklahoma cattle spread, his six-year major league career apparently at an end.

But because of the baseball expansion, he's working out with the new Kansas City Royals, trying to make the most of an 11th hour chance to regain the majors.

"I have an Omaha contract," the 31-year old right-hander said. "But I don't plan on ever seeing Omaha. I'm going to do my pitching in Kansas City and other American League cities."

Strom Thurmond Speaks Amid Jeers and Obscenities

By Richard Lane
Senior Reporter

DVP (Distinguished Visitors Program) speaker Senator Strom Thurmond (R-South Carolina) was subjected to verbal harrassment and demonstration while addressing a crowd of 2,000 at the University of Massachusetts Cage last night.

Six individuals dressed in white hooded sheets in imitation of the Klu Klux Klan and carrying placards approached the platform as the Southern senator began his remarks on the current Anti-Ballistic Missile controversy. One disguised "Klansman" took the microphone from Thurmond. Six Negro youths also went to the stage in an attempt to disrupt Thurmond's speech. A Confederate flag was also raised as some students heckled him with obsenities and remarks such as "Kill, Kill, Kill."

DVP Chairman John O'Connell told the group that "He (Thurmond) has a right to speak. You have your platform, now let him have his." A majority of the students applauded O'Connell's statement.

Thurmond had to cut his remarks short (half-hour) due to a case of laryngitis.

As Sen. Thurmond left the Cage a dozen individuals rocked and pounded on his car and jeered him. The Senator was unharmed and appeared unshaken by the evening's action. No uniformed policemen were present and no official action was taken against the demonstrators.

Thurmond's speech covered the Republican Party's selection of Vice-President Spiro Agnew, the ABM crisis, the Vietnam war, Electoral College and several remarks on student involvement in campus protests.

Concerning Agnew, Sen. Thurmond stated that, "I didn't want any favoritism. I just wanted South Carolina to be carried in the Union and the Nation." He continued that Agnew was "the least objectionable of any candidate mentioned."

Thurmond declared that he feels President Nixon is going to make a "fine President." He added that Nixon's trip to Europe was "outstanding" and "re-established relations with NATO."

It is important that we go forward with the present ABM sys-

Bruce Balboni and Cindy Olken Elected President and Vice President of Student Senate

By JAN CURLEY
Asst. Managing Editor

By more than a 2 - 1 margin Bruce Balboni was elected Student Senate President over Dan Madden last night in a five-hour meeting in the Council Chambers.

Also elected were: Cindy Olken, Vice President; Pat Beharry, secretary and Alan Gauthier, treasurer.

In a brief acceptance speech, Balboni thanked his supporters and asked all the senators to "work together. . .be willing to stay in the Senate to work with me and for me." On a conciliatory note, Madden said he was "proudest that between the two of us we have avoided bitterness."

In his speech Balboni pledged to further "two-way communication" between the Student Senate and the student body. Balboni saw the need for the Senate President to practice "the art of diplomacy.. be conversive in this art" and "if he is not then only the student body suffers." Balboni stressed the need for faculty-student communication and student-student communication.

Balboni said, "I will work to give a special aura "to the Senate, an aura of action, concern and positivism." He said also that he would work to press the alcoholic beverage committee report and urge the faculty to join with him.

In the area of academic reforms, Balboni spoke of action needed in pass-fail courses, reduced course loads, a Black studies committee, and abolition of requirements.

Balboni also said he would like to see an increase in dorm autonomy, the removal of ex-officio members from the faculty senate and a student with a full vote on the Board of Trustees.

In an attempt to make the Senate more democratic, Balboni said he would like to hold Senate meetings in the dining commons to make the Senate, which he characterizes as a tool of the students, more efficient.

Madden said the committee system should be strengthened. The Senate, Madden said "is in the business of making decision - to do for the constituents what they can't do for themselves."

"Look to the presidency as being representative of the student body," he said. "The Senate expresses the goals of the students."

Senate President Paul Silverman, in supporting Balboni's candidacy, said, "The president of the student body acts for them and Bruce (Balboni) can speak for them well and above reproach."

The vote was Balboni 56, Madden 27 and one blank.

In the close vice-presidential race between Miss Olken and Steve Walt, Miss Olken said "The Vice President assists the President and coordinates the committee system." Miss Olken related the growth of the Senate to the committee system.

The Vice President must "be willing to expend time. . .to make the committee system work," she said, "and the Vice President is concerned with this."

At present Miss Olken said, the Senate "does not have confidence in the committees." As an example she used the lengthy floor debates on budgets.

Miss Olken recommended that each senator serve on "two standing committees" in order to "gain expertise" in those fields. She said she felt in this way the senators will "become more confident in the committees."

Walt also spoke of the lack of confidence in the Senate committees. He said, "The Vice President's most important duty is coordinating the committees.""The Vice President must also be able to represent the President when he is not available." Walt said.

Sharon O'Brien, Miss Beharry and Mark Raskin were nominated for secretary. Raskin withdrew from the race thanking Senator Susan Bacon for nominating him. At the opening the Senate meeting Raskin had announced his resignation from the Senate.

Raskin said he was "honored by the nomination" but felt he must decline."

Miss Beharry said the office of secretary "has more than duties and responsibilities, it also has possibilities ." In conclusion

WFCR To Air Conference On US-China Relations

WFCR, Five-College Radio, will feature live coverage of the 1969 Conference of the National Committee - U.S. - China Relations originating in New York City. The title of the conference is: U. S. and China: The Next Decade. Highlighting the program will be a live after-dinner address by Senator Edward M. Kennedy beginning at 8:00 p.m. tonight.

Coverage of the conference will begin at 9:15 a.m. and will run until noon. It will be picked up again at 1:00 p.m. and will run until 4:30.

At 7:30 p.m., prior to resumption of the conference, a taped program of Senator Strom Thurmond's lecture in Curry Hick's Cage under the Distinguished Visitors Program will be aired. This program will run until 8:00 p.m. at which time live coverage of the conference will be resumed and Senator Kennedy's address will be aired and will run to approximately 8:45 or 9:00.

Other featured speakers will be Ambassador Edwin O. Reischauer who will deliver an address entitled: Political Trends in China Today and Tomorrow. Also featured will be Senator Jacob Javitts, Theodore Sorenson, Harrison E. Salisbury, and various other authorities on the Far Eastern question including ambassadors from India and Canada.

In tune with the general confusion and din that reigned in the Cage last night a group of students raised a Confederate flag and Nazi helmet and hurled taunting remarks and obscenities at DVP speaker Strom Thurmond. (MDC photo by Bob Mangiaratti).

dem," stated Thurmond. He pointed out that the Soviets have started building their own ABM's at a fast pace and that the U. S. must be able to strike back if attacked. The Southern senator called ABM "purely a defensive weapon. We must place it around our ICBM's (Intercontinental Ballistic Missile)."

The Electoral College was Thurmond's next point of discussion and he proposed three ways to improve the present system. (1) Direct vote - everyone cast one vote, candidate with the largest number wins. (2) Proportional System - candidates receive whatever percentage of the electoral vote they actually get, rather than all or nothing as at present. President Nixon has proposed this remedy said Thurmond. (3) District system - voters in each state congressional district selecting one elector for each U. S. Senator and one for Congressman. This system has been proposed by Sen. Karl Mundt and according to Thurmond has "much merit" for it retains the present Electoral College system.

Sen. Thurmond expressed his hope that either the proportional or district system be adopted for both would recognize large and small states. It was at this point that the microphone was taken from him.

The Vietnam war is "our most important problem" according to Thurmond and "I am convinced we ought to win the war or get out." he added. The Senator stated that if the U.S. leaves Vietnam without winning, "we will have to fight somewhere else."

Thurmond indicated that America does have the power to win the war and advocated closing Haiphong harbor, the Ho Chi Minh Trail and heavier bombing of industrial targets in North Vietnam if necessary. He pointed out that the war "is not one between the North and South but another part of the Communist goal of world domination."

The U. S. Senator concluded his Vietnam remarks by saying that he believes President Nixon "will bring the Vietnam war to a close sometime this year."

Before leaving Thurmond entertained questions from the audience. When questioned by one Negro on poverty in the South and South Carolina Thurmond stated that "We have less poverty in South Carolina than in any other state in the Union." He gave his answer to the poverty problem as one of training and educating individuals for better jobs.

As he answered this question several demonstrators yelled remarks of "racist" as well as obscenities while a "Klansman" held up a placard which read: "Strom Thurmond loves burning yellow babies - starving black babies."

Thurmond's closing remarks met some of the heaviest protest of the night. When asked about the Nixon administration's stand on campus disorders, Thurmond declared; "This administration is planning to move against students trying to take over all colleges. No student (or small group of them) should close down an institution and not allow the rest an education."

The Nixon Administration is also planning to take action against individuals who go from one state to another to incite riots. (Thurmond cited the Chicago riots during the Democratic National Convention as an example.) According to Thurmond, "It is necessary to protect our civilized society," he concluded. This remark was met with more heckling, (boos, derisive laughter, etc.).

One disguised "Klansman" sat or stood behind Thurmond throughout the speech and attempted to physically disrupt it several times. As Thurmond left the hooded individual attempted to block his passage and confront the Senator. He was stopped by several DVP officials, however.

Senate . . .

she said, "I proudly seek the office of secretary."

Miss O'Brien said she saw the office of secretary as more than just clerical responsibilities to record the minutes. She said the office has "another aspect - leadership."

In a tearful acceptance speech, Miss Beharry thanked her supporters. The vote was Miss Beharry 46, 27 for Miss O'Brien and three others.

Film Festival To Explore Underground

Project Ten will present the first in a series of underground cinema festivals this evening in Mahar Auditorium at 8:30 and 10 p.m. The purpose of the festivals is to bring some of the better works of modern avant-garde film artists to the university campus. Tonight's films explore a variety of subjects and film techniques. They are:

THE HARD SWING by Michael Putnam was selected as the Best Film of the 1962 Charles Theatre Film - Makers' Festival in New York. An example of documentary sensationalism, the film views the non-glamour world of an old, dirty, burlesque house.

HOLD ME WHILE I'M NAKED was financed by George Kuchar with his unemployment checks. Kuchar's film is an honest anti-art film look at the sexual frustrations and aloneness of today's creative youth.

VACUOUS VACINITY by George Kling was awarded first prize in the 1963 Los Angeles Film-Makers' Festival. The film examines the modern businessman-his values, beliefs, rituals, and attacks the materialistic, company-minded mass man.

THE MOVIE SET - Film-maker William Ault experiments with still action in this film, in it he makes use of single B&W photograph from the 1915 movie, "Intolerance."

CYCLE by Rudy Albers is a cinemagraphic experiment in colors, circles, and animation.

Entertainment

Children's Theatre Stages "Two Pails of Water"

"Two Pails of Water," a comedy for children by Aad Greidanus, is scheduled for production this week by the University of Massachusetts Children's Theatre. It is a tightly written dramatic comedy, based upon an old Dutch nursery rhyme, and translated from the Dutch by Bill Honeywood.

"Two Pails of Water" is the second play presented this season by the University Children's Theatre. The November production of "Rumpelstiltskin!" brought such an overwhelming number of children to the theatre, that the theatre has had to change its policy of "first come, first seated" to "reservations only". It is hoped that by this means the theatre can avoid disappointing children who arrive after all seats are taken.

"Two Pails of Water" will be presented on Friday, March 21, at 4:30 and 7:30, and on Saturday, March 22, at 10:30 and at 2:00. Admittance BY RESERVATION ONLY, all tickets $.50. Box office open 9 a.m. - 5 p.m daily. Telephone 545-2579.

Chamber Ensemble Performs Tonight

The Concert Association presents its sixth event of the season tonight, Thursday, March 20th in Bowker Auditorium at 8:00 p.m. Featured will be the nationally prominent Contemporary Chamber Ensemble conducted by Arthur Weisberg.

The Contemporary Chamber Ensemble is one of the nation's outstanding organizations involved in the performance of avant garde and contemporary music. It's concerts throughout the country are wildly received by public and critics alike, and tonight's appearance by this group on the UMass campus should prove to be one of the highlights of the musical season here.

Examples of the finest writing in the contemporary idiom will be performed on tonight's concert including works by Stravinsky , Varese, Rochberg, and others.

Students redeemable ticket stubs may be turned in for reserved tickets at the Student Union ticket office. Remaining tickets will be available at the door preceding the concert. Reserved tickets for the general public are available at $1.50 and may also be purchased in this manner.

University a Vocational School

Talks with students and letters to the editor have expressed some disagreement in not having requirements at this university. I do not believe their arguments are well founded especially when it comes to the belief that students are here to be called "enlightened." They are here to get a better job and not to become philosophers. It is time that faculty and requirement advocates drop the pretense that any university in this day is anything but a vocational school for white collar workers. Another reason why students are here is to avoid the draft.

There is still the feeling amongst some students I talked to, that, since they took the requirements they feel more knowledgeable. They have a "broader" experience. We can also say that because some scientists say that in 1980 the world's food supply will not be enough for the world population. Then, why not practice starvation now as a prerequisite to Starvation 1980.

The above may seem stupid but so are requirements. It is assumed that they will provide experience for the future in many different directions. It also places someone else's judgements on everyone. It contradicts the idea that college students are responsible and should be left to make decisions for themselves. If they are not, we had better reinstate curfews.

The complaint is aired that students who come here will not take the varied courses but will take the gut courses or specialize. Those who take gut courses will find gut and poor paying jobs. Those who specialize may be able to practice their chosen profession two years early.

These generalizations do not cover all the arguments. However, the fact still remains that requirements remove responsibility from the students to determine their own future. In fact it may force students in directions they do not want to take. The language requirement does this. The tragic part of this is that a foreign language fails in its purpose to open one's eyes and is of so little use to the majority of students.

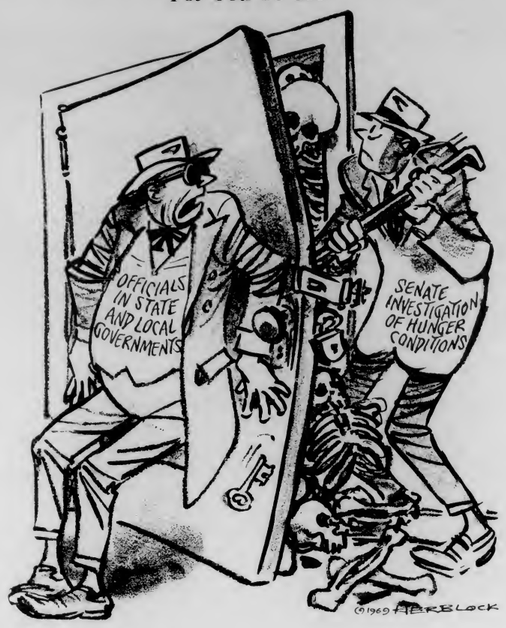
Medical School Spending

Gov. Francis W. Sargent is right in asking for an accounting of what costs will be of the proposed medical school branch of the University of Massachusetts in Worcester. It is a hideously expensive proposal of swelling proportions that demand far closer scrutiny than has been given so far.

The cost is not $44 million. That figure, itself is more than the original cost projection. The cost is not merely $64 million under the jumped spending proposal approved tentatively in the House last Thursday under pressure tactics of the Democratic leadership.

That $64 million is just a start. A worthwhile medical school should be accompanied by a dental school which the same Democratic leadership killed last year. The demand and need for dentists in this state is many times greater than the need, real as it is, for more physicians. The medical school should be accompanied by a school of nursing. The demand for nurses, also, is very great. A school of veterinary medicine should also attach to the medical school.

It is the most disgraceful sort of inept and inadequate planning to go about making a medical school conclave in this slap-happy, piecemeal fashion. It is not a subject for ill-considered, hasty House floor action as was the case last Thursday. The entire cost picture of the project should be made clear and public. It is high time that full operating costs and construction costs were detailed and laid out so all may see and understand. Far, far too much of this proposal has been screened and hidden.



All who are concerned with having a state medical school want this to be first class. That challenge, however, is not a blank check for a Niagara of unfettered spending. It must not become a matter for automatic, subservient legislative acquiescence to each and every demand of the administration of the proposed school for things like salaries that soar into the $50,000 annual range, and that for part time work. A first-rate medical school does not have to have each and every treatise on the care of illness since the time of Hippocrates.

In sum, the proposal for the Worcester branch of the medical school has not been set forth fully or in strict honesty by anyone. Even the relatively easy to obtain costs of construction alone have been hedged. The full projected costs of salaries and the possibly innumerable ancillary services have not been given.

All of this demands examination. The projected output of this school is, 100 physicians yearly. Since all of us, as taxpayers will have to bear this immense burden, it is long past time that we were told exactly how much each of these doctors will cost.

The entire method of obtaining money for the Worcester branch is increasingly taking on the aspect of an educational boondoggle, from which the only profit is going to the people running it. The Massachusetts Democratic House obeisance and compliance with that, its seeming move to a blatant philosophy of spend and be damned, cannot be commended. The matter should be reconsidered Monday.

Historical

To the editor:

Richard Kline wrote a commendably balanced account of a number of the difficulties afflicting the University of Massachusetts department of history. As a faculty member who was not consulted by Mr. Kline, I think that a few more facts of decisive importance ought to be exposed.

1. The department has not met since the dramatic February 20th meeting to discuss the basic issues at stake. The responsibility for calling a departmental meeting rests exclusively with the Head of the department. I have tried in vain to gain his assent to such a meeting. While the Head has consulted with a number of the faculty on an individual basis this is clearly no substitute for group deliberation.

2. The statement, expressed in the article by the Head, that the majority of the members of the department remaining at the University next year support his continuation as Head, cannot be empirically sustained. The faculty members remaining with the department have never ALL voted formally by open or secret ballot on the question.

3. The Head of the department has utterly ignored the recommendations of the University Faculty Tenure and Grievance Committee's Report on the case of Assistant Professor Victor Swenson. Professor Swenson's contract was not renewed last spring, a decision the Faculty Committee has severely questioned. The Committee recommended that Professor Swenson's contract be automatically extended one year and that the Executive Committee of the department re-open his case. The American Association of University Professors, through its representative who was on campus three weeks ago, has expressed grave concern over the case and has recommended that the Faculty Committee's report be implemented immediately.

While more facts could be marshalled these three speak quite well for themselves.

Review Panned

To the editor:

Referring to the review in Friday's Collegian of Mr. Karpel's Graduate Piano Recital, I'd like to thank the reviewer for having shown impeccable taste and discrimination in criticizing the program. It is really a shame, though, that such flawless form clothed such tasteless content. In other words too bad she doesn't know what she is talking about. To give credit where credit is due, she could appreciate the Bach Fantasia and three parts of the Barber Excursions. However, what is an "unmusical" Ballade? I've heard Mr. Karpel play the Ballade about a dozen times. Sunday's was his best performance. I am not just ANOTHER unqualified critic. Being a pianist myself, I do know what I am talking about. As far as the Beethoven is concerned - first, let the reviewer try to play it herself, even incorrectly; and second, it is ridiculous to subconsciously compare a graduate student's interpretation with that of a Mr. Horowitz, a Mr. Rubenstein or a Mr. Serkic. It takes a lifetime to play Beethoven correctly. Mr. Karpel is well on his way.

One more thing. It is well known that the reviewer bears a personal grudge against Mr. Karpel. It is the epitome of stupidity to attack him indirectly and viciously through a public review of his recital.

Search

To the editor:

I support the "Young Turks."

Isn't it easy for some of our scholars to forget that we are all involved in a search here; more than an academic-scholastic search: a living with people and institutions search.

If we can free ourselves from this uptight constipation, we can possibly move on to something better. Conflict is healthy where SEARCH is the underlying idea.

ABM Questions

To the editor:

Is the Nixon administration serving the best interests of our nation? How much power does (should) the Pentagon have in making decisions which affect all our lives? These are some of the questions being pondered by (hopefully) millions of Americans after last Friday's noon news conference at which time the President stated that he would continue building a 'thin' ABM (Anti-Ballistic Missile) system, while shifting the sites from populated cities to offensive missile installations. Some of the many arguments against the deployment of the ABM system will be discussed in future issues of the Daily Collegian. The main points will be stated here.

The present administration has recommended the "Safeguard" system to replace the "Sentinel" system. There is essentially one difference between the Safeguard and Sentinel systems (besides the name) - the former is to locate ABM's at hardened missile-launching sites, while the latter had the ABM's near large population centers. This is something to be grateful for, because the protection of our cities might have been construed as a plan to have a first strike capability - that is, we could destroy 'their' people but 'they' could not have the satisfaction of obliterating us. The Safeguard system might allay some of those fears.

What of the similarities? The Safeguard system will still cost a lot of money. Since the cost of the Sentinel system rose from $3,5 billion for a thin system to anywhere from $40 to $400 billion for a thick or hard system (the latter figure from Senator Stuart Symington, a long-time friend of the Air Force), there is no reason to believe that the cost of the Safeguard system will remain at $7.7 billion. In fact, even disregarding the military's considerable ability to underestimate the cost of weapons systems, the technological progress which the Soviet Union is certainnto make before 1973 (the first year of scheduled operation) will surely demand changes in the ABM system. Surely no one need ask what we might be doing with tens of billions of dollars that this latest military toy will cost. At least the starving children in southern migrant workers camps, field hands in California and Texas, and blacks and browns in our ghettos might have a few ideas. However, in a country such as ours where the total annual military expenditure (which includes more than that which falls under the neat classification of 'defense' budget) exceeds $100 billion, decisions are not always the most rational ones.

Fear of China and Russia is foremost in the minds of the proponents of the ABM system. The protection offered by the ABM system against China seems to be based on the assumption that the war-crazy Chinese (we seem to forget her 1966 offer to negotiate a mutual No First Strike pledge - we have not responded) will launch only 'simple attacks' - those without penetration aids such as decoy warheads and chaff. The Russian problem was dealt with rather strangely in the announcement concerning the ABM. In rejecting the suggestion that we should beef up our offensive weapons as a deterrent against would-be agressors, the President stated that such action would be "the wrong road because it would be provocative to the Soviet Union and might escalate the arms race." It is indeed comforting that the deployment of an ABM system will not escalate the arms race. It seems to have been overlooked that the logical Soviet reaction to our ABM will be to build more and/or bigger and better ICBM's with MIRV's (multiple independent reentry vehicles) or to manufacture FOBS (fractionally orbiting bombs). This would be a natural step since it is common knowledge that defensive weapons are much more difficult to develop than are offensive weapons. The Russians are at a distinct advantage, then, both technologically and economically, in being able to counter our defense with their offense.

A crucial point to bear in mind is that Russia has its hawks and doves, and it is clear which group if going to benefit by President Nixon's decision. The timing seems to be particularly poor, because in the last year and a half the Soviets have not thickened their very thin (and ineffective) Galosh ABM system around Moscow. USSR's much heralded (by our military men) Tallinn system, which was supposed to be an ABM network across the northwest, was discovered (in McNamara's final report as Secretary of Defense) to lack "any significant ABM capability." It seems as if the 'ABM gap' is no more real than was Kennedy's 'missile gap'. Is there any reason, then, for this severe escalation of the arms race?

Lurking in the background is the danger that some of our Pentagon experts may think that with a full ABM system, we might "win" a thermonuclear war with Russia. If our military leaders have delusions about the ABM system's effectiveness, they may be less inhibited in requesting thermonuclear missiles/bombs in future Vietnam-type wars (Guatemala and Colombia come to mind). (Some military officers have been asking for atomic weapons to be used in Vietnam ever since 1954.) And, no doubt, they will have 'humane' reasons for using them.

Near the end of the Friday news conference, the President said that he had directed the head of the Office of Emergency Preparedness to look into the shelter program. The cost of such a program, which by necessity must be very large if civilian warfare is to be prevented, would be enormously costly, both in terms of money and neighborly love. Unless we would be willing to build underground cities, some people would not be near shelters, while other people would be. In 1961, when the Civil Defense Agency sponsored the fallout shelter craze, the problem degenerated into a discussion of the ethics of shooting your neighbor if he tried to come into your shelter. Do we want this again?

There are many more problems associated with the deployment of an ABM system. For instance, how can we practical Americans have a multi-billion-dollar weapons system and not test it? The ABM has thermonuclear weapons in its war-head, which, when detonated, is supposed to destroy incoming ICBMs. But then what about the test ban treaty? In forthcoming articles in the Daily Collegian, we will examine in more detail some of the questions raised by this article. We are in agreement with President Nixon in his desire to solve the non-military problem of protecting the population and reducing the danger of war. We disagree with him, however, in his seemingly purely military solution.

Gerald W. Meisner

Editor's Note:

The following lines clarify yes-terday's article concerning the History department.

Members of both sides are reportedly curious as to what happened to a special investigation of the history department conducted last year and paid for with University funds. The investigation was conducted at the request of the Dean of the College of Arts and Sciences by three distinguished historians (Jack Hexter, Yale; Sidney Fine, University of Michigan; and Henry Winkler of Rutgers, who has served as the editor of the AMERICAN HISTORICAL REVIEW.

After interviewing everyone in the department "they wrote up a report, the contents of which are unknown - except, apparently, they had some severe criticisms to make." Another department member added, "We all believe that the report is very damaging and that it indicates that under the present management the department is 'unsalvageable'." The report has not been made public nor has it been discussed within the history department. Its contents were however, summarized by Dean Hunsberger in spring 1968 to a group of about a dozen department members. Apparently, it is still in the possession of Hunsberger or filed somewhere at the office of the Dean of the College of Arts and Sciences.

Eric Anderson to Appear in April

Eric Anderson, nationally known folk-rock singer, will be in concert Thursday, April 3 at 8 p.m. in Bowker Auditorium, University of Massachusetts.

Anderson, who has recorded six albums, writes his own material which has been also recorded by Judy Collins, Pete Seegar, Peter, Paul and Mary and Johnny Cash.

A featured performer in many major folk festivals in the East, Anderson has entertained standing room only audiences at solo concerts in Boston's Jordan Hall and New York's Town Hall.

In October 1968, he appeared at Smith College, to a capacity audience of 1,500 in John M. Greene Hall. "The haunting sensuous qualities of his voice surround the audience en masse, and at the same time, seemed to isolate each person in his own experience," reviewed the Smith College Sophian. "The 2-1/2 hour concert proved to be amost enjoyable and worthwhile musical experience."

Sponsored by the Fine Arts Council and the Martin Luther King, Jr. Council, the concert will be part of the King Council's week of awareness commemorating the first anniversary of King's death.

Tickets will cost $1.50 for UMass students, $2.00 for non-students. They are now on sale in the Student Union and at the Melody Corner.

Marion Williams to Appear In Gospel Concert Benefit

Marion Williams, internationally acclaimed for her singing of gospel, folk and work songs, will appear in a Benefit Concert sponsored by the Afro-American Students Organization and the Amherst Human Relations Council on April 2, in Bowker Auditorium at 8 p.m.

Miss Williams' combination of style, wit and musical versatility have made her concerts appealing to a wide variety of audiences. An electric, inventive, powerful performer, she has captured audiences from Alabama to Amsterdam to Africa, evoking responses such as that at the Antibes Jazz Festival where 5000 Frenchmen rose to their feet in spontaneous handclapping.

She and Duke Ellington represented the United States at the Dakar Festival of Negro Arts in Africa, she toured the capitals of Europe in BLACK NATIVITY, a gospel song play especially created for her and also starred in THE PRODIGAL SON, a Langston Hughes production.

Critics have hailed Miss Williams as "the finest artist gospel has produced" (DOWN BEAT) and "the most creative singer alive" (BROADSIDE).

Tickets ($1.50 Students, $2.50 General) are on sale at the Student Union Ticket Office.

Drug Use Hits Epidemic Extent

The state's joint legislative Committee on Social Welfare was told Tuesday that use of drugs by those of school age has hit "epidemic proportions."

According to Bard Grosse, director of drug studies for the National Student Association, "the proportions are even larger than the surveys show because these young people don't trust you enough to tell you more."

The first day of hearings dealt with a report of the special Commission on Drugs and Alcoholism. It recommends treatment of addicts as patients, not criminals, establishment of treatment centers, giving addits choice of treatment or jail when arrested for narcotics addiction offenses, education on drug use through State Department of Education.

The report also recommends a new system of drugs classification. According to the House chairman of the study, Rep. Jack H. Backman, D-Brookline, drugs are substances which affect mood, judgement or perception. The definition includes alcohol, which he termed one of the most dangerous drugs today.

"Over eight billion perscriptions are given over the counter every day," Rep. Backman said, "which means some people are using the drugs legally while others are going to jail."

Backman continued that the problem with drugs comes with psychological addition, determining and reducing emotional hangups which cause the addiction. He said there are not enough centers to deal with the problem and he urged approval of 37 new mental health center which the study also recommends.

Richard A. Callahan, regional director of the Federal Bureau of Narcotics and Dangerous Drugs, told the committee that an effort is being made in Washington at the congressional level for an omnibus drug law. He expressed hope it would be approved before the end of this year.

It will apply to all illegal drugs he said, and supersede all federal laws.

Marijuana, Callahan said, is the "most controversial and emotional" of all the drugs, because rather little is known about it. It will be the subject of a definitive, scientific report within two or three years, Callahan said.

"We're in trouble," he stated. "Now is the time to get behied this legislation."

Redmen Baseball Team Heads South to Open '69 Season

Bergquist Looking for Best Lineup

By JOHN SULLIVAN
Sports Day Editor

With a determination to regain the Yankee Conference crown that it won in 1967, the Redmen baseball squad embarks on the 1969 season with its annual trip down South to play seven games in seven days, March 23-29.

Head coach Dick Bergquist, guiding the Redmen in his third year at the helm, will be employing various starting lineups next week with the aim of finding the best combination under game conditions.

In the infield there is presently a three-way battle for the second base berth and a two-way toss-up for third. It is an all-sophomore fight for second among Tom Semino, Mike Marchev and Joe Guglietta. The contest for third is between juniors Steve Stanford and Tim Berringer. Stanford appeared in 22 games last spring and hit .253.

The first base job has been won by junior Ray Ellerbrook, the sharpshooting guard of the basketball Redmen, who hit .275 as a sophomore last year. It is Bergquist's belief that the confidence Ellerbrook gained in basketball this past season should be a great asset to him.

For the third straight year the shortstop post will be commanded by Joe DiSarcina, co-captain of the hoop squad as well as co-captain of this Redmen baseball team. Di Sarcina has batted over .300 the past two seasons, earning all-conference honors both years in addition to being selected to the 1968 all-New England team.

Coach Bergquist is rightfully high on his shortstop, labelling him "a definite pro prospect," DiSarcina's left leg, which he injured during the basketball season, still has to be padded, but his mobility appears to be back to normal.

Left fielder Hansen enters this '69 season backed by outstanding sophomore statistics. In 21 games last year, this left-handed power hitter hammered eight homers and drove in 30 runs and ran up a .381 average. His home runs and rbi's along with his slugging percentage of .798, were tops in the nation.

Bergquist does not over-rate Hansen when he calls him "an outstanding college hitter, one of the best in the country."

Starting behind the plate will be senior Tony Chinappi, who shares captain duties with DiSarcina. As a junior he hit the ball at an impressive .347 clip. Chinappi has a strong backup man in the person of junior Chuck Newell, whose sophomore average was .182. Adding depth to an already deep position are sophomores Bob Willman and Paul Sulzicki.

The pitching crew is led by senior Norm Elliot, junior John Kitchen and junior Ken Hughes. It is hoped that Elliot can return to his sophomore for m and improve over last spring's 0-2 record and 6.48 earned run average. Kitchen, 5-2 with a 2.16 era as a sophomore, has excellent potential.

Also in the running for mound duty are junior George Andersen and three sophomores, Don Anderson, Lou Colabello and Jack Bernardo. Rich Rappoli, 3-3 with a 2.11 era in '68, has been lost to the pitching staff due to academic problems.

Defensively, Bergquist feels that his Redmen are adequate, and he plans to experiment in this area during the southern swing. The coach cites shortstop DeSarcina as "the key of the whole defensive team." Other notables on defense are Salnick in center field and Ellerbrook at first base.

"The one you have to mention on offense is Bob Hansen," Bergquist replies when reference is made to this aspect of UMass' game. The Redman mentor also sees his co-captains, Chinappi and DiSarcina, as major cogs in this year's attack. Ellerbrook and Pepin are also highly counted upon for their ability at the plate.

"The pitching staff," in Bergquist's words, "is our real key." The loss of Rappolli will be felt, but Kitchen and Elliot are expected to take up the slack. Sophomore Don Anderson has been impressive, while the remaining members of the crew are all capable of doing the job.

Coach Bergquist is optimistic in the evaluation of his team's chances down Sout h against some highly touted squads. "I feel we're going down there capable of winning any or all of the games, but the teams down South are a month ahead of us because of weather."

In additio n to this southern competition the Redmen will have to contend with a schedule that includes such notables as Boston College, Holy Cross, Dartmouth, Springfield, Boston University and Army.

As far as the conference is concerned, Bergquist regards UConn as the biggest challenge to UMass' title hopes and looks upon Maine as the league's darkhorse. He puts it right on the line when he says, "Our main goal has to be to win the Yankee Conference."

Taking all factors into consideration, coach Bergquist comes to this conclusion: "Potentially we can be one of the best teams in this district (NCAA District One)." However, he adds, with a note of caution, that "from past experience, it's impossible to predict a season."

Mermen Conclude Disappointing 4-6 Year

By RAY ESONIS
Staff Reporter

After finishing with a 4-6 record and placing 9th in the N.E.I.S.A. meet, coach Joe Roger's swimming team is reflecting over a disappointing season.

However true this may be, there were numerous bright spots during the campaign. Co-captain Bob Asquith, in the meet with Vermont, broke the record for the 200 backstroke with a time of 2:09.7. Then in th e same meet, Mark Miller broke the 1942 record for the 100 freestyle with a 51.9 time.

The trend of the whole season was set when the first three encounters were dropped to Amherst (53-39), Wesleyan (58-37), and Bowdoin (52-42). The squad's first win came at the hands of Vermont (55-49), while the fifth meet was dropped to Central Connecticut (60-38).

Then the strongest point of the swimming season arrived when UMass won three straight against W.P.I. (68-36), Holy Cross (70-23), and Coast Guard (55-47). The last two games saw a return to the losing ways against Connecticut (72-31), and M.I.T. (62-32).

Although the swimmers concluded a disappointing season, they were looking forward to the N.E.I.S.A. meet at UConn on March 7. But coach Rogers, not expecting to win very much, saw his prophesy come true as the team placed 9th out of 21 teams. The goal was to better last year's 8th place finsh, but 9th out of 21 must be considered a good showing.

The Redman squad that made the trip included co-captains Asquith and Flip Morton, along with Dave Larson, Miller, Dick Donoghue, and Al Northrup.

Next year's hopes look dim due to the loss of six seniors. But there are several good prospects graduating from the freshman team, such as backstroker Herb Shuster, and freestylers Greg Donoghue and Bob Freeman.

J.V. Baseball Program Grows, Leaman Gets 'Slap in Face'

By PETER F. PASCARELLI
Sports Editor

The first junior varsity program in UMass history to really get off the ground becomes a reality this spring with the addition of a junior varsity baseball team. For varsity coach Dick Bergquist, it is the addition of something he has strived for since taking over as head baseball coach three years ago. The squad, according to Bergquist is designed for sophomores and juniors who need more experience to develop. The players are eligible for the varsity and conceivably can come to play with the big nine. Bergquist said, in reference to finances, "We are operating on a shoestring right now, but I'm delighted the program has got this far."

Coaching the J.V.'s will be former UMass star Tony Williams, who helped with the freshman hoop team this winter. Williams, an All-Conference third baseman and member of the Baltimore Oriole chain for a time, also serves as president of the Varsity 'M' Club.

It looks right now like the UMass track team will have to wait a little longer for their long-awaited track. The slow melting snow has hurt chances for the necessary building to be completed. Coach Ken O'Brian still holds a slim hope for its completion for at least some portion of the spring track season, however. He said, "Right now it is as if the lights were turned out but the door is still open."

Redmen runners Lee Duart and Tom Derderian, both sophomores, finished high i n last weekend's Cherry Tree marathon, run in New York City. Duart finished third after leading for 23 miles, posting a time of 2 hours, 33 minutes, 13 seconds. Derderian was eighth. Beating Duart out for the top spot was Gary Merke of L.I.U. who was tenth in last year's Boston Marathon. Both Duart and Derderian hope to run in the Patriot's Day classic.

Gymnastic coach Erik Kjeldsen thinks his star ringman Dick DelGallo is as good as anyone in the country in his event. DelGallo will be competing in the NCAA championships to be held April 3-5 in Seattle, Wash. Said Kjeldsen, "I'm optimistic about Dick's chances. He holds a backseat to no one." DelGallo was eighth last year in the national championships.

UMass will have two wrestlers competing for NCAA honors when the nationals are held March 27-29 at Brigham Young University in Provo, Utah. Bob Freeman in the 145 lb. class and George Zguris in the 191 lb. division, both sophomores, won the right to compete by virtue of their New England titles.

Jack Leaman was second in voting for New England coach of the year while Peter Gayeska made second team in the area. Leaman was given a virtual slap in the face when the Hall of Fame committee decided to postpone the New England all star game to next week so that Bob Cousy could coach. Leaman was slated for the job when Cousy could not coach because of the N.I.T.

Redmen Roundup

Kevin O'Connor, Redman lacrosse all-American, needs 14 goals to pass Dick Hoss in the alltime school records. O'Connor already holds the career assist and point marks. The snakebeaters were ranked 20th in the country last season, to continue the steady rise they have shown the past years. It should continue this spring.

Spring football practice commences April 14 and will conclude with the annual squad game on May 3. Though the gridsters were a dismal 2-8 last year, they were good enough to make a movie. An instructional film with Vic Fusia and his squad will be released for use by high schools later this month.

Among freshman baseball candidates are Eastern Mass. all-scholastic southpaw hurler, Tom King of Acton, who was drafted by the Red Sox and labeled "the outstanding pitching prospect in his area" by scouts, Paul Archambault of Dalton, a catcher who was two-time Hearst all-star pick, and shortstop Jim Kiley of Reading, who was a draftee of the White Sox.

Included in the strong frosh lacrosse lineup are hockey goalie Bruce Crawford, and Al Alessi, a midfielder and brother of former UMass all-American defenseman Walt.

And the intramural department is intending to do their part in the battle of the sexes. Tentatively scheduled for later this fall is a coed tug-of-war competition and a coed golf championship. Who says the athletic department doesn't like girls?

Judicial Action Against Thurmond Hecklers Upcoming

Campus Leaders Lament Violation of Free Speech

By Mark Silverman NEWS EDITOR

"Ashamed and upset", students and administrators prepared yesterday to bring General Court action against the 16 persons involved in Wednesday night's harrassment of Senator Strom Thurmond's D.V.P. lecture.

John O'Connell, Chairman of the Distinguished Visitors Program, along with a large number of students and administrators, plan to draw up a case against the demonstrators for presentation before the General Court in early April, but admit that it might be hard to identify the hooded persons participating.

"We hope anyone who can identify the participants will do so", Dean of Students William F. Field said. "Students knowing the identity of anyone involved can contact either myself or Senate President Paul Silverman", he went on to say.

Field was strong in his condemnation of the demonstrators. "It's a matter of principle", he explained. "Senator Thurmond's Freedom of Speech was denied Wednesday by people who claim the title of liberals. It is the responsibility of people witnessing the harrassment to make charges against the demonstrators."

O'Connell agreed. "Any speaker invited to this University has the right to speak, whatever his views may be...I'm extremely disappointed that a majority of the audience present allowed a small minority to prevail...this is a sad state of affairs."

Outgoing Student Senate President Paul J. Silverman also had harsh words for the disruptors. "If the allegations are true, I view this as an affront to the University system of free speech... I would expect a severe penalty to be levied by the general court."

Gerald Scanlon, Assistant Dean of Students and a witness of the Wednesday night demonstration explained, "they (the protestors) missed a golden opportunity to discuss issues with Thurmond on a rational level, but they blew that chance. He might have been impressed with a rational discourse, but Wednesday night must have left Thurmond thinking of us as barbarians."

Scanlon said that the crowd of people who did nothing to quiet the demonstrators, "were very wrong in their inaction."

The Student Senate was scheduled to consider the motion at its meeting last night calling for an official letter of apology to be sent to the Republican Senator, and expressing the Senate's concern that future actions like those

HECKLERS ROSE FROM THE AUDIENCE to give support to the person who took the microphone away from the Senator at one point. Raising a confederate flag, they shouted "Kill, Kill, Kill," amid a series of obscenities. The rest of the audience made little effort to quiet the demonstrators, and only responded when the Chairman of D.V.P. made a plea from the platform, saying, "He has as much right to speak as you."

FROM OUR SIDE

Free Speech Stifled

Strom Thurmond and his far right views are odious to the large majority of students on this campus. The Senator from South Carolina is strongly against equal rights for blacks and strongly in favor of further nuclear armament, and the escalation of the Vietnam conflict.

BUT - the disruption of his speech Wednesday, the physical impeding of the Senator to present his address, and the presence of demonstrators on the stage, attempting to obstruct Thurmond's performance, is more offensive than Thurmond's ideas.

The question of the morality of different forms of protest is often nebulous, but the physical obstruction of a man's free speech is a disturbing way to protest.

We emphasize the actual physical obstruction which confronted Thurmond, a guest to our University. Americans, young and old, right or left, cherish their right to free speech, and usually protest any threat to that right. Wednesday night's incident and similar incidents are a serious, vicious threat against that right of expression, used so often by all sides of the political spectrum.

It is not necessary to agree with Thurmond, but it is vitally necessary to allow him to present his views, without fear of physical harm. Hackneyed in context, but so apt, even 300 years after it was written was Voltaire's "I may disagree with what you say, but I defend to the death your right to say it." Constructive and lawful protest against what is thought wrong is imperative to our society. The Cage incident was not constructive or lawful, but a malicious act by malicious individuals.

Outgoing Student Senate President Paul J. Silverman has urged that all possible attempts be made to identify the individuals involved in the physical obstruction of Senator Thurmond. The Senate President has further urged that action be taken by the Student General Court against the individuals.

We agree with President Silverman and strongly advocate that all necessary steps be taken to punish those responsible for this act; that not only degrades the name of this University and the DVP program but threatens the right of free and open discussion on this campus.

The Editors

Good Idea-Bad Planning

Thedemonstration that took place Wednesday night during Senator Strom Thurmond's speech was a good idea, but completely ineffective as far as desirable effect was concerned.

The parade and the insueing surrounding of the speakers platform by the sheet-covered Klan masqueraders was excellent and in keeping with the policies ofnonviolet protest. But when one of the protesters ascended the platform, stole the microphone away from the senator, and began shouting at the audience over it, this was where the whole demonstration became ineffective and badly discredited itself.

Admittedly, the demonstration would not have been effective either, if the march constituted the entirety of the protest. In order for a protest of this type to be effective, it would have been necessary for the demonstrators to make the speaker come away looking bad. A mere parade can hardly accomplish this. As it turned out the exact opposite occured and Thurmond came away from the Cage Wednesday night, martyred, morally satisfied, and $1500 richer.

The thing about it is that with a little planning, things would have turned out a lot differently. The lack of intelligent planning and the underestimation of the senator by the demonstrators were key factors in the demonstration's failure.

The lack of adequate, mature planning was clearly obvious when the stage had been surrounded and the demonstrators seemed to look at each other as if to say, "What do we do next?" It was apparent that the demonstrators had underestimated the ability of the Senator to retain his public composure when certain of the demonstrators began to verbally heckle him. On e must attribute to Thurmond, even if he is a red neck from South Carolina, at least some intelligence seeing that he is a U. S. Senator. One must also assume that being such he does have some idea of how to handle himself in public, and being heckled by a bunch of kids was hardly an adequate test of his ability.

Personally, I would have very much so liked to have seen Senator Thurmond come out of the Cage looking bad; as it turned out the senator came out of the whole thing utterly successful and disgustingly cool.

Campus Comment

Hypocrites

To the Editor:

After witnessing the speech tonight presented by Senator Strom Thurmond, we have become convinced that such disrespectful heckling demonstrated by the so-called "liberals" on this and other campuses, serve little constructive purpose.

To paraphrase Voltaire, "I may disagree with what You say but I will defend to the death your right to say it."

The demonstrators had a right to demonstrate and we totally believe that, yet each person has a right to say what he believes within certain reasonable limits. Those limits were exceeded tonight by those who felt it was their obligation to prevent Senator Thurmond from expressing his views on current issues.

We do not adhere to Mr. Thurmond's ideologies, but we differ from some people in the respect that we feel that the Senator has the right to speak and that our fellow students have the right to hear his views; then decide for themselves if they believe his views are valid.

Those who rudely interrupted the speech tonight obviously do not believe in the right of free speech; if they do, they are hypocrites.

Sincerely
James P. Audet
David E. Floreen
David J. Veale

Liberalism?

To the editor:

We have just returned from the Distinguished Visitors Program with Senator Strom Thurmond and can only say that we are ashamed. We are ashamed not because we are students at UMass, and we are not ashamed for ourselves, but we are ashamed that there are students who while hiding under a sheet of liberalism negate the very things they stand for.

One aspect that should distinguish the liberal college student is his ability to reason after being presented with all avenues of information; an open-mindedness which precludes listening to opinions that he disagrees with as well as those which he favors.

There were many people in the audience, who like ourselves, disagreed with Senator Thurmond's views - yet we listened. There were also many who listened to the Senator and agreed with him. And yet despite the "conservativeness" of their beliefs they were far more liberal than those self-professed liberals who neglected to listen and merely condemned.

One implied obligation we all have is to express our beliefs. To be present at the speaking of a senator who advocates segregation, wearing the garb of the Ku Klux Klan can be considered an extension, a rather showy and perhaps elastic extension, but nevertheless an extension, of this obligation. This flexibility does not extend to intimidating the speaker and disrupting his presentation.

We are fighting for a society of moral awareness and conscience. In striving for this society, however, we must not lose sight of our values and permit our means to exist independently. In choosing our means we must use discretion. Not all methods are valid and not all dissent is relevent. As President Nixon stated in his inaugural address, "We must discern the words from the noise."

Ronald Matuson
Robert Blejer

More Muscle

To the editor:

The Distinguished Visitors Program, in an effort to provide the broadest spectrum of ideas, invited the Honorable Senator from South Carolina Strom Thurmond to voice many of his rightist views. After a series of discussions with the administration, it was decided to have a minimum undercover police force so as not to provoke any violent demonstrations. Unfortunately, we had miscalculated the maturity and manners of an expecting and orderly and peaceful demonstration; but were appalled at the unprovoked assault on the character and physical well being of the Senator. The abuse he received while delivering his address and the manhandling of so distinguished a man while struggling to obtain the safety of the University car was a disgrace both to the University and to its student body. The majority of students were prevented from hearing much of the Senator's lecture by the actions of his radical minority. The purpose of a university necessitates the freedom of expression for any individual whether he be left or RIGHT.

The Distinguished Visitors Program will continue to present both sides of relevant issues, but in the future will guarantee adequate protection from the physical harrassment which Senator Thurmond was subjected to Wednesday evening.

Thomas O'Connell
Program Chairman
Distinguished Visitors Program

Expression

To the editor:

As a member of a society that values the institution of freedom of speech, I wish to express my opinion on Sen. Thurmond's visit.

The concept of a university is one of freedom of speech and expression. It is the logical place for voicing ideas, group interaction, and discussion. We see the cries for university reforms so that all people can be heard and express themselves, so that the tendency for stifling opinion will be eliminated. In the country at large, the movement for a more democratic society where all may be heard, is blatantly visible. Senator Thurmond, not only as an individual, but especially as one who has been invited to address an academic community, has a right to speak. His ideas are often disputed especially in an academic community. I most definitely disagree with his views whether it be Viet Nam, segregation, or the ABM system. However, the man does have a right to be listened to. Why the shouting and discourtesy? Certainly time is alloted to question. Why are the minds who claim to be so open, so one sided? Understanding requires dialogue. That means two points of view. If one side cries that it is being stifled by the other and then does the stifling, divisions will widen and nothing will ever be accomplished.

Organize!

To the editor:

I would like to comment on the speech of last evening made by Senator Strom Thurmond as part of the Distinguished Visitors Program, and the actions of several of the members of the audience during the program.

First of all I would like to praise all of those who took part in the demonstration. I admire your courage and your sense of convictions. Secondly, I would like to congratulate all of those who voiced their support of the senator, for you are the ones who clearly showed all of us liberals once and for all that you do exist in places other than the land of "Dizzy Dixie."

I wish to state further concerning the demonstration, that being the only sane part of the whole ordeal, that it was good but could have been better. A little organization never hurt anyone. The idea of the Klan robes was good, and the march was carried off fairly well. But the total effect was minimal. Next time let's see a little organization, and a definite plan directed at maximum audience participation. Believe me it will be much more effective. Peace.

Stupidity?

To the editor:

I would like to take this opportunity to discuss a problem of lively interest to every embalmer and mortician east of the continental shelf - namely, the New Left's deft, imaginative bullying and intimidation of that sweetest magnolia of southern culture, Senator Strom Thurmond.

Enthrallingly enough, the seemingly boundless aridity of Mr. Thurmond's thoughts was matched and summarily overwhelmed at every conceivable point by the nothing less than intoxicating stupidity of the protest establishment.

Propelling cat-calling, baying, howling, grunting, belching and slogan shrieking to giddy new heights of banality and irrationality, the New Left once again ingeniously and vigorously reenforced the gamey Roller Derby mentality that has become its chief mark of intellectual distinction.

Reaffirming, once again, that the "meaningful," "relevant" New Left alternative to Thurmond's paleolothic philosophy appears to be nothing more intriguing then government by achne.

May I suggest that the resident radicals on campus turn their militant mediocrity toward the boycotting of Wednesday night Tupperware parties, the terror bombing of suburban bridge parties, the liberation of Howard Johnson's rest rooms, and the bellowing of the word "Fuck" at meetings of the Amherst Garden Club.

Officers Look Toward Swearing-In, Voice Plans for Senate's Direction

By JAN CURLEY
Assistant Managing Editor

The swearing of the newly elected Student Senate officers will be held at the first Senate meeting after vacation, April 2. President-elect Bruce Balboni was unavailable for comment last night, but the Daily Collegian reached the other three officers for some additional comment on their views of the offices they will assume.

As secretary of the Student Senate, vice-president elect Cindi Olken was in her usual place next to President Paul Silverman at the meeting last night. In viewing the duties of the vice-presidency, Miss Olken said, "I see the vice-president as one who must be willing to act as the representative of the student body in the capacity of president, if I am asked to do so by the president."

"That's not to say that I can't have my own ideas and opinions," she said, "but the office must be put in the proper perspective."

Miss Olken said she did not feel that she should do somethings, such as appearing before the Faculty Senate, without the knowledge of the President.

Miss Olken reiterated her stand of Wednesday night that the most important job of the vice-president was to get the committee system working. "It is a difficult job that will require a lot of effort and time," she said She also said the Senate needed competent senators to run the committees and competent non-senators to serve on these committees.

At the present time, she said a bill is sent to the committees, investigated by them and then returned to the senate for discussion. Judging by the debate held on the bills, Miss Olken said, "It's just as if the bill had never been investigated," Many times she said she felt the debate was necessary.

Miss Olken felt that if the committees could become more competent, this amount of debate would not be necessary. In her speech Wed. night, she recommended senators serve on only two standing committees in order to "gain expertise" in some particular field.

"Most of the work of the senate should be done in committees," Miss Olken said. If the committee system is not improved, Miss Olken said she could foresee the need for more than one student senate meeting in a week.

In discussing his plans for the coming year, incumbent treasurer Alan Gauthier who defeated Senator Susan Bacon, 49-25, said, "I will continue with the insurance program to insure the equipment of every R.S.O. group against fire and theft and to insure WMUA and the DAILY COLLEGIAN for liability."

In his candidacy speech at the election, Gauthier said, "I am running on my record. I have kept my promises and I promise to continue on the same pattern."

The key to Gauthier's statements was "sound, modern financial concepts." Gauthier will be consulted by the president on the appointment of chairmen for the three finance committees, Budget, Finance and Ways and Means.

In discussing the financial policy booklet, Gauthier said, "It is basically a good document; it is far superior to the one we are now working with." He also said, "It brings the Senate out of the Dark Ages into the twentieth century."

The financial policy booklet is still in the finance committee and will come to the Senate floor for amendments in the next month.

In speaking directly about the office of treasurer, Gauthier said, "I will start with by-law changes to define the responsibilites of the treasurer." Specifically he would like some statement defining the treasurer's responsibility to coordinate the three financial committees. The treasurer was formerly a member ex officio of these three committees.

SENATE PRESIDENT-ELECT Bruce Balboni will be sworn in at the first Senate Meeting after spring vacation. He will assume the duties of the office immediately.

Pat Beharry, who is succeeding Miss Olken as secretary, clarified her campaign statement on the possibilites of the secretary's job.

"It is possible to improve through the records on exactly what the Senate will mean to someone 10 years from now." Miss Beharry sees a need for a better communications system to better inform the student body what the senate has done.

Miss Beharry echoed Miss Olken's statement Tuesday night that when she speaks as the secretary she is not speaking as a "regular senator" but as someone whom the "senate has placed trust and respect in."

When asked to comment on the officers with whom she will be working next year, Miss Beharry said, "It will be the greatest pleasure in the world to work with the other three officers."

Faculty Senate Examins History Department

The main topic of yesterday's Faculty Senate meeting was an investigation of the history department with specific attention to the reappointment of Professor Robert Potash as head of that department and the alledged tampering of mail. A letter regarding the appointment of Potash from the former dean of the College of Arts and Sciences, Moyer L. Hunsberger, is alledged to have been intercepted by someone.

Two bills for the investigation were proposed for consideration. Motions by Prof. Ronald F. Reid of the speech department and a substitution proposal by Prof. Isidore Silver of the business department were debated. The controversy centered around who should conduct the investigation, to whom should the results should be reported and to what extent should the investigation be extended.

Prof. Reid's motion was passed after a long debate by the faculty members. The first amendment passed pertained to looking into the background circumstances dealing with the reappointment of Potash. The other amendment asked to be striken was to whom the report should be sent first, but the procedure of sending it to President Lederle was retained.

In essence, the Reid motion states, that an Ad Hoc Committee of faculty members be elected by the senate and charged with the responsibility of reporting back to the Faculty Senate no later than its May 1 meeting on the following: 1). . .reappointment of the head of the history department and to the alledged interception and to the alledged misuse of campus mail; 2) recommendations regarding action to be taken. . . and 3) recommendation for future mail handling and procedures.

The motion was accepted after a move to table both proposals was attempted. A query by Prof. Potash on how could the Faculty Senate decide an issue which encompassed its own members evolved from his four points: 1) warfare is not acceptable to an academic community; 2) a body (referring to a member of the Faculty Senate) involved in the internal conflict should be disqualified from the investigation; 3) the interception is not properly termed "alleged" since there is existing evidence the incident took place and the document is in the hands of a man who, when requested to hand it over has not done so yet, and 4) a iso there is a need for an investigation of the Faculty Senate since there are members involved.

In other business, reports were heard from the planning committee and Calendar Committees. The resolution to accept Profs. William Havard, William Mellen and Joseph Marcus as members of the Ad Hoc Planning Committees was unanimously accepted.

Chess Tourney Highlights Chess Club Season

Richard Lees and Ronald Burris tied for first place in the recently concluded U of Mass chess tournament. After having won all their earlier games, they met in the last round and played a tense, hard fought draw. Both Burris and Lees are rated players in the United States Chess Federation; and both have played in numerous rated tournaments.

The tournament was sponsored by the U of Mass Chess Club and was directed by club president Isak Mutlu. The Chess Club wishes to encourage all interested members of the university community to come and play. Graduate students and faculty are welcome as well. Instruction is available for those who are either interested in learning the game from scratch or in sharpening their present ability.

- In the past, the club has sponsored individuals to tournaments, and at present is in the process of planning a series of team matches against other universities to be held this spring and next fall. The Chess Club meets at 7:00 p.m. every Thursday evening in the New Hatch.

On-Campus Room Chosing Begins Here April 27

The Housing Office today announced the dates for spring room choosing. Students who wish to reserve residence hall space for the fall semester must do so in the appropriate residence hall between April 27 and May 4. A day by day schedule will be published following the spring recess. Each student must have paid his $50 Security Deposit prior to May 31 in order to reserve the room of his choice.

Students who will be 21 or a senior during the academic year (September - June) are eligible to move off campus. Special exception for those not eligible may be obtained by applying to the appropriate Area Coordinator. A student must exercise his option to move off campus for the 1969-70 academic year prior to May 31. A student whose decision to move off campus is made after this date will forfeit his deposit. If a student lives within the residence hall system during the fall semester, he will be unable to move off campus for the second semester without forfeiting his deposit.

Due to a competitive market in existing area apartment vacancies, it is recommended that a student make arrangements with private owners during May for September occupancy. Information on such vacancies may be obtained in the Off Campus Housing Office, Whitmore Administration Building, Room 236.

In tune with the general confusion and din that reigned in the Cage a group of students raised a Confederate flag and Nazi helmet and hurled taunting remarks and obscenities at DVP speaker Strom Thurmond. (MDC photo by Bob Mangiaratti).

UMass Coed to Enter College Queen Pageant

A five-foot, three-inch University of Massachusetts math major who loves to ride motorcycles will represent the state in the national College Queen Pageant at Palm Beach, Florida, Apr. 11-21.

Kathleen Scott, 20, comes from Waldwick, N.J. She decided to go to college because she hated high school so much she "knew there had to be something better." She chose UMass "because it had a good reputation out of state and it was inexpensive."

Kathleen has long black hair and hazel eyes. She weighs 104 pounds and when asked her measurements said: "I don't know, and if I did I might not want to tell you."

She likes soul music, bell-bottoms and boots. In spite of a lot of daydreaming she has kept a B-plus average.

She says she doesn't have any beaus but does have "good friends who always take me riding." Her ideal man "must be intelligent and has to communicate with me about things more than just superficially."

"Silent Onlookers" Condemned

of Wednesday might "serve to embarass the majority of students at the University." The motion was introduced by Senators Klayton and Nims.

The incident Wednesday night began when six individuals dressed in white hooded sheets in imitation of the Klu Klux Klan and carrying placards approached the platform as the Southern senator began his remarks on the current Anti-Ballistic Missile controversy. One disguised "Klansman" took the microphone from Thurmond. Six Negro youths also went to the stage in an attempt to disrupt Thurmond's speech. A Confederate flag was also raised as some students heckled him with obsenities and remarks such as "Kill, Kill, Kill."

DVP Chairman John O'Connell told the group that "He (Thurmond) has a right to speak. You have your platform, now let him have his." A majority of the students applauded O'Connell's statement.

As Sen. Thurmond left the Cage a dozen individuals rocked and pounded on his car.

Minsky Sees UMass Challenge Centering on Humanization

By MORTON TANKUNS Staff Correspondent

Mike Minsky, leader of a sit-in demonstration against Dow Chemical last month, is hopeful that he has sparked a new wave of political awareness on the UMass campus. He told the Daily Collegian in an interview, "when you have a successful action, it changes your outlook for the future. Confrontations are to be avoided, but sometimes there is no other way."

He said that discrimination against students at the University must end. "Students should have as many rights as everyone else. They should be treated as human beings. Dormitories are inhuman, sex restrictions are unjustified and course requirements tend to degrade students,"

What is the role of a university? According to Minsky besides preserving the ideals of the past, its main function is to "keep people from eighteen to twenty-two off the streets and out of trouble." Yet he wants an atmosphere on which the individual "can learn by choosing his own speed and direction." He compares a student's freedom on this campus to an infant's freedom in a playpen.

To those who believe that an absence of industrial recruitment on the campus would be an infringement on their rights, he answers, "They have failed to analyze the situation properly, it is the corporate structure which infringes on their and everyone's rights." He added, "Americans are being exploited by having to fight wars which are a product of American industrial adventurism," and by having to pay such high taxes while corporations are "generally let off the hook."

Consequently, his desire to see campus recruitment abolished is only "a step along the way to a restructuring of this society." He wants "a nonviolent society not based on the manufacture of arms but on the right of every individual to have every chance possible to influence and change the government."

Minsky classifies himself not as a revolutionary but as a "realistic radical." He "does not seek a revolution but a change on the basic power structure of this country" and envisions the future as being "quite similar to the present for a long time."

"Change is going to come about by increasingly more continuous mass political action, by putting on as much pressure on as many points as possible."

He said his immediate goal is to create more political awareness and activism on campus. Although he said he has no particular activity in mind, he sees any future student demonstrations as being "healthy and productive."

English Department Formulates Grievance Committee for Majors

On March 13th, at its last meeting before the Spring Vacation, the English Department Undergraduate Council approved, with only slight amendments, a draft of procedural guidelines submitted by members of the newly-formed EDUC Grievance Committee. These procedural guidelines of the eight-member Grievance Committee, as amended by EDUC, are as follows:

"The option of referring to the Committee any academic grievances, regarding the English Department or a particular English course being taken during the current semester, shall be the right of any undergraduate at this university. During the Spring semester, 1969, grievances will be retroactive to January 30, 1969. In future semesters, the statute of limitations on grievances will be four weeks. (This means also that at the beginning of a new semester students may have a period, not exceeding four weeks, to call for a redress of grievances incurred late in the previous semester.)

"Grievances may be referred either to an individual Committee member, by means of a written statement; or to the entire Committee, by means of a written statement placed in the Committee mailbox (EDUC mailbox number "V" in Bartlett Hall, third floor). A student submitting a written grievance, whether to an individual Committee member or to the entire Committee, should include the following information: plaintiff's name, address, telephone number, class, major field; specific nature of grievance. Then, if the plaintiff desires any action to be taken, he must confer with the entire Grievance Committee to discuss the nature of his grievance in greater detail. (The Committee will meet each Sunday at 7:00 p.m., in the Hatch, to discuss any grievances submitted during the previous week.)

"Should the Committee decide that the grievance is valid, after assessing all evidence which the plaintiff presents, the Committee will then either: autonomously take action upon the plaintiff's grievance, if directed toward an individual faculty member; or: refer the grievance, stated in writing, to the entire EDUC body, if the grievance is directed more generally toward Department policy.

"The Committee shall report to the entire EDUC body the nature of all those grievances which have been submitted to, and deemed valid by, a majority of the Committee members. The Committee will inform the entire EDUC body of all actions taken by the Committee."

The members of the Grievance Committee are: Rosaria D'Andrea, 627 Field House, 546-6863; Judith Krosnick, 135A Hillside Apts., Northampton, 584-2104; Lin Lamminen, 206 Emerson House, 546-7253; Michael Macmillan, 179 Summer Street (P. O. Box 445), North Amherst, 549-0096; Joan McRae, 517 Field House, 546-6825; Marilee Marchese, 10 Thoreau House, 546-7417; Kenneth Mosakowski, 382 North Pleasant Street, Amherst; and Alan Pransky, 312 Washington Lower House 546-8556.

Mr. Mosakowski, chairman of the Grievance Committee, ruges students NOT TO HESITATE in presenting academic grievances to Committee members. According to Mosakowski: "The Grievance Committee was formed by students to serve the interests of students. It is now the responsibility of discontented students to EXPRESS their discontent to the Grievance Committee."

Sierra Club Director To Speak Here in April

David R. Brower, national executive director of the Sierra Club, will speak at UMass Wednesday, April 2, at 7:30 p.m. in Thompson Hall 104.

His talk, open to the public without charge, is part of the Distinguished Ecologists series sponsored by the Western Massachusetts Unit of the Sierra Club Atlantic Chapter. Mr. Brower will speak of "The Activists Role in Quality Environment for the World."

As full-time executive director of the Sierra Club since 1953, Mr. Brower led a nation-wide effort by the club that has brought in 60,000 new members in the past six years and has put the club in the forefront of several national conservation battles.

Mr. Brower is active in such leading U.S. conservation organizations as the Natural Resources Council, Trustees for Conservation, Rachel Carson Trust Fund for Living Environment, National Parks Association, Wilderness Society and others. He has served many of these groups as an officer or director.

He conceived the Sierra Club exhibit format of outdoor books and has edited 12 volumes in the series. He also has written scripts for outdoor motion pictures and was co-author of the script for the noted Sierra Club Grand Canyon film.

His awards include a merit award from the California Conservation Council, the National Parks Association Award, the Paul Bartsch Award of the Audubon Naturalist Society, the Carey-Thomas Award for the best example of creative publishing and others.

He is a 10th Mountain Div. veteran of World War II and a graduate of the University of California. He was editor of the University of California Press before assuming his present post.

University Finance, Planning Coordinated by Budget Office

An $80 million annual account might seem to provide enough work - but not for the busy UMass Budget Office. It performs many other functions. According to L.R. Morrell, budget director, his office deals with four main areas.

"1. To provide the administration with information necessary for decision making - not necessarily money.

2. To perform budgeting functions in the areas of data collection, analysis, document preparation and continuing expenditure studies.

3. To provide other necessary services relating to institutional studies and reports.

4. To furnish data to outside agencies when such requests are reasonable and proper."

The outside agencies include the WORLD BOOK OF KNOWLEDGE, the Board of Higher Education, The Federal Government's Office of Education and other schools and universities.

"In order to increase coordination of effort and communication, the Office of Institutional Studies combined with the Budget Office January first," Morrell said.

Forming the multi-million dollar budget for each fiscal year is a complex process. The director said that every new program, new facility or innovation for each department must be reviewed along with the basic expenditures. Although certain items are fixed- computer rental and 65% of the budget for salaries - cuts can always be expected from the statewide Budget Bureau or through recommendations from the Governor, he said.

After the money is alloted to each department - 80 million dollars this year - the Budget Office assumes a control function. Morrell said that his office continuously watches all expenditures by comparing weekly spending rates with past years. He said that every item in the accounts of each department - even travel expenses and long distance telephone calls - are continuously checked.

Morrell also said that many studies, including internal cost, internal non-financial, external and academic studies, are made by the Budget Office from its third floor office at Whitmore. The academic studies are designed to modify and reform University operations while giving the students an opportunity to have a voice, he said.

The academic studies include surveys of student attitudes toward courses, drop-out attitudes, core curriculum studies and pass-fail options. Most of these studies cover other colleges and universities and the results frequently get national recognition.

The Student Public Health Association, active in lobbying for a bill to improve the working conditions of migrant workers, as well as working with the Holyoke Model Cities program and a group attempting to improve housing in Northampton, is well into its first year of service.

In addition to the community service aspect of the Association, the group has organized a system within the public health department where by four students have a vote on all matters at all faculty meetings.

The Public health Association is open to all University students, although it was originally formed by public health majors.

New Curfew Policy Praised By Womans' Dorm Heads

By CHARLENE GOLONKA
Staff Correspondent

Heads of residence of women's dormitories have praised the effectiveness of the no-curfew system for second semester freshmen women since its adoption two weeks ago.

Long time supporters of a policy change, the housemothers have commended the system as it has functioned thus far and have said they anticipate no problems

In Collegian interviews with 10 heads of residence, each residence area represented, favorable feelings were expressed.

Mrs. Silva, housemother at Patterson, summed up the general reaction. "I think it's wonderful," she said. "It was long overdue. It gives the girls the responsibility of living their lives as they choose, a responsibility which as young adults they deserve."

A general comment was that the new system is "more realistic". Mrs. Ariel, housemother for Coolidge Lower, said, "The girls were getting around the old curfew anyway. There was no feasible way for us to enforce it."

No significant change in the girls' habits was noted. Mrs. Robison, housemother at Dickinson, said, "I haven't noticed any difference in the girls' behavior. Those who did observe the curfew have imposed their own personal curfew."

At Dwight House, there has been concern for individual responsibility throughout the year. Mrs. Wilkinson, head of residence, has been interested in individual problems and prefers personal counseling to the curfew system. She said, "Now the girls can live their lives the way they want without fear of rules. Their behavior is no different."

"The arguments which applied to previous students are invalid here," she said. "These girls are more experienced. They are more ready to accept responsibility for their actions."

The convenience of the no curfew system was also noted. Mrs. Burke, housemother at Patterson, said, "The girls don't have to worry about rushing back to make the curfew. More girls come in between 1 and 2 a.m. now but they don't seem to be coming in much later."

Nevertheless, most of the housemothers are still in favor of the first semester curfew.

Education for Living: A Program for the '70's

PREFACE

Our discussions of educational principles have most often arisen in duscussions of concrete proposeals, and we have often found that we could easily agree on the same proposal from rival philosophical positions that themselves might have been the occasion for long and inconclusive debate. This approach has meant that on most problems we have started from the given. . .

the Muscatine Committee

The contemporary university - or at least those that are viewed as having "made it" - now seems to be everybody's servant and nobody's master - master least of all of its own house. Kerr's notion of isolated units tied together only by common plumbing was getting at something of this sort, it seems. By making itself - its faculty and facilities - available to nearly every bidder, public or private, by permitting the explicit specification of services to be performed, goals to be reached, or answers to be found, the university has put itself into the glorified service station trade.

Thorough and well-documented catalogues of the various sins of commission and omission already exist - they don't need to be repeated here. Yes, we know the CIA, IDA, DoD, and Dow Chemical are on campus buying bodies and contract research - what else is new. We know too what a minority of some indeterminate size feels about this; but how do we here in the heart of the picturesque Pioneer Valley feel about it? Is all of it A Good Thing? Is some of it? Is any of it Good? Until our very own personal answers are forthcoming, this University cannot but continue to drift, tossed by the vicissitudes of NSF grants and Goodyear contracts.

If it is true, as we're told, that "education for living is the main job on any campus," how do we go about this matter of education for living? I hope and intend that an outline answer will become a little clearer in the pages which follow in this report. I offer the following two passages for your consideration.

The proper course of action is clear. The college and university community must retain paramount authority for the education it provides and for the research it undertakes. The needs of the industrial system must always be secondary to the cultivation of general understanding and perception. Similarly, support for research and scholarship must be inaccordance with some natural distribution of human curiosity and competence. It will be urged that this is a counsel of perfection. It is, and it suggests how readily we assume that education and research must be subordinate if it is realized that the educator is a fugure of power in this context. He is the source of the factor of production on which industrial success depends; he must realize this and exert his power, not on behalf of the industrial system but on behalf of the entire human personality. /1/

Now the first thing, it seems to me, that we have to do in universities is to stop being the hand-maidens of the status quo. There are three traditional fuctions that universities perform that are quite acceptable to alumni and the state legislature; (1) the transmission of the best of what has been thought and said, (2) professional training - doctors, lawyers, dentist, ministers, etc., (3) basic research - physics, biology, chemistry, etc. But there is a fourth role which universities at their best have always performed, that is to remember that SOCIAL CRITICISM is an ideal of intellect that represents education at its very best. It is the ideal of Socrates, who said to his friends, 'I love my city, but I will not stop teaching that which I believe is true. You may kill, me, but I will obey God rather than you.' He put the question to them rather squarely: 'To what sort of treatment do you urge me? Is it to combat the Athenians until they become virtuous, or is it to be their servant and cater to their every pleasure?' You see, from Socrates on, rigorous, vigorous social criticism has been an ideal of intellect of universities at their very best... The purpose of the University of Virginia (Jefferson) said - listen to this, sounds like SDS - the purpose of the University of Virginia was to criticize those forces of church and state which, 'fear every change as endangering the comforts they now hold.' The role of the university, he said, 'was to unmask their usurpation of monopolies and honors, wealth and power.' . . .Now it seems to be that what Jefferson had in mind for his time is a very good idea to have in mind for our time. If universities and students, university students and professors, are not be be hopelessly entrenched in social irrelevance - are to make some kind of contribution to what let's call a decent society - forget the great society, let's just go for a decent society - then it seems to me that it is our job not to be once again hand-maidens of the status quo, but rather like Socratic gadflies engaged in a lover's quarrel. /2/

These lead, it seems to me, to a two-pronged statement: the first prong will have to do with the direction of the university itself, as both a product and a servant of the American 20th century; and the closely-related second will have to do with the people on the insude of the university. In other portions of the work cited, Galbraith makes quite clear how reduced is personal freedom in our society today. The varieties of constraint are numerous and icsidious - the remedy seems to lie in educational institutions and programs which strive explicitly and overtly to maximise indivnual freedom and responsiblity, to recognise completely individual differences and temperaments, and to cultivate an air of diversity, rather than of production-line made-to-mold mindless bureau - or technocrats - the mindless automata of the gigantic "great society."

In any program of substantial university reform, the consta.nts of institutional inertia are leable to be appreciable - after all, a great many forces of the status quo are now well-served by the typical later 20th century American university. The subservience to the external, of which both Galbraith and Coffin speak, is, by and large, what has made the university what it is today. These factors would not be well-served by a major turn-about in institutional philosophy. But there is another way to achieve our end - and hat is by concentrating primarily on the individual.

If we can change the individual education that the typical student receives, and allow a whole new order of education (rather than training) for the UNtypical student; and if we can then build in and establish the means and machinery for the continuance and furtherance of this change, then I think we will have done more, for more people, over a slightly longer-run course, than possible in nearly any other way.

This is an acknowledged era of large organizations and group decisions. One American corporation does an annual business larger than the GNP of all but 13 countries of the world. This large organisation achieved its size and stature through techniques of pooled knowledge and group decision-making. We do not propose to tackle organisations of this size; but what we can, and must, do is to reach the individuals who will comprise such organisations. The world is still one of groups of individuals; and if the quality of life, consciousness, and education has been such that people can emerge to the working world with a new order of awareness of, and concern for, the situations which they will face, then I believe the over-all goal of the improvement of life and society will be achieved.

If we can accept as a basic principle one which is to the effect that man for himself, rather than for some external master, is a good and legitimate end for education, then I think we will be well on the way to the truest reform of the University. This is the one basic principle which we set ourselves in the pages to follow. Throughout the bewildering maze of claims and counter-claims which faced us in the process of reworking the College curriculum, our central principle has been that of facilitating, as best we could, the process of individualised education. This has seemed to us to be the paramount issue. The direction we take may appear at times to be peculiar - personal freedom is a n infinitely-faceted jewel. To grant the freedom to one student to construct and pursue the most free-ranging interdisciplinary education imaginable requires granting the freedom to another student to construct a narrowly vocational and specialised education. What some of us might construct for ourselves under greatly broadened personal educational freedom has got to allow the prospective engineer or executive to suit himself too. Thus the provisions in these suggested revisions which would, if exercised, develop more parochial departmental programs than at present. It is our firm conviction, however, that the bracing effects of the tonic we here propose will be sufficently strong as to color every academic endeavor with a new regard for the personality and sovereighnty of the individual student.

CHARACTERISTICS OF UNIVERSITY FRESHMEN
FALL 1966, 1967 and 1968

There are 25 tables in the following pages. Each table presents data, where it is available, for the years 1966, 1967 and 1968. National norms for fall 1968 are also included.

These data were gathered as part of a program of longitudinal research in higher education by the Office of Research, American Council on Education. The University at Amherst cooperates in this program, along with most of the nation's state universities.

The Guidance and Counseling Center collects these data from incoming freshmen during the summer orientation period prior to fall enrollment. These data compare our freshmen with entering freshmen at other state universities and are tabulated and presented in these tables so that we may improve our understanding of the student body.

Education for Living: A Program for the '70's

II.
THE STUDENT BODY

The recommendations of this report are not based upon any substantial Ideal of education. They are, instead, expressly "client-centered." This fact is responsible for giving them a particular color which should already have become apparent from the Preface. It will become more apparent throughout the following sections of this report.

There has long been, and to an appreciable extent there still is, a lack of data on our undergraduate student body; what there is, however, has been studied in making the evaluation and appraisal of our student body which comprises this chapter. In the notes which follow, we are heavily indebted to the Office of Budgeting and Institutional Studies for making available for our use the compilations of American Council on Education freshmen survey data from the fall of 1966-1968. The tables of data from which this analysis is drawn are attached herewith as Appendix A4 - numbers in parentheses below refer to specific tables in this appendix.

In general, we are a strongly vocational and pre-professional campus (defining 'professional' in a wider sense than the traditional law, medicine, business, and so forth). Eight of the nine units of the (undergraduate) University are completely vocational or pre-professional; and the ninth (CAS) is largely so. Roughly half of the undergraduate enrollment is in this ninth unit - the subject of our investigations here. Professionalisation of education is the going trend in American education today, particularly at public institutions, and very particularly at the University of Massachusetts. This is an important fact for curriculum planners - one of which it would be dangerous for them to lose sight. The fact has serious implications for the types of programs that are offered, or are to be offered, in every unit of the University, including the College. The general trend and composition of the University seems clear - we are not, never have been, and never can be, a small private liberal arts college. The implications of this, in terms of academic pressures on the various curricula, are clear for all who care to investigate.

As for our student body (University-wide): students here are slightly younger than the state universities' average (1), although this is becoming less pronounced. We are under-represented in A and A-plus students, and in C and D students; while over-represented in B-range students (2). We are under-represented in intellectual-aesthetic students; while over-represented in writers and athletes (3). Our students tend to come more from "fairly good" high schools, less from "very good" high schools (4). High school ranks below "fairly high" are also slightly over-represented. We have more than our share of "top 10%" students, but less than our share from all other groups - the highest or the lowest (5).

In terms of degrees planned, we are under-represented in those planning no degree, 2.3%, under-represented in students planning only a bachelor's degree, 30.5%; but over-represented in students planning some post-bachelor's degree, 66.8% (6). This last figure will recur, in different forms, in much of our subsequent analysis.

In terms of intended major fields of study, our freshmen for the past three years have over-represented agriculture, biological science, education, English, the social sciences, the humanities (except fine arts), and mathematics. There is marked under-representation in business, engineering, the non-M.D. health professions, and fine arts. Projected career occupations mirror these trends above: primary and secondary education are appreciably over-represented, college teaching is over-represented slightly. Careers as artist, in business, engineering, and the non-M.D. health professions are under-represented (7, 8).

Finally, some indication of reasons for attending this university: athletic programs, extracurricular activities, social life, and the chance to live away from home were cited in numbers well above the national norm as reasons for attending the University.

Subject to the qualifications of the preceding paragraphs (which were not phrased in quantitative terms - for exact percentage values see the appended tables), an overall approximate impression of our students is that they are generally typical of those enrolled in other state universities. This general uniformity extends to such factors as age, secondary school achievements, socio-economic background, majors in college, objectives for themselves, and so forth. There are, however, some differences which may suggest ways in which the University might serve their somewhat distinctive needs. There is some evidence, from their responses, that they are more liberally-oriented than the state university norms. For example, table 23 shows that they are less inclined to agree with statements about speaker bans, censoring of publications, or strict control of student protestors. They feel that the institution is "liberal" (24). There is also, however, the social motivation for attending this institution (11, 24) - this factor has increased over the past few years.

There are, perhaps, two dichotomies that are suggested by these data. First, we may be able to speak of a liberal - intellectual / social-pragmatic dichotomy among our students; and there may also be a backgrounds / aspirations dichotomy: students here are slightly more inclined to have come from blue collar families (18, 19), and to have a greater concern about their ability to finance their education (21). On the other hand, when asked to indicate their highest degree planned (6), substantially more indicated an intention to go on to at least one advanced degree.

We have attempted to weigh this rough profile of our student body, then, in our deliberations on curriculum changes for the College. These data were gathered on the whole freshman class, and the College accounts for only about half of the University undergraduate enrollment; but lacking any clear method for resolving the data into those of College students and all other non-College students, we have had to assume an operational homogeneity in the student body. In the chapter below on requirements, and in that on departmental programs, we have endeavored to build-in sufficent flexibility to meet the needs and aspirations of both the liberal-intellectual students and the social-pragmatic students. Each of these major classes seems to us to require something different from his college education; and we have, in numerous places, called for greater differentiation in departmental programs than presently exists. We feel that this differentiation is wholly justified on the basis of the population we are aiming to serve. The provisions of extra-departmental programs (and the Board of Educational Development) are aimed particularly at those students whose aspiration are not strictly vocational; and the provisions for increased amounts of pre-professional material in departmental programs are aimed at those students whose aspirations are more vocational and pre-professional. Each group has a legitimate claim to service by the educational process - we hope that this service can be designed for maximum utility and applicability to all students.

Table 22 identifies a steady decline, over the past three years, in almost every category, in what students have felt to be essential or very important to their lives. This can legitimately be read, it seems, as a charge to provide greater opportunities among undergraduate offerings for the exploration of alternatives that might be available in their lives. This would mean, for example, that it is less realistic for students to select a major early in their college careers. The College has recently changed its regulation in this regard - students no longer need declare a major immediately upon entrance - this step can, in this light, be seen as eminently reasonable, and as one the provisions of which should perhaps be further urged upon entering students. Nothing in our recommendations should be construed as implying or necessitating an early declaration of major.

Further in the line of these remarks, the data on the decline of important factors in students' lives might suggest the need for enhanced interdepartmental opportunities to acquaint more students with greater amounts and varieties of the material to be found in University programs and departments. We have been cognisant of this, and have spelled out, in some detail, the provisions we would like to see developed within the College (see, for example, the B,E,D,).

In sum, our student body is generally like that of the majority of the nation's state universities. Our own particular student body seems, on the basis of the available survery data, to be one which would be well-served by a judicious blend of professional departmental programs and freer more custom - tailored liberal programs. Our students are a generally graduate-oriented lot; and the implications of this for certain College practices - grading, for example - are spelled out in what we believe is serviceable detail in subsequent chapters.

III.
NEW COURSES

One quite clear and apparently resolved matter to emerge from two full days of discussion, involving 5-1/2 hours of talk with three faculty members, is the proposal for the creation of a new sort of course in most departments of the College or Arts and Sciences. These new courses - problem centered - would be devised to serve, largely , in lieu of present introductory and/or survey courses in those departments which are most burdened by having to make such offerings.

The proposal for these courses arises from a suggestion made by Prof. Everett Emerson (English) in a memorandum to Vice-Dean John Maki (CAS), but also presented to the Committee's discussions. Avoiding the history of the emergence and finalisation of the idea, the proposal in its present form calls for as many departments as possible to create 1-semester 3-credit courses within their own area - courses designed to be taught by a particular faculty member, within his own specialty, considering problems of the GENERAL area IN TERMS OF his particular area.

Criticism of the usual variety of survey course is widespread and wholly justified, as best we are able to determine. The chronicle of complaints surrounding such surveys as History 100-101 - "century-a-week" history, Psychology 101, Sociology 101, and so forth is so extensive as to absolutely force and require a reappraisal of these courses and others of their kind. From both the faculty and student point of view, the major trouble seems to be the caliber of teaching in these courses together with the sheer magnitude of the mass of raw undigested material to be mastered. Both these faults seem amenable to correction: the quality of teaching could be improved by giving any individual teacher a course wholly within his own control (as these departmental surveys are not); and the mass of material could be alleviated by utilising a more particular and coherent problem (or small cluster of problems) as the subject matter, through which to exemplify some general principles of the broad area of the subject problem.

The attempt to educate the non-specialist in matters of detail, particularly in the sciences, is foredoomed to failure in this later 20th century. Even specialists have great difficulty with their own narrow areas. But the attempt to educate students who can go out as intelligent graduates, prepared to face real problems and make real decisions is, fortunately, not yet so foredoomed. In this matter of developing a new variety of problem-centered courses, largely to serve for satisfying revised distribution requirements, the following passage from a letter to the Committee from a University professor in a biological science illustrates the point here:

> My point would simply be that man cannot ignore that his environment is molded by the results of scientific endeavor and many of his social and political actions are based upon events forced upon him by science (no value judgement here). He must make daily decisions on diets (food additives, cholesterols, etc.), medicines, (antibiotics vs. fighting the cold, x-rays), birth control (not whether yes or not, but which kind). At the national level an informed electorate is needed for judgements on nuclear weapons, pollution control, weather manipulation, etc. I do not think we would have today a ban on atmospheric nuclear testing if there had not been a tremendous effort on the part of the scientific community to educate the popuiace on radio-active fallout. Such one-shot manipulations are wasteful, however, and clearly are risky from the point of view of putting the scientist in the "elite" position vis a vis the layman. We cannot, in a democracy, rely on a technical elite to make our value judgements for us. We have been doing that with medicine and clearly the results are not enlightened.
> So we must have some exposure to science. Since we can't predict the areas of need, THESE COURSES MUST PREPARE FOR A GENERAL RECEPTIVITY TO NEW THOUGHT AND FINDINGS, THEY SHOULD INCULCATE A SENSE OF INQUIRY AND INDICATE THE AVAILABILITY OF INFORMATION. ...
> Finally some generalities. In discussions of relevance of courses to the events of today, one must not eliminate the historical component on one hand nor ignore the risk of lack of preparedness for tomorrow. By that I mean that in tailoring our courses for some current events, we overspecialize to the point where any new experience that is encountered leaves us helpless. ONLY BY PAINTING IN BROAD PRINCIPLES, ILLUSTRATED BY SPECIFICS, CAN WE HOPE TO SYNTHESIZE NEW SITUATIONS. (Emphasis added - RWS)

This, then is an indication of the sort of direction that we think we have to take with a new order of distribution courses. Our own experience, and the opinions of others, leads us to believe that nearly the same thing can be done with the social sciences and the humanities. In this regard, one should study the proposal from Prof. Everett H. Emerson to Vice-Dean Maki.

These new problem-centered courses would be expressly intended as survey-familiarity units, in a better sense of the term 'survey' than has been traditional here. These courses would, by design, not be introductory courses, in the sense that introductory courses are now intended as pre-major, or "recruiting," efforts. These courses would not lay their primary stress upon the direct presentation of basic concepts, terms, or facts - such an approach being better left to an avowedly pre-major course (which, not being strained by having to cater to non prospective majors, could be more properly and rigorously pre-major). These courses COULD be cooperatively developed and taught, involving material from more than one area. There are, however, other strong considerations which suggest that these courses be the "property" of a single professor.

Nearly every professor has his particular side of the broader discipline that interests him, and (presumably, therefore) draws his best efforts from him, in both its development and presentation. Further, it is our strong feeling, bolstered through conversations with faculty and administrators, that any teacher worth even most of his salt can make his subject specialty interesting to the uninitiated. A manageable subject matter, combined with high enthusiasm on the part of the professor, would be a combination strongly assuring better teaching than presently characterises most introductory and survey courses. The availability of a number of such courses, from each department of the College, and on a schedule changing from year to year, would seem to us to be a fine option in the place of the present deadly survey courses. We can think of little else that would, by itself, do quite so much to advance the cause of interesting, exciting, and well-taught courses as this proposal for a species of 1-semester problem-centered courses.

IV.
ADVISING

One very important aspect of meaningful curriculum reform has been overlooked so far in our discussions (and on the campus in general). It seems to us that far too little attention is paid to what could, potentially, be a major across-the-board improvement in the quality of the educational experience - this is faculty advising of undergraduates. All the increases in flexibility that we might advocate, and all the provisions for custom-made programs, will be to no avail if the quality of faculty guidance and advice to students is not improved and taken far more seriously.

The present non-system of assigning departmental advisors seems absolutely slipshod in view of the importance of the business. For the most part, the assignment of departmental advisors is left as a clerical exercise to secretaries, to fill in their spare time when available. It is a common sight to see lists of advisees posted in corridors, and to see that the only breakdown of students has been a strictly alphabetical one, names A to G assigned to Prof. So-and-so. At present we are aware of no disciplined effort to match students to advisors, or to select among advisors on the basis of quality of job done, etc.

Many among our faculty show far more of a love and talent for advising than some others; but yet, there seems to be no effort at all to reward, or even select, those men who are most effective in this role from those others who could care less about it. Factors such as these are among the roots of the causes for the common statement that somebody only sees his advisor for 10 minutes per year, 5 minutes each Counseling Day. It is a new, but perfectly legitimate, suggestion that those faculty who show an aptitude and enjoyment with this crucial task be given released time to pursue it - perfectly valid academic enterprise that it is. Even moreso than for heavy service on committees of one sort or another, good advising deserves to be encouraged and rewarded far more heavily than at present.

It is very common practice for departments to be reluctant to allow students to change advisor part way through their career. At present, this practice makes good sense to the departments - since the assignment of an advisor is a casual and random business, one man should be as good as another. But since it is quite clear that one man isn't as good an advisor as another - and if this were recognised by departments - changing advisor should be made more possible than at present. If a student feels that he and his advisor are on wholly different wavelengths, of course he's going to want to change. But if a student can build any feeling for and with his advisor, it seems unlikely that he'll want to change. A more conscious and rational selection (or assignment) of advisors would foster this feeling, with consequent benefits for the individual student.

The proposals which we advance later in this report for a new order of custom-made academic programs will depend heavily upon the availability of good academic advising. Any student wishing to embark on the personal approach to education needs regular, sympathetic, and INFORMED guidance.

There is one step that could be taken in this direction regardless of any other action - the publication of what has come to be called a "descriptive catalogue." Each semester, before Counseling Day, detailed descriptions of all courses scheduled for the following semester should be published, with full and accurate information as to the number of sections, the names of the professors associated with each section, its tentative time and meeting place /3/ - with sufficent information to allow each student (and each advisor) to make a proper evaluation of the upcoming educational situation, for however it might be used to a student's benefit. The sociology department has set the pioneering example in this direction, publishing such a guide for the fall semester, 1968.

We can envision this document as a possible joint product of the Provost's Office and the Student Senate, with some funding and staff supplied by each. The Provost's sponsorship would provide both the breadth of coverage and institutional prestige necessary to make the document of substantial use, while the use of Student Senate funds (and some student personnel) would permit modest steps to be taken in the direction of independent assessment of courses. This publication need wait for no other action, and might well speed the development of many of the opportunities we have urged. We recommend that the College be the place for the immediate pilot operation, to commence as soon as possible, with a high priority from the Dean's office.

It seems to be present practice to place the heaviest advising load onto the newest and youngest members of any department - often first-year men completely new to the University. This is unfortunate. It seems that this practice should be pretty much reversed - the newest faculty seem least competent to advise students about the particular intricacies of academic life here at this University. We propose that new men not be permitted to do advising for at LEAST their first full year here, to enable them to begin to get at least a rudimentary feel for life and programs here. Again, it is all too common for an advisor to simply not know that such-and-such a course is available two departments down the line. Superficial reliance on the catalogue is not the answer to this. We propose that new faculty be denied advising duties for one year, during which time students would come to know them through course contact; and the new man would come to know the University in at least a basic operational sense.

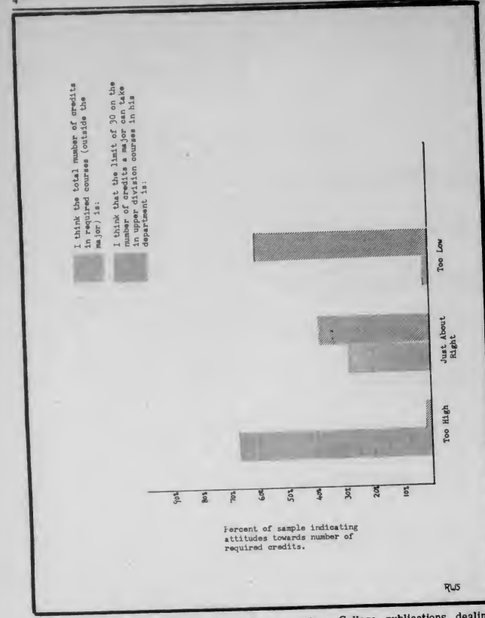
The experience of the CASIAC office in doing wide-ranging advising work should have more to say to the College as a whole than it seems to have had to date. In many regards, CASIAC has the same basic informational material to work with as the typical departmental adviser; but the greater emphasis on advising in CASIAC seems to produce better results per unit time spent advising. It might be worthwhile to consider having one or two men from each department spend a training period in the CASIAC office, to learn many more of the ropes than they seem to know at present. The Counseling Center could undoubtedly have more to do with advising than at present - if not in actual advising, the Center could at least make some of its psychological literature and considerations more known and/or available to the College faculty than at present.

Student-Student Advising

The University Counseling Center has, for the past two summers, operated an orientation program for incoming freshmen in which, among other things, a great deal of the freshman academic advising was handled by specially-trained upperclass students (largely, but not wholly, from the College). After the incoming students were tested by the Counseling Center, test scores, and other background on the freshman, were given to the upperclass advisor for his use, in conference with the student, planning the student's first semester course work. All of the evaluations made of this operation have been in agreement as to the effectiveness of the student advisors. The faculty, Counseling Center staff, and freshmen have praised the efforts and sympathy of those upperclass student advisors taking part in here. The experience of these two summers bears study by the College faculty as a whole, for what it might have to say to the matter of school-year advising.

The efforts of the CASIAC office notwithstanding, we suggest that serious thought be given, by both the Dean's office and departmental chief advisors, to the idea of employing selected trained upperclass students for certain advising situations within the departmental context. The CASIAC office could well employ student advisors, particularly to deal with freshmen who are undecided as to major. The perspectives which fellow students can bring to bear on matters of the academic program could be of great value, supplementing the faculty advice and counsel in CASIAC. Within departments particularly, again in dealing with freshmen and sophomores, student advice could balance and complement that of regular faculty advisors. There would be some side benefits to the department in freed faculty time; but the most significant benefits could well be to those students enabled, through the utilisation of student advisors, to gain additional help with matters of course and program selection. We strongly recommend that all departments give immediate thought to the serious question of student advising for their beginning majors.

Computer-Assisted Academic Advising



A later chapter of this report will propose some substantial changes in the grading policy and practices of the College (and the University), and will also propose that cumulative averages no longer be computed or used for any internal or external purpose. Both to help alleviate one potential problem caused by the lack of a cumulative average for each student, and to strengthen the advising system generally, we introduce here the idea of a computer-assisted academic advising system. The idea for this innovation is taken from an article in the recent counseling literature,/4/ and seems to warrant serious consideration here on our campus.

One potential use for the cumulative average - but a use which is not at all developed here - is to identify systematically students in some academic difficulty, but difficulty not yet serious enough to cause academic dismissal. Flunk-outs are presently determined by a mechanical computer procedure; but a nearly identical procedure could easily be used to spot and identify students whose records are such that, given continued performance at their current level, they might well be failing out one or two semesters in the future. It seems clear to us that, if concerned, knowledgeable, and sympathetic advising could be brought to these students in advance of their failure, many valuable students could be saved from an unfortunate episode. The prompt application of good advice, based upon an accurate and up-to-date knowledge of a student's record and present course load, could be of considerable benefit to many students here presently given the often unsatisfactory level of typical faculty contact and advising. The reader is referred to the complete journal article for a detailed description of the computer-assisted advising operation developed - it will suffice at this point to sketch merely an outline of the operation (which would require the complete cooperation of the Whitmore data processing center to be successful).

After the beginning of each semester, but before the end of any free add-drop period there might be, the computer would search all present semester registrations for students with records containing some specified number of F grades. (Since an average would not be computed, the search cut-off level would have to be specified in terms of a set number of F's - the number might be different for students of different classes.) The students so identified would be listed on an output page, together with their course registrations for the current semester (even though this item is undergoing constant change during the initial add-drop period), and together with a summary of their grades for either one, or all, prior semester(s). This output list would be forwarded immediately to a staff of specially-trained counselor-advisors, who in turn contact each student and specifically invite him in for a discussion of his present work load, past performance, and future prospects. This could be done within the initial add-drop period; or in some extreme cases, the appropriate deans could be empowered to grant one or two additional days for course changes they expressly recommend.

The advantages to the student so identified and counseled seem appreciable. The quality of the student's work could be expected to increase, due to the most careful advising he had received. The cost - the human cost - to students and faculty in lost students, whether through flunk-outs or despairing withdrawals, would be appreciably lessened, for the good of all concerned. Given the admitted fact that our charge is to EDUCATE students, and not merely to process them in and shuffle them out if they fail, every device that can be employed to further the quality (and continuity) of a student's education seems worthy of employment.

These are only outline notes on the question of advising - now that the matter has been raised, it must begin to receive far more attention than it has to date. Solid, informed, concerned, and sympathetic academic guidance and advising can and must be made an essential key to any improved and more personalised educational program. We want and need better advising, as a countering antidote to the otherwise all too clear and present dangers of depersonalised mass education.

V. REQUIREMENTS

The usual and most immediate response of those considering curriculum revision is to attack the requirement structure. It is a sad truth that curriculum revision is seen largely in terms of superficial requirement-juggling, by many student s at any rate. This matter (of requirements) has, to be sure, received a great deal of attention in this Committee; but requirements have not been the sum of our concern.

As a first order of reactions, the Committee was at something of a loss to determine precisely what requirements actually or allegedly do. There are statements in various College publications dealing with education and the philosophy thereof, and these statements are apparently assumed to explain why there are requirements of the sort that we presently find. As hard-based statement s of actuality, however, these glossy catalogue statements are usually vague and imprecise.

There are some identifiable academico-political ends served by requirements - disciplinary prestige, departmental staffing, academic market manipulation, the simplification of advising, the elimination of anxiety-producing educational freedom, and the reduction of pressures toward innovation - all seem to be quite well served by present requirement-systems, both at this institution and others of its kind. These, however, are not the ends for which the Committee was searching in its appraisal of requirements. As undergraduates, we would take strong issue with these goals, and the ramifications thereof which distort undergraduate EDUCATION.

Implicit in the catalogue statements above is the intended feeling that there is something called a liberal education, a liberally-educated person, or something of this sort. But this is not operationally satisfactory. Various educators are known to explain that one of the advantages of experimenting in educational innovation is that nothing ever seems to seriously disturb or destroy the quality of the output. No matter what is done to an educational program, within broad limits, students seem generally to turn out educated and none the worse for the experience. This being so, then, and since many of these experiments have involved tinkering with those things called requirements, whatever it is that they are getting at must be quite broad and general - there is probably nothing too sacred about any requirements in particular. The Cook Committee determined this just a while back. But yet, ther e does seem to be something partially sacred about requirements for this University, since few here seem willing to consider (seriously) a program in which there are no requirements at all. So requirements must be doing something right; but just what this is (beyond those ends of the preceding paragraph) remains somewhat shrouded in uncertainty. For better or worse, nearly every member of the Committee could justify requiring every student to do something or other, even though nobody could justify requiring every student to do just exactly as every other student. The Cook Committee too disagreed with the idea of a single universally-required course or series of courses.

In its consideration of requirements, this Committee has adopted, as a procedural and philosophical methodology, the TABULA RASA approach - we have felt it to be our proper approach to justify the introduction and inclusion of each element of the requirement-system which we will propose. We have not thought it proper to attempt to unjustify the present requirements.

Imprecise and unsatisfactory as it may well be, this Committee could do no better at justifying a new set of requirements than to say that, consistent with the maximisation of student freedom and personal responsibility, some slight guarantees seem necessary to assure at least a certain minimum exposure to some material beyond the bounds of any given student's practical personal interest. The pitfalls of overspecialisation (or over-generalisation) seem real and serious enough to us as to warrant requiring a certain minimum of prescribed study and exposure.

Now, as we found earlier, there is no magic or special formula to effect such given ends. In fact, it developed that nearly any specification of requirements, however open and general, would be sufficient to meet the minimum guaranteed exposure which we intend. Flexible as we felt we should be, we could not bring ourselves to require of any student that he take this or that, in such and such an amount, from currently-existing lower-level departmental offerings. Earlier in this report we considered the problems associated with the present varieties of survey and introductory courses - these problems are sufficiently serious as to warrant the creation of new courses to meet the minimum distribution requirements we can agree to specify. We will turn to these distribution requirements following the consideration of basic English proficiency below.

English (Rhetoric)

The only material that we could justify requiring of all students was an ability to speak and write effective and correct English. Above all else, this seemed to loom as an abolutely inescapable essential. Our present College efforts in this regard center around two semesters of English composition courses - two of 2-credits each. Formerly we required a particular specified Speech course too, but this requirement has now been broadened to one of four specified courses. In this form this requirement does not seem to meet the demands of clear, correct, and lucid English.

There have been a variety of schemes advanced for improving the teaching of composition; the first involves simply an upgrading of the present freshman English staff, with oral English the responsibility of the speech department; a second scheme involves "farming out" the present English staff to assist the several departments of the University, as English is made the mor

the University, as English is made the more particular responsibility of every single professor - oral English remaining with speech; a third scheme suggests developing a joint written-oral approach to basic literacy, under the direction of a joint group from the English and speech departments. Examining these three proposals, the first did not hold the potential for substantial improvement, nor display the fresh thinking, which we felt the present times required; the second was assured of considerable opposition from those faculty who feel that their time is already taxed with the substantive content of their courses alone. This left the third proposal - a joint approach to basic literacy skills - as the only one still under consideration. If developed properly, such an approach seemed to us to hold the necessary potential for substantial improvement in basic literacy; further, the College had just received the report of the Dean's ad-hoc Rhetoric Committee, which report was communicated to us by the Vice-Dean. Reviewing the proposals made by the Rhetoric Committee, we feel that their proposals for new courses in a new organizational framework hold the key to the direction that must be taken to meet the demands of present communications. The rhetoric proposal is summarized below; we strongly support its adoption.

SUMMARY

The present curriculum requires for most students four hours of Freshman English and two hours of Speech. The proposal here is to reorganize this requirement into a series of three-hour courses of which the student is to take two. These courses, under the general rubric of Rhetoric, are devoted in various ways to training in reading, writing, and speaking. The student may complete the requirement at any point he wishes during his undergraduate career, but he should choose his first option (Rhetoric 1 or Rhetoric 2) DURING HIS FIRST SEMESTER ON TH PUS.

Briefly put (as for catalog descriptions), the options presently proposed are as follows:

First semester (choose one):

Rhetoric 1. Language in Use. Influences on linguistic choice. Expressive and communicative behavior: consideration of contexts and purposes, the writer and speaker, the audience, subject matters, and language and meaning. Readings, discussions, and papers.

Rhetoric 2. Principles of Spoken Communication. A similar study of language in use, but with emphasis on the spoken language. Several oral presentations, short papers, and discussions.

Second semester (choose one):

Rhetoric 3. Close Reading of Literature. Intensive reading of poems, fiction, and plays, mostly modern, with frequent written exercises.

Rhetoric 4. Criticism and the Performing Arts. A study of critical approaches to film, theatre, concert, television, etc. Reading in critical literature of the performing arts, and frequent written papers.

Rhetoric 5. The Media. A close study of three or four works that have been presented in several media (e.g. THE CAINE MUTINY). Written papers and discussion.

Rhetoric 6. Language of an Academic Discipline. This course to be offered by any department wishing to participate. It is addressed to the rhetorical problems of a particular discipline - biology, history, fine arts. Frequent written papers on questions relating to the subject matter and language of the discipline.

Foreign Language

We turn now to what we strongly suspect will be the most hotly-debated point of our collected recommendations to the College of Arts and Sciences, the foreign language requirement. On this point, as with English, the College has just received the results of a study and report commissioned by the Dean. The report of the Committee on Foreign Language Instruction is described as a "fresh look at the concept of a foreign language requirement and at the position accorded foreign language study in the curriculum . . .," but we were disappointed to find that essentially the same requirement as at present was recommended for continuation. Additional "tracks" of language courses were proposed; but otherwise the traditional and familiar arguments as to the necessity of a foreign language requirement were brought forth for one more go-around. The language committee's basic premise - an assertion of the fundamental importance of the language arts in any contemporary education - seems acceptable; but the conclusion that they draw - that educational institutions have a special responsibility to introduce all students to at least one mode of communication (meaning a foreign language) other than their mother tongue - seems somewhat amiss. The committee mentions quickly in passing, but rejects, modes of communication such as the visual arts, conceptual mathematics, formal logic, and computer languages.

We feel that the report of the Committee on Foreign Language Instruction is seriously affected by its apparently complete reliance on tired justifications - justifications which were, in their best days, somewhat questionable, and which are now positively outside the mainstream of contemporary multiversity education.

The principal thrust of the committee's justification of a foreign language requirement is that of foreign languages as essentially liberating and humanistic educational experiences. They felt strongly that the abolition of such a requirement would be detrimental to the very existence of the College as an institution of liberal education, and would lead the way to excessively departmentalized pre-professional specialization. In considering the idea of a combined language-rhetoric requirement, the committee felt that this would lead students to appreciate more fully the linguistic basis of the humanities. Such arguments as these seem to reflect a serious lack of understanding of where the university college of the 1970s is heading and what it is doing as it heads there. These arguments place heavy reliance of the notion of some intrinsic humanistic philosophical good to certain subject materials - which alleged intrinsic good commends them to a permanent place in our curriculum. We reject this approach.

In neither our previous development of the rhetoric requirement, nor our subsequent development of distribution requirements, do we adopt the approach of intrinsic philosophic or educational good. Our development of requirements is based strictly upo n a programmatic utility - that which can be justified for its demonstrable utility will be included; that which cannot be so justified will be excluded. The Committee's equating of the language requirement with the literature requirement, the history/philosophy requirement, and the social and natural science requirement is faulty for the fact that these requirements are also not justifiable, PER SE, and for the reasons which have traditionally been advanced in their favor.

The committee alleges that, in a modern world characterized by diversity, technological complexity, and disappearing geographical barriers, effective and meaningful communication across language barriers is coming to be one of mankind's greatest problems. This may be true; but as we interpret the situation, the perpetuation, let alone the enhancement, of linguistic differences does not seem to be the way to respond to the situation. If those contemporary analysts are correct in asserting that mankind is undergoing a great homogenising process, the perpetuation of discrete nationalistic modes of communication does not seem to be the answer to which we aspire. The blatant assertion that education and monolingualism are incompatible seems absurd and indefensible.

Our method of curriculum development is to justify the inclusion of given material, rather than to unjustify present material; in this vein, we have been unable to establish any sort of grand philosophic argument in favor of a universal College-wide language requirement. The lines of argument to this end which we have seen do not seem adequate or appropriate to the task of universally-justifying a foreign language requirement.

The preceding is not intended to say, however, that we find no place for the study of foreign language in a college curriculum. We do. We find a place, however, for very different reasons than the committee would have us use. We feel strongly that, in those areas where language may be introduced and justified on strictly educational utilitarian grounds, there is the place for a foreign language program tailored to the given end. The committee did give some thought to this matter. We noted earlier that essentially their only contribution to the current discussion of foreign language in the College curriculum was through the suggestion of multiple "tracks" for the satisfaction of a language requirement. These several "tracks" that they propose would appear to have quite some utility for those departments which will require foreign language of their students; and we will return to these "tracks" in the next chapter ("Departmental Programs") of this report.

Distribution Requirements

The opening of this chapter developed our view that this question of just what is being done by so-called "distribution requirements" is one largely devoid of any substantial answer. It seemed to us that whatever they were doing could apparently be done just as well in any of nearly innumerable other ways. In fact, nearly any specification of distribution requirements, however open and general, seems sufficient to meet the minimum guarantees of some exposure to at least aspects of material beyond the bounds of ones principal interest. Taking this more utilitarian approach again, then, rather than one predicated upon grander assumptions of intrinsic worth, we propose recommending distribution requirements not exceeing 12 credits - four 3-credit courses.

Assuming the (only somewhat arbitrary) breakdown of College departments into principal areas of this table, we propose that students be required to take 6 credits in each of the two major areas outside of that major area in which his major (department) lies. For example, a declared natural science major would be required to elect 6 credits - two 3-credit courses - from each of the areas of humanities and social science. We make no requirement that these courses be in either the same or different departments within that larger area. Coupled with the greater variety of courses which we hope to see in all departments of the College, and together with the fact that there seems to be no necessary or magic formula for distribution requirements, we feel that 6 credits of social science and 6 credits of humanities (for natural science majors) will suffice to produce the effect which we intend for these requirements.

We repeat our call for the creation of a new variety of elementary level course, to be particularly suited for use in fulfilling the revised distribution requirements which we are here proposing. The almost impossibly broad and comprehensive nature of many present courses seems a drawback to the end which we see revised distribution requirements serving. The provisio n of minimum basic exposure to a given subject area would seem to be better served by a course such as we have described in an earlie r chapter, than by a course which is, on the whole, designed as an express introduction for later work in the subject area. The arguments as to the improved teaching quality to be expected from such new problem-centered courses, and the greater degree of student interest in, and acceptance of, these courses seem to compel the development and introduction of problem centered courses.

VI. DEPARTMENTAL PROGRAMS

The preceding chapter of this report has proposed major changes in the core and distribution requirements of the College. Since we have proposed substantial reduction of both the amount and variety of required material, the effects of these recommendations, if adopted, would be felt at the level of an individual departmental curricula. Once the presently extensive College requirements (and the overlapping University requirements as they apply to College students) are dropped in favor of a much smaller system of requirements, the separate departments will doubtless feel themselves compelled to specify a greater amount and variety of material than at present.

Currently, for example, the natural science departments, and the social sciences in particular, have relied on the fact that the College has provided, through its requirements, a certain minimum exposure to mathematics. Even this minimum provision would now be absent, under our proposals; and every department wishing to require mathematics of its students will have to determine for itself what math to require, and how much to specify. The effective impact of required mathematics would remain - the difference would come from the fact that the individual department had specified for its own majors what it thought most advisable for them to have.

Currently too, for example, most departmental requirements specify only which language is appropriate to the particular field - the broader fact of a language requirement itself being attributable to the College. Now, with the absence of such a thing as a language requirement at the College level, any department which feels that language is essential, and can construct sound academic arguments to justify this claim to its majors, will have to require language itself, also specifying which language is appropriate if they so desire.

The opportunity will exist, in phrasing revised (and presumably more inclusive) departmental requirements, to provide students a more custom-tailored education than is presently the usual case. The temptation will doubtless exist to adopt the present College requirements IN TOTO, merely prefacing them to the existing departmental list. The chance will exist for departments to fall down on their own self-appraisal, and emerge having made no significant or substantive change in their present program. We must hope that this will not occur. We must hope that the several departments WILL conduct searching examinations and appraisals of their subject matter in the light of all that lies beyond the departmental walls - selecting the best and most appropriate to require in their program(s), abandoning the trivial and needless that now plague meaningful education.

By way of illustrating some of the variety which could be introduced into revised departmental requirements: the Committee on Foreign Language Instruction developed proposals for several "tracks" of language instruction which might be adopted in the College by those departments which were going to require a language. Track 1 was the familiar four course sequence as at present; but their track 2 suggested a "divisional reading option on the 130-140 level of the four course sequence" - this option, similar in many respects to one made by the Rhetoric Committee, might bear close study as a possible means of making required language more clearly useful to the student. Since the line of argument which we adopt in justifying requirements is that of educational utility, a language reading unit keyed expressly to what is actually read in any given area seems defensible in the context of departmental requirements. For departments which were not so strictly concerned with having reading keyed to their particular subject matter, but were nevertheless interested in their students having a reading knowledge in a general way, the Language Committee's track 4, "a semi-intensive two semester foreign language reading course," might well be appropriate. By abandoning cant arguments, and requiring language simply for the sake of its educational utility, useful variations and alternatives can be developed and introduced.

Two principal considerations enter the problem of reformulated departmental requirements; and each will have something to say to the matter of just what sorts of programs departments will develop, both in the light of certain external considerations, and in the light of expressed student feeling regarding the amount of material in their major program. First, some external considerations.

Within the ranks of any one department there are a variety of student types who have been insufficiently recognised, if recognised even at all. The basic difference is between professionally-(graduate-) oriented students and those who desire nothing beyond a terminal undergraduate (often largely non pre-professional) education in the subject matter. The departmental education which these two large classes receive should differ appreciably in most cases; yet at present, in too many instances, differ only slightly or not at all. With the terminal undergraduate, much of the most explicitly graduate-relevant material, such as language, perhaps, might best be excluded, leaving the student freer to build a broader experience in more of the subject area. Graduate-oriented students, on the other hand, will be facing a very different future with their education; and it seems to stand to common sense that their program, from relatively early in undergraduate years, will differ markedly from that of the terminal undergraduate. Through this point in our history, too few departments of the College have made adequate recognition of this basic difference; and the education of both principal types of undergraduate has suffered, as departments strove to be as much of both as they could, serving neither side as well as might be wished. (The psychology department is an example of one that seems to have realised this difference; and in most cases where their courses have laboratory work involved, the laboratory is being separated off and made a separate item for enrollment - the lectures being independent of the labs, although not conversely. This is a development that bears proliferation throughout the College. Beyond such a technique as separating laboratory work off from the lecture portion, the line-up of pre-professional courses (plus their labs) should differ from that of the non-professional student. Too often the alternatives in the departmental requirements are too narrow to permit the best education for either principal segment of the department's enrollment.)

A second consideration in the reformulation of departmental requirements is that of a function which they achieve which has been too poorly recognised by faculty and students alike: together with the set of College requirements - which has been the principal instrument of this regard - the relative uniformity of departmental requirements has facilitated the transfer from department to department by students who desired to make a change of major. Some changes have always been difficult - as from English to Chemistry, say - and resulted in a loss of credit for work done; but on the whole, the great uniformity of College requirements, coupled with the fact that departments have not, in the past, specified too much beyond their own courses, has generally facilitated changes of major. Foreign language, for example, has been required everywhere; and no student could go too far wrong presenting his language credits for change-of-major transfer. With the absence of this DE FACTO facilitation, a new and explicit mechanism, in the form of specified limits on departmental upper division credit, and on the amount of ancillary material that may be required, will have to be developed.

Data from an Office of Institutional Studies survey of the class of 1968 in the College indicates that (in the context of the College, and its requirements, as of April 1968) students strongly desired an increase in the number of upper division credits permissible. The credit limit at that time (and still at present) was 30 credits of upper division work - departments retaining the option to require or allow less at their discretion. The OIS survey data is summarised on the graphs of Appendix A3. Bearing this in mind, together with the considerations of facilitating changes of major developed above, we propose here that the new limits established be 39 credits of upper division courses, and 21 credits of related material, such as language, mathematics, statistics (if not offered within the department), etc. Together with the revised core and distribution requirements proposed earlier, the new total amount of required material in any major program is thereby 78 credits. (College requirements presently total about 54 credits, and the present departmental limit is 30 - the bulk of the reduction effected is in the amount of College-required material.)

In the context of our earlier remarks on the necessity of introducing flexibility into departmental programs, as through the creation of more different programs for non-professional majors, and the probable elimination of much present laboratory work in the social and natural sciences for such non graduate-oriented students, we expect that the size of the block of required material (departmental plus College requirements) for terminal undergraduate programs will be smaller than that for professional and graduate-oriented students.

It is our hope and expectation that the changes in departmental programs suggested here, together with the reductions in the core and distribution requirements, will be such as to effect noticeable improvements in the character of strictly departmental (subject-area) education. These changes alone, however do not seem sufficient to us to provide for the greatest diversity desirable in undergraduate education. The threats and pressures of nearly lock-step education seem to require stronger additional remedies. It is to these further innovations that we now turn.

VII.
EXTRA DEPARTMENTAL PROGRAMS

Beyond the traditional departments, however organised or restructured their programs, there is now (and has been for some time) a need for a new variety of academic programs of the sort that do not fall within the purview of any established University department. There is a rather hard empirical fact about our present departments - namely, their own ideas constitute the definition of their subject area. This is not to argue the sacred nature of any department - there is nothing sacred about such recent academic innovations. The problem, however, is that a very great deal of the most exciting kind of study gets thrown to the devil, who at present, sad to say, is not represented on our departmental lineup. A cure is here proposed: invite the devil in - make him a new and equally valid part of our secular establishment. Doing so will have the advantage, if the maneauver is conducted properly, of broadening our present academic programs and course offerings, yet without disrupting the operations of our established departments.

Interdepartmental courses and programs are normally objected-to on the grounds of their being neither fish nor fowl, and less substantial than either. This is unfortunate, because it is neither necessarily nor actually true. Nevertheless, we do not here see any appreciable history of interdepartmental courses or programs. The College maintains a few such "programs," so-called - in Asian and Latin American studies, for example. But these two examples fail to even scratch the surface of possibilities that might be so represented. The history, philosophy and sociology of science, urban studies, and folk-lore might be three further instances of programs that could profitably be organized on an interdepartmental basis. The Muscatine Committee dealt with this question at some length; and the discussion and solution which they advance have enough to say to our situation here as to warrant repeating in full. Their report said:

> In the last analysis, educational development is the concern of the whole University, including both faculty and administration. Many but not all aspects of it will continue to be the preoccupation of individual departments; the residual problems and programs cannot however be thrust upon the regular machinery of the faculty and administration. The regular machinery is already too busy with on-going programs . . . We need an enduring body with its own ESPRIT DE CORPS which can devote itself to long-term review, study, and consultations, to determine the needs and possibilities for innovation on this campus. Closely associated with this should be a high-ranking administrator to facilitate and assist programs and experiments which do not readily find profection within a regular department. . . .
> It might seem tidier to limit such special machinery rigorously to non-departmental and/or experimental programs. We see a disadvantage in such rigid limitations, at least for the time being: development should build from, and relate to, what is offered and needed throughout the campus. The experience of other universities suggests that we should seek a VIA MEDIA or balance between two structural models: on the one hand a separate Dean or college (too isolated and independent of the departmental structure) and on the other hand a mere faculty committee (not independent enough). Both of these relatively simple formulas for supervising the general and non-departmental concerns of the university have, when adopted elsewhere, led to the same results: a drift towards a 'second class faculty' without the same status and protection as their departmental colleagues. Thus the machinery we propose would be concerned both with general problems and with particular remedies. As a Board it would represent the whole faculty's interest in educational development, but it would also seek to promote special contacts and ESPRIT DE CORPS among faculty volunteers who for the time being are most actively engaged in educational innovations. Moreover, to ensure that its policies are effectively pursued, and that new programs will find adequate support, we propose that the representative quality of the machinery be balanced by an administrative component: the participation EX OFFICIO of an (Associate Provost.) We therefore recommend the establishment of a Board of Educational Development.../5/

An appendix to this discussion proposal here includes a modified version of their Board of Educational Development - adopted from their formulation and written in language more appropriate to the University of Massachusetts.

It would be most beneficial to continue with the sections of the Muscatine Report from which the preceding was drawn; but the limitations of space and time in these notes preclude such continuation. Let us instead merely summarise what was said in this Report, leaving the reader with a strong urging to consult the Report itself in full./6 Prof. Muscatine and his associates suggested a variety of what they called "breadth courses," integrating more than just one strict and narrow discipline. It is commonly accepted as true that different disciplines have a great deal to say to one another; but there seems to be little by way of follow-up on these good words. The opportunities for such follow-up would not really be difficult to construct - they could be done so easily under the mechanism which they propose as their "Board", whether this Board were formed at the University level or, as a pilot operation, at the College level. We hereby make explicit our recommendation that such a body as a Board of Educational Development be formed within the College of Arts and Sciences, for the purposes of furthering academic innovation, the development of new programs of study crossing traditional departmental boundaries, and serving as a pilot operation for such a University-wide Board at a later date.

Prof. Muscatine's committee saw a need for non-departmental AD HOC courses in which current problems of wide campus interest were investigated in a rigorous manner. Such topics as "Vietnam," "The Contemporary University," "The City," and "Sino-Soviet-American Relations" would all lend themselves to such treatment. The idea of integrated problem-oriented courses suggested itself - courses far broader than the single-department problem-centered courses for which we have already called. They also proposed a breed of cat to be called "university courses" - some of them would " . . . span not only different areas but different colleges and schools. All of them, as is fitting, have been developed after an extensive period of research and planning . . . The conclusion is that these interdisciplinary programs, considered collectively, require new administrative status and support." The idea of "university courses" too warrants serious consideration on our campus.

The purpose of this section is not, by any means, to exhaust the consideration of this broad topic - it is, instead, merely to broach it, in the confidence that it will generate considerable discussion by itself. The possibilities of institutionalised innovation and development will never be exhausted; but neither will any be realised if some beginning is not made for their production and sanction. We repeat our urging that strong consideration and high priority be given this matter of a Board of Educational Development (under whatever name may be agreeable, and in whatever form seems most workable on this campus).

NOTES

HONORS PROGRAM

The College honors program, as a comprehensive trans-departmental structure, justly deserves consideration in this CAS curriculum discussion. It is fortunate for the College's undergraduates that the College has recently received and adopted a comprehensive 4-year honors program, markedly upgrading the previous honors program. An honors program should, as the new program does, provide an extended integrated educational experience for those students involved. The definition of an honors student is still open to some debate - mere high scholastic performance through secondary school may be too parochial a definition of an honors student, however. The definition of what consttutes an honors student, or prospective candidate for College honors, bears careful consideration, and very possibly a reworking and broadening.

The new College honors program provides (in brief outline) special courses for selected students, from freshman entrance on throughout the college experience. These courses may either be honors sections of existing courses, or wholly original honors-only courses. The program further provides for special junior-senior honors seminars and colloquia. A desirable feature of the plan is that students working in the program are permitted to substitute some honors work for normal departmental requirements (as these stand at present). Under a situation where departmental programs are under revision and reformulation, the opportunities to introduce provisions for yet further substitution of honors program work for normal departmental requirements should not be overlooked. It is reasonable to expect that, if the bulk of our recommendations herein are adopted by the College faculty, the quantity of material departmentally-required will increase. We recommend that further explicit consideration be given to the matter of departmental major programs vis a vis the College honors program. We envision many more multiple-track departmental programs than at present; and we would suggest that at least one track within every departmental program be a special "honors track," making particular adjustment to the needs and abilities of honors students, as differentiated from other majors and from such non-professional major tracks as may be established.

Explicit provision must be made in the College's curriculum deliberations, for further supporting the honors program, and for making certain that more of its higher-grade work will find acceptance in departmental requirements.

IX.
GRADING POLICY

It is our firm conviction that no significant discussion of the College curriculum can proceed without a parallel discussion of college grading, thus this chapter. Furthermore, no serious consideration of grading can proceed without reference to some firm and agreed-upon premises as to just what a grading policy is designed to achieve. In our present situation in the University (and the College) it seems inescapably clear and apparent that some sort of reform of the grading system is strongly desired by the student body. (See Appendix A2, the OIS survey.)

The most important matter to resolve at the very beginning of this consideration - which must be resolved in connection with ANY grading reform - is that of what grades do, actually or allegedly, for the student. First, grades serve the common purpose for all students of measuring and recording his progress; and then for a large percentage of students they serve the further purpose of certifying his acceptability for graduate or professional school. Grades, other than end-of-course grades, also serve the feedback function of communication from teacher to student. Within the whole student body itself, grades - actually, the averages computed from the grades - serve as an ordering and classifying device, permitting the awarding of honors, recognition, special rights, etc.

An English professor has suggested that there are four general functions which a grading system serves. He differentiates them in this manner: (1) feedback from student (and class) to the professor, on the quality of his teaching; (2) an indicator to the student of his own learning - how much, and of what, has he mastered; (3) a ranking of performance vis a vis the particular institution's individual internal standards - that is, through the mechanism of the average, something of a classifying and ordering function internal to the institution; and (4) an indication of prospective future achievement - a certifying, or prophetic, function.

A UCLA professor, however, suggests that there are only two principal functions, those of reward-punishment and certifying for future performance.

Examining these several suggestions more carefully, we find that, on the whole, function (1) is not too widely recognised, at this institution at any rate. It is a rare professor who says, even facetiously, that there will be no failures in his course because the failure of a student reflects the failure of a professor. Function (2) seems not to be generally accepted by students - a low performance on an examination seldom seems to serve as a spur to return to the missed portion of the course material. The fourth function - that of predicting probable future performance - on the job or in further schooling - seems to be generally unreliable; or at least unreliable in a significant percentage of those cases where it is taken very seriously and in the form of a single decimal cumulative average. This appears to leave only the third function - that of classiftying and ordering within the ranks of the institution's own records and standards. This could easily be considered the least essential of the four functions; and could provide some appreciable justification for advocating the abolition of grading - a prospect patently unacceptable to a large number of students, quite probably a majority. (What this really suggests is abolishing the cumulative average, by which the ranking is done.) This conclusion approaching a REDUCTIO AD ABSURDUM, we find ourselves having to return to one of the other functions, apparently dismissed too lightly.

As a system of rewards and punishments, grades are unsatisfactory for the reason that some students come to develop different value systems from those of the grader: students who are consistently punished with low grades come to develop a personal value system in which high grades are not an ideal; and consistent high-performers, finding it easy to master the material, take high grades for granted, developing the habit of achieving under their full potential because it is so easy to obtain the rewards of high grades. The UCLA professor continues in this way, discussing the certification, or prophetic, function of grades:

> The grading system is also ineffective as a certification device. Parents and administrators expect the teacher to grade on the 'curve.' Even if all of the students in the class have attained some set of learning objectives, teachers are still required to differentiate among students, presumably on the basis of factors such as rate of learning and extent of transfer to new material. Here is the point at which certification and reward-punishment come into conflict. Teachers are forced to punish some students by giving them relatively low grades (in many student subcultures anything less than an A is a low grade) even though those same students may have effectively mastered what we wanted them to learn. In the effort to differentiate among students for grading purposes all of us who teach find ourselves constructing examinations that are in reality efforts to trick the student. We cannot utilize an exam that everybody can pass because we would not be able to determine who gets the A's, B's, etc. Therefore, we write examinations that go far beyond the material we have actually taught, examinations that deal with tangential issues, deluding ourselves that we are searching for high-sounding achievements such as 'inference' or 'generalization.' There is nothing wrong with the generalization of knowledge, of course. It is just that this too should be an EXPLICIT part of the objective of any course of instruction./8/

Despite these serious objections raised against the certification function in particular, it seems clear to us now that we are compelled to retain this notion as probably the prime function which grading serves. The evidence supporting this seems clear and compelling - the ambiguities and uncertainties notwithstanding, students are grade-conscious and grade-oriented exactly as they are graduate-oriented or bound for some further professional schooling. The candid expression of feeling contained in the daily remarks about having to get good grades to get into grad school seems to us to be genuine, and to express quite clearly the principal use which is made of grades on this campus. (It is unfortunate that the undergraduate responses of Appendix A2 are not subdivided by class or type of respondent - the intuitive evidence at hand suggests that this breakdown would be into graduate-oriented and non graduate-oriented groups.)

This does not, of course, exhaust the list of functions and ends which grades actually or allegedly serve, or would be had serve. On the basis of this discussion, however, we must develop a rational theory of grading function and grading mechanics. Preference polls are necessarily inconclusive in the absence of any clear theory of grading. Nevertheless we can make a hesitant beginning on the grading problem by considering some patterns of grading preferance on this campus. (Data from an Office of Institutional Studies survey, dated 24 July 1968.)

A questionnaire to poll faculty and student opinion regarding our present grading system was prepared.
The questionnaire was distributed in February 1968 to 760 randomly selected faculty and students. There was a general 75% response . . .
GENERAL FINDINGS:

1. There appears to be a preference among respondents for a more precise system, i.e., more passing grades. Undergraduate response was strongest in this preference. A more precise system was also favored, but less clearly, among graduate students. Faculty opinion was split between the more precise system and the present system. See Table I (included herein).
2. Second and third choice preferences in all groups reinforced the more precise system. See Table I.
3. Of all those reporting, 20.2% were satisfied with the present system. The largest single group supporting the present system was the faculty. These faculty respondents felt that grading and testing cannot be more precise.
4. Of the 79.8% respondents who were dissatisfied with the present system, the major reason in all groups was that it is too imprecise.
5. Opinion regarding a grading system for graduate students was slightly in favor of it being the same as for undergraduates. There was, however, no clear preferance.

Appendix A2 is one of several tables of data from which OIS drew up the summary statements quoted above. We direct your particular attention to the two items circled immediately adjacent to the "Undergraduate" responses heading. The figures within the circle represent significant preference for a grading system other than our present system - significant preference for a system either more precise or less precise than at present.

/8/ Prof. Rodney W. Skager, Dept. of Education, UCLA; personal communication, December 5, 1968.

It would be of some interest and importance to be able to differentiate this response by type of student making it - by academic major, perhaps - but this cannot at present be done, as this information was not solicited of respondents to the survey. There are emerging theoretical considerations about grading preference which would be substantiated or refuted by this data, could it be so differentiated by major of respondent. Lacking concrete confirmation or refutation, we will, as an operational tactic, proceed upon the basis of these theoretical considerations.

We accept the principle that the first utility of a grading system is that of certifying a student for further schooling. Accepting this, and adding the principle that a "more precise" system - one making more than the present four passing distinctions - better serves this certifying function for those students so concerned, we will propose a split system of grading College-wide.

Graduate-oriented students seem to be the most grade-conscious of all, and there does not seem to be too much distinction between the varieties of graduate-oriented students - as between professional and technical students, etc. On the whole, such students would seem to be best served by a precise system - one making more (and therefore finer) distinctions than the present A B C D system that we employ. Within the class of graduate-oriented students, there seems to be a differentiation between grades in major courses (or the subject in which the student will do further study) and all other courses. These last students naturally want their major area grades to be (and look) their best; and they want these grades to best mirror the nuances of their work in this subject matter. Non graduate-oriented students seem to be less grade conscious - they seem to be less concerned with recording a B-plus than a straight B, for example.

Based upon the preceding operational resolution of the grading question, we suggest a system in which any student may employ either of two grading systems in his academic program: precise grading in major-area and major-related courses, and modified pass/fail grading in all core, distribution, and elective courses. Under this system, based upon the assumption that at least a significant portion of our students are graduate-oriented (Appendix A4, table 6), and will consequently be desiring their grades to present them in the best light possible, a twelve (passing) grades marking system whould be adopted as follows: /9/

A-plus	A
B-plus	B
	A-minus
	B-minus
A-plus	A
B-plus	B
C-plus	C
D-plus	D
	A-minus
	B-minus
	C-minus
	D-minus
	F

Non-major work - core, distribution, and elective courses - would be graded on the modified P/F system of Honors, Pass, Fail - H P F.

Because there can be no objective effective mechanical procedure developed which would be capable of determining for all students in all situations which course is, and which course is not major-area or major-related, we recommend that every student be given the option of electing either form of grading in any course taken. It is our expectation that students will elect major courses for 12-point (precise) grading, and all other courses for P/F grading; but because we are unable to specify in advance and in the abstract which courses will serve which function for any given student, we propose leaving the decision wholly in students' hands. Under such an option system as this, students unable initially to locate their major area exactly will be able to take such courses as they may later be presenting for major area evaluation for precise grades. Students who are able to specify their major area exactly will be able, from the very beginning, to use precise grading in those areas where it will count most for them. Furthermore, allowing such an option system as this will provide the potential for largely grade-pressure-less study in such special and experimental programs as may be developed under provisions such as the Board of Educational Development. An option system such as we propose here would seem to be a sound way of maximising student freedom and individual responsibility in the very important area of the academic program.

Such a system as we propose would, it appears, satisfy each component of our student body - serving each better than the present single system can. Pre-graduate and pre-professional students will receive the certifying-function grades which evidence indicates they desire, and which would seem to serve them better in those /9/ Th e 12-point system is liable to be objected-to by some faculty on the grounds that they cannot make any more than, say, four distinctions in grades in their courses, on account of the extremely subjective nature of their subject material. Others will plead that they might be able to make eight distinctions, but yet not twelve. For such cases, whether real or imagined, we can suggest the following operational resolution of the problem; in practice, any teacher who felt incapable of making any more than four passing distinctions would be free to assign simply straight letter grades of A, B, C, or D - not using the plus or minus graduations of the scale. Those faculty who felt capable of making only eight discriminations could use only the plus and minus marks of the scale, not using the four straight letter grades. Twelve passing distinctions would continue to be available for those areas - perhaps mathematics and the natural sciences - where a teacher felt capable of making twelve distinctions. Faculty response, in Table 1 of Appendix A2, would suggest to us, however, that the number of faculty who would feel incapable of making a full twelve distinctions would be relatively small.

There is a further consideration in this regard: in the event that there were suggestions that an 'A' from a teacher making only four distinctions were not equivalent to an 'A' from a teacher making twelve distinctions - the former's 'A' perhaps being equivalent to one of the latter's 'A-minus' grades - we can suggest that, if cumulative averages were not being computed (as is one of our recommendations), there would be no objective inequity. If protest continued, it would be possible to adopt a "dot code" to be interpreted. The following table should indicate how dots might be assigned to letter grades to indicate whether only four, eight, or the full twelve distinctions were being made by the grader:

areas which are essential to their future plans, yet avoiding the pressure for grades in more ancillary courses. Non-graduate students will be spared the necessity of being graded on a scale more appropriate to another function than their own.

Cumulative Averages

The preceding discussion of grading has been strictly concerned with the actual grades assigned, and the rationale for doing so. It has not, by design, included that usual concomitant of grading-the calculation of a semester and cumulative (quality point) average. This latter aspect of the grading problem seems to warrent a special treatment. With appropriate qualifications and restrictions developed above, grading seems defensible - less can be said for the calculation of cumulative averages. Consider the problem.

Cumulative averages are presently used for internal ranking within the university, and for determining retention and/or flunk out levels. All other functions seem simple variations of extensions of these two basic uses. While the necessity and utility of the first function may and has been questioned, the second seems, reluctantly, to be one that must be retained. I need not, however, be conducted from the basis of a "cume" as presently computed.

The undesirable consequences following from the regular calculation of the cume seem numerous, and sufficently serious as to suggest the condemnation and abolition of this figure. The elimination of the cumulative average would tend to reduce arguments over the relative merits of 4, 7, or 12-point grading systems - finer grading systems tend to make more precise cume calculations possible; but if the cume were not computed, possible drawbacks to a more precise system (or systems) would not arise. The cume itself is a poor predictor of future performance /10/; and the elimination of a cume would eliminate the temptation to perpetuate and use what is in many cases an outright lie. A lie? A lie in this way: the amount by which a cume is lowered through failing any course (of given credit value) is identical; that is, the physics major who fails a 3-credit elective art course will be penalised by exactly the same amount as his companion who fails a 3-credit advanced mechanics course - each cume will be the same for including the failure, and each will purport to say the same thing about the student as a physics major; yet, it seems clear that we would be willing to accept the first as the better physicist than the second, would we not?

The argument that the students' graduate schools, when they come to apply, will want to know their cume for admissions purposes is essentially untrue. The school will, instead, make a grade-by-grade study of each transcript, taking the failed art course for what it's worth vis a vis graduate study in physics, and also taking the failed mechanics course for what it says about the candidate's chances for graduate study in physics. Grades seem too important a business to be trifled with by mere calculating machines; but yet, in those cases where such trifling calculations are produced, the temptation is strong to use them improperly, by not calculating a student's cumulative average, a potentially deceiving disservice to the student will not be made available for improper use.

As for the necessary function of determining academic failures and dismissals - a new procedure could be developed based upon straight counting of the number of failed courses: a student could be required to pass, say, 120 out of 150 credits attempted. This could be provided as a lump sum of flunks to be "spent" as necessary, or a quota per semester could be established. We would tend to favor the former alternative, which would have the desirable side effect of allowing, as an extreme case, the failure of all courses save one in the freshman year and yet still being retained in the University. The awarding of honors and distinctions could likewise be based upon a procedure of straight-forward counting of A's, H's, or whatever.

We recommend, then, that the University adopt the policy of not computing semester or cumulative quality point averages - whether published or not. The misleading and inaccurate picture fostered by such a single index seems too great a price to bear for the admitted convenience of determining academic dismissals quickly. We earlier discussed the assignment of grades and the actual grades themselves - the conclusions that we came to - that grades are important if understood properly and assigned by a more rational system than at present - would be emphasised, we feel, by taking an action which would tend to place more reliance and importance on grades, and less on an artificial and largely meaningless decimal number.

Withdrawals: W, WP, WF /11/

The present regulations regarding withdrawals from courses after the 10th academic day seem designed to attempt to reconcile two separate points of view: students petitioning for a grade of WP are attempting to avoid the burden of an F on their record - an F which will be calculated into their cumulative average with unpleasant results; the faculty and University administration are attempting to guard against "too easy" withdrawals from courses when the going gets "too rough." Each side has its points; but the situation, and the consequent necessity for a cumbersome WP procedure, might be rethought in a new light.

The situation could change somewhat for students if cumes were not calculated - this would relieve some of the pressure not to have a WF recorded. Under the revised regulations which we propose for the College (and the University), students would be permitted a fixed number of F's before academic dismissal were imposed. Up to a certain point, students could stand to have a single F on their records. The situation would change further if students were allowed to withdraw from any course at any time - with or without a notation of W after the 10th academic day. Faculty and administrative consciences would be soothed by bearing in mind that the so-called "10 semester rule" would remain on the books; and it would be up to the individual student to bear in mind the allocation of course and semester time that he were making as he dropped a course any time through the semester. If students continue to be permitted only 10 full semesters (as presently defined) to complete their undergraduate requirements, the sanction or not receiving the credits for the course might be sufficent to deter wholesale withdrawals by multitudes of students. We suggest that the two factors just mentioned, then - having only 10 semesters to complete requirements, and failing to receive the credits for a course - should be sufficent to govern the situation of withdrawals from courses. Present regulations governing the need for petition for exception to a grade of WF should be abolished. It may be left to an essentially inconsequential decision whether there shall be a notation of W made on a student's record after the 10th academic day or not. In the main, it seems clear to us to be consistent with our general aim of placing a greater portion of the burden of responsibility for the student's academic progress onto the student's shoulders to place there also the burden of deciding whether to remain in the course and flunk, or withdraw - in neither case receiving any credits for the course.

Executive authority should continue to lie with the deans of the College to make particular adjustments of these regulations to fit truly exceptional cases, as of complete withdrawal from the University for example.

FINANCIAL CONSIDERATIONS

It has been the intention of the Committee to give some consideration to as many factors bearing upon curriculum revision in the College of Arts and Sciences as feasible. To this end, in addition to requirements, departmental programs, and grading, we have dealt with advising, the psycho-social characteristics of the student body and (here) financial aspects of curriculum change. The following notes are intended to be of some rough help in this matter. We recognise that precise cost accounting techniques do not yet exist for the appraisal of cost factors within higher education - nevertheless, these are some general indications of points to be considered.

/10/ Lavin, David E., THE PREDICTION OF ACADEMIC PERFORMANCE. New York, Russell Sage Foundation, 1965. See especially chapter 2.

/11/ The recommendations of this section constitute the Committee's response to §99, of 19 February 1969.

In recommending substantial changes in both the amount and variety of required course work, it is important to think of whether or not faculty are interchangeable - if they are, so long as the overall course load being taught (in the aggregate) remains constant, faculty costs should remain generally constant. If, on the other hand, faculty are not interchangeable, adding some kinds of courses, even while dropping others - if the courses added are the kinds of courses that only specialised faculty can teach - will raise costs, since the specialised faculty would probably have to be recruited, and would probably be expensive. Then too, making an elective course into a required course increases the required faculty classroom time, thereby raising the faculty cost figure.

The level of the faculty member involved with any given unit of instruction is a factor in this accounting: to drop a core curriculum course formerly taught in a large lecture by an assistant professor, and introduce two (or more) small classroom courses taught by associate or full professors will raise costs appreciably. Student course-load levels remaining constant, small courses cost more than large lecture courses.

Changing the character of courses taken, quantity again remaining fixed, could raise costs through such factors as the facilities required. Large (lab) science courses cost more than large history courses, due to the overhead of laboratory space required for the science course. Materials and supplies (if not covered by student laboratory fees) are a factor in some kinds of courses, while not in others.

The exigencies of time are usually such that large lecture courses will not attempt to assign library (reserve) reading, while smaller courses can and do make such assignments. The costs of increasing library resources and facilities must be reckoned in any comprehensive cost accounting of curriculum change.

The preceding considerations may have seemed to speak quite strongly against the curriculum changes we have proposed - after all, we have proposed that nearly all present requirements be replaced, and usually with courses to be taught in small sections, rather than mass lectures. We feel, however, that the savings to be effected by the elimination of major portions of the present large lecture offerings will be sufficient to cover much, if not all, of the increased costs to result from the proposed greater use of small classes. The savings of faculty time, particularly in the natural and social sciences, where large lecture courses are common, through the elimination of express requirements in these areas, should be sufficient to pay for the numerous small individual problem-centered courses which we propose. Humanities departments might possibly emerge with a small surplus of faculty time, not from the elimination of large lectures so much as from, again, the elimination of an express requirement in that area.

We feel confident in saying that, barring and minutely-detailed accounting to the nearest cent of cost showing to the contrary, the changes in core and distribution requirements which we propose will not substantially raise the College's costs, either in faculty time or facilities.

Appendix A1

Board of Educational Development

Membership

1. There shall be seven (7) members.
2. Three members shall be appointed for three-year staggered terms by the Committee on Committees of the Faculty Senate, from faculty members who combine the highest scholarly attainments with a demonstrated concern for educational development, and who are not members of the Academic Matters Committee. One faculty member and one undergraduate shall be appointed by the President of the Student Senate.
3. In addition, the Associate Provost and the chairman of the (Student Senate) Academic Affairs Committee shall be EX OFFICIO members of the Board with voting rights.

Responsibilities

1. To stimulate continuing discussion of the principles and effectiveness of our educational programs and to receive and encourage proposals for educational experiments.
2. To determine policy in matters of educational innovation and development, to authorise proposals, on a limited and temporary basis, for experimental courses and curricula, and to recommend to the administration the allocation of funds in support of such experiments. An experimental program may be continued under the Board's authority for up to five years, after which time it will be reviewed for possible inclusion within the regular curriculum and budget, for termination, or for further continuation on an experimental basis.
3. To prepare, for submission to the established committees of the various units of the University, reports on the desirability of transferring existing programs to the regular curriculum and budget of the University.
4. Continuously to evaluate the adequacy of existing educational offerings, with a view to establishing priorities for educational development, and to authorise and carry out such studies as may be desirable.
5. To formulate proposals for securing funds for the above purposes from private, foundation, University, and government sources.
6. To report annually to the Faculty and Student Senates on its activities.

The Authorisation of Experimental Programs

The Board will normally be able to obtain acceptance of experimental courses and curricula as fulfilling some part of the requirements for an undergraduate degree (B.A. or B.S.). It is, or course, possible that differences of viewpoint may arise, especially with regard to experiments of any magnitude. We formally recommend that, where these differences cannot be resolved between the Board and the degree-granting body, they be referred to a Council for Special Curricula, with the power to insure (and if necessary grant) a limited number of undergraduate degrees on its own authority. It would be constituted as follows:

Council for Special Curricula

Membership

Membership of the Council shall be composed of the following:

The seven members of the Board of Educational Development;

Seven members of the (Faculty Senate) Academic Matters Committee.

The chairman and vice-chairman of this Council will be elected by the body from within its membership.

Meetings

When the Board of Educational Development is unable to obtain acceptance by a degree-granting unit of an experimental program as a valid part of a curriculum leading to an undergraduate degree, the chairman of the Board will convene the Council for Special Curricula.

Functions

1. The Council will review the experimental program in question and, if three-quarters of its membership approve, will insure the B.A. or B.S. degree to the students in the program upon successful completion of the program as previously approved by the Board.
2. The Council will inform the Faculty Senate of all experimental programs for which it has insured the granting of degrees as soon as it has given this insurance.
3. When the students in the program in question have completed the requirements for the degree established by the Board, if no degree-granting unit has yet accepted the program for a degree, the Council will grant the B.A. or B.S. degree to the students.
4. The number of degrees the Council may insure in any one year cannot exceed 5% of the graduating class of the previous year, except by express consent of the Faculty Senate.
5. The Faculty Senate may instruct the Council to serve as a degree-granting agency for any other experimental or temporary program, degrees granted by such charge not being part of the Council's own proper 5% number.

We do not anticipate a frequent recourse to this special degree-granting machinery: ideally, it would never have to be convened at all. However, we consider it essential to provide for an authority to which the Board can appeal, when necessary, for the insurance of degrees to students in experimental programs. Otherwise the Board and its efforts will not have significantly altered the pressures which create in our present procedures a climate inimical to flexibility and change.

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

Throughout its work, this Committee has received sound support and encouragement from many individuals and offices across the campus. The Student Senate has been unstinting in its support of our work. The personnel of the University Copy Center Services have performed heroically in the face of frequent hurry-up deadlines - their assistance has been invaluable. Mr. Clarence Cornish, Printing and Duplicating, has extended himself more than once for us.

We wish to extend our particular thanks to the many members of the University administration and faculty who gave freely of their time to read and criticise early drafts and chapters of this report. All such advice and assistance has been helpful to us - we hope that we have been able to profit from it. Among those who were of particular help to us are Associate Provost Jeremiah Allen, Vice-Dean John Maki, Prof. (now Acting Dean) Seymour Shapiro, Prof. Everett H. Emerson, and Prof. G. Putnam Barber.

Messrs. L. R. Morrell and Robert G. Cope, of the Office of Budgeting and Institutional Studies, were always ready to offer help, guidance, and such materials as they had available to further our efforts. We are deeply indebted to them.

To the many students who gave freely of their advice and criticism, our thanks.

Hoseah Williams and Teach-In Mark Start of MLK Memorial Week

By ROSE L. MILLER
Staff Reporter

Martin Luther King Memorial Week, sponsored by the Martin Luther King, Jr. Social Action Council, opened Monday at UMass with the showing of a poverty film and a lecture by Rev. Hoseah Williams, field director of the Poor People's Campaign and the Southern Christian Leadership Conference.

The theme of the Memorial week is "People Power - The Individual in America." The program will continue with events scheduled for the entire week ending Friday with a memorial march, workshops, and plenary session.

Last night, a Teach-In on the individual and the military system featured Dan Weir, a graduate student of the Speech Department, Prof. J. Savereid of the English Department along with Gil Salk, Secretary of the MLK Council.

The answer to fighting as "Patriot or Common Fodder?" according to pacifists, recent and longstanding as represented by Weir and Savereid, is common fodder. Weir said, "the pacifist position is a difficult one, since it is an unpopular position." He finds he has to explain his position to people and it is hard to understand anyone's stand in a culture where stands are seldom taken.

Prof. Savereid added, "the taking of a pacifist position has never been easy," as he reflected on his long standing pacifist feelings.

Commenting on the labeling of pacifists as cowards, Savereid stated, "there are other routes which are much more inviting." "Pacifism as a coward's way out strikes him," he said, "as not having much force."

Likewise, Savereid declared, patriotism has no place with pacifism. The meaning inherent in patriotism is nationalism, a definite enemy.

The opening of the week had Rev. Williams speaking on "Poverty and Racism". He called the United States, "a sick society" and placed the blame on "an obsolete economic system."

Relating society's illness with the "sick economic system, Rev. Williams labeled, the sickness and the economics as two instruments to maintain the status quo. The Southern Christian Leadership Conference, Williams emphasized, did not die with Martin Luther King Jr., but after "some crucial days financially," he said, "it is on its feet again." "SCLC" Rev. Williams said, "plans to continue Dr. King's work by trying to redirect the mission of Easter by living the true meaning of Easter."

Williams concluded, "Dr. King was killed because he tried to rebuild the United States' economic system.

Wednesday's event begins with the history of the black man in America as told by his music. It will be presented in the Student Union Council Chambers by Leroy Richardson at 3:00 p.m. This will be followed by a Teach-in on "Student as Nigger" (the individual and the campus) in Thompson 106.

Thursday afternoon features a film on Vietnam called, "Land Without Joy", shown continuously in the Student Union Ballroom from 1:00 p.m. to 4:30 p.m.

"Mini-Semester Suggested To Follow Christmas Recess

By ANNE HILLERMAN
Staff Reporter

A new plan for the academic year, eliminating the 'lame duck' days between Christmas vacation and finals has been suggested by the Ad Hoc Calendar Committee of Faculty and Administration. Under this proposal, called the 4-1-5 plan, students would enroll for an 11 week, 4 course session in the fall that would finish prior to Christmas. A short 3-4 week term would be offered in January, followed by a regular length spring term.

In its memorandum, the Ad Hoc Calendar Committee stated that the 3-4 week January block could be used for course work but encouraged departments to try to find more imaginative programs to present during this short session. Examples would be special colloquia for majors, intensive laboratory sessions, research and field training, or interdisciplinary classes designed for freshmen.

This January time would be considered part of the regular academic year. A student who chose not to enroll for the session would be required to carry an overload for one term or to enroll during he summer. Registration for January could be incorporated with pre-registration for the regular 5 course spring semester. January grades would be averaged in with the spring grades.

The 4-1-5 plan would not affect the regular faculty teaching loads, according to the Ad Hoc proposal. A professor with a three course teaching obligation could either teach all of his courses during the 11 week fall term and use January for research, or teach only two classes in the fall and the third course or a special program in January. The usual 42 class meetings or their equivalent could be achieved by having students attend 4 three hour sessions per week for each course or by making the classes longer than fifty minutes.

The Ad Hoc Committee currently is pluming faculty reaction to the 4-1-5 plan. The possible calendar modifications will go into action after further discussion and an official decision. Members of the Ad Hoc Calendar Committee are: Ronald Fredrickso, Stephen Allen, Thomas Fox, Thomas Grow, George Richason, and William Venman.

Student Senate Officers To Be Sworn in Tonight

By LANCE LITTLE
Staff Reporter

The 578th meeting of the Student Senate will begin at 7:00 p.m. tonight with the swearing in of the newly elected officers. Bruce Balboni will be administered the oath of President, Secretary Cindi Olken will be moved up to the Vice-President position, Patterson House senator Pat Beharry will be sworn in as the new Secretary and Al Gauthier, for the second straight year, will take the oath of Treasurer.

The swearing in proceedings will take place before the Question Period, in which questions which appear on the agenda are answered by the President, and the usually very lengthy Budget hearings.

Among the motions and bills that may come up before the governing body will be Senator Dan Madden's motion that "the Student Senate expresses a lack of confidence in the University Administration for its actions concerning the development and use of the State Police on the University campus" on the night of the Dow sit-in. Also three other bills which affect directly or are affected by the Picketing Code will be discussed on the floor of the Senate.

Bill S122 co-sponsored by Senators Rosanne Fritz and Barbara Kamanitz moves to recommend to the newly appointed Dean of the School of Arts and Sciences, Seymour Shapiro, that double majors be recognized by this College.

Also possibly coming before the Senate tonight will be outgoing President Paul Silverman's attempt to preserve the "aesthetic beauty" of the campus. Silverman states in his bill that "Whereas, the University is rapidly moving towards a no grass campus, and Whereas, construction and parking lots are rapidly turning UMass into a suburban black-board jungle, and Whereas, propagation is a primary concern of the human race and UMass in particular, and Whereas, the Student Senate does not feel that UMass has outgrown the concept of the aesthetic beauty, Resolved, that the Student Senate recommend to the University Planning Board and the President that the campus pond be declared a demilitarized zone as far as construction assaults on natural resources are concerned."

Jimmy Breslin will Talk Tonight on Newspapermen

Award-winning reporter Jimmy Breslin will speak at the UMass Student Union tonight at 8 p.m.

His talk on the newspaperman and the contemporary scene is sponsored by the student-run Distinguished Visitors Program and is open to the public without charge.

Mr. Breslin will take part Wednesday afternoon in a journalism seminary led by Alvin F. Oickle, lecturer in journalism and managing editor of the Greenfield Recorder. The visitor will also be honored Wednesday evening at a dinner by Alpha Phi Gamma, professional journalism society.

Mr. Breslin began his career as a sportswriter and became a syndicated reporter with a national following. He recently stopped doing his syndicated features in order to devote full time to writing books.

He is a frequent contributor of articles to national magazines and has appeared as a TV actor on network programs and commercials.

He received the Sigma Delta Chi Award for national reporting, the Meyer Berger Award for local reporting and the New York Reporters Association Award for reporting all in 1964.

THE NEWS IN BRIEF

(ACP) - Federal contributions to the National Defense student loan program will drop for the first time since the program was started 10 years ago if Congress adopts the proposed budget for next year.

The budget for fiscal 1970 would provide about $31.5 million less money for 44,000 fewer loans than in the current year.

Reduction of budget obligations for the National Defense loans from $193.4 million this year to $161.9 million in 1970 is anticipated.

(ACP) - Employment prospects for American college graduates will be better than ever this year, according to a survey of 208 prominent business and industrial concerns by Frank S. Endicott, director of placement at Northwestern University, Evanston, Illinois.

Companies plan to hire six men with bachelor's degrees for every five they employed in 1968, Mr. Endicott reported after his 23rd annual survey of employment trends.

Companies also plan to hire about 16 percent more men with master's degrees than they hired last year, he said.

WASHINGTON (AP) - The experimental turbo train is scheduled to make its first runs between Boston and New York on April 8, the Transportation Department said Tuesday.

The Transportation Department describes the initial test runs as an "experimental service," which is part of a two year, federally sponsored demonstration of the practicability of speedy rail passenger service along the crowded and heavily populated Washington, D.C.-Boston corridor that leads through New York City.

KARACHI (AP) - Pakistan has successfully launched its first rocket into space, the Pakistan Space and Upper Atmosphere Research Committee announced. The two-stage missile carried scientific equipment to investigate the upper atmosphere, the committee said.

Security Council Condemns Israel For Jordanian Village Air Attack

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP)- In a vote that split the Big Four powers almost on the eve of Middle East peace talks, the Security Council condemned Israel Tuesday night for an air attack on a Jordanian village.

The Soviet Union and France voted for the condemnation resolution, which was approved 11 to 0 with 4 abstentions. The United States and Britain, objecting that the resolution was one-sided, were among the abstainers.

While Israel smarted under the second condemnation voted by the council since last Dec. 31, diplomats predicted the long-range effect of the council action would not be great.

The votes in the council were regarded as logical in view of the public positions taken previously by the Big Four ppwers. Hope for any progress in securing peace in the Middle East rested with what could be accomplished in private diplomacy.

The resolution, sponsored by Pakistan, Senaegal and Zambia, condemned "the recent premeditated air attacks launched by Israel on Jordanian villages and populated areas in flagrant violation of the U. N. charter and cease-fire resolutions."

The resolution also warned that if Israel repeated the attacks the council would have to consider further steps envisaged under the U. N. charter - a reference to possible sanctions and even use of military force.

Increases Funds House Committee On Internal Securit

WASHINGTON (AP) - The rechristened version of what used to be the House Committee on un-American Activities showed undiminished muscle Tuesday by crushing an attempt to cut off its funds and getting $25,000 more than it received last year.

The House voted 305 to 51 to provide the House Committee on Internal Security with $400,000 this year.

Opponents of the committee used the name-change resolution in February as the occasion for an unsuccessful attempt to reorganize or abolish the committee.

Southwest Counseling Head Is Student Sounding Board

By PAULA SABLE
Staff Correspondent

As head of counseling services in Southwest, Mrs. Norma Gluckstern spends most of her working day providing vocational advice and administering to the needs of more than 3500 students.

"Besides working with individual students, I also work with the counselor-training programs that have been set up this year," she says.

Similar services exist in each residence area on campus. These counselors were based last year at the Counseling Center in Whitmore. This year, they were moved to each residence area, in order to be more easily accessible.

"Many students have problems which they'd like to discuss, but feel shy about going to the mental health center on campus," according to Mrs. Gluckstern. "Many of their problems are not serious enough to require mental health treatment. I generally see what I can do to help a student. If the problem seems to be something I can't handle, I will encourage the student to visit the mental health center."

The bulk of Mrs. Gluckstern's personal counseling is of a "personal crisis" nature: "Something happens and a student needs someone to talk to. In this case I often act as a sort of 'sounding board'."

Mrs. Gluckstern's work also includes vocational counseling.

"This semester, we sent letters to all students who are on academic probation, inviting them to discuss their problems with us. It often happens that academic problems are the result of more personal problems," noted Mrs. Gluckstern.

The bulk of her clientele seems to be freshmen who are having difficulty adjusting to their new life.

"I think one of the greatest drawbacks is the fact that my office is not well publicized," Mrs. Gluckstern said. "Aside from the letters sent out to students on academic probation and to swing shift freshmen, we generally rely on heads of residence and dorm counselors to refer students to us. Many students are unaware of our services. I am in my office every day. Students may reach me by phoning for an appointment or by simply dropping in."

Daily Collegian Editor-in-Chief Don Epstein announced yesterday that the campus newspaper will hold an open house next week. All members of the University community will be invited to the Collegian office to ask any questions which they may have pertaining to the operation of the newspaper or editorial policy.

Industry Increases Salary Offers To Bachelor's Degree Candidates

Recruiters in business and industry have spurred their activity at the bachelor's degree level this season in making beginning salary offers to college seniors.

The number of offers to bachelor's degree candidates has risen 13 per cent since last year at this time, according to Robert J. Morrissey, director of placement and financial aid services at the University of Massachusetts, one of the institutions participating in the College Placement Council's 1968-69 survey of beginning salary offers to college seniors.

Up to the cutoff date of Feb. 13, 12,238 bachelor's offers had been reported from 122 representative institutions compared with 10,824 last year and 10,606 two years ago when recruiting activity hit the previous record peak.

Offers on the master's and doctoral level have experienced a slight decrease. On the master's level, only 1,762 offers were reported as against 1,780 last year and 2,577 two years ago. The same pattern is reflected on the doctoral level with 459 offers this year, 485 last year, and 592 two years ago.

Based on dollar averages, chemical engineers continued to be the most sought after candidates at both the bachelor's and graduate levels since June, 1965. At the master's level, their average offer went up 5.7 per cent and at the doctoral level their gain was 4.4 per cent. They were followed by electrical, mechanical, metallurgical and aeronautical. Accounting majors, however, have had the largest percentage increase since last June with a gain of 7.7 per cent.

Salary increases for non-technical offers to bachelor's candidates have advanced more rapidly than technical offers. Non-technical averages went up 7.3 per cent from $657 last June to $705. Technical averages, rising from $767 to $813, were up 6 per cent over June.

Employers in public accounting, aerospace, chemicals and drugs, electrical machinery and electronics were the main contributors to the increased number of offers at the bachelor's level. Based on dollar averages, firms with the largest increases in salaries were food and beverage processing, research and consulting, public accounting, chemicals and drugs, glass - paper - packaging, and metals and metal products.

Sirhan Denies Suggestion That His Amnesia was Fake

LOS ANGELES (AP) - Sirhan Bishara Sirhan leaped to his feet in a table-pounding rage Tuesday after a state witness suggested he faked amnesia to mask premeditation in the assassination of Sen. Robert F. Kennedy.

"He wanted very much to kill Kennedy. . .Sirhan at no time expected to be a martyr," said Dr. Seymour Pollarck, the state's star psychiatric witness at the first-degree murder trial of the 25-year-old, Jordanian-born Arab.

Pollack rejected defense claims that Sirhan was in a psychotic state and not meaningfully and maturely responsible when he shot Kennedy June 5, 1968, while the senator was campaigning for the democratic presidential nomination.

The psychiatrist's testimony apparently found favor with the defendant at first. He consistently has grown angry when described as mentally ill, although he has testified he does not remember shooting Kennedy.

"See, the doctor said I'm fine," Sirhan was said to have told one of his lawyers.

Sirhan also has said he doesn't remember writing "RFK must die" repeatedly in his pocket notebooks before the assassination. It was by dismissing this claim that Pollack inadvertently triggered Sirhan's outburst.

Pounding the defense table, Sirhan sprang erect.

"Your honor, sir. . ." the slight defendant cried, before guards forced him back into his chair.

"You settle down or I'll do what I told you I'd do," Superior Court Judge Herbert F. Walker warned Sirhan.

A previous outburst in the 12-week trial led the judge to threaten to have Sirhan bound and gagged in the courtroom.

Nixon, Ky, Others Discuss Vietnam

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Nixon reviewed development in South Vietnam and "the progress of the Paris talks" during the past month Tuesday with South Vietnam's vice president and chief Paris negotiator, Nguyen Cao Ky.

Ky was one of a dozen foreign leaders who came to the White House in a parade of limousines to confer with Nixon throughout the day on world problems ranging from the Vietnam war to youth demonstrators.

The substance of the talks was not disclosed by White House spokesman.

Press Secretary Ronald L. Ziegler said Ky and Nixon in their half-hour meeting reviewed the situation since they last talked in Paris March 2 during Nixon's European visit. But he would not say what progress, if any, they talked about.

The foreign dignitaries came to Washington to attend the funeral of former President Dwight D. Eisenhower. Nixon devoted his entire day to them with an hour's luncheon break.

He met with such leaders of the Shah of Iran, West German Chancellor Georg Kiesinger, Prime Minister John G. Gorton of Australia, the presidents of Tunisia and the Philippines and several prime ministers.

Spectators Flood Abilene Home Town Prepares for Ike

ABILENE, Kan. (AP) - While a funeral train bore his body across the country Tuesday, Dwight D. Eisenhower's home town prepared to pay him final homage within a few steps of his boyhood home.

Helicopters in Salina, 23 miles away, will bring President Nixon to the ceremony after he flies there from Washington.

Army authorities estimated between 50,000 and 100,000 persons will flood into Abilene to watch the funeral procession cover the 12 blocks from a railway siding to the gleaming Eisenhower Library where the funeral services would be conducted.

The special train bringing the former president's body is expected to reach Abilene this morning. Plans called for the casket to be moved to a hearse at 11 a.m. EST Wednesday.

Along the train's westward route, thousands gathered in cities and villages, at the few stops and at crossings in tribute to the former president.

Nearly 6,000, police estimated, turned out in the southern Indiana city of Seymour to watch the train pass through the town of 13,000. School children were dismissed from classes to join the crowd.

In other places, too, flag-waving school children marked the passage. At Huntington, W. Va., thousands gathered in the early morning chill when the train made a 12-minute stop in the city. Hundreds stood at trackside in other West Virginia communities.

Eisenhower's widow, Mamie, and their son, John, and other members of the family were aboard the train. Whether they would remain in their cars until the beginning of the rites was not disclosed. An Army official said Mrs. Eisenhower had requested that all such information be kept private.

Meanwhile, the train headed westward toward St. Louis, almost back on schedule after earlier delays. It left Cincinnati at 10:38 a.m. and was due in St. Louis late Tuesday.

Elaborate ceremonies had been planned at the Cincinnati Union Terminal during a one-hour layover, but were canceled at the request of the Eisenhower family.

At Mrs. Eisenhower's request, the C&O draped the funeral car with black bunting and American flags while the train stopped in Cincinnati.

Edgar Eisenhower, older brother of the former president, emerged from the train briefly to extend the family's thanks to officials and the City of Cincinnati and other cities which had planned the memorial.

Hancock Freedom Award to Recognize Excellence in Collegiate Journalism

BOSTON - Independence and excellence in collegiate journalism will be recognized again in 1969 with the Freedom Award established last year by the John Hancock Mutual Life Insurance Co., according to a recent announcement by Dr. Dario Politella, president of the National Council of College Publications Advisers.

The Award consists of a bronze statuette of John Hancock, first signer of the U. S. Declaration of Independence, and $250 in cash. The 12-inch statuette is valued at $250. It is a miniature of the heroic sculpture by John Manship which now stands in the lobby of the John Hancock Building in Boston.

Selection of the winner will be made by the National Council of College Publications Advisers. The 1969 Award will be presented at the Americana Hotel, Miami Beach, Fla., during the annual joint meeting of the NCCPA and the Associated Collegiate Press, Oct. 30 - Nov. 1.

Politella said, "Because this Award recognizes that today's responsible campus editors will be tomorrow's leaders in business, education and government, its winners typify the best of America's young student journalists who continue to illustrate the responsibilities of a free and independent press, whether on the campus or in real life."

Hancock Statue

Any student member of the editorial or business staff of a college or university student publication published in the United States is eligible for the Award.

Each entrant should submit a letter and clippings summarizing their efforts, along with a short biography.

Judges for the award will be a panel of nationally recognized authorities selected by the NCCPA. The deadline for all entries is May 15, 1969.

Entries should be mailed to: Dr. John A. Boyd, Executive Director, NCCPA, TMU-401, Indiana State U., Terra Haute 47809

Graduate Student Senate Accepts Proposed Changes in Graduate Fees

A variety of topics, ranging from the harrassment of Sen. Strom Thurmond at his recent appearance on campus to the structure of fees for graduate students occupied the Graduate Student Senate meeting last Monday night.

The Graduate Student Senate voted to censure the behaviour of members of the audience who physically interfered with the DVP speech of Sen. Thurmond (Rep., (South Carolina) or rushed his auto as he left the Cage on March 19. In a connected action, it voted to commit to study a motion which would focus attention on lack of foresight and omissions of the university administration and the DVP program administrators and at the same time recommend policies which in the future would serve to reduce the seriousness or avoid altogether such incidents.

The Graduate Student Senate adopted in toto the Faculty Senate resolution calling for the appointment of an Ombundsman for the university. The resolution came out of a report by Sen. Brad Whipple (sociology) who is one of the GSS nonvoting delegates to the Faculty Senate.

The Graduate Student Senate voted to call upon President Lederle to establish the proposed Civilian Review Board to handle complaints about the behaviour of members of the campus security forces. A proposal to establish such a board was drawn up last month, but according to President Thomas Minogue the administration has not as yet taken final action on it.

The GSS voted to accept proposed changes in the fee structure for graduate students. The fee changes were reported by finance committee chairman and treasurer Ethan Roberts who was the chief representative for graduate students in the discussion of the revised schedule. Roberts was commended by the Senate for his work in the matter.

The proposals must be presented to the Board of Trustees for adoption. A full explanation of the proposals will appear next week in the DAILY COLLEGIAN.

Sen. Allan Hartwell (geology) was confirmed as the representative of the Graduate Student Senate to the Treasurer's ad hoc parking committee.

President Minogue announced the opening of nominations for the next crop of officers for the GSS to be elected by the present members of the GSS on April 28. The terms of the present officers expire this spring. Nominees must be graduate students but need not be members of the Senate.

Nominations may be filed at the GSS office in room 216 of the Student Union, with departmental graduate senators, or at Graduate Student Senate meetings on April 14 and 28. The GSS office is open 12:30 to 3 p.m. Mondays through Thursdays.

SU Program Council Seeks New Members

The Student Union Program Council, a division of the Student Union Governing Board, is the group which plans the many dances, exhibits, and movies held throughout the year.

The Program Council offers areas for the development of any interest you may have. Special Events run the Bridal Fair, and the Halloween and Easter Parties for faculty and staff children.

The Dance Committee sets up registration dances such as this year's dance with Blood, Sweat and Tears, Recreation runs pool, bowling, bridge and ping-pong tournaments.

The Art Committee attempts to keep the S. U. art corridor filled with a variated bi-monthly art exhibit. And at the end of the year the light standing committees combine forces to bring a Spring Weekend to the campus, formerly known as HER Weekend.

Currently we are running our Spring drive for new members. Applications for both Committee Chairmanship and Committee Membership are available in the RSO Office on the second floor of the Union.

83 Juniors and Seniors Elected To Phi Beta Kappa Honor Society

The UMass Chapter of Phi Beta Kappa has announced the election of 12 juniors and 71 seniors in recognition of outstanding scholarship in liberal arts and sciences. They will be initiated on Friday, April 25, according to Professor Sidney Wexler, President of Nu Chapter at UMass.

For seniors, the chapter revised its by-laws this year to elect in the spring a smaller group than in the past. Additional seniors may be elected in the fall on the basis of their total academic record. Newly-elected seniors, together with four members of the class elected last year as juniors, comprise about 6% of the Class of 1969.

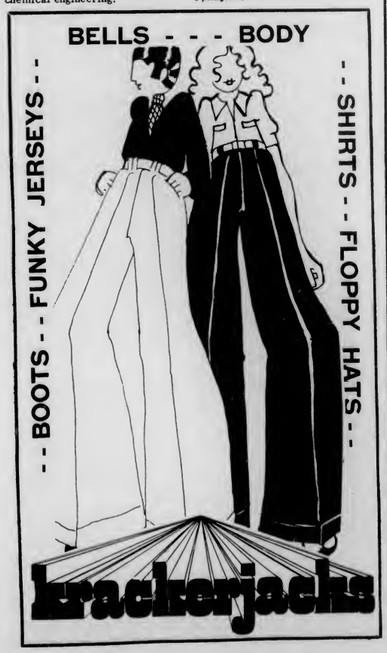
Chem. Engineering Awarded Two Research Grants

UMass has announced receipt of two federal grants to support research in the department of chemical engineering.

The U. S. Navy Office of Naval Research has granted the University $13,257 to continue a research study on the dropwise condensation of mercury.

The project, under the direction of Dr. L.H.S. Roblee, Jr., professor of chemical engineering, involves the study of systems where in mercury vapor condenses on metal surfaces. In such systems, the heat transfer rate can be significantly improved if the condensation forms in droplets rather than a film.

The National Science Foundation has granted the University $57,600 for the study of the "Periodic Performance of Chemical Processes" under the direction of Dr. James M. Douglas, professor of chemical engineering.



UMass Sends Medical Books To Malawi

American Ambassador to Malawi Marshall P. Jones recently presented a collection of medical books to the library at Queen Elizabeth Central Hospital in Blantyre, Malawi, as part of the continuing role UMass is playing in the development of that Central African nation.

UMass chose Malawi to be the recipient of the medical books, a gift from William Hubbard of Sunderland, an antique dealer who obtained the books from the estate of a local doctor. It was stipulated in the doctor's will that the books should go to any hospital in Africa.

In acknowledging the thanks of the hospital staff at Malawi, UMass President John W. Lederle said "our links to Malawi are numerous and diverse. I am certain that our human resources, both here and in Malawi, will continue to interact for the benefit of Malawi long after our AID contract terminates in 1970."

Tabloid Exorcism

I was talking to a friend of mine the other day, who, of late, has turned into somewhat of a radical. His name is Alphonso Lipschitz, and I asked Alphonso the reason he had discarded his former liberal philosophy. He replied, "Because the country is run by the M.I.C.E. and we have no control over our own lives."

If Alphonso thought the country was being run by mice, I had reason to believe he has gone bananas. I asked if he was really serious about mice running the country. He seemed exasperated at my question and said, "Man, don't you know anything? M.I.C.E. stands for the Military-Industrial Complex and Establishment." I was semi-embarrassed at my ignorance, nevertheless, I asked him how he knew this, preparing myself for anothe r realization of my ignorance.

Alphonso immediately produced the latest issue of "Damp-parts" the radical magazine. "It's all in here" he said, giving it to me. I looked through it and saw articles such as, "An Expose of the Number One Fascist Organization in America - the Boy Scouts", and "The New Cult Hero of the New Left - Magilla the Guerilla", and "If You Buy Girl Scout cookies You are Supporting Fascism", and the cover story, "Che's Second-Cousin Raps".

After I finished, Alphonso handed me some other New Left publications, "The West Village Something-or-Other", "The Wall-list", and "Everblue", among others. After looking through these publications I asked Alphonso if he bought that stuff all the time. He told me he did and I asked him how much they cost him every month. Alphonso replied, "Oh, it runs me about seven or eight dollars every month." Then I said to him, "Alphonso this junk is just a waste of money. The stuff they put in here isn't true and they know it. They realize that there are plenty of people like you who are ready to grab at any little morsel about the Establishment that they throw at you. I thought you were an intelligent person, Alphonso, how can you believe in this junk?"

"A person has to believe in something," replied Alphonso.

Credibility

The increase in the amount of educated people in the United States and throughout the world has resulted in the practice of one forming his own opinions on persons and issues rather than relying upon others and accepting their conclusions at verbatim. Past experience has shown that it is a common human trait for one to try to make his position more secure by emphasizing those facts which favor that position. The arguments against are either under-stressed or exiled to oblivium.

A most prominant example of this is the handling of the Vietnam conflict. The majority of American newspapers and magazines and even one of the most respected news commentators, Walter Cronkite, all echoed the "gung-ho" attitude of the administration. Defense department statistics and evaluations of the war-efforts by American commanders seemed to be the primary sources of information. The muffled murmer of dissent soon permiated well-respected members of the news media. When reasonable, rational answers couldn't be obtained to questions, dedicated journalists risked their citizenship to go to North Vietnam and obtain Hanoi's responses. Within a relatively short time, thought provoking data came to light. Often it was in contradiction to that released by the administration and presented by most of the news media. People became aware of the credibility gap; and out of the resulting desire to be well-informed and factual they no longer depend upon one or two sources.

Moreover, people have realized that if there can be a credibility gap concerning Vietnam, any issue can be clouded by a credibility gap. Therefore, they prefer t o evaluate a situation first hand, if possible. This is why many chose to attend the Strom Thurmond lecture. Why rely upon another's opinion when you have the means to make your own judgement? And now many condemn these students as racists for wanting to listen to someone like Thurmond, for being disgusted with the circus that took place.

The audience should have been given a chance to "see" and "hear" for themselves the Strom Thurmond that the demonstrators thought they knew. Instead they "saw" and "heard" the type of student that Strom Thurmond, Ronald Reagan, and other "campus reformers" claim is fast becoming predominant on American campuses. What a dissappointment!

Kern Speaks

To the editor:

I have been literally deluged with copies of the March 19th article on the History Department in which, not surprisingly, I was the only critic to be quoted. Yet not even I approved of that story since the situation is better left alone, at least for someone no longer affiliated with UMass. My only real feeling is one of relief to be away from the scene altogether, since it may represent the most uncomfortable academic situation in all of America. Essentially, then, a pox on both sides.

Still, I see all the old sophistries being trotted out in the rest of the article. The statement attributed to me was in turn called "mendacity" - a lie - but this does not jell with the fact that the letters exist. Moreover, the AAUP says that it is unethical for a department chairman to send an unsolicited letter to another department once a contract has been signed, as was the case in this instance. Surely chairmen at other schools are not so unkind to departing staff members? What justifies such a letter in the first place if the same man who sent the letter also hired me, gave me a substantial raise, and even tendered a new and better contract shortly before the letters were written? Leaving a department, after all, is not usually treated as the ultimate heresy. All I wanted to do was get away and do my academic work in an atmosphere which was not contaminated by a perpetual civil war. In that context "passing on the comments to a friend" is a bit much. One can find nasty things to say about anyone if you work hard enough at it, but with the timing in my case I say that constitutes foul tactics aimed deliberately at ruining a career.

As for the canard that critics of the department or those who leave do not publish, I am proud to announce the publication of my first book, with a second in readers' hands right now. So take that and stuff it, UMass history department. Any other department could only be a step up.

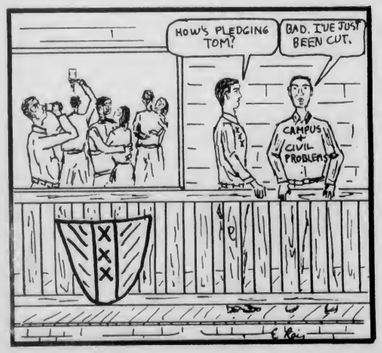
Famous

To the editor.



Well, three cheers for UMass!! We've finally become internationally famous. Was it for a new scientific discovery? Well - no. Was it for hiring some brilliant new professors? Well - no. And it certainly couldn't be for distinguished and inspiring leadership, for we don't seem to have any at all!

We've become famous for anarchy and obscenity. The new game here is try anything, for no one is going to tell you to stop, and cause as big a commotion as possible. Sure, you were in the papers last week, but what are you going to do today??

Now let's give credit to the leftist scholars who have made us famous. Time magazine wasn't their only achievement. Their obnoxious behavior, not unsimilar to Nazi Storm-Trooper actions, has also reached the Paris edition of the International Herald Tribune.

Since most kids don't agree with, and can't stop, the animals from running loose; where is the administration? Or do they condone our new-found image and image makers??

To the editor:

Friday, April 4, is the first anniversary of the assassination of the Reverend Martin Luther King Jr., who was respected around the world as a tireless civil rights leader and crusader for peace. He won the Nobel Peace Prize and was a symbol of hope to millions of underprivileged people in this country.

In honor of his memory, the Martin Luthe r King, Jr., Social Action Council is presenting a week-long memorial program, culminating April 4 in a memorial service and a series of workshops devoted to investigating many of the problems to which Dr. King gave his life.

We wish to commend the Martin Luther King, Jr., Social Action Council for this imaginative and constructive plan for honoring the memory of a great man of peace. We urge all members of the University community, students and faculty members alike, to participate as fully as possible in the scheduled activities honoring the memory of Martin Luther King, Jr.

Liberals?

To the editor:

Regarding the Strom Thurmond lecture: I am appalled.

I am appalled that so many students wrote letters criticizing the "liberals" who heckled Thurmond. It seems that any college student should be well-enough educated to realize that the hecklers were not liberals. Liberals don't do things like that. They don't want to get involved.

Liberals sit attentively at lectures being given by racists who have been paid (how many?) dollars of their money tell them that it is noble, honorable, and in the American tradition to kill twenty (give or take a few) yellow people to save the life of one white (American) person, rather than to remove that white person from the area of danger.

Liberals applaud and defend (through proper channels, of course) the freedom of speech of a racist who refuses to answer a question about starving blacks in his state (for whom he refuses to seek or accept Federal money for Welfare, better education, medical aid, and job training) while he rambles on about how badly we need a missile defense system which will require a down payment of at least 3 billion dollars, and which both the Defense Dept. and the President admit will be ineffective.

Liberals get mad at black people who are angry at the system's slowness to change, instead of directing their "madness" at the fact that the system IS slow. Liberals turn out en mass to hear Strom Thurmond, George Wallace, Richard Nixon, and Hubert Humphrey exercise their right to free speech, but ignore anyone whose statements might upset them.

Liberals are polite to assassins and mass-murderers, granting them fair trials with the best lawyers, or high office (witness James Earl Ray and Sirhan Sirhan, of LBJ, Richard Nixon, and Strom Thurmond), but are happy to condemn without hearing those who are evil enough to be so improper as to interrupt a public speaker.

Liberals rationalize their attendance at obviously conservative lectures by saying they want to hear both sides, or to hear the man make a fool of himself, and then feel the man has been legitimized because somebody pointed out his foolishness to him, publicly, while he was making a fool of himself.

The hecklers were wrong. They were wrong because they forgot that liberals don't listen to issues - they are much too bush being polite. Next time, hecklers, go and applaud, then ask polite questions at the end. It's a much more effective (and liberal) way of registering disapproval.

Gilbert J. Salk

Shocked

To the editor:

I wish to express my shock and outrage at the behavior of a substantial portion of the audience attending Senator Thurmond's lecture. No amount of rationalization can mitigate the fact that Mr. Thurmond was not able to present his views, and I believe that this is indicative of UMass as a whole. In this academic community, tolerance of divergent opinions has been appallingly disregarded.

WASHING (AP) - Creation of the annual Robert F. Kennedy Journalism Awards for exceptional newspaper, magazine, and broadcasting coverage of the problems of the disadvantaged was announced Sunday.

The sponsoring group is headed by Dan Blackburn, Metro-Media News, Hays Gorey, Time magazine; Hohn Hart, CBS News, and Richard Harwood, The Washington Post. They said:

"Robert Kennedy was deeply concerned with the problems of the disadvantaged in American Society. He also had a deep respect for working journalists. The awards are consequently made in his memory.

May 1 is the deadline for entries. The awards will be presented in Mid-June at a dinner in Washington.

Campus Comment

Klansmen

To the editor:

I was totally disgusted with the rude reception given to Senator Strom Thurmond by the "klansmen," and shocked at the hypocrisy of the so-called "liberally-minded" students. Firstly, no one was required to attend the lecture. If they felt so strongly against the Senator, there were several REASONABLE courses of action they could have taken - 1. stay at home, 2. AFTER he'd finished speaking, challenge his thoughts by asking relevant questions, 3. write him a letter, 4. make others aware of their opinion by expressing it in the "Collegian" or 5. protest quietly outside the Cage without disrupting his speech.

Comment: Senator Thurmond faced YOU openly - you didn't have the guts to do the same.

The "Klansmen" have a right to disagree, but Senator Thurmond was invited to speak here, and he has a right to do so. Furthermore, we have a right to hear his views.

To the "Klansmen": You wore your clothes well.

Gail Syrjanen

Thurmond

To the editor:

The appearance of a racist and warmonger such as Strom Thurmond presents a serious dilemma to anyone who is concerned with drift of American society. How should one react? Should he maintain his respect for the freedom of speech as the most important of all his values? Or should he make known his rage at monsterous policies which are being aided by the University's "Distinguished Visitor"?

Certainly it is difficult to find fault with black students who interfere with a man such as Thurmond. Their righteous anger goes beyond anything that we whites have ever known, or are ever likely to know, in our lifetime. This misery, the degradation, the injustices which have been the result of Thurmond and his ilk cannot be discussed in the same breath as the discomfort some suffered as a result of the disruptions of Wednesday night. Many people left very smug in the conviction that they would never interfere in the right of anyone to speak; but if they were black could they have remained silent?

The unfortunate part of the episode was that the protestors played right into the hands of the speaker. Protest, if skillfully executed, should lead to a confrontation of issues; it should force the apathetic by-stander to see the rightness of one's cause. What happened last night was quite the opposite. The demonstrators themselves became the issue, and the real cause they wished to focus upon - that of Thurmond's racism - became lost. Thurmond instead of being the ogre of reaction which we expected to see, was transformed into a harmless man with a bad throat trying to assert his right to speak.

The idea of entering the hall in Ku-Klux Klan regalia was basically a good one. Certainly the sight of Thurmond speaking before a collection of sheets and hoods is a poignant statement on the man and his politics. But then the most effective manner in which the protesters could have made their point was to have allowed Thurmond to speak his piece and let everyone hear him for the ass he is. All last night accomplished was to give the majority of the audience an easy way out of recognizing that men like Strom Thurmond run our government.

Stuart J. Davis

King Council

To the editor:

The Martin Luther King Jr. Social Action Council board of director embarrasses the memory of the man from whom they borfor their name.

If I read the Council's statement and Mr. Salk's accompanying remarks correctly, the Council intends neither to contribute anything meaningful to the painful dialogue on campus recruitment, nor to throw it s weight behind the 33 anti-Dow demonstrators. No, nothing either that intelligent or that extreme.

It is far more important to chastize "bad grace" and "churlishness" on the part of those men who responded with reason and restraint (and, incidentally in the best interests of those 33 students) in the face of another Hydra-confrontation. One would have thought that, albeit administration ergo suspect, the statements of Associate Provost Allen had presented facts enough on how patiently, maturely, yet REALISTICALLY the situation had been handled.

I find myself in ine perplexing position of supporting the mode of provoking debate, but also supporting the necessity of dealing with the provokers with the law at hand. The issues are difficult enough; slapping the wrists of the administration adds nothing. It only serves to diminish the voice of the Council.

To my knowledge, very few martyrs have been beatified in their own lifetime! Perhaps the self-righteousness of some of our twentieth century martyrs should be enough reward in theirs

Bill Reopell

Fitting

To the editor:

The Ku Klux Klan represents to me the epitome of denial of human rights. That the costume of the group who denied one man his right to speak and two thousand others their right to listen was borrowed from this organization is indeed fitting.

Birds of a feather . . . .

Baker Trial

To the editor:

Hats of to Baker House! The courage of the house judiciary certainly should be recognized as exemplary for, as you know, this past Tuesday evening Baker House tried itself, found itself guilty, sentenced itself to three days loss of open house privileges, selected the three less damaging days to serve the sentence and then indicated that it did not intend to appeal the decision.

First let me remind the most worthy court that normally a judge must disqualify himself if he has personal knowledge or interest in a case. It would, therefor, seem only proper that the case be forwarded to an unbiased court whether it be another house of the area judiciary.

Secondly, the sentence is so ridiculous that it should become a feature story for the next issue of YAHOO. Thirty lashes with a wet noodle would have greater effect. If the house is guilty of some flagrant violations of the University Open House Policy the court should deal with a firm hand.

Finally, the whole situation is beyond the comprehension of this individual. Why should the area co-ordinator or the Board of Trustees feel it their responsibility to administer the moral standards of the campus. This is not to suggest that each dorm become a brothel but the "Father Confessor" image just doesn't fit administratively appointed positions.

What's New in Men's Fashions?
Today's fashion trends bring forth the subtle touches of a darted front . . . the slight widening of a lapel . . . a more pronounced or shaped bodyline throughout. And here, footwear becomes a most important part of the total look. A slim-line slip-on, with gently shaped front and strap ornamentation, admirably meets this new tailored look in men's clothing. This is the well-bred Bostonian look. Rich. Tasteful. And definitely this year. Bostonians are available at (store name).

Neurological Institute for Children Opens in Worcester, New England First

The Indian Lake Academy Worcester, a non-profit, tax exempt, orgnization has opened the Massachusetts Institutes for Neurological Development at 36 Holden Street in Worcester, for brain-injured children, cerebral palsy, mentally retarded, dyslexia, and special class children, also those children with learning and reading difficulties.

The new M.I.N.D. is an accredited affiliate of the Doman-Delacato Institutes For Achievement of Human Potential in Philadelphia and is also an accredited and certified unit of the World Organization for Human Potential. These children are evaluated by staff members trained by the IAHP in Philadelphia.

Joseph D. Noonan Jr., the Director of the new institute has just finished taking the Director's course. He has been working with children with learning and reading disabilities for the last 12 years and has been using the Doman-Delacato theories for the last 7 years with excellent results. These results were among the best in the country and were published in Dr. Carl H. Delacato's latest book "Neurological Organization and Reading" published by Charles Thomas Publisher. Noonan is Headmaster of Indian Lake Academy.

After these children are evaluated they are programmed and then the parents are taught what to do and how to do the programming in the three receptive modalities of vision, auditory and tactual competence and in three expressive areas of mobility, language and manual competence.

The Doman-Delacato program will also help normal children to reach their true potential at an early age, reading, writing, etc., before they enter first grade. This is carried out at the Indian Lake Academy's Montessori school for normal children.

MIND is the first affiliated and accredited institute of the IAHP to open in the New England States embracing the entire spectrum of brain-injured children.

Anyone interested in learning how to get their child on the program please call Mr. Joseph D. Noonan at the Indian Lake Academy or the Massachusetts Institute for Neurological Development at (617) 754-6025, or write to 34 Holden Street.

There will be a lecture by members of the staff of IAHP from Philadelphia in early April.

Defecting to Canada Has Become Moral Dilemna

By BRUCE KOBRITZ
Staff Correspondent

With the number of young Americans defecting to Canada increasing since the Viet-Nam troop build-up beginning 7 years ago, the question arises whether they are disloyal radicals or sensitive Americans. A senior preferring to remain anonymous, was contemplating the move to Canada and found himself in a moral dilemma.

"I am opposed to serving in a combatant unit because I feel physical violence is a primitive, unsuccessful means to solve problems," he said.

"I first opposed the draft when I thought it would interfere with my career goals. I wish to live as least violently as possible. I am totally opposed to any agent wanting to violently change the U.S. I am in favor of the basic U.S. system."

If not bothered by the draft he said he would continue his education in law school. A long range goal is to aid the U.S. by working for peace through the U.N.

"If the draft prevents me from going to law school I have three choices, I could join Vista, postponing induction for a year; enlist in the reserves, but this would be impossible due to the long waiting list; or I could go to Canada.

"I want to live in a humane society where individuals can structure their own lives. This opportunity does not exist in this country."

Supreme Court Ruling Extends Conscientious Objector Class

BOSTON (AP) - A U.S. District judge ruled Tuesday a 1967 draft law may violate the Constitution because it allows conscientious objector exemption on religious grounds, but not to genuine objectors to war if they happen to be atheists or agnostics.

Judge Charles E. Wyzanski suggested the case of John H. Sisson Jr., 23, of Lincoln, go to the Supreme Court of the United States and he granted a motion of "arrested judgement" for Sisson pending a final ruling.

Sisson was convicted by a federal jury refusing induction because of his claim the Vietnam war was illegal and immoral. Judge Wyzanksi stressed in a 21-page ruling that he was not ruling on those claims, but only on whether Sisson had a right to claim exemption as a conscientious objector.

"The court . . . concludes that in granting to the religious conscientious objector, but not to Sisson a special conscientious objector status, the act, as applied to Sisson violates the provision of the First Amendment that Congress shall make no law respecting the establishment of religion or prohibiting the free exercise there of," Judge Wysanski's opinion said.

Sisson applied for exemption as a conscientious objector in 1968, but failed to fill out the required form because his claim was not on religious grounds.

Wyzanski refused to comment afterward on how his ruling differed from a 1966 U.S. Supreme Court decision that said the provisions of the Selective Service Act exempting conscientious objectors from military duty should be interpreted broadly.

The Supreme Court ruling said the provision should not necessarily be confined to those with orthodox religious beliefs. The decision said the test should be whether objection to bearing arms is sincere and meaningful.

Negro Folk Music Lecture Topic for International Club

At the International Club coffee hour tonight Mrs. Mary Wyat will give an illustrated lecture on the history of negro fold music in the United States.

Mrs. Wyatt, who is a community worker in Hampshire County, took up this study when she was a student at the DePauw University Conservatory in Indiana and has since collected a lot of unpublished material.

The International Club meets at 6:30 in the Colonial Lounge of the Student Union.

Fraternity Park Opens with Ground Breaking Ceremony

By NEAL MURPHY
Staff Correspondent

"Fraternity Park is now a reality," according to William Richards, assistant dean of men.

Dean Richards made the statement during recent ground breaking ceremonies for the first house to enter the park, Phi Mu Delta.

Located on the northeast corner of campus, the park has many unique features going for it. Dean Richards said, "It is the first such project of its kind in the country." The park is privately developed by fifteen individual fraternities and sororities.

"I'm quite proud of what the brothers at Phi Mu Delta have accomplished," he said. "Not just because they were the first ones to enter the park but the way in which they have worked hard towards their goal. They have worked in close conjunction with their national headquarters and alumni to make it all possible."

Like many fraternities and sororities on campus, the Phi Mu Delta house was considered inadequate for proper housing. For this reason, the chapter has worked closely with alumni in consulting architects and contractors for a new house. It was through the alumni they they were able to obtain the necessary finances.

Dean Richards hoped that by 1970 several other houses will have started construction in the park. "Officials of the University are aware of the importance of the park and will do everything they can to help it along," he said.

"I feel that a lot of serious planning has gone into the park and am proud that UMass is the first in a concept of this sort. It is a credit to the Greek system on campus."

College Students Can Live And Work Abroad For Summer

The U. S. National Student Travel Association's Exchange Visitor Program, the official travel bureau, will sponsor a cooperation exchange with Great Britain, Ireland, Australia, and New Zealand.

The aim of the program is to encourage international understanding through the exchange of students for educational and cultural experience. This will be accomplished by living and working in these foreign countries.

Because of the exchange nature of the program, the governments of these four countries have authorized students of the NSTA program to obtain work permits to defray their travel and living expenses. NSTA will arrange for a special visa enabling students to work for a maximum of three months during the summer.

Students will attend a two-day orientation on their arrival with NSTA's foreign counterparts. These meetings will inform the students of companies employing Americans, different jobs available, and how to look for them so that the jobs will be suited for the particular capabilites.

A $55 fee covers all orientation costs plus entry permit. In Australia, New Zealand, and Ireland, NSTA can prearrange jobs for $10, the jobs are generally in resorts, factories, or sales work.

In order to qualify, students must be currently enrolled in a U. S. college or university, be 18 or over be in good health and have had previous work experience.

For further information write to NSTA, Dept. R, 70 Fifth Ave., New York, N.Y. 10011. Telephone: (212) 989-7070.

Muski Cites Liberal Position Of Student Doctors

CHICAGO (AP) - Sen. Edmund S. Muskie, D-Maine, told a group of student doctors Tuesday that "few physicians have become deeply involved in this generation."

Addressing the annual convention of the Student American Medical Association, he cited race relations, poverty, education, war and peace, and economic growth as being among these problems.

"It has too often been true," he said, "that the medical community has not involved itself in the affairs of the greater community."

The areas of public health, preventive medicine and environmental health have been considered separately from the field of medicine, he said.

The SAMA has often taken more liberal positions, particularly on political, social and economic issues, than the American Medical Association, and Muskie noted several times in his speech and during a question period afterward that the students represent a challenge to the establishment.

Concert Association To Feature Greek Pianist

Gina Bachauer, the noted Greek pianist will be featured as the sixth event in the University of Massachusetts Concert Association 1968-69 season. This event will take place on the University's Amherst campus on Monday evening, April 7 at 8:00 p.m. in Bowker Auditorium.

For this engagement, Mme. Bachauer has selected a program including Beethoven's "Waldstein" Sonata; B Minor Sonata by Chopin; Robert Schumann "Scenes from Childhood and finally Liszt's "Rhapsodie Espagnole". Gina Bachauer made her debut in 1936 under the baton of her countryman, the late Dimitri Mitropoulos. Her career was frustrated due to the War and when she resumed concertizing in London in 1946 she was an immediate "hit" with English as well as European audiences. Her American debut took place in New York in 1950 and since that time, she has visited this country nearly every season as a recitalist and soloist with the country's major symphony orchestras. Allen Hughes, New York Times music reviewer best describes this artist when he said, "If Gina Bachauer did not exist, no one could invent her because it would be impossible to imagine the precise combination of physical characteristics, aristocratic stage manners, blazing technical brilliance and remarkable musical insights that make her the woman, pianist and interpretive artist she is."

Tickets for Mme. Bachauer's UMass concert are available without charge to UMass undergraduates upon redemption of their Concert Association ticket stub and reserved seats for the general public are priced at $1.50 and may be obtained by contacting the Student Union Ticket Office.

Folk-Rock Singer To Appear at UMass In Evening Concert

Eric Anderson, nationally known folk-rock singer will appear in concert Thursday evening, April 3rd at 8:00 p.m. in Bowker Auditorium, UMass.

Anderson has recorded six major record albums and is also credited with writing his own material which is also used by such prominent colleagues as Judy Collins, Pete Seeger, Peter, Paul and Mary, and Johnny Cash. Eric Andersen has been a featured performer in many major folk festivals in the east including concerts in Boston's Jordan Hall and Town Hall in New York.

Eric Andersen's concert at UMass is sponsored by the Martin Luther King, Jr. Council with the cooperation of the Fine Arts Council. Tickets are priced at $1.50 for UMass students and $2.00 for the general public, and are available by contacting the Student Union Ticket Office or Melody Corner Records stores.

School of Business Administration To Hold Panel Discussion on Art

"The Artist as an Automobile" is the subject of a panel discussion and multimedia demonstration which will take place in the University of Massachusetts School of Business Administration Auditorium #120 on Wednesday, April 2nd at 8:15 p.m.

Taking part in this unique program will be Lawrence Alloway, Mark Roskill and Robert Mallary. Mr. Alloway is a noted writer and critic on art. He first worked for the Institute of Contemporary Art in London and has contributed articles to "Encounter as well as other magazines. Mr. Alloway is credited with coining the phrase "pop art" and was important in publicizing and promoting the pop art movement. He taught at Bennington College, was Curator of Contemporary Art at the Guggenheim Museum in New York and is currently on the faculty at the State University of New York at Stonny Brook and is a contributor to "The Nation".

Mr. Roskill is currently an Associate Professor Art at the University of Massachusetts/Amherst. He has written on renaissance art, but also specializes in contemporary art, having written books and articles over the past ten years. Mr. Roskill has been a contributor to various international art magazines.

Robert Mallary is an Associate Professor of Art at the University of Massachusetts/Amherst. He teaches sculpture and is widely known for his experimental work in new art techniques and media. At present he is involved with a computer sculpture project. Mr. Mallary has had eighteen one-man shows and his works are represented in private collections as well as the Museum of Modern Art in New York, the Whitney Museum of American Art and in the collection of Governor Nelson A. Rockefeller of New York. Michael Brenneman, a technical assistant in the UMass department of Art and Steven Braude will also assist in the event, which is open to the public without charge, and is being presented through a grant of the University's Fine Arts Council.

UMass Lacrosse Scrimmages Undefeated Thru South

Coach Garber: We Did Ourselves Proud

By PETER PASCARELLI
Sports Editor

A budding UMass lacrosse powerhouse flexed its muscles by sweeping undefeated through a spring trip, in full scrimmage play. The trip was further brightened by the almost total absence of injury, something that plagued the stickmen on last year's trip.

The vacation trip went from Connecticut to New Jersey to Delaware and to the Mecca of lacrosse, Maryland. Surroundings were not a factor for the Redmen, however, as they were victorious on all fronts.

The team first traveled to play the Connecticut Valley Lacross team, which includes many former New England college lacrosse players. The Redmen rolled to a 14-4 victory in what Coach Dick Garber called a "real good workout."

UMass then traveled to New Jersey, to the Princeton campus. The team arrived an hour before the scheduled starting time, but it didn't seem to hurt anyone. The Redmen won, under regular game conditions, 12-7.

Leading the well-distributed scoring attack were co-captain Kevin O'Connor, Tom Malone, Carl Schulthesis, Gary Vassar and co-captain Steve Connolly, while Mark Schlossberg and John Orr divided the goaltending duties. Garber used everyone on the trip during the course of this game, something he was able to do many times on the trip.

The following day, Tuesday, the Redmen again lockedhorns with the Tigers, after a practice session in the morning. Again UMass won, this time by an 8-4 score. Again the scoring was distributed evenly, with Bob Florin picking two scores to lead the offense.

Wednesday of the busy week saw the Redmen arrive in Baltimore for what proved to be a long and interesting day. They scrimmaged Bowling Green, a team that had defeated Hobart and Loyola the previous days. Playing at Johns Hopkins Field, which is somewhat akin to the Madison Square Garden of lacrosse, UMass fell behind early 2-0, but goals midway in the first period by Malone, Connolly, and O'Connor set off an explosion that gave the Redmen a 10-2 halftime lead.

The final score was 14-4, a pleasing victory for Garber, who said, "we beat a real good team". The rest of the day was pleasing also for the team as they visited the Lacrosse Hall of Fame which was coincidentally situated in the Johns Hopkins gym, and a dinner at the home of Scholssberg's parents who hosted the unbeaten party of 35 Redmen.

Thursday, UMass was scheduled to scrimmage Loyola, but the Baltimore school begged off due to a large number of injuries. This cancellation, however, helped provide for what was possibly the highlight of the trip. Coach Garber arranged a scrimmage session with nationally ranked, perennial lacrosse power, the Naval Academy at Annapolis.

After practice sessions of half field and extra man work, the two teams scrimmaged full field. Navy came out on top 3-2 for the short period the teams played. However, UMass scored well during the practice work, and shocked the Midshipmen, who the previous day had edged Denison College, 3-2, by scoring a fast break goal off a faceoff.

Friday, UMass traveled to the University of Delaware to meet Dartmouth and won a short scrimmage 4-1, outplaying the Indians badly. The Redmen then traveled in uniform, to New York to defeat City College 13-2. UMass then capped its scrimmage schedule with a 9-7 win over Harvard, in a session held at Adelphi College on Long Island. This last win was highlighted by a left handed goal shot from midfield by midfielder Bruce Fulton.

Garber could find nothing bad about what was an encouraging week for the Redmen. "We did ourselves proud, by winning them all, against fine teams. We played well and showed great potential."

"We showed good strength in all positions. Both goalies are excellent, and right now I'll have to alternate Orr and Schlossberg because I really can't say who should start."

The UMass coach, now in his 15th year at the Redmen helm, also gave his defensemen a boost. Co-captain Tom Tufts and Bill Devore were termed "outstanding" by Garber while crease defenseman Roy Condon was a pleasant surprise and will start. Fran Bositis and Al Ruggiano also played well on the trip and will both see action working on the side defense.

Garber started a first midfield of Steve Connolly, Steve Chambers and Gerry Forgit and the coach was pleased with the combo, saying "it gives us two good scorers in Connolly and Forgit and an excellent defensive and face off man in Chambers".

The second midfield was made up of Bob Florin, Steve Anderson and Schulthesis, who moves from his attack spot to give both positions that much more depth.

John Hartnett of the third midfield suffered the only injury of the trip and is a doubtful player in next week's opener. He was joined on this line by Bob LaChance and Tom Brennan. Bruce Fulton moved up to third midfield, after the injury, leaving a hole in the fourth midfield which includes Brad Tilley John Gannon. Garber said of these last two groups, "Their ability to play good defense, and not be scored upon was very encouraging."

It's the attack group which brings the biggest smiles to Garber's face. O'Connor, a bonafide All-American, Malone, and Schulthesis are a combination that wasn't stopped to many times all season.

Schulthesis' ability to play midfield, plus the presence of high-scoring Gary Vassar as a fourth attackman, gives the attack what Garber terms "a diversity that will be exciting to watch."

Also playing well at the attack spot on the trip were a trio which Garber calls his "mighty midgets." The group includes the sophomore tandem of Ed Sacco, Mike Henry, and Steve Hershcopf, whom Garber will use in spot play.

It was a satisfying week for the stickmen but it was work as usual yesterday on the practice field. Garber said "I told them that as good as we did on the trip, we are still 0-0. We can't afford to get any fat heads and think we are world-beaters. We will be facing a tough Wesleyan team in our opener next week and can't overlook anyone."

But the coach could not resist adding, "We should be pretty exciting to watch this year though."

PITY THE POOR GOALIE - UMass All America candidate Kevin O'Connor moves in to scoring position on opposing goalie in action last year. Number 60 in background is attack man Gary Vassar. These two contribute to what should be a prolific attack for the Redmen. UMass coach Dick Garber looks for an exciting season but cautions against over-confidence.

UMass Captain 1st in Rifle Meet

On the first Saturday of the holidays the UMass varsity rifle team went to a National Rifle Sectional Meet at M.I.T. to compete against nearly 100 of the best collegiate Marksmen in New England.

Maine, the New England Champion from 1968, together with the 3 runners-up. Norwich Military Academy, Coast Guard, and M.I.T. were expected to win most of the awards, while UMass was there to gain useful practice for this year's New England Championship Meet on April 12th.

John Lacouture, the UMass captain was in first position in the first relay and calmly fired a record breaking 277 out of 300 points for 3 positions. This was good enough to place him first out of all 85 other contestants, but it wasn't for another two hours after John had finished firing that this was apparent. One other rifleman, Dick Bangs of Maine, equalled John's score of 277 but the tie-breaking rules gave John the championship on the basis of his incredible 96 out of 100 for the kneeling position.

John's score of 277 was his and the school's highest score ever and was 14 points above his average for the season. This score will now compete against winners of sectionals all over the country. Last year's National Champion won with a score of 284.

LACOUTURE

The other UMass boys finished well down the list, although Dave Sears and Dave Craig broke personal records with scores of 264 and 255, respectively.

In the tea m event UMass had two teams of four entered, and although the majority shot way above form, the Redmen could not put four really high scores together and could only finish 6th out of 20 teams behind Norwich, Maine, M.I.T. Coast Guard, and Northeastern. Even so, the UMass boys can be proud of the fact that as a squad of 10 - the usual team number - they shot better than ever before. Again personal records were broken by Dud Darling with 262, Jim Outram 262, and John O'Donoghue with 260.

With four people to shoot and four to count, a certain degree of luck is involved in winning but what all the teams involved were concerned about was how they are shaping up for the New England finals on April 12th, again at M.I.T.. At this meet - the last of the season - ten people shoot and the top five count for the score.

The winners of these finals will almost definitely be from the first 6 teams of Saturday's meet. John Lacouture has proved that anything can happen. He won a championship after shooting for only 18 months.

Red Sox Top Yankees, 2-0; Culp Goes Eight Innings

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla(AP)- Ray Culp and Sparky Lyle limited the New York Yankees to two hits Tuesday as the Boston Red Sox recorded a 2-0 exhibition baseball victory on a pair of unearned runs.

The Sox scored both their runs in the second when rookie Bill Burbach walked four batters, one forcing in a run. Another came home on third baseman Bobby Murcer's error.

Culp, who pitched the first eight innings, gave up both New York hits. They were singles by Jake Gibbs in the third and by Murcer in the fourth.

76ers Upset C's, 119-116; Boston Now Leads 3-1

BOSTON (AP) - Archie Clark led the way with 29 points and Hal Greer hit two clutch baskets and a pair of free throws in the frantic closing minutes last night as the Philadelphia 76ers upset Boston 119-116 to stay alive in their opening National Basketball Association playoff series.

The Celtics lead 3-1 in the best-of-7 series in the Eastern Division which now goes back to Philadelphia for a fifth game Friday.

The score was tied at 109 when Greer, whose lack of scoring punch has hurt the 76ers in this series hit on a long jumper with 2:18 left to give Philadelphia a lead it never relinquished.

Matt Goukas sank a free throw and then Greer tossed in his two charity throws and another basket to keep the 76ers in front.

Greer wound up with 23 points and Darrell Imhoff had 22 in addition to battling Boston's player-coach Bill Russell to a standoff under the boards.

John Havlicek led the Celtics with 28 points.

The lead changed hands 22 times and the score was tied on 13 occasions in a furiously fought first half, with the 76ers emerging on top 57-55.

With Havlicek, who scored 21 of his points in the second half, continuing to connect, the Celtics opened up a 95-90 lead early in the final period.

Imhoff outbattled Russell in the next few minutes to pull the 76ers in front again 98-96.

Moments later, with the score tied at 100, Tom Sanders hit on a three - point play and Larry Siegfried followed with a basket to move the Celtics into a five-point lead befor 14,017 fans at Boston Garden.

Again the 76ers tied the score at 107. Then Railey Howell's field goal put the Celtics in front for the last time, 109-107, before Clark hit two free throws to tie the score and Greer went on his spree.

DVP Visitor Jimmy Breslin Discusses Contemporary Topics

From the mouth of Jimmy Breslin: "I wanted to take an alert 95 IQ and attack the problems of the world." This jocular attitude with its underlying serious strain set the mood for the Distinguished Visitor's Program speech last night by the award-winning reporter.

Speaking for half an hour and then answering questions from an audience of about 375, including many professional journalists, Breslin touched on many contemporary topics, including the decline of New York City, the Chicago convention, modern news reporting, student unrest, and probably most interestingly, himself.

He recently quit the newspaper business, because he wants to devote himself full-time to writing books. His book currently in progress, "The Gang that Couldn't Shoot Straight," is about the New York Mafia; the book has already been bought by a movie company. Breslin, a native New Yorker, calls his hometown a "wounded city . . . the Saigon of this hemisphere."

He said that all the battles fought for this country will have been fought for nothing if something isn't done about saving New York. Mayor Lindsay to him is "the one worst administrator in the history of the world . . . but at least he will face things that no one else will face."

His view of news reporting: "I don't see any reason why you should work on a paper unless you can do a job, do it effectively, and have some effect on the situation." He said that the role of the newspaper in society is changing, and the newspaper that gets ahead is the one that "comes up with a solid viewpoint on a serious subject."

He pointed out the effectiveness of young people in journalism today, saying that they are facing up to responsible things in reporting. Newspapers today want people with brains and ability, and he said, "There is a great demand for quality."

On censorship: "Any time you put yourself in the position of censoring something, you're crazy; you make a fool of yourself."

He said of the underground press: "Where it's good, it's very good . . . some of the work they do is terrific." However, they should "concentrate on truth" rather than on the shock value of obscenity; "The typewriter isn't an instrument to curse with."

He told the audience that the blame for the Chicago convention riots "starts with the top." He blasted Mayor Daley for his "arrogance, bull-headedness, age, and resistance to change." The Chicago police were only a reflection of the attitude of the community, he said, and the prosecution of eight policemen was unfair.

He said that he did not believe that the press played up sensationalism in respect to the convention. Breslin, who witnessed the riot, termed it a "police riot . . . a very frightening thing," saying that Humphrey's refusal to do anything about it cost him the election.

Of student unrest, he said that when you bring police onto the campus, that's when the trouble starts; "Cops and college students don't mix."

Student Senate Swears in Officers, Acts on Co-ed Dormitory and Budgets

by Anne Giardina
Staff Reporter

Another Senate year was begun as the newly elected officers were officially installed at last night's meeting. The swearing in ceremonies of Pres.-elect Balboni, Vice-Pres.-elect Olken, Secretary-elect Beharry and Treasurer-elect Gauthier took place before the meeting.

The Student Senate began its meeting by going into special business to approve turning Greenough House into a co-educational dorm. Senator Verrochi's bill instructs the Senate to endorse and wholly support the idea of co-educational residence halls and recommend to the Dean of Students and the Board of Trustees that the idea and feasibility of co-educational residence halls be fully explored and implemented on this campus.

To deal with specifics, Verrochi introduced another bill which names Greenough House as the first to become co-educational in the year 1969-70. This proposal also goes to the Dean of Students and the Board of Trustees for their consideration and approval. Both bills were approved unanimously. Female students and new male students will be chosen by lots. Parental permission is required for those students under 21.

Also under special business, a motion was made by Senator Dudash substituting a new Student Government Association Constitution for the present one. This motion will be taken up at the Constitutional Convention to be held later in April. This new constitution "is a comprehensive statement regarding the rights and freedoms, academic and social, to be guaranteed by the Student Government Association for all students under its jurisdiction."

One of the more important items in this document is the Bill of Student Rights. The Committee on Student Government Affairs stated in a printed rationale that "there are certain basic rights of students individually and collectively, in the fields of intellectual inquiry, critical commentary, and social life, which are and ought to be inalienable."

The Senate next proceeded to settle their financial affairs in the forms of WMUA, Spectrum, and Index budgets. Students will soon be hearing WMUA broadcasts in stereo as the Senate approved the necessary purchase. It will become effective in the Spring Semester of 1970.

The Spectrum was given a vote of confidence by the Senate as it defeated a bill to reduce the budget. The reduction would have resulted in one less issue. There will be four issues next year.

MLK Council Charges Discrimination

Two representatives of the Martin Luther King Jr. Social Action Council will be meeting with the President of the University of Massachusetts Thursday at 11a.m. to discuss racial discrimination on the UM campus.

The King Council has been conducting research into the hiring practices of construction companies working on the campus. There are presently two major construction projects under way each costing several million dollars, and two new multi-million contracts have recently been signed.

Last summer the King Council and the University administration held a meeting with representatives of the major local contractors to discuss apparent employment discrimination. At the time, only one black man was employed on construction work. The contractors agreed at that time to make a concrete effort to improve the situation.

A recent count of construction workers, taken as they were coming to work in the morning, revealed that out of over 300 men working at the two sites, there is still only one black man. The King Council next did a spot survey of the workers at the end of the day. Eighty-seven men were interviewed. Twenty-nine or one third, live d in the Springfield-Holyoke area, which has a large black population. An additional 9% come from other areas with over 5% black populations.

Although the area immediately around the Amherst campus has relatively few black residents, this does not explain the lack of black construction workers, for only 22% of the men interviewed lived within a 10-15 mile radius.

With these figures in hand, and with the results of nearly a year's additional research into union and contractor hiring practices, Rev. Ronald Hardy, Chairman of the King Council's Board of Directors, and Gilbert Salk, founder and Executive Secretary of the King Council, will present the following statement to the President:

Members of the Martin Luther King Jr. Social Action Council and the University of Massachusetts community at-large who deplore racial injustice do hereby petition the President of the University to request:

1. of the proper authorities, that all future contracts for University construction work contain a clause requiring that a guarantee by a contractor that there be equitable minority group representation at all levels, and that the contractor shall assume the burden of proof if he fails to fulfill his guarantee; and

2. of all contractors presently working on campus, that the University being aware of serious injustices existing at present work sites, demands that immediate corrective steps be taken. Weekly statements of the progress of these steps should be submitted, beginning two weeks from today, to the President of the University, who will then forward copies to the Executive Secretary of the

Sierra Club Presents Conservation Lecture

By ROSE L. MILLER
Staff Reporter

UMass' Sierra Club presented Mr. David R. Brower last night speaking on the "Activist Role in a Quality Environment for the World". Mr. Brower related the individual's role in conservation to the changing role of a growing National Sierra Club organization.

The Sierra Club was founded in 1892 by John Muir to explore, enjoy, and preserve the nation's scenic resources. The present membership has reached 75,000 in the United States with other countries showing marked interest in the club's activities.

Mr. Brower believes individual action as in the case of student demonstrations against the destroying of the Redwood Forest in California can make a difference in warning people about the dangers of "technology gone rampant," as Mr. Brower terms the destruction of the United States' natural resources. Plans are to continue publicizing the technology's failure to account for the waste involved in unwise engineering projects.

Mr. Brower emphasized that a student can dramatize the problems of saving the environment by "good trouble", demonstrating and picketing for the future.

Quoting from Adlai Stevenson, Mr. Brower concluded the speech by comparing the planet earth to a spacecraft which can be preserved with fragile love.

Putting the finishing touches on the final act, members of the UMass Operetta Guild prepare for opening night next week. "How To Succeed In Business Without Really Trying," the Guild's final production of the season, will run April 10-12 at Amherst Regional High School. (Photo by Ara Dedekian)

Landmark Opinion by Boston Judge Declares Draft Unconstitutional

Judge Charles E. Wyzanski Jr. declared in U.S. District Court in Boston that the Selective Service Act is unconstitutional because it discriminates against atheists, agnostics and others who -- religious or not -- object to the draft for profound moral reasons.

In a landmark opinion which surprised the crowded courtroom and the defendant, a young man who had refused induction into the Army, Judge Wyzanski set the stage for a U.S. Supreme Court ruling on the constitutionality of the 1967 draft law.

The judge submitted his opinion in the case of John Heffron Sisson Jr., 22, of Trapelo Road, Lincoln, who was found guilty by a jury in the same court on March 21 for refusing to submit to induction.

Sisson, who based his refusal on a claim that the Vietnam War is illegal, could have been sentenced to five years in prison and fined $10,000.

However, Judge Wyzanski, without ruling on the legality of the war, granted a defense motion for an arrest in judgement, thus staying the sentence. The move will enable the U.S. Justice Department to appeal to the U.S. Supreme Court.

Asst. U.S. Atty. Stanislaw R. Suchecki, the prosecutor, said he would recommend to Justice Department officials in Washington that they carry the case to the high court.

In his opinion, which required 54 minutes to deliver, Judge Wyzanski commented: "In short, in the draft act Congress unconstitutionally discriminated against atheists, agnostics, and men, like Sisson, who, whether they be religious or not, are motivated in their objection to the draft by profound moral beliefs which constitute the central convictions of their beings."

About 50 spectators, most of them young friends of the defendant and a number of young men facing similar charges, sat enthralled as Judge Wyzanski, in a high-pitched, soft voice, delivered his opinion.

The decorum was broken once. He had warned against a demonstration. But a ripple of laughter rose when the jurist referred to an opinion of Lt. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, Selective Service director, and said: "This court has a more open mind."

Judge Wyzanski peered over his black-rimmed half glasses, raised his left hand like a policeman stopping traffic, and the laughter subsided quickly. The smiling spectators grew restless as he neared the end of his opinion and it was obvious that he was prepared to let the U.S. Supreme Court settle the matter.

When he completed reading the document, he instructed Sisson not to consider the opinion an acquittal or a removal of the charges but a respite until the high court acts on the case.

MLK. . .

Martin Luther King Jr. Social Action Council, the Presidents of the Student and Faculty Senates, and the Editor of the Massachusetts Daily Collegian.

According to Salk, the presentation is timed to co-incide with the Martin Luther King Memorial Week program presently being conducted at the University. Friday, the anniversary of King's assassination, will be marked with a Memorial March. At the conclusion of the march, a support rally for the petition will be held on Haigis Mall, opposite the Administration Building, at which time the statement will be publicly presented to the President.

"This is intended to be a living memorial to Dr. King," Salk said. "It deals not only with the simple, outward manifestation of racial discrimination, but also goes much more deeply into the problem. The anti-discrimination clause in the contract will be an intense pressure on labor unions to open their doors to minority groups. If the unions cannot or will not make black and Puerto Rican workers available to the contractors, they in turn will be unable to fulfill the requirements of the contract.

"This is an excellent opportunity for those who are opposed to legislated integration to deal with a local problem locally," Salk added.

The Martin Luther King Jr. Social Action Council is an organization of over 300 students, faculty members, and administrators at the University of Massachusetts.

Black Panther Bomb Plot Uncovered

NEW YORK (AP) - A Black Panther plot to bomb five Manhattan department stores on Thursday during the Easter shopping rush has been broken up by indictment of 21 members of the militant Negro group, Dist. Atty. Frank S. Hogan said Wednesday.

Twelve of the defendants were arrested and pleaded innocent before Supreme Court Justice Charles Marks. They were held in $100,000 bail each over the objection of their attorneys, who claimed the amount was unconstitutional.

Those in custody included Robert S. Collier, 31, convicted in 1965 of plotting to blow up the Statue of Liberty and other national shrines. Police said Collier was the Black Panther minister of education for the New York area.

Two of those indicted are in prison in New Jersey and the remaining seven are still sought, Hogan told a news conference.

He said the conspirators, intending to damage the white "power structure" on Thursday, plotted to:

— Set off bombs in the mid-town stores of Macy's, Alexander's, Bloomingdale's, Korvette's and Abercrombie & Fitch. The bombings were to be accompanied by gunfire in the crowded stores.

— Dynamite tracks of the Penn Central Railroad at six locations in Harlem, through which the busy commuter line passes on its way to the mostly white suburbs.

— Bomb a police station in the Morrisania section of the Bronx to divert police from the railroad bombings.

Hogan credited city detectives with uncovering the new plot. Police said they confiscated a number of guns, three home-made pipe bombs, a five-pound can of blasting powder, some bomb parts, a knife and a dagger.

Police say undercover agents have foiled two earlier plots - the 1965 Statue of Liberty scheme and a 1967 plan to begin guerrilla warfare in New York.

How It Happens

S.U.G. Board Member Discusses New Campus Center

By KAREN TAGGART
Staff Correspondent

One UMass student who has had a prominent role in planning the gaping hole and the odd cement structure beside the Student Union which will become the long-awaited Murry D. Lincoln Campus Center is Rick Volpe.

As a senior member of the Student Union Governing Board, Volpe has a part in deciding the fate of the new facilities. Understanding the role S.U.G. Board actually played in the planning, he said, "is contingent on understanding how something like the Campus Center happens. It can start with a few students with an idea which they talk over with more students and then with administrators. Eventually bids go out and an architect is hired."

In the case of the Lincoln Center, the architect is Marcel Breur, and the people instrumental in his hiring were Dean Leo Redfern and Walter "Terry" Grinman, chairman and manager respectively of the Campus Center. "After the plans are approved," Volpe added, "they must be financed. The money for the center was acquired by floating loans with the Massachusetts Building Authority. An amortization schedule is then set up to decide how the money will be paid back over the years. Bids go out to construction companies, one is hired, and the actual groundbreaking begins."

S.U.G. Board begins an active part in the plans by allocating rooms for specific activities. "S.U.G. Board's goal is to get the most use out of the facilities available. A major problem, however, is in maintaining campus interest in the old building. Everyone want s to move into the new building."

In the new building, students would have 24 hour access to the first three floors. Zerox machines and committee meeting rooms will be available on this basis. One possibility is that the old Hatch will become a Rathskellar and the new Hatch, a permanent coffee house. The problem of where to sell textbooks could be alleviated by the new book store, which is planned with enough entrances and exits to facilitate shipping and receiving, he said.

Because at least two bars will be operated, the issue of the dry campus must be resolved. Students over 21 will be allowed use of the bars but as yet the issue of whether or not the rest of the campus will follow suit has not been discussed, Volpe added.

The eighth and ninth floors are "beautiful" restaurants, the ninth surrounded with a terrace from which patrons sipping their after-dinner drinks can view the entire campus. These restaurants will eliminate the necessity of leaving the campus for pledge formals and other dinner affairs.

In summing up he said, "It looks pretty ugly now, with all the mud. But it is a beautiful building, one of which we can be proud. We'll be on the map before they're finished."

NYU Offers Teaching Work-Study Program

Liberal arts graduates can earn while they learn to be elementary school teachers beginning this September at New York University's School of Education.

The NYU apprentice teacher curriculum, a joint effort of the School of Education and New York City's Board of Education, leads to a master's degree in education and to New York State certification.

Students will start course work this summer and in September be assistants in city schools. They will be paid $2.50 per hour for 22 to 25 hours weekly. At the same time they will take eight to ten points of academic work at NYU each semester. Further study follows in the summer of 1970.

Further information can be obtained from Prof. Florence Lewis, Division of Early Childhood and Elementary Education, School of Education, South Building, New York University, New York, N.Y. 10003, telephone 598-2228.

Community Life Festival Tonight

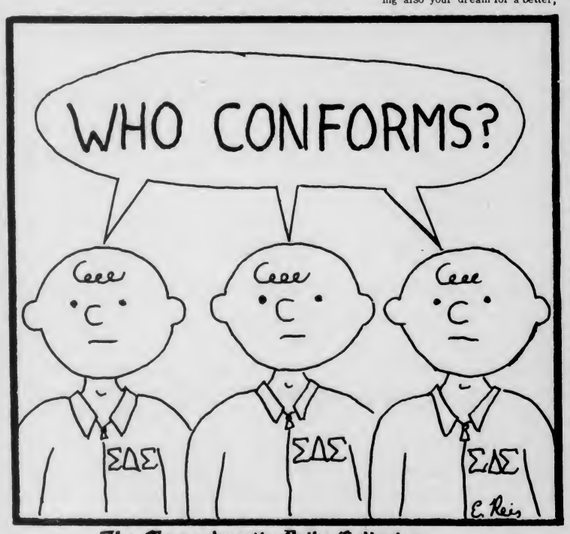
Justification



Ever since the Thurmond speech and ensuing demonstration took place, there have been many questions that have arisen concerning Senator Thurmond, D.V.P., and the demonstrators. It has been surprising, even shocking, to me that most of these questions have revolved around the issue of free speech, when free speech is hardly at issue in this instance.

First of all, Senator Thurmond is without question an open racist of the worst kind. In other words, he is a blind hater, and this is clearly evidenced by the fact that hundreds of black people have been literally killed by him as a direct result of his policy of cutting federal welfare aid rather than integrating the welfare staff. This is, of course, something that the federal government should have dealt more strongly with, rather than just to have given up and let Thurmond and others like him have their way, but nonetheless the fault remains with Thurmond and his comrades who made the decision that killed hundreds.

With these facts in mind it is bewildering the D.V.P. would have even considered having such a person come here to this supposedly liberal, integrated campus to spread his hate philosophy. And as to both sides of the question; one hears both sides of a question if one is intending to make a decision between the two sides. As to Thurmond's side, it is obvious that he offers nothing that anyone here would be interested in considering. In fact his philosophy is so alien that it is not worth listening to. After all this is an intelligent society- supposedly.

And as to the demonstrators, it should be obvious by now they were perfectly justified in their actions. It was a question of either condoning the Senator or denouncing him. - the demonstrators made the decision. As to right or wrong, black or white; in instances such as these the question is not clear cut. One could ask the question, what would have happened if Hitler had been invited to give a talk here at the University. Should one such as he be welcomed here and given "free speech"? How many people did he allow free speech to when he was boiling, broiling, and burying people. Well Thurmond is to black people what Hitler was to the Jews. Honestly, could justice have been served by granting Thurmond his right to speak? Was justice served by denying him that right? As mentioned above, it's not a question of right or wrong, black or white. It is a question of justification.

Questions

To the editor:

The disruption of Strom Thurmond's speech on March 19th poses the most important questions for all of us.

At the outset I should state that I am not a supporter of Senator Thurmond. On the contrary, I am a radical, and as such, Thurmond represents for me the worst in American life, all that is ugly and brutal. I find his views nonsensical at best, and odious at worst.

But what we are discussing - this must be absolutely clear - is not Thurmond's views, but his right to express them. I am not going to attempt here to argue the doctrine of freedom of speech. In the first place, better men than I have done so, but more fundamentally, one does not logically "convince" a person of something like this. As a self evident truth, one either believes in it or one doesn't. Further, it is a gut feeling, rather than something one arrives at intellectually; it has to be, for men do not fight and die for purely cerebral commitments. Therefore I see little point in debating free speech with those who will not see it.

However, I do wish to address myself to the agitators who would still claim, illogically, to be in favor of free speech. I do so because I am a radical, sharing your disgust with this society, and sharing also your dream for a better, more humane America. I can only guess at your rationalizations for disruption, but I know that these rationalizations spring from a frustration I share in.

First there is the notion that we live in a fascist state, thinly papered over by "bourgeois civil liberties" and "bourgeois democracy", and since this is the case, we need not play by the enemy's rules. In a way I wish this were true; it would make things so much simpler. But, "it just ain't so." America is a democracy, however imperfect. It was theoretically possible, for instance, for a left-wing third party to have won the 1968 elections. And the freedoms of speech, assembly, and press were generally protected for the left in 1968. Given these facts, it is ridiculous to label that democracy and those civil liberties as "bourgeois." A country is either a democracy or it is not; one may not agree with the choices of the people, but that does not make the country undemocratic.

But then, one can always argue that the people have been brainwashed, that if they were really aware of the facts they would feel differently, and that, since this is the case, our only alternative is to fight fire with fire, to disrupt the brainwashing sessions. This is the worst of all possible arguments. It is also important, for it exposes the profoundly reactionary element in today's radicalism. That element is elitism: a snobbish contempt for the people, and a parallel belief in the superior morality and wisdom of a radical cadre. I do not believe that the people need be "protected" from Strom Thurmond or anyone else. On the contrary, the need is for public exposure to our point of view as well as Thurmond's - not through screaming and shouting, but through the undramatic, often painful method of talking with people. The real reason the disrupters chose screaming over talking was precisely a lack of faith in the ability of people to choose right even when they have "all the facts." (Nowhere is this more evident than in the attitude of the radical activist here toward the average UMass student)

Finally, there is the highly emotional argument that the only moral and human response to the burning of babies in Vietnam and the starvation of babies in South Carolina is an angry militancy. How can I disagree? But what is militancy? Does it preclude intelligent thinking? If one is really committed to changing society, then surely one has an obligation to think clearly and logically about goals, strategy, tactics, allies, and to act accordingly. You owe it to those you say you care about, the victims of the military industrial complex. You say the student who sat quietly listening to Thurmond was not helping to affect change. But were you? All you succeeded in doing was releasing your own frustrations. The Vietnamese and the American poor cannot afford the luxury of frustration politics.

I say all this to my fellow radicals in the hope that some will stop and think. But I am not optimistic. Therefore I must voice my approval of any court action taken against the disrupters. Perhaps the decision to use only plain-clothes policemen was a wise one, though it certainly was not wise to allow students to mount the platform. In any case, this is a policy which has proved unworkable. During future speeches, police must be employed in large numbers, with the power to arrest disrupters.

Next, let me address myself to a number of liberals whose actions were cowardly and hypocritical. Let me make it clear that I am not speaking of all liberals, by any means. But I saw far too many people, obviously opposed to Thurmond, who appeared indifferent to the disruption, and who failed to applaud O'Connell's statement, "He has a right to speak." These are people who could be up in arms if their darlings, Humphrey and McCarthy, got similar treatment. Their willingness to let revulsion against Thurmond overrride commitment to free speech was a real failure of nerve.

Finally, let me say something to those who, like myself, were shocked and angered by the assault on free speech. You must judge Thurmond's views as you would have had no disruption occured. Was what he said good sense? Was it right? The fact that Thurmond was deprived of free speech cannot be used to justify the war, or the starvation of ten million Americans, or the squandering of billions on a missile system which will be obsolete by the time it is completed. Most of all, this incident cannot be used to justify racism, and the past and present oppression of black people. On March 19th Thurmond looked like a martyr, a man of courage, a spat upon and mistreated "little man". Those who look at his record will find him to be something quite different: a hater, a racist, a militarist, a cruel, hulking bully.

The trouble with Wednesday, March 19th, was that too many people let their emotions run away with their minds. I started by saying we have questions to face. To the radicals I would ask: Are you going to let your feelings prevent you from thinking? Are you going to resort to a frustration politics which attacks man's most cherished possession, and succeeds only in moving the country to the right? To the liberals I would ask: Are you going to let your feelings prevent you from thinking? Will you refuse to stand up against something you know is wrong because you do not like the victim of the injustice? To those who went to hear, and not to jeer, Mr. Thurmond, I would ask: Are you going to let your feelings prevent you from thinking? Will you illogically support Senator Thurmond's views because some people did not want you to hear them? The result of a failure to answer these questions could be tragic.

First, the anit-free speech movement must be stopped. And then, those of us committed to social change must work through the normal democratic channels to defeat the Strom Thurmonds of this country.

Money Talks

To the editor:

I deplore the selective morality of those who physically prevented Senator Thurmond from expressing his views. Yet I find even more disturbing the hypocritical lip service now being rendered to the right of free speech and the lack of rational alternatives to physical harassment as a form of protest.

Our society is rapidly coming to a point where the right of free speech is meaningful (potentially effective) only to the powerful - the chairman of the Board at General Motors, a United States Senator, the publisher of a large newspaper, the president of a university. In virtually all cases the powerful come to their power through wealth or association with wealth. In short, free speech has become very expensive speech. Slapping the wrists of dissidents who are aware of their own impotence is no answer; neither is attacking a speaker a solution. If some effective way of democratizing the media of expression is not found the right of free speech will become a curious and non functioning antique out of the pre-industrial past.

High Price of I.D. Cards Explained

By CAROL ZILMAN
Staff Correspondent

"Why do we have to pay $1 for an I.D.?"

"Why does it take so long to get a new one?"

These are the chief complaints at the University among the students, all of whom are required to have the small but indispensable identification card.

The actual cost of the card, not counting the labor involved, is $1.15, according to the office in charge. The approximately $4,000 collected each year covers only part of the manpower costs.

The pictures for the IDs are taken during each of 14 orientation weeks. Each group has approximately 350 students. Prior to getting his picture taken, the student fills out a data card with his name, class, student number, birth date and an assigned film number which goes with each picture. It is then sent to a Connecticut company to be processed and is usually ready for the student in his packet at registration.

Problems do arise, however, when anywhere from 10-50 students in each group do not have their picture taken. They must wait until the beginning of the semester to do so and consequently are delayed about a month because the company becomes overloaded.

Another problem that occurs is that the student purposely gives his wrong birth date, twenty-one is a popular age. As a result, he pays an additional $2 fee for a new card. There is no charge, though, if the mistake is the fault of the company.

If a student loses his ID, he must pay a $2 fee to the cashier in Whitmore Hall and take his receipt to the ID office at 204 South College. There the student will start the process from the beginning. He should have to wait only 2-3 weeks and will get a temporary ID to use during that time. Approximately 750 ID's were lost last year and an increase of 200 can be expected this year, according to Dean William H. Richard. He, along with student Anne Barrett, are in charge of the ID program, working with nine other students under the work-study program. The office is open from 9-4 each day.

A new Polaroid system of ID cards is being considered. It may possibly be cheaper, but it does not provide duplicates which are required by such campus institutions as the infirmary, Dean Richards said. The Polaroid picture itself costs only 21¢ but for four duplicates it balances out the same as the present system.

One benefit of the Polaroid system is that the student has to sign his name in such a way that the upper half of his signature is on his picture. This would decrease the chance of falsifying an ID with another picture, he said.

Many ways of bettering the present system have been considered. One bound to please most students would eliminate the fee by his junior year.

Mrs. Marzieh Gail to Speak on "Literature-Relevant to Religion"

"Literature - Relevant to Religion" will be the subject of a talk given by Mrs. Marzieh Gail Friday, April 4, at 8:00 p.m. in the Council Chambers of the Student Union. The lecture is one of a continuing series sponsored by the Baha'i Association of UMass.

Marzieh Gail brings to her writing and lecture work a broad grounding in both Eastern and Western culture. She is the daughter of the Persian diplomat and scholar Ali-Kuli Khan-Nabil, and is the author of a number of books on historical subjects, among them PERSIA AND THE VICTORIANS and AVIGNON IN FLOWER. The former was recommended by the British Book Society and the latter widely hailed in the U.S. for its knowledgeable and lively evocation of the color and pageantry of life in medieval Provence.

Mrs. Gail graduated "with great distinction" and Phi Beta Kappa from Stanford University and has a Master of Arts degree from the University of California at Berkeley. She was the first woman to work on the staff of a Tehran newspaper. Later she spent ten years in Europe where she did historical research on the Middle Ages and the Renaissance. Mrs. Gail's book, LIFE IN THE RENAISSANCE, will be brought out by Random House this spring. Currently she is translating the MEMORIALS OF THE FAITHFUL from the Persian by 'Abdu'l-Baha'.

WMUA to Honor Martin Luther King

Tonight at 9:00 radio station WMUA will broadcast a special memorial program for the late Reverend Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr., who was assassinated in Memphis, Tennessee, on April 4, 1968.

The program will begin with a eulogy for the famed civil rights leader, spoken by the Reverend Ronald Hardy, chairman of the Martin Luther King, Jr., Social Action Council. The eulogy will be followed by selected excerpts from Dr. King's works, including a taped recording of his "I have a Dream" speech, which Dr. King delivered at the Lincoln Memorial during the March on Washington in August, 1963. The 60-minute program will conclude with a special report by Kenneth Mosakowski, moderator of "Focus" and a member of the King Council, and George Child, president of Delta Chi, regarding their latest progress in the organization of a potentially nationwide drive to collect food and money for poor people in the South who are suffering from severe malnutrition.

Holy Week Observed At Newman Center

To aid Catholic Students in observing Holy week, the Newman Center will conduct a full liturgical program from Holy Thursday to the midnight mass on Holy Saturday. On Holy Thursday the service will begin at 5:15 p.m. with the principal mass of the day commemorating the institution of the Eucharist at the Last Supper. At the end of the mass the Blessed Sarament is removed from the tabernacle and placed in a repository at the side altar. Adoration will continue Thursday evening and on Good Friday until the liturgy at 2:30 p.m.

The Good Friday Service consists of four parts: 1. Scripture Readings from Exodus that recall our Jewish heritage and ends with the reading of the Passion according to John. 2. Series of solemn prayers for all the needs of the Church and mankind. 3. Adoration of the Cross by all the faithful present. 4. Preparation for and reception of the Sacramental Christ. Friday evening at 7:00 p.m. public Stations of the Cross.

The Holy Saturday Easter Vigil begins at 11:00 p.m. The Vigil has two main parts...1. The Light Service. 2. Baptismal Service. The fire is blessed and the Easter Candle is lit to represent the risen Lord. The second part centers around the mystery of baptism and a renewal of baptismal vows. The Vigil is followed immediately by the Midnight Mass. The Masses on Easter will be at 8, 9:15, 10:30, 12 and 7:00 p.m.

Hippie Orgy Disturbs Peace At Palm Springs

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP) - Three policemen were injured and about 200 students arrested, one on a charge of rape and some of the others for allegedly assaulting officers, during disturbances Wednesday at this desert resort.

Police Chief Robert White said the secluded area of Tahquitz Canyon apparently drew large number of hippie types and there were reports of boys and girls running about naked and jumping into private swimming pools.

The outbreaks occurred as some 15,000 students and young people gathered for the Easter holidays.

Rights and Freedoms Archives Established at Utica College

The first quadrantial repository for materials on the rights and freedoms of the college student press has been established at Utica (NY) College of Syracuse University. The announcement has been made by Dr. Dario Politella, coordinator of the national Commission on the Rights and Freedoms of the College Student Press in America.

The first of four such archives to be established in the four compass quadrants of the continental United States, the Utica College repository will receive pertinent materials from the New England States, Illinois, Indiana, New Jersey, New York, Ohio, Pennsylvania and Wisconsin, Politella said.

Curator of the freedoms collection at Utica will be Prof. John C. Behrens, adviser to the Tangerine, student newspaper. The collection will be filed in the reference room of the college library, to which area scholars in the student press field are welcomed, he said.

"When the National Archives for the Student Press is established, next year," Politella said, "duplicates of all materials in the satellite repositories will be available there, too."

No site for the National Archives has been named. There are two campuses now being considered, Politella said.

NES Plans Cultural Activities

While some soaked up the sun over vacation, the N.E.S. Cultural Enrichment Committee busied themselves to provide activities for a month of Saturdays. The activities will involve field trips and N.E.S. Center work. The center work will be left to the individual volunteer's imagination. A regular means of transportation will be provided.

Student-initiated field trips to Amherst are planned. This Saturday the children from Springfield will be coming to UMass to look at the canyon next to the Student Union and visit the Amherst Museum of Natural History. Please check the N.E.S. poster to the left of the Student Union Ballroom for the exact time of the children's arrival at UMass.

For the following Saturdays additional activities have been planned. April 12 a trip to Turner's Falls to see vintage airplanes and some sky diving will be held. A picnic will be featured. April 19 a trip to Westover Air Force Base is scheduled. A field trip to Quabbin Reservoir for all those with strong legs and a lot of energy will be April 26.

Baseballers (2-5) Shell Shocked on Southern Swing

BELMONT, N.C., March 23 - Crafty right-hander Dick Giles tossed a two-hit, 6-0 shutout against the Redmen as Belmont-Abbey made its record 6-2. Giles struck out eight and walked only one. It was only the second UMass day out-doors.

Bob Hansen singled to right in the fourth for the Redmen and relief pitcher Don Anderson doubled off the left field fence in the sixth for the only hits. Shortstop Joe DiSarcina sprained his right ankle in the sixth but finished the game.

COLUMBIA, S.C., March 24 - So. Carolina used a four-run explosion in the eighth inning and a great catch by centerfielder Ron Fulmer to stop the Redmen, 10-2. The Gamecocks used freshmen Larry Erbaugh and Ron Marzullo on the mound and finished with last year's ace Jimbo Smith. Pinch-hitter Chuck Newell delivered a bases-loaded single to center for two runs in the UMass fifth to cut the margin to 5-2, but Fulmer's running catch in deep right center on a Dick Pepin blast prevented a big inning. Trailing 6-2, UMass loaded the bases with two out in the eighth. Smith came in for USC and threw one pitch, which Pepin lined back at him for the third out. Soph Mike Marchev played short in place of the injured DiSarcina.

CLEMSON, S.C., March 25 - The Redmen battled 35-degree temperature, a 20-MPH wind and some hefty slugging by a young Clemson team before bowing 16-10. The 3-hour game saw Clemson make its record 6-3-1 by jumping out to a 12-2 lead after three innings. Tiger frosh Tom White slammed a two-run triple in the first and a two-out, grand slam homer in the second off starter Ken Hughes. Tiger pitchers issued 14 walks and the Redmen slammed out nine hits, including four for extra bases, but stranded 12 runners. Pepin drilled a two-run homer over the left field fence in the fifth and cracked a three-run double in the sixth as UMass fought back. The Redmen had bases-loaded opportunities in the eighth and ninth but salvaged just one run. Nine of the Clemson runs were unearned.

CLEMSON, S.C., March 26 - It was another cold, windy day, and Clemson capitalized on four seventh-inning errors for seven runs enroute to a 13-9 decision. Tiger frosh third baseman Joe Russell started the first inning with a long home run to left center off soph Don Anderson. Two outs later Anderson walked Ed Holland, and Bill Young homered to left. UMass rallied and took a 5-3 lead in the third. Anderson lost control in the last of the fourth. With two out he walked five straight batters for two runs before soph Lou Colabello relieved and struck out Young. Four infield errors, three walks, an infield hit and a three-run wind-blown double highlighted the Clemson seventh. Soph Tom Semino led the Redmen with three hits and Pepin added a single and double. The UMass pitchers issued 13 walks and both teams committed seven errors.

Winston-Salem, N.C., Mar. 27 - UMass celebrated the return to the lineup of shortstop DiSarcina with its initial win, 7-6 over Wake Forest. DiSarcina banged out two singles, including the game-winning hit in the eighth and came up with a nifty inning-ending double play. UMass starter John Kitchen survived a rocky start as the Deacons scored three times in the second without getting the ball out of the infield. Kitchen then pitched four scoreless innings. UMass won the game with a four-run rally in the eighth. A two-run single by Mitch Salnick, relief pitcher Jack Bernardo's Texas-leaguer to right and DiSarcina's hit brought home the runs. Bob Hansen led the 15-hit attack with a double and two singles, Semino tripled and singled and Pepin had two singles. Wake Forest took a 2-0 record into the game.

Winston-Salem, N.C., Mar. 28 - Umass slugged its way to a 16-10 decision over Wake Forest but lost All New England shortstop DiSarcina with a fractured right wrist. DiSarcina was hit while at bat in the first inning and left the game in the top of the second. While in the field in the first he threw out a runner at the plate and another at first without realizing the extent of his injury. The Redmen scored four times in the first as Hansen bombed a three-run homer over the right field fence and Semino rifled a solo homer over the left center field fence. Norm Elliott got the win as he pitched 6-2/3 innings of gutsy relief. The Redmen had seven extra-base hits among their 15 safeties. Ray Ellerbrook led the way with three singles and a double. Hansen doubled and walked twice, in addition to his homer. Third baseman Tim Berringer made his first varisty start a memorable one by flawlessly handling nine chances, including an unassisted double play on a back-hand stab over third in the eighth. He also came up with a clutch two-out, two-run single to spark the six-run fifth inning. Soph Joe Guglotta turned in a good effort as DiSarcina's replacement at shortstop.

Chapel Hill, N.C., Mar. 29 - A good-looking Virginia Tech team ended the UMass trip on a losing note by topping the Redmen, 12-4, in a morning game at U. of North Carolina. Lefty Jim Foster and reliever Ed Oates pitched the Gobblers to their seventh win in nine games. UMass banged out 11 hits but left 11. VPI took advantage of 11 walks and four errors to win the game. Berringer homered and singled for the Redmen and Hansen knocked in two runs with two hits.

DICK PEPIN - The Beverly, Mass., senior batted .276 for the Redmen in 29 times at bat, had eight hits and batted in six runs during the annual swing through the South.

Berquist Has Faith in Pitching, Offense

By PETER PASCARELLI
Sports Editor

His pitching staff was shelled like Saigon, but UMass baseball coach Dick Bergquist was still confident of his charges ability following a 2-5 tour of the South during the spring break.

Redman pitching was touched for 73 runs in seven games, and unless a substantial improvement is shown in the coming games, the already more than potent UMass offense will have to recruit aid from guys like Yazstremski and Mays.

Bergquist was, of course, upset by the woeful hurling displayed during the week. "I really expected a lot more," moaned the third year mentor. "The fact that the kids were not outside at all before the trip naturally affected them, but that was disappointing to see."

The trip was further dampened by an injury to All-new England shortstop Joe DiSarcina, that will shelve the UMass Co-captain for most of the season. DiSarcina, who rather forget about a hard-luck senior year, was hit by a pitch in the next to the last game and suffered a fractured wrist.

Bergquist's only comment about what a severe blow it was to his squad was, "Our guys will just have to buckle to overcome his absence."

Despite all this discouraging news, the coach found some aspects of the trip to brighten the picture. He still has a lot of faith in his pitching, commenting, 'They have a lot of talent, and I still think they will come around. The pitching can do the job up here, and they should prove it."

Secondly, the UMass offense was anything from being dormant. The Redmen batted .257 on the trip, averaged eight runs a game after an opening game shutout, whacked out four homeruns, and generally, held its own against some good pitching.

Thirdly, Tim Berringer, playing at third when veteran Steve Stanford came up with a sore arm, pleased Bergquist, as did sophomore Mitch Salnick, who started each game at centerfield and hit the ball well, although not for a high average.

Reliable slugger Bob Hansen, along with swift Ray Ellerbrook started slow, but Bergquist said, "Thank goodness they came out of it and looked as good as ever."

The Remen will probably start Joe Guglotta in place of DiSarcina at short, with Mike Marchev, who is still hurting from a football shoulder injury also seeing action when Yankee Conference play begins next Thursday. Bergquist also named John Kitchen as his tentative starting pitcher for that tilt, a big one with UConn.

Bergquist still is optimistic for his team! "It was surely a disappointing trip, but last year we won only two on our trip and came back. I think the scores have scared everyone. But I'm still very enthusiastic about this team and am confident they can beat any team on our schedule."

FCC Foils WMUA Bruins Broadcasts, Lang Wins Unusual Ten-Mile Race

An 11th hour decision by the Federal Communication Commission and Boston radio station WHDE scrapped the ambitious plans of WMUA to carry live broadcasts of Boston Bruin Stanley Cup Play off games.

Station Manager Dick Stadlen said, "We had all the lines installed and were all set, when WHDH informed us that legal requirements would force us to have all commercials be carried as they originated in Boston.

"Since we are a non-commercial station, our license does not permit us to carry commercials" Stadlen went on. "We therefore called the FCC to request a waiver on our license to allow for the commercials. They stated that it was impossible since if they allowed us to do it, they would have to do the same for everyone."

It was an especially disappointing decision for WMUA since the station had been planning the broadcasts for two weeks and were all set for the games when these decisions were made at 4 p.m. yesterday, just four hours before gametime.

UMass senior trackman Charlie Lang, running for the Spartan Athletic Club, won the Saints Constantine and Helen Community Road Race, March 29. Lang covered the 10 mile grind from Lexington to Cambridge in 49 minutes, 24 seconds, defeating among others undefeated Irish runner Pat McMahon.

He had to overcome some upsetting happenings such as a unscheduled train across his path, a bloodthirsty dog a quarter of a mile from the finish and some heavy Cambridge traffic.

Ray Ellerbrook made second team and Peter Gayeska third squad in Associated Press All-New England balloting for the past basketball season.

A couple of rule changes will be in evidence in the upcoming lacrosse season. One will be the playing of all games to a definite finish, thus doing away with ties. Also, if a team is penalized, the penalized player can leave the penalty area when his team advances the ball into the attacking zone.

UMass coach Dick Garber saw the latter rule as having some affect on play, commenting that it will cut down on stalling that a penalized team frequently did.

Tippo Presents Deficiency Budget to Faculty Senate

By JAN CURLEY
Assistant Managing Editor

In a special meeting of the faculty Senate held yesterday afternoon in Memorial Hall, Provost Oswald Tippo presented a report on the budget, and committee reports were heard.

Tippo explained that the University had submitted a deficiency budget for $500,000. In reporting on the capital budget before the State Legislature, Tippo said that the budget had passed once, but now needed a two-thirds vote of each house. He said he thought the Senate had already passed it, but that action was still pending in the House. "The amendment on state schools is holding it up," he said. A $2 million appropriation for the proposed library is also included in this budget.

As far as salary increases go, he said the Public Services Committee had reported favorably on a $20 increase for grades 1 - 16 and a 12 per cent increase for grades above this. The raise is not retroactive, and the Provost warned there could be changes since "this is only a committee report."

Gerald Grady, Business Manager, presented a report on the University's relations with the State Retirement Board. Grady said that although the University seemed to be doing its paper work as quickly as possible, the hold up on employees receiving their pay was with the State Board. "They are undermanned and not automated," Grady said, "and it doesn't look like they will be until the state payroll department is."

Assistant Provost Jeremiah Allen presented a three-part report on the CCEBS program. The program was started last Fall to help Negro students receive an education. Allen said about 90 per cent of the students presently enrolled in the program are expected to continue with it next fall.

The University requested $400,000 from the State Legislature in order to expand and continue this program. The Boston campus sought $360,00 to implement the start of this program on their campus.

Governor Francis Sargent approved a total of $360,000 for both campuses to be divided between them. Accordingly, Amherst will get $225,000 and Boston $75,000.

Allen went on to say that a very high priority has been assigned to this program and efforts are going made to restore the cuts. A committee is waiting to hear from the Ways and Means Committee on this action.

The final question directed to Allen concerned what plans had been made if the budget was reduced or removed for the CCEBS program. Allen said, "We will have to deal with that eventuality when it arises."

Under unfinished business, the Faculty Senate passed a motion to establish an Emergency Advisory Committee, which President John W. Lederle had sought. The by-laws on scholarship committee were changed to include the director of International Studies.

A move to postpone the motion on the grading system was made by Prof. Loren Beth. He requested that the motion be considered May 1, since he had learned the Student Senate would pass something in a week or two and he thought both bills should be considered together. The motion for postponement was passed unanimously.

In a report from the rules committee, Secretary of the Senate Glen Gordon said the committee agreed that there was too much time being spent in the question period, and efforts were being made to cut down on this. A more careful screening of the questions to appear on the agenda was suggested by one of the senators.

Secretary Gordon pointed out the rules committee was seeking written answers from the administrators and personnel to questions in rules committee reports and publishing them with the questions.

Professor Mario DePillis from the History Department proposed two amendments to the Services Department report on air conditioning, which was related to the conservation of water in the town of Amherst.

The first ammendment is for the installation of thermostats in the faculty offices which will be set at 70 degrees, plus or minus five degrees. The second ammendment concerns minimum standards for noise in the classrooms. Prof. DePillis said he thought some teachers would have trouble lecturing in the rooms in Morrill North on the fourth floor. He cited a study made for an auditorium for music recitals and the problem with the blowers in Bartlett Auditorium.

UMass Medical School Location Still Indefinite

Dr. Lamar Soutter is still a dean without a specific location for his proposed Medical School. The latest plan is to move the school from Worcester to Boston and utilize the facilities of Boston City Hospital.

"We look forward to the offer of the Boston City Hospital for use as a state-operated medical school this spring, just as we do the melting of the snow," said Dr. Soutter in dismissing the offer.

The suggestion was made by the Boston Finance Commission which had asked Governor Sargent to abandon Worcester in favor of the Boston location. The suggestion was made on the basis of their conclusion that the state would save millions of dollars by taking over the operation of the Boston City Hospital.

The hospital has been in financial difficulties within the past two years and for awhile it had seemed that the hospital would have to close.

Dr. Soutter said in a local newspaper story, "This happens every year when the Boston Finance Committee sees what a white elephant it has on its hands with the Boston City Hospital."

The governor's spokesman said the Finance Commission plan was sent to Donald R. Dwight, commissioner of Administration. Dwight is in charge of investigating alternatives to building the multi-million dollar medical school at Worcester.

The governor is particularly concerned with the spiraling costs of construction alone. In three years the estimated construction costs rose from $70 million to $124 million.

And the Finance Commission report warns that committed Federal funds may not be forthcoming.

Boston Finance Committee Chairman John L. Thompson said he realized the state already has spent $2.6 million for property and plans for a hospital and research center in Worcester, with the entire complex to cost $124 million. Thompson expressed skepticism that federal grants will be available for hospital construction because of the Vietnam war, and questioned whether the state will get even the $18 million already earmarked in federal funds.

Thompson said other benefits would accrue from takeover of the Boston hospital, even though the state would have to provide classroom and laboratory space either by purchase , rental or construction.

"This plan would enable the medical school to be in operation much sooner, would give it immediate prestige and make it more available to top ranking staff available in the Boston area," he said.

The plan would prevent Harvard, Boston University and Tufts medical schools from using Boston City as a teaching hospital and turn the hospital over to state control.

Dr. Soutter said: "The plan is absolutely out of the question and it would be a tragedy for the three Boston medical schools and their efforts to train doctors. We want with a state medical school to add to the population of doctors, not to interfere with it."

Since the legislature has voted three times to locate the medical school at Worcester, "it would be illegal to move it," Dr. Soutter added.

Dr. Louis Rohrbaugh, B.U. vice president of medical affairs, complained: "This type of a move would create havoc with the teaching programs of Harvard, BU and Tufts . . ." He said that BU would be badly hurt if it could not use the 1110-bed teaching hospital.

Dr. Rohrbaugh and Dr. William Malloney, dean of Tufts Medical School, agreed they would like the state to develop a program of subsidizing Massachusetts medical students in their schools.

Both Tufts and BU medical schools are said to be facing serious financial problems.

Harvard Medical School Dean Robert H. Ebert was in New York yesterday and could not be reached for comment.

Current Negro Playwrights Examined by UMass Professor

A critical examination of the Negro playwright in twentieth century American theatre has been written by Dr. Doris E. Abramson, assistant professor of speech at UMass.

Entitled "Negro Playwrights in the American Theatre 1925-1959" and published by the Columbia University Press, the book studies 18 plays by 15 Negro playwrights that were produced in the New York professional theatre during this 25-year time span.

The first attempt to study these playwrights in a social and artistic context, the book has as its theme the continuing social concerns and artistic development of the Black writer. Each of the plays is studied in the perspective of the political, economic and social scene of its time and of the prevailing attitudes in the professional theatre when each was produced.

Art and Mixed Media Coming to Campus

Bob Mansfield, in charge of coordinating and scheduling all the fine arts exhibits that are appearing in the Southwest area this spring and summer, is excited about the art and mixed media projects coming up on the UMass campus.

The first exhibition this spring will begin April 13, and will feature 12 New England artists. "New Directions - 1969" will include such recent concepts as light sculpture and plexiglass reliefs. As Mansfield puts it, "it will truly be 'New Direction in art,' Because of this, it will be the first show of it's kind in the area. He expects the formal opening on Sunday, April 13, will be attended by about 300 invited guests. That night, along with the exhibit, there will be a performance by a chamber group ensemble headed by Joel Krosnick. Then, for the remainder of the week, the exhibit will be open to the entire student body along with the public.

"Occuring at the same time,' says Mansfield, "will be the biggest mixed media demonstration this campus has ever seen.' This April 11 event will be held in conjunction with Southwest Week. On that Friday evening, Southwest will look as it never has before. From cords strung high from tower to tower will hang 40 ft. balloons. Two arc lamps will crisscross their beams high into the sky, and images will be flashed onto the balloons. Along with all this, two bands will play while huge strobe lamps flash in synchronization with the music. All lights in the Southwest Mall will be turned off to add to the effect.

The following week, the Fine Arts Council will present, along with the art exhibit, a series of free experimental films, including such works as "The Savage Eye", "Blow-Up' and "Black Orpheus".

An abundance of summer exhibits is also being planned. There will be four major exhibits in all, featuring such artists as Frank Gallo, Tom Wesselman and Phillip Pearlstein. The Project 10 underground film series, begun last month, will continue through the summer, presenting such films as "Relativity" by Ed Emsheuller, and "The Brig" by Jonas Mekas.

Mansfield's most ambitious project, however, is in his desire to hook Pete Seeger and friends, including Phil Ochs, Arlo Guthrie, Tom Rush, Tim Hardin, Eric Anderson, for a benefit concert this spring. Seeger is currently working on the Hudson River Project, attempting to enlighten the people of the United States about the serious condition of water pollution. If Mansfield is successful in obtaining this group of artists, he says, most of the proceeds will go to the Hudson River Project,

Jazz Festival Names Lineup

Producer George Wein has announced the lineup for the 16th annual Newport Jazz Festival.

Festivities are scheduled to begin on Thursday, July 3, with a holiday-eve concert "For the Jazz Aficionado". The program will begin at 5:00 p.m. and will feature Willie Bobo, Kenny Burrell, Bill Evans with guest Jeremy Steig, Young - Holt Unlimited, Freddie Hubbard, Sunny Murray, Anita O'Day, Sun Ra, and others.

On Friday, July 4, there will be an afternoon jam session hosted by organist Jimmy Smith with about thirty of today's top jazz instrumentalists.

Friday evening's concert will be a major innovation of this year's festival - "An Evening of Jazz-Rock" featuring Jeff Beck, Blood, Sweat, and Tears, Roland Kirk, Steve Marcus, Ten Years After, and Jethro Tull.

Wein stated that he expects this to be the biggest and most exciting festival in the history of the Newport events.

and some will be pledged to experimental education and draft counseling here at UMass.

What makes this extra exciting to Mansfield is the fact that Bob Dylan could possibly make his first personal appearance in more than two years. The concert would be in April or early May, hopefully in the football stadium, weather permitting, Mansfield says.

The problem is, though, that nothing yet is definite. The artists are still being contacted, so the realization of a marathon like this is hinging upon their decisions.

Students to Observe Easter With Sunrise Service

For those from the University community unable to celebrate Easter at home, Inter Varsity Christian Fellowship is planning an Easter sunrise service so they will still have an opportunity to "rise, shine and give God glory."

The service will begin at 6:30 a.m. near the Orchard Hill observatory and will be followed by coffee and donuts in Webster Lounge. Transportation will be provided at 6:00 a.m.. Cars will be leaving Southwest from the parking lot behind dining commons #7; from the quad in front of the women's physed. building and from central at the corner of Mills and Wheeler. In case of rain the service will be held in Webster Lounge.

MLKS Plans Memorial March; Rally to be Staged on Haigis Mall

A Memorial March will mark the anniversary of the assassination of the Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. The march will leave from the South Terrace of the Student Union at 9:30 this morning and progress from there to the Amherst Town Common. After a brief silent vigil, the march will continue back to campus to Haigis Mall in front of the Whitmore Administration Building. The Rev. Ronald Hardy of the United Christian Foundation and chairman of the King Council Board of Directors will deliver a brief eulogy, followed by a short address by Bob Henderson, former President of the Afro-American Student Organization. The program was endorsed Tuesday by the administration, and the Student Senate also voted Wednesday night to endorse it.

Before the program, a Community Breakfast will be held in the West Room of Worcester (North) Commons. All meal tickets will be honored, and breakfast will be available for all others for $.95. All students, faculty, administrators and staff who wish to join the march are invited to the breakfast.

A late addition to the day's program is the petitioning of the Administration to take strong steps to stop employment discrimination on the construction projects on campus. At 10:30, immediately after the Memorial Ceremony, a brief rally will be staged on Haigis Mall in support of the request for official University involvement in this problem. Gil Salk, Executive Secretary of the King Council, will present the statement to a representative of the Administration and request a specific time at which an answer will be given.

Starting at 11:00 a.m., and continuing throughout the day, will be a series of workshops. Each workshop will be action-oriented. Interested participants are requested to choose topics dealing with familiar problems, so that workshop time may be totally devoted to determining how individuals and small groups may best deal with the problem. Topics, times, and locations of workshops will be posted in the Student Union Lobby.

A plenary session, talking about the results of the workshops will be held in the Student Union Ball room at 7:30.

The statement to be presented follows:

Members of the Martin Luther King Jr. Social Action Council and the University of Massachusetts community at-large who deplore racial injustice do hereby petition the President of the University to request:

1. of the proper authorities, that all future contracts for University construction work contain a clause requiring a guarantee by the contractor that there be equitable minority group representation at all levels, and that the contractor shall assume the burden of proof if he fails to fulfill his guarantee; and

2. of all contractors presently working on campus, that the University being aware of serious injustices existing at present work sites, demands that immediate corrective steps be taken. Weekly statements of the progress of these steps should be submitted, beginning two weeks from today, to the President of the University and the Executive Secretary of the Martin Luther King Jr. Social Action Council.

Judge Rules Draft Illegal

BOSTON (CPS) - The ruling by a federal judge here that the Selective Service Act "unconstitutionally discriminates" against non-religious conscientious objectors sets the stage for a review of the 1967 draft law by the U.S. Supreme Court.

If the high court upholds Tuesday's decision by U.S. District Judge Charles E. Wyzanski, atheists, agnostics, and others - religious or not - would be entitled to exemption from the draft if they oppose war for profound moral reasons.

Now, objection to war must be based on "religious training and belief." The Supreme Court in 1965 offered a broad definition of that term, the Congress in 1967 altered the law to exclude non-religious CO's.

So the issue now will return to the high court, if the U.S. Justice Department decides to appeal. The prosecutor for this case says he will recommend an appeal, but the decision rests with Justice officials in Washington. A spokesman said Wednesday that a decision will be withheld until after the case is studied.

This case will come to be known as the Sisson decision, after the defendant, John Heffron Sisson Jr., 22, who had been convicted of refusing induction. Sisson, a Harvard Graduate and former Peace Corps volunteer, had sought a CO deferment until he learned of the narrow religious restriction.

Daley Orders Guardsmen To Quell High School Riots

CHICAGO (AP) - Gov. Richard B. Ogilvie ordered Thursday 6,000 National Guardsmen to active duty in the Chicago area after an outbreak of disorders.

The governor acted in Springfield in response to a request by Mayor Richard J. Daley.

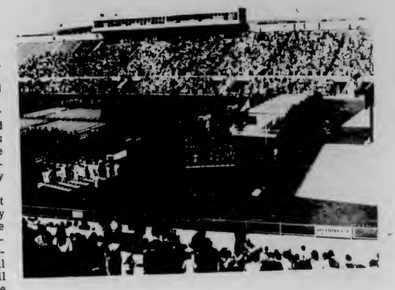
The disorders broke out in high schools in predominantly Negro neighborhoods earlier in the day on the eve of the first anniversary of the assassination of Dr. Martin Luther King Jr.

Windows were shattered at Crane High School at 2245 Jackson Blvd. on the West Side, and violence spread to nearby streets.

Five persons were injured. Some looting was reported. Eight youngsters were arrested. There were memorials for Dr. King at some schools before walkouts and other troubles began.

At Crane, following King Memorial services, pupils threw chairs. Some went outside and pegged rocks through windows.

Some lunchroom counters were broken.



Crane suspended classes.

Bands of Negro youths roamed Madison Street. Some of them hurled rubble from the property wrecked in the same area in race rioting a year ago. Madison Street was closed for 28 blocks, from Damon Avenue to Cicero Avenue.

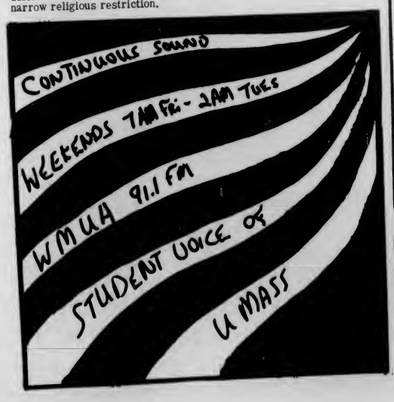
The outbreaks occurred slightly less than a year after students left schools in largely Negro areas April 5, 1968 following the death of Dr. King and roamed through surrounding areas.

Arson and looting ensued on the West Side that night but eased off gradually during the next two days. Eleven persons, all Negroes, were killed during the rioting and 3,120 persons were arrested. National Guardsmen and federal troops were brought into Chicago.

All public schools will be closed Friday in observance on Good Friday.

Commencement Exercises to be held May 31, 1969.

Commencement Exercises Details Announced



Commencement 1969 will be held on Saturday May 31, beginning at 10:30 a.m. in Alumni Stadium. All students who have completed degree requirements in February 1969 or who will complete them in May 1969 or during summer school 1969 are eligible to participate in the Commencement ceremony. In the event of rain the ceremony will be held in these two locations: Curry Hicks Cage for the platform party, graduate schools and the College of Arts and Sciences, and Boyden Gymnasium with a direct audio link to the Cage for all other schools and colleges. It is anticipated that the ceremony will be completed in two hours.

Army and Air Force Commissioning will occur in Bowker Auditorium at 8:30 a.m. the same day and the School of Nursing Investiture will be held in the afternoon after Commencement.

Each student will receive a disposable cap and gown, a tassel, eight invitations, and two rainy day guest tickets -- all of which will be distributed at the Student Union May 7 and 14. Commencement expenses are met by the $10 Commencement fee paid by all degree candidates.

Students who have not yet registered for a cap and gown should contact Mr. Harold Watts in the Student Union. Graduate students may secure caps and gowns and hoods from the University Store.

Accommodations at the university will be available for seniors and their guests for Friday May 30. Later in April all degree candidates will receive by mail a booklet including details on these accommodations and all other Commencement information and instructions. Any special inquiries should be directed to Mr. John E. Burke, Office of the Secretary, in Whitmore, 545-2181.

Co-ed Housing

Greenough House is the smallest dormitory on campus with a capacity of one-hundred and eighteen residents. Starting in the fall of '69 Greenough will open its presently all male house to females. Plans call for females to compose approximately thirty-eight of the residents in the house, and they will occupy the entire third floor.

We believe this to be an excellent move on the part of Greenough House and the Central Area in impiementing such a program. (There has long been a need for more meaningful communication between the sexes at UMass). Such a situation will afford an excellent opportunity to break through these communication barriers and give both sexes a chance at open communication and learning.

Such a "real life" situation is of utmost importance if students are to graduate from college whole, complete individuals. Afterall, most of us will have to live in mixed housing (apartments, etc.) "on the outside" when we graduate. Why have it one way here only to be changed around again later. We urge the Administration and the Board of Trustees to act favorably on such matters pertaining to sexually intergrated housing.

Medical School

Editor's Note: The following is a reply from Massachusetts Speaker of the House David Bartley. It was sent in reference to Senate President Silverman's letter questioning the Medical School issue.

Dear Paul:

Some quick background: The $19 Million necessary to keep the Medical School project rolling was inserted into a special capital outlay budget on the floor of the House on March 6 by Rep. Joseph D. Early, (D-Worcester). The special item was adopted on a 122-94 roll call.

An attempt to, in effect, kill the Med School money was made on March 10, but was defeated 139-88. The House Democratic leadership led the fight to keep the Med School money in the budget.

Here's the politics involved in this. Governor Sargent's budget people gave our Ways and Means Committee an amendment to the special capital outlay bill which put no ceiling on the amount of new money for the Med School. I criticized this publically as being fiscally irresponsible. And our Ways and Means Committee properly rejected this "blank check," setting the stage for Rep. Early to propose his amendment with a top dollar figure spelled out.

The Governor was hoping that the House would balk at the "blank check" and kill the Medical School money right there. He isn't eager about having this $19 million item come to his desk. The Medical School is needed . . . but he's also the self-proclaimed leader of the "Taxpayers Revolt." It would leave him with an awful decision to make. He wanted the House to make that decision for him.

Right now the $19 Million UMass item is in the Senate Ways and Means Committee. It is expected to be reported "favorably" by the committee on Monday, March 24, and will be put on the calendar for Senate action on Tuesday, March 25.

We think it will be passed by the Senate.

Because a bond issue is involved, the $19 Million item will eventually have to meet the constitutional requirement of two-thirds approval by both the House and Senate.

This will be - as you can guess - a most difficult vote to win. Especially with Republican Legislators knowing that their Governor wants to avoid having to make a decision on this vitally needed legislation.

Since the Student Senate has come out strongly for the Medical School, I would suggest that it communicate its position with the maximum number of Representatives and Senators within the next week or so.

If the two-thirds vote hurdle can be cleared, then your job will be to convince the Governor that low cost, state-backed medical education is too vitally needed a commodity to be sacrificed for short-run political gain.

Campus Comment

Pro Greek

To the editor:

As a fraternity man who was active for three rewarding years in both campus and fraternity life, I could not help being angered by the derogatory cartoon which graced the editorial page in Wednesday's COLLEGIAN. The cartoon (by E. Reis) depicted a fraternity pledge who was cut by beer-guzzling fraternity brothers because he dared to be concerned with campus and civic problems, Mr. Reis' not-so-clever cartoon unjustly perpetrates the belief that fraternities exist for the sole purpose of supporting the nation's breweries. Such a belief is entirely false. Fraternities probably contribute only about HALF of the revenue earned by breweries.

Seriously though. Such one-sided criticisms of the fraternity system have gone too far. Admittedly, this condition is attributable in part to the failure of fraternity men to represent themselves in certain influential areas on campus such as on the COLLEGIAN staff. This fact, however, is no reason why the system should be publicly lampooned by such as cartoonist E. Reis of the COLLEGIAN.

For those who think that being a fraternity member involves nothing but parties, drinking, and indifference to campus and civil problems, I have this to say: Along with the fun one has in a fraternity goes a proportionate amount of responsibility and hard work. Unlike a dormitory, a fraternity has no janitors to wash and wax the floors, no director of dining commons to plan and serve the meals, and no maintenance man to repair broken fixtures. These and other not always pleasant jobs are done by the individual members of a fraternity (between glugs of beer, of course).

It's so simple. Fraternities are simply one available alternative to living in a dormitory; and other than the style of living itself, a fraternity is just made up of individuals like anything else. Some are still boys blowing off steam, some are very responsible and mature, while still others are confused and unsure of themselves. In short, they are PEOPLE. Fraternity men are certainly no better or worse than any other men on this campus; consequently, there is no reason for them to be involved any more or less in such affairs than any other cross section of UMass students. So please - peace.

A 'Write-in"

To the editor:

There are many wrongs in our society and many more being promoted that call for discussion and protest. For some people the protest methods of vigils, sit-ins, marches, and other confrontation tactics have little appeal.

If change is to come, the legislators must be influenced. They themselves claim that they are most-influenced by carefully thought-out letters - even more than by petitions or by hearings sought by the same repetitious voices. So let's write to them - but in an organized manner.

The recent M.I.T. day-long protest strike on problems of the military-industrial complex involved passive listening about problems that we are all aware of (as is also true of this week's activities on this campus) and hence was of questionable effectiveness. A more active and effective approach could be used here. A week day morning could be devoted to writing and could be traded for a Saturday afternoon when classes could be held instead. This would involve a sacrifice of a weekend at home for some students and a lost family afternoon for some faculty. Many of us would welcome the time to write those long postponed letters to congressmen, senators, newspapers, and others suggesting needed changes in the draft, criticism of ABM, Viet Nam, SST, the ghetto, conservation policies, etc.

This would require organization by student groups. There might be a surprisingly cooperative response from the faculty and students on the one hand, and the legislators on the other. Maybe 15,000 letters could have an impact.

G. A. Peterson

Machines. .

To the editor:

Some people feel that freedom in the United States is threatened by the military-industrial complex, the so-called "war machine". However, I know that the greatest threat to American liberty is posed by the philosophical-idealist complex, the Morality Machine.

The philosophical-idealist complex consists of dissident students and faculty who are against the war in Vietnam and who feel that military - industrial recruitment has no place on university campuses. They play a clever game. First, the dissident s call the Vietnam war "immoral". Then they accuse those industries that produce napalm and other weapons used in Vietnam of a "lack of moral responsibility". Then they condemn military-industrial recruitment on university campuses, since universities should not provide recruiting facilities for companies engaged in "immoral" activities. The philosophical-idealist complex says all these thing s without defining or establishing criteria for moral and immoral action. Thus the dissidents have no philosophical base for accusing military industry of a lack of moral responsibility. The dissidents are more conformist than the rest of us. They cannot really think; they can only shout "immoral" when they disapprove of something.

But I have only described the first part of the morality game. The university, after all, is a place where everything may be questioned, right? So the dissidents demand an open forum to examine the question of military-industrial recruitment. But they have already reached their conclusions: the Vietnam war, military industry, and campus recruitment are "immoral"; these things must cease to be.

The Morality Machine is out merely to destroy the War Machine. The idea of their game is to end military-industrial recruitment, destroy our military-industrial complex, and leave us open to Soviet nuclear blackmail.

It is here - but what is it?

It is the University-thought, wisdom and pursuit of truth.

It is the individual-thought, wisdom and pursuit of truth.

It is the pursuit of these goals that creates the individual. Individuals pursuing these goals create the University. Pursuit requires action - act, or react.

G. Thomas Johnson

Action . . .

A recent action at the University of New Hampshire has touched on what is quite possibly a cricual but unnoticed problem at the University of Massachusetts. UNH has taken a major step in creating a sense of community and unity on its Durham campus. The University has reordered its government. It has created a unicameral University government composed of 30 students, 30 faculty, 12 administrators and 5 graduate students - who can be vetoed only by the Board of Trustees. Student government is used for student tax actions and as a caucus for the sampling student opinion. There is also a Faculty Caucus for the sampling of faculty opinion. Both caucuses feed opinion into the University Senate. The UNH committee feels that this form of government will provide participation and fair representation for all members of the University community. Also "the unicameral structure promotes the building of constructive, shared goals and programs for the whole University as well as promoting trust between faculty, students, and administrators." And UMass?

Undergraduate Teaching Versus Graduate Research

The University power structure is intent upon trying to develop a nationally recognized graduate school - research program. The strong underlying trend of administrative policy actions are directed toward this end. Concerns of the undergraduate teaching program are given only second consideration, because of a presumption that the undergraduate program will develop as a spontaneous outgrowth of graduate-research. Inherent in this position is the view that an excellent undergraduate teaching program is not only compatible with a situation which places heavy emphasis upon graduate-research, but that the undergraduate program benefits greatly by a graduate-research program. The arguments advanced in support of this position vary depending upon the administrative spokesman involved, but at present I will not present their most common arguments nor bother to refute them. Suffice it to say that most of the arguments they present have not been systematically examined and represent a rationalization of the previously determined policy goal of graduate-research. My immediate purpose is rather to present a number of arguments which suggest that the University power structure's over-riding pursuit of graduate-research as "The Goal" is likely to be detrimental to the development of an excellent undergraduate teaching program.

It would seem to be an empirical fact that the best tradition of excellent undergraduate teaching has been associated with small liberal arts colleges which have no graduate programs and where the faculty have not been known as prolific publishers. Obviously a graduate-research program is not necessary for the development of an excellent undergraduate program. To the contrary, many of the best teachers excellent teachers of undergraduates. To the contrary, many of the best teachers of undergraduates may refuse to teach in the environment of a graduate-research program which acts as a yoke upon them and are instead attracted toward an exclusively undergraduate program.

In many ways a graduate-research program may be a hindrance to the development of an excellent undergraduate program. It should be quite clear by now that the "Student Revolt" which began at Berkeley was in part due to a feeling by undergraduates that their education was being subverted to the glorious of professionalism, publication, and research, and that the undergraduate teaching program had suffered as the result of an administration-faculty value system directed toward non-teaching goals. This feeling of being overlooked, short-changed, and used has been strongly echoed by a substantial proportion of undergraduates at most major universities with graduate-research programs. This phenomena should make one stop and think before extolling the benefits which fall upon undergraduates from a graduate-research program.

The abilities and types of knowledge needed to successfully teach at the graduate and undergraduate levels may be quite different. The graduate program is directed toward the training of specialists in a particular field, and much emphasis has to be spent in exploring deeply a very limited amount of professionally oriented material. The graduate teacher must be master of his particular speciality, but he needs to be the master of that only. It is his responsibility to keep abreast of all new developments within his narrow field of proficiency. This particular task is closely akin to the in-depth exploration needed for publication in professional journals. Graduate teaching and publication reinforce each other. Due to the tremendous publication explosion in the last decade the very task of keeping current in even a very small area is quite time consuming. In addition, the process of research and publication requires a tremendous amount of time. For all but the most brilliant and energetic, these endeavors pre-empt graduate-research faculty from spending much time on other matters such as broadening knowledge, keeping informed on current matters, spending time with students, preparing excellent lectures, and reading something besides the N.Y. TIMES. The stereotype is represented by the faculty member who appears only to lecture on his latest research and then disappears from sight.

The requirements for excellent teaching of undergraduate liberal arts majors is quite different. For example, in the social sciences most students are interested in current social, political, and economic problems. In order to be responsive to student questions and their searching for answers the undergraduate teacher should have knowledge of these problems. This requires keeping current with a more general class of periodical literature. This is not to say that class lectures must be conducted at the level of "journalism", for there is a body of professional knowledge which the teacher must transmit. It does mean, however, that the teacher should be able to relate his professional knowledge to the contemporary society and be ably to discuss these matters with students both during and after class hours. The students are interested and the teacher should be responsive. This is closely tied to the problem of "relevancy" of which students often speak.

Professional material which is presented in class to undergraduates should be placed within the context of a wider frame of reference. The tying together of fragmented areas of knowledge - the most difficult task - should not be left entirely to the individual student. The division of knowledge into areas of speciality is not a reflection of the actual structure of the society and the world, but is the result of a division which arose because we cannot talk about everything at the same time. But we must provide the links which tie together the many fragmented areas of speciality. For example, in my own field of economics material should be related in some degree to a wider framework which has social, political, and philosophical dimensions. This is necessary for there is no "pure" economics which exists independently of such considerations. But it is difficult for a teacher to provide a wider perspective, for faculty education in graduate school is extremely specialized and narrow. The teacher must go out on his own and learn something of other fields. But this, of course, is a time-consuming process even if one is directed by colleagues in other departments. And such study is the antithesis of the type of research needed for graduate teaching and professional publication.

It may be possible to find some faculty members who are able to successfully teach at the graduate level and publish and also find the time required to be an excellent teacher of undergraduates. But such individuals are quite rare and it has to be realistically recognized that the abilities of almost all faculty, both present and potential, are limited. Faculty members are thus confronted with a choice as to what proportion of their efforts to direct toward the graduate-research program and what proportion toward undergraduate teaching. But their choice is very heavily determined by the value system used by the University power structure to evaluate them. With evaluation heavily weighted toward the graduate-research program the faculty member finds himself steered in that direction. As a result the undergraduate teaching program suffers. It is to be noted that verbal protestations by the power structure that teaching "counts" do not have much effect, for the value system actually used in faculty evaluation is an empirical matter and we all know where the "pay-off" is. The cant that teaching "counts" is an attempt by the power structure to "have its cake and eat it too," and is not empirically supportable.

The final point I will raise as to the relation between graduate-research and the undergraduate teaching program is the use of graduate students as teachers of undergraduates. Without disparaging the fine teaching performance of some individual graduate students, such an arrangement is, in general, likely to be detrimental to the undergraduate program, for graduate students are badly harassed for time and do not have enough time for adequate course preparation, and they often have neither a good grasp of the professional material nor of the other kinds of knowledge mentioned above needed for excellent undergraduate teaching. Graduate students are also inexperienced as teachers and this pool of inexperience is constantly refilled each year as new graduate students are "processed" making the problem qualitatively different than the hiring of new inexperienced faculty. In addition, even at the very best graduate schools there are a large number of graduate students of very low quality as teachers who are foisted upon the undergraduates. Due to the economic incentives available to both the graduate students and the universities this practice most likely will be a continuing characteristic of graduate-research programs associated with an undergraduate school.

It would of course be unrealistic to expect the men of the University power structure to forsake their careerist goals of graduate-research and concentrate upon the undergraduate teaching program, nor is it clear that this is what should be done. What is required are structural changes in the University which will allow the attainment of both graduate-research and an excellent undergraduate teaching program. To be specific, a substantial portion, if not all, of the undergraduate teaching program in the College of Arts and Sciences should be made independent of the graduate-research program. This could possibly be accomplished in several alternative ways, but I personally would favor the formation of an autonomous undergraduate school with separate faculty. What is quite clear is that the current unilateral direction of University policy toward graduate-research is undesirable for the undergraduate teaching program and will continue to be a cause of chaos and conflict within the University.

Summer Programs Booklet Edited

The twentieth annual edition of SUMMER STUDY ABROAD is now available from the Institute of International Education.

IIE's popular guide to summer programs abroad sponsored by foreign institutions indicates an increase in the number of courses of interest to United States students for 1969. There are more than 200 courses at educational institutions in 35 countries listed. Most courses are in Europe at such universities as Grenoble, Paris, Freiburg, Heidelburg, Madrid, Edinburgh and other major institutions. There are more than a dozen programs in Mexico and others in Canada, Peru, Ghana, Israel, Turkey, Lebanon, Tunisia, United Arab Republic, Japan, and the Republic of China.

The entries list locations, dates, course titles, and, in many cases, tuition and living costs.

One section of the guide includes a reference list of courses offered in such specialized fields of study as archaeology, architecture, law, and music.

Another special section provides information especially designed for teenagers who wish to study abroad this summer.

A brief bibliography at the back of the booklet lists publications providing additional information about summer courses.

Campus Clubs Offer Training, Experience to Horse Fans

By ROSE L. MILLER
Staff Reporter

Lightly and Flintlock, as proud parents, would like to announce to the college community of UMass and to the world, the birth of their daughter on Sunday, March 30, 1969 at 9:02 a.m. The new arrival weighed in at 75 pounds with measurements of 40-24-30. Mother and daughter are doing fine. Visiting hours are 8:30 to 4:30 in the Barn.

With any new arrival there is speculation about the future. The first four years of any "infant" are usually devoted to training, and so it is with this particular "baby," but the campus can be certain that she will be given good care. Her well-being rests in the capable hands of the University of Massachusetts' Horse Program, a program which includes reciprocal learning, student participation, recreation and enjoyment for all.

Reciprocal knowledge could easily be tagged as the main advantage of belonging to the Equestrian Club. According to the Constitution of the Club, members should help promote knowledge and understanding of horses. This is done by setting up an apprentice membership program, where beginning riders are able to profit from direct supervision and "help sessions." These "help sessions" are under the direction of qualified students who benefit from the teaching experience. By teaching others, one learns more and that's education.

The success of any program depends upon enthusiasm. Student participation is the key to the increasing interest in UMass' Horse Program. A belief in student participation is heartily endorsed by Mr. Wayne G. Hipsley, who became UMass' new horse trainer and superintendent last January. Mr. Hipsley in an MDC interview explained his part in initiating a promising student participation activity on campus, a training and developing program for both the experienced and inexperienced horsemen. These students will work with the young horses, foals, and will be responsible for the education of Lightly's "baby."

There is more student participation activities than the Training Program. For the experienced rider, student participation means the Drill Team. Practicing precision formations on horseback teaches coordination of horse and rider as a team. The Drill Team performs at horse shows, like the Morgan Versality Show held in North Amherst last fall. They are scheduled to perform at the Hinsdale Raceway May 13. The Drill Team holds try-outs for membership every semester.

The Drill Team is not the only part of the Horse Program to display its talents to an audience. The Equestrian Club, as members of the Intercollegiate Horse Show Association, have participated in horse shows hosted by other colleges and will host a horse show on campus, May 3, to which Mount Holyoke, Smith, and other colleges have been invited.

The Equestrian Club is a major source of personnel for horse short courses, 4-H clinics and workshops held on campus. A 4-H Leadership Horse Clinic was held here March 22, for all 4-H leaders in the Commonwealth. Members of the Equestrian Club demonstrated techniques in horsemanship, while Mr. Hipsley and Miss Linda Jaskiel, head of the riding program, lectured.

Horseback riding as recreation is offered to the student body as either filling a Physical Education requirement or as a riding elective. Elective riding is on Friday and is conducted on all levels.

The personnel directing the Horse Program would like to see more interest and participation in the Horse Show to be held on campus May 3.

Activities Committee Dissolves Inactive Clubs

Pursuant to Chapter Five, Article IV of the Activities Act, and in default of any communication with this office by a member, advisor, or officer of the following organizations, the Student Senate Activities Committee will ask the Senate to dissolve said organizations, previously declared inactive by vote of the Committee: Actor's Workshop (#507), Air Cadet (#639), American Film Classics (#512), Arnold Air Area 1 (#709), Bacteriology and Public Health (#604), Bay State Rifles (#651), Bruce Warner Memorial (#662), Campus Religious Council (#902), Centennial Committee (#804), Civil Rights (#347), College Folk (#358), Deseret Club (#913), Engineer's Council (#647), Fencing Club (#330), Finance Club (#644), 4-H Club (#324), Future Farmers of America (#629), Geology Club (#630), German Club (#656), Gymnastics Club (#320), International Relations (#614), Italian Club (#646), Korean Students Club (#357), Luso-Brazilian Club (#340), Physical Education Majors (#329), Polish Club (#672), Poultry Science Club (#618), Professional Business Society (#642), Sailing Club (#323), Synthesis (#328), Tiddley Winks Club (#343), University Judging Team (#657), Water Ski Club (#313), Young Americans for Freedom (#332).

Golfers Look to Improve Conference Card

By PETER PASCARELLI
Sports Editor

A UMass golf team that the past two seasons has finished second to Yankee Conference champion Rhode Island will try for all the marbles this season with a squad relying heavily on sophomores.

Only three veterans are returning to the 10 man squad. Leading them will be captain Eric Lekberg. A senior, Lekberg was a consistent performer last year and tied for medalist honors in the Conference meet.

Also back from last season will be senior Paul Johnson and junior Dick Barber. It will be a group of sophomores, though, four of whom who lettered with the '68 freshman team, which finished with only one loss.

Redman Coach Dick Page thinks his sophs can do the job. "They are all capable of doing the job and playing well," said Page. "They will need a bit of experience in competition, but being a sophomore varsity performer in golf is not as hard as breaking in in another sport."

The four lettermen from that fine frosh group are, Dave Salter, Ed Ruzas, Mark Mills and Dick King. Also expected to see action this season will be Mike Minkos, who came out last fall, Doug Burr and Dick Ahearne, who also came out recently. Out of these 10, the top seven performers will be chosen who will play in competition. Page expects all to see action.

The team had a week down south over the past vacation, playing at Chapel Hill, North Carolina, and on the Duke University course. Page commented about the trip's value, saying, "It was a great benefit to us, and helped the team get their game in shape, something they would have had difficulty doing here. It gave them a good opportunity just to play some."

The Redmen were 7-7 last season, and Page sees improvement on the way for the current schedule. "I think we will show an overall improvement and better that record. The ability of the sophomores should give us the balance we lacked last season," he said.

However, Page warns that Rhode Island, again favored for Conference laurels, will be aided by their usual fine squad and having the tourney being held on their home course. Page also expects Connecticut and New Hampshire, teams with a good group of returning veterans, plus his own team to have a go at the perennial champion Rams.

Crew Club Preps for Season Opener

By JAN CURLEY
Assistant Managing Editor

Battling ice floes and near flood conditions, the crew club completed a trying week of practice over spring vacation. Despite the odds, the team rowed over 20 miles in twice daily practices. For them, the season opens next Wednesday when the club will host Notre Dame. The race will be held in South Hadley at the Sportman's Marina.

The Fighting Irish are making an eastern swing as part of their spring vacation. In the past, the two clubs, which are very similar in organization and members, have been very close in competition. Varsity Coach Mike Faherty expects this year to be no exception.

The coach announced the election of Doug MacLean as varsity captain. MacLean is a business major from Hingham and stands 6'2 and weighs 192. Last year he rowed number four seat in the junior varsity boat.

According to Faherty, all three boats have begun to shape up. Many experiments in style and departures from tradition could make this a big year for UMass crew.

Optimistic about this year's crew, Faherty said, "We have improved every year, and this year will be no exception. How well we do, though, will depend on many variables."

Bruins Blank Maple Leafs, 7-0

By DAVE O'HARA
Associated Press Sports Writer

BOSTON (AP) - Veteran Johnny Bucyk triggered a typical Boston scoring outburst with two first period goals and goalie Gerry Cheevers fashioned his second straight shutout last night as the Bruins crushed the Toronto Maple Leafs 7-0 and gained a 2-0 lead in their best-of-seven National Hockey League playoff series.

The Bruins, who set an NHL scoring record with 303 goals during the regular season, relaxed their muscles and stuck to finesse hockey for the most part in overpowering the outclassed Leafs.

Unlike the series opener, when 13 2 minutes in penalties were whistled in a 10-0 Bruins victory, there was just one brawl, a second period slugfest between Boston's Don Awrey and Toronto's Larry Mickey. Awrey had a slight edge, but picked up a three-stitch gash under an eye for his trouble.

Bucyk, playing the finest hockey of an illustrious career as the top scorer in Boston history, tallied the first two Boston goals and was as good as over.

Other Boston scorers were Teddy Green, John McKenzie, Ken Hodge, Ron Murphy and Phil Esposito.

Cheevers turned aside 22 shots as the Bruins enjoyed a romp before heading for Toronto and the third and fourth games this weekend in the East Division semi-final playoffs.

Bobby Orr, hockey's top defenseman, who suffered a mild concussion when elbowed by Pat Quinn in the series opener, returned after a night's stay in the hospital and set up Boston's first goal.

Orr stickhandled in close and fed Esposito, who shoveled a pass across the goal mouth to Bucyk. The veteran winger flipped the puck into the net to complete the power play goal 58 seconds after Toronto's Brit Selby was penalized for holding at 12:15.

Bucyk drilled his second goal at 17:33 on a blistering wide gnale shot which broke through Toronto goalie Bruce Gamble. The Bruins hiked the count to 3-0 with five seconds left in the opening period as Hodge dug the puck out of a corner and fed Green for a long screen shot.

Johnny McKenzie capped a brilliant effort by Bucky and scored on a pass from his linemate at 5:56 of the second period. Toronto coach Punch Imlach, who tried to shake up the Bruins by starting five defensemen, then replaced Gamble with veteran Johnny Bower.

Bower didn't have much more success than his predecessor. Hodge picked up his second goal of the series after Murphy intercepted a pass for a 5-0 second period lead.

Murphy stole the puck from Rick Ley and scored at 8:39 of the third period. Then Esposito, who had four goals in the first game, tipped in a long shot by Awrey to complete the scoring at 10:07.

Track Team Plots Course; Elect Indoor Tri-captains

Varsity and freshman members of the track team met to elect captains for next year's indoor team and to discuss strategy for the current season.

The meeting was clouded with the disappointing news that several schedule changes have been made due to the fact that once again UMass' outdoor track will not be ready for use this spring. Consequently, the Redmen will have to face all their opponents on the road, as they have done for the last five years. It goes without saying that it makes for a much barring injuries, than any other team in recent years. With the increases in the number of events outdoors, many of which are strong areas for the Redmen, the outlook is encouraging.

DAVE EVANS
Indoor track tri-captain

During the team meeting, captains were elected for next year's varsity indoor season. Tri-captains elected were juniors Dave Marble, Steve Chase, and Dave Evans. Marble runs the dash indoors, and can always be counted on to score points in clutch meet situations. Chase, recently converted from a sprinter into a quarter-miler, recorded some of the best relay splits of the indoor season. Last year he was ranked as one of the best 220-yard dash men in New England.

Evans has been sidelined with a torn knee cartilage during this indoor season, but as a sophomore established a new school record in the 880-yard run and also ran on the record setting mile and two mile relay teams.

The period between the winter and spring track seasons has been filled by road races. Besides Charlie Lang's first place finish in last week's Lexington to Cambridge 10 mile run, a group of UMass tracksters did well in the annual New Bedford 30 kilometer (18 miles) run. Tom Derderian finished second, Ron Wayne third, and Larry Paulson eleventh for the Redmen.

With or without any home meets, however, this is one of the best and deepest track and field teams to be assembled here at the University. Led by tri-captains Dave Schlatka, Bill Wilen and Paul Hoss, the Redmen expect to give their opponents a tough time this spring.

This UMass team possesses the ability to score in more events, longer season.

Thousands Protesting Vietnam March in New York

By KATHY BIGGANE
Staff Reporter

VICTORY AND PEACE - A protest march was staged by an estimated group of 100,000 marchers in New York this weekend seeking an end to the war in Viet Nam. Related stories on pages 2 and 3 of today's MDC. (MDC photo by Kathy Biggane).

NEW YORK - The movement to end the war in Viet Nam was the focus of a peaceful march Saturday by an estimated 100,000 persons, representing all segments of the American population, in New York.

The march began at 1:30 as groups representing the GIs for peace, veterans for peace, clergy, high school and college students and faculty, the Black Panthers, the Democrats and Republicans for peace and many other groups proceeded slowly up Sixth Avenue from the Bryant Part area to Central Park and the bandshell at 72nd St.

At various times, the groups chanted such slogans as "Hell, no, we won't go," and "Ho Chi Minh is gonna win," while carrying signs reading "Support Anti-War GIs," and "33,600 Dead - The Right to Live is Dead," and "Stop Murdering in the Name of Freedom".

The Colleges were well represented as evidenced by signs from every part of the country including Berkley, Washington and Lee, the University of South Carolina, Harvard, West Point, University of Wisconsin, and others.

Speakers on the program included Professor Howard Zinn from BU, Dave Dellinger, Jerry Rubin and Abby Hoffman who have been charged with conspiring to incite a riot during the Chicago Democratic Convention; Ossie Davis, a Black actor· Benjamin Ortez, a member of the Black Panthers; Dixie Boyle, a member of the committee working for Puerto Rican Independence and Beulah Sanders of New York Welfare.

Marchers Present Petition Seeking More Black Construction Workers

By ROSE L. MILLER
Staff Reporter

A petition demanding that President John W. Lederle correct the "existance of serious injustices" in campus construction hiring practices highlighted the commemoration of the first anniversary Friday of Dr. Martin Luther King Jr.'s assassination.

Gil Salk, Executive Secretary of the King Council, presented the petition to Provost Oswald Tippo in the absence of the vacationing Lederle. "President Lederle," Tippo told Salk, "will give his decision on the petition a week from today."

The presentation of the demand followed a silent march of 75 students, administration, and faculty members at Amherst Common. A program, consisting of an eulogy by Rev. Ronald Hardy, a prayer and an address by Robert Henderson on Senator Strom Thurmond's visit to campus followed.

Explaining the importance of the petition, Salk said, "One can not change the world overnight, but one can change things locally."

The King Council first asked the O'Connell Construction Company why there were so few blacks working on campus jobs a year ago. At that time, the representatives of the construction company admitted concern and suggested ways to deal with the problem, however, Salk said, "there is still only one black man."

The petition calls for "an equitable minority group representation at all levels," Salk added, "right from the plumber up to the front office." The petition also requests "weekly statements of the progress of these steps be submitted, beginning two weeks from today," to President Lederle, Salk, and to the president of the Afro-Am Organization.

Salk went on to say, "The construction company had contended they could not find black men," Salk maintains the company will have to assume the burden of the proof, that is, prove that they offered jobs to black men and that the black men turned down the job opportunities. A clause to that effect is requested by the petition in all future University construction contracts.

After a 10 minute vigil on the Amherst Common, the marchers made their way to Haigis Mall. Rev. Hardy eulogized Dr. King as "a spiritual man who realized that a man in this world could not live on spirit alone, he also needs bread." "Dr. King," Hardy said, "believed man was made in God's image and was capable of loving his brother." He continued, "Dr. King's thoughts seemed so unjust to the people of this land that they killed the man that espoused such ideas." "We Shall Overcome" was sung at the conclusion of the eulogy.

"The visit of Strom Thurmond," Robert Henderson said in his speech, was not in the best interests of the campus." Henderson explained that he felt the question of free speech was not relevant. He added, "The campus failed to realize how much this man offends a group on campus." Henderson emphasized, "There is a need for sensitivity of each community on campus."

BOBBY HENDERSON addressed the marchers who had gathered to mark the first anniversary of the assassination of Martin Luther King.

STORM CLOUDS OVER FREEDOM was the suggested title for this photo of the Statue of Liberty taken over Spring vacation by MDC senior photographer John Kelly.

GEORGIA LEGISLATOR - Julian Bond, who first won national prominence at the Democratic convention last summer, will speak in the Cage tomorrow night at 8:30 p.m. See story below.

Julian Bond DVP Speaker Tomorrow

Julian Bond, who this past summer gained national prominence at the Democratic National Convention in his attempt to unseat the Georgia delegation and his seconding speech for Senator Eugene McCarthy, will speak in Curry Hicks Cage tomorrow night at 8:30 p.m. His lecture will be sponsored by the Distinguished Visitors Program.

Bond was a founder and later served as secretary of the Committee of Appeal for Human Rights (COAHR), the Atlanta University Center Student organization and coordinated three years of student anti-segregation protests in Atlanta beginning in 1960.

In April 1960, Bond also helped to found the Student Non-violent Coordinating Committee (SNCC) and worked on the Atlanta Inquirer, a Negro newspaper, as reporter, feature writer and later became managing editor.

Bond was first elected to a seat in the Georgia House of Representatives in 1965, but was prevented from taking office by members of the legislature who objected to his statements on the Vietnam War. He won election to his seat in 1966 and assumed office in January, 1967.

He won a third election in Nov. 1966, and the next month the Supreme Court ruled that the Georgia House had erred in refusing Bond his seat. He became a member of the Georgia House in 1967.

Bond is a member of the Executive Committee of the Atlanta NAACP. He was the first co-chairman of the National Conference for the New Politics and now serves as a member of the executive board of NCNP.

THE NEWS IN BRIEF

WASHINGTON (AP) - A commemorative postage stamp bearing the portrait of Dwight D. Eisenhower will go on sale at Abilene, Kan., Oct. 14, Postmaster Gen. Winton M. Blount announced yesterday.

Eisenhower, who died March 28, is buried at Abilene near his boyhood home. The first-day sale ceremonies coincide with the 79th anniversary of Eisenhower's birth.

"Through this medium, letters will carry the memory of this great statesman-soldier to the four corners of the world," said Blount.

NEW YORK (AP) - "One or two children are killed - actually killed - by their own parents every day in this country," Dr. Vincent Fontana, chairman of a task force on child abuse said yesterday.

His task force, appointed by Mayor John V. Lindsay, will recommend new proposals for laws to protect children from abuse and remove them from "life-threatening environment."

WASHINGTON (AP) - Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare Robert H. Finch announced yesterday appointment of Charles B. Saunders Jr., of Boston, as deputy assistant secretary for legislative affairs.

Saunders, now assistant to the president of the Brookings Institution, will be returning to the Welfare Department, where he served as a legislative assistant and later administrative assistant to HEW Secretary Arthur S. Fleming in the latter years of the Eisenhower administration.

KEY BISCAYNE, Fla. (AP) - President Nixon took his family in their Easter finery to church yesterday and got the word that "even at a time when the moral life of our nation is shaken" there is good news for all people.

And there was a special prayer that God might bless the President "with a wisdom beyond human wisdom," with a vision of duty, and with "an insight into the problems that are piled before him."

"Make him," and Rev. John A. Huffman Jr., prayed, "the channel of Thy blessing to every man, woman and child on the face of this earth."

Young Americans March for Peace Across Country on Easter Weekend

BY COLLEGE PRESS SERVICE

Thousands of Americans marched for peace over the Easter weekend in major cites across the country, mainly without incident. Many anti-war GI's marched alongside their civilian brothers and sisters, black and white.

In Chicago, where national guardsmen were standing by because of ghetto unrest and perceived possibilities of trouble, some 20,000 marched peacefully Saturday, and received a peaceful reception from city police. Four persons were arrested when a fight broke out between demonstrators and counter-demonstrators. Police halted the counter-march of some 150 persons after 14 blocks because no permit had been issued.

An estimated 50,000 people turned out for a rally in New York City Saturday despite a heavy rain. Police reported six arrests, and no violence.

Nearly 10,000 people participated in a spirited march and rally through downtown Atlanta yesterday, recalling days from the Civil Rights movement. Blacks and whites marched together down Peachtree Street to a park, where the Rev. Ralph Abernathey, Martin Luther King's successor as head of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, pledged to carry on the poor people's campaign.

In New York, the protesters marched through mid-Manhattan under threatening gray skies, stretching more than four blocks.

The rally marked the first major anti-war protest in the city in almost a year. Last year's Easter event was attended by only 30,000 people. This year's march, reported CPS correspondent Bill Freeland, was supported by nearly 100 peace, student, labor and ethnic groups, including for the first time locally, a contingent of active-duty GI's from six eastern and southern bases.

Richard Cartwright, GI spokesman, told the crowd that soldiers had a responsibility to protest the war or be open to the charge made against Nazi soldiers of acquiesence by silence. He said soldiers should have the right of free speech like everyone else.

In Chicago nearly 800 GI's and veterans led the two and a half mile march which stretched out for 16 blocks to Chicago's colliseum.

The GI's were followed by 2,300 women and children followed by student contingencies from as far away as Maryland and San Francisco State College.

"We honor today the real military heroes of the Vietnam was," Sydney Lens, cochairman of the National Mobilization to End the War Committee, told the rally after the march, "We honor the GI's who have the courage to speak against it."

The march and rally lasted six hours. Police lined the march and surrounded the colliseum area and the 6,000 national guardsmen called out Thursday night to quell disturbances on the west side were on standby but no trouble occurred.

Entertainers included Barbara Dane, Phil Ochs and the Rev. Fredrick Douglas Kirk. The guests of the march were an estimated 200 active-duty GI's, and their spokesman Richard Cartwright.

The speeches covered a wide variety of topics, but the main emphasis was on immediate withdrawal from Viet Nam. All the speakers agreed that the Paris Peace Negotiations were virtually useless, and, as Prof. Zinn said, "there is nothing to negotiate in Viet Nam that belongs to the U.S." He said also, "We're here because we're tired of waiting for the government to stop the war."

Several of the speakers told of incidents in which people considered by the government to be dangerous or subversive were what they called deliberately framed, such as the 21 members of the Black Panther Party who were arrested for conspiring to bomb five of New York's largest department stores.

There were a few counter-demonstrations in Central Park, including one group of Wallace supporters chanting "White Power" and "Free James Earl Ray." Another group consisted of the Polish Freedom Fighters, Inc., and Young Americans for Freedom, wh o carried signs calling for "Victory in Viet Nam" while singing "God Bless America." There were a few verbal clashes between the marchers and the counter-demonstrators, but no violence.

There were no incidents between the large force of New York Police and the marchers despite their being addressed as "the Pigs" from the speaker's platform several times, and there was no attempt to turn the march into a militant demonstration.

Negro Students Continue To Occupy Hopkins Hall

WILLIAMSTOWN, Mass. (AP) - A Negro student group pledged yesterday to continue its seizure of the Williams College administration building until it receives specific responses to 15 demands.

The group seized Hopkins Hall early Saturday after college officials refused to grant all 15 of the demands, termed "non-negotiable, inseparable" by the protestors.

Meanwhile, an administration-faculty meeting was set for yesterday and classes for today were cancelled.

The group's demands center around an all-Negro dormitory and cultural center on the 1,200 student campus. Dr. John E. Sawyer, Williams' president, said such a facility would foster segregation violate civil rights laws.

Sawyer also said the all-Negro housing proposal would be "contrary to the educational philosophy of the college."

There has been no violence in the takeover and leaders on both sides of the controversy have publicly favored peaceful confrontation. The college has made no move to oust the demonstrators.

Glenn Forrest, a New York City sophomore who is part of the group in the building, said the Afro-American Society was adopting a sit-tight position to see "what posture is taken by the faculty" on the dormitory-center demand.

Forrest also said he felt the white students at the college did not support the black students' demands in full.

The demands were made March 12. The protestors seized the administration building because of what they termed "vague" response to the demands.

After barricading themselves in the building, the 30 protestors said, "We can see no other way of reaching these goals which we deem so urgent."

A college spokesman said Williams had agreed to meet all but two of the requests, the dormitory-center and annual admittance of three Sudan, Africa, students.

Legislative Budget Cut for University's CLEBS Program

(Editor's note - The following story is reprinted from the Boston GLOBE, Sunday, April 6.)

Last Fall the University of Massachusetts here enrolled 128 black freshmen without the usual academic credentials.

This Spring 113 of those students are still in school - a retention rate of almost 90 percent that is virtually unheard of in college programs for "high risk", disadvantaged students.

The UMass program seems to be working better than most because of two factors - it was designed and is run by a committee of black faculty members, not white administrators, and it has a strong, carefully planned tutority program for every student.

In spite of the program's success so far, its expansion is threatened by recommended budget cuts of almost 60 percent.

The university asked for $760,000 for programs for disadvantaged students at its Boston and Amherst campuses. The governor cut this to $300,000 for both campuses - barely enough to keep the program going and no money at all for bringing in the 180 black freshmen planned for next Fall at Amherst.

But, at that, the university did better than the 11 state colleges. Their request for $500,000 for programs for the disadvantaged was cut completely out of the budget. Without money, the chances are slim that public higher education can boost its percentage of black students. Of the 21,000 students in state colleges, 182 or .9 percent are black. At the university, the figures are 158 or 1.2% percent at Amherst and 215 or 6.2% at Boston.

UMass officials and members of CCEBS (Committee for the Collegiate Education of Black Students) hope to see some of the budget cuts restored in the House ways and Means Committee, They say that a private foundation (which they refuse to name) is willing to put up what amounts to matching funds if the state will make a substantial commitment of its own money.

Profs. W. Randolph Bromery, chairman of CCEBS, and William J. Wilson, a member of the executive committee, say that if no new students are admitted to the program next year it will be impossible to meet the goal of 1000 black students by 1972 and the morale of this year's students will be seriously affected.

DR. BROMERY - "The governor's budget is...punishing them (the students) for their success."

"The students are going to be let down," Bromery, who is head of the geology department, said. "They knew they were the guinea pigs this year. The governor's budget is, in effect, punishing them for their success."

This year's students have been telling other black youngsters in their home towns (mainly Boston and Springfield) about the program, Bromery said, and the information "has filtered all the way down to the second and third grades."

"A lot of students are not dropping out of school now because they've been told there is a program at the state university where they can go when they get out of high school," Bromery said.

There are already almost 400 applications for next Fall's 180 places, which may not be open if the budget cut stands. The program takes students who are educationally or economically disadvantaged or both. It ignores scores on the Scholastic Aptitude Test (SAT) and looks for students who have the potential for college work.

One of the main features of the CCEBS program is a tutoring service run by Daniel C. Jordan and Cynthia Shepherd, two members of the School of Education faculty. Each CCEBS student has a maximum of 10 hours a week of individual or group tutoring in English, math, social and natural sciences from one of 24 graduate students paid $3000 a year. There is also a pool of about 80 volunteer faculty and student tutors who can be called on for subjects like French or music not covered by the regular tutors.

In contrast to many tutoring programs that are well meaning but haphazard, the program is well organized and scheduled. Tutors visit the students' regular classes to find out what is expected and CCEBS students get two hour credit a semester for the time spent in tutoring.

So far the tutoring program does not have the stigma of second class studentship that has poisoned similar efforts on other campuses. On the contrary, the program has proved so popular, according to Bromery, that it is now matching as many white students as black students with volunteer tutors.

And it seems to be working. While some of the 113 CCEBS students are in academic trouble, Bromery and Wilson expect about 100 back next Fall. This would be about the same as the dropout rate for regular freshmen who have average SAT scores of 570 as compared to 335 for the CCEBS students.

"We would have had a higher dropout rate if we hadn't listened to the students and modified the program constantly," Bromery said.

From the four students who sit as equal members on CCEBS and from the regular meetings to thresh out problems, the faculty members learned that they had underestimated the "terrible social, psychological hump" that faces black students on an overwhelmingly white campus.

These problems took their toll during the first semester. Several students dropped out the first week and about 12 did not come back after Christmas. Most of this loss was due to adjustment problems. Since no UMass freshmen are dropped for academic reasons, the first semester. Next year there will be a much stronger non-academic counseling program, Bromery and Wilson said.

They both believe that a great plus factor in this year's program is the relationship between black faculty members and students. (There are 12 black faculty members at UMass and a few others at nearby colleges.)

English Dept. to Hold Talk On Professionalism Problem

The English Department is sponsoring a series of public lectures for all faculty, graduate students, undergraduate majors, and other persons interested in literature and the humanities. The program is intended to encourage intellectual debate, ferment and discussion about the state of humane letters in the modern world. Each lecturer has been asked to consider "New Directions in Teaching, Scholarship and Literary Study" as well as the larger question of the responsibility of the intellectual in today's world.

The program's first speaker will be Professor Morse Peckham, who will discuss "The Problem of Professionalism" this afternoon at 4 in 301 Bartlett Hall. Mr. Peckham, author of BEYOND THE TRAGIC VISION, MAN'S RAGE FOR CHAOS, and numerous other books, monographs and articles, is a nationally known literary critic and scholar with special interests in both psychology and the philosophy of aesthetics.

Others coming to lectures include Richard Lehan of UCLA, Neil Hertz of Cornell, Jerome Hamilton Buckley of Harvard, Douglas Day of Virginia, Robert Kiely of Harvard, and Thomas Kinsella of Southern Illinois, presently on a research fellowship in Ireland. It is hoped that the issues touched upon by these men will incite undergraduates, graduates, and faculty to make more informed and relevant judgements about both the state and study of literature.

FROM OUR SIDE

Distruction from Within

Dwight David Eisenhower in his final farewell as President on January 17, 1961, warned the nation of a danger that few have taken seriously. The General said, "In the councils of government, we must guard against the acquisition of unwarranted influence, whether sought or unsought, by the military-industrial complex. The potential for the disastrous rise of misplaced power exists and will persist."

Recently several disclosures have indicated the extent to which the nation has ignored these words of advice, so that now the military must be considered one of the greatest threats to our free society and government of the people, by the people, for the people.

In this month's issue of the ATLANTIC, General David M. Shoup, former Commandant of the United States Marine Corps, says that America has become a militaristic and aggressive nation because of the influence of a relatively small number of "aggressive, ambitious, professional military leaders."

He explains that military professionals can only measure their success in terms of promotion and the responsibilities of higher command. Promotions and rewards in the military are attained as a result of heroic and distinguished performance in combat; "and it takes a war to become a military hero." The General continues: "Civilians can scarcely understand or even believe that many ambitious military professionals truly yearn for wars and the opportunities for glory and distinction afforded only in combat. A career of peacetime duty is a dull and frustrating prospect for the normal regular officer to contemplate."

Shoup discloses that intense rivalries existing between the various branches of the Armed Forces can "influence strategic planning far more than most civilians would care to believe," In 1965, according to Shoup, the four services, (Army, Air Force, Marine, Navy) were racing to build up combat strength in Vietnam. This buildup "was motivated in part by the same old interservice rivalry to demonstrate respective importance and combat effectiveness."

Top ranking Army officers early in 1965 wanted to increase the number of Army ground combat units into Vietnam struggle for a number of reasons; "to test plans and new equipment, to test the new air mobile theories and tactics, to try the tactics and techniques of counterinsurgency, and to gain combat experience for young officers and noncommissioned officers."

According to the former Marine Corps Commandant the nation has been deceived by misleading data or propaganda "to serve Air Force and Navy purposes."

Shoup says the bombing of North Vietnam was a contest between the Navy and the Air Force to see who could drop the most tonnage of bombs.

"The U.S. bombing effort in both North and South Vietnam has been one of the most wasteful and expensive hoaxes ever to be put over on the American people," Shoup wrote.

Have 33,600 American boys been killed in Vietnam for these reasons? How many more will die?

Other examples of the increasing influence of the military on American society have become evident. This year nearly 50 percent of the federal budget "fires the engines of war." The Defense Department has $80 billion to spend this year as it sees fit. (Vietnam is still costing $2-3 billion a month).

Last month Sen. William Proxmire disclosed that the 100 biggest defense contractors employ 2072 retired, high-ranking military officers. Some of the officers are the same ones who were once supposed to be watchdogs over defense contracts. This intensifying relationship between the military and private industry creates the possibility of grave abuses to the detriment of the nation. The ABM folly has the military-industrial complex urging deployment of the system with top scientists and educators opposed.

The growing effect of the military upon American life has been evident on our own campus. Senior men worry whether or not to make specific plans for next year for fear of being drafted. Research for the Defense Department is occuring on the campus. The University is under government contract and because of this it is possible that certain professors and administrators may be unable to freely criticize the government for fear of losing these contracts.

The University community has a right to know the extent of military research being conducted on the campus and it is the responsibility of the administration to divulge this information. We have a right to know how much of the Defense Department budget is being spent at UMass to help fire those engines of war. Is the University of Massachusetts contributing to the formation of a military-industrial-university complex?

It is time for all Americans to question the role of the military upon American life. The influence of the military must be returned to that of carrying out the policy determined by civilians, not that of making policy. For if this is not done and if the military continues to be one of the primary influences upon American life, then we will have a government of the military, by the military, for the military

The Movement

The peace movement can no longer be regarded merely as a small number of "bearded youths" (to coin a phrase) whose preferences as to life styles lie somewhere beyond those of the United States Army (bless its heart). In fact, the name peace movement has ceased to be a correct one. It has now come to be called "the movement," and its goals include far more than peace. As was brought out repeatedly in Central Park Saturday, the problem lies not in the war, but in the society which is responsible for it; and the solution lies not in ending the war, but in a drastic change in the society - in revolution.

The key to the revolution lies in the unification of all the oppressed minorities which were represented in the peace march, including the GIs for peace, the draft resisters, the Blacks and the Puerto Ricans (some of whom were represented by the Black Panthers) and both student and political activists. Unification of the minorities leads to a working, influential majority. When all these factions begin to cooperate and strive toward a common goal - the betterment of society - a major change in our society will be implemented.

The extent of this change will depend on the dedication of the leaders of the movement, and its support among the masses. Hopefully those of us who feel a need will also feel a responsibility, and the revolution will become a reality.

Issue of Decency

To the editor:

We, the undersigned, would like to support the editorial views expressed by Keith Bromery on the crucial question on what might be called the Thurmond case.

Indeed, free speech is not the issue at stake but simple human decency and sensitivity to people's feelings. To have invited Strom Thurmond to be a Distinguished Visitor on our campus was an insult to the whole black community and we as white faculty members owe them an apology.

Spice of Life

To the editor:

Mr. Salk in his letter ("Liberals?" April 2, MDC) gave a fine demonstration of the close relationship- observed on many other occasion in history and political affairs - between self righteousness and high moral principles on the one hand, and authoritarian intolerance on the other. Not infrequently this attitude did result in one of his cherished goals: the absence of fair trial and due process for groups and individuals considered evil by other groups.

As to Mr. Bromery ("Justification" April 3, MDC) he also seems unable to grasp the basic fact that free speech if it means anything it means the freedom to say the wrong things, to say things even if some people find them detestable or reprehensible. Liberals who wish to assure free speech to Senator Thurmond are also protecting free speech for Mr. Bromery and Mr. Salk by virtue of protecting a principle.

Let neither Mr. Bromery nor Mr. Salk try to save us from corruption by prescribing a diet of correct views we may be exposed to and others we may not. Thurmond is no Hitler but even if he were it would still be interesting and revealing to find out about his views and their justifications. Neither racism, nor anything else can be understood by closing one's ears and eyes to it.

Protest--Healthy?

To the editor:

It is probably only a matter of time before the demonstrating, protesting, and rioting which trouble some American colleges will be clarified by the growing emergence of at least two principles.

First is the principle that recognizes that any activity however laudable or virtuous it may appear, can be carried to an extreme which changes its originally desirable character. Brutal frankness can violate tack and compassion to become viciousness. Who is not aware of the critical difference between a competent social drinker and the chronic alcoholic whose career and family situation is drastically deteriorated through intemperate indulgence. Even the necessity of eating can lead to an unhealthy obesity.

Comparably, the right to demonstrate and protest can be carried to a point where its professed idealistic character becomes something else, whatever one chooses to call it at this time.

A second related principle emerges from the observations of many mental health workers who have studied the troubled and troublesome individuals who often require some measure of institutional care. In their common humanity such individuals so frequently tend to ignore or minimize their own involvement in and responsibility for ineffective, incompetent behavior. At the same time, they are likely to put the essential blame for their frustrations and misfortunes upon all kinds of external agents and forces, without necessarily being grossly paranoid. It is perhaps an exceedingly common tendency to create excuses for oneself and find some scapegoat for one's lack of a tolerable level of personal esteem. Can not the exaggerated activity of protesting and demonstrating be an easier and more instant way of seeming to gain a sense of personal value in contrast to the more laborious struggle toward an influential position from which to promote the improvement of our varied institutions.

No extraordinary degree of intelligence and perceptiveness is necessary to be critical of any of our man-made, man-operated institutions. Rather, it takes an extraordinary degree of arrogance for some individuals to act as if they have an exceptional even unique sensitivity and concern for our social injustices and deficiencies. As the devil can quote Scripture for his purpose, overly zealous students and sympathizers can conceivably quote academic freedom and the right to dissent in order to alleviate their own personal disquietude and deficiencies.

These questions then do arise - At what point does demonstrating cease to be a constructive, legitimate activity and become a projection of an individual's personal inner turmoil? Will destructive, excessive, inwardly motivated but pretentiously idealistic protesting become an offense as objectionable in its own particular way as drunken driving, larceny, or criminal assault?

Any excess tends ultimately to be self-defeating. In time it will be clearer that protesting can be overdone, that students and sympathizers do not necessarily have precocious wisdom nor a sagacious master plan for institutional ills, and irresponsible behavior under whatever guise can for a time become a malady more reprehensible than the institutional weaknesses it purports to correct.

Baker House Trial

To the editor:

In answer to Bill Perkins letter of April 2 concerning the Baker House trial of open house violations. We would like to make a few points.

Mr. Perkins argued that the Baker judiciary should have disqualified itself on the grounds that it had a personal interest in the case. The prevalent opinion in Baker is that the dorm should solve its problems internally. The Baker judiciary action served to further this goal by assuming responsibility and avoiding action from outside authorities. Relying on others to solve our problems does little to foster the self government we are aiming for.

Another objection is that the 3 day suspension of open house was ridiculous. Those who attended the trial know that the vague evidence presented did not warrant any lengthy suspension. We believe the court used the sentence as an assertion of self government, showing that Baker can and will regulate its own affairs.

Curriculum Reform

To the editor:

I congratulate the Student Senate's Academic Affairs Committee for its recommendations for curriculum reform in the April 1 Collegian. Regardless of the specific merits, the general tone is careful and constructive. This is a refreshing alternative to our traditional April Fool's Day jokes.

Censure of MDC

To the editors:

From your sensationalistic, one-sided issue of today March 21, I wish to call to your attention (for the sake of brevity) only ONE of the areas of considerable error and misrepresentation in reporting some facts and also of important omission of other relevant facts - viz., in Mr. Mark Silverman's front-page supposed "article" the entire report on the Student Senate is wholly incorrect.

Editor Silverman in his "article" wrote the following paragraph:

"The Student Senate was scheduled to consider the motion at its meeting last night calling for an official letter of apology to be sent to the Republican Senator, and expressing the Senate's concern that future actions like those of Wednesday might 'serve to embarass the majority of students at the University.' The motion was introduced by Senators Klayton and Nims."

The errors:

(1) The Senate was not scheduled to consider the motion; the Senate met for another agenda, and never formally considered even consideration of such a proposed motion.

(2) Senators Nims and Klayton did not introduce such a bill. Although they did have written copies of such a proposed motion, they never attempted to have such a motion considered under special business. Thus, it was in no way submitted to the Senate for possible consideration.

The facts omitted:

(1) Had Senators Nims and Klayton endeavored to have the Senate vote to consider their proposed motion, it is extremely problematic that they would have succeeded in getting a favorable vote from the Senate even to consider their motion, never mind to pass it.

(2) There was another proposed bill on this subject with an opposite purpose, which also was not introduced formally into the Senate. This bill which would have been introduced by Senators Gillespie, Guyotte, and Thieffault called for a censuring of the D.V.P. committee for having brought Thurmond to campus under such a closed lecture format. A copy of this bill was given the Secretary at the beginning of Thursday meeting. Hence, this bill of a completely opposite nature was as official as the Klayton-Nims bill - that is to say, not at all since there was no motion on the floor at any time to consider it either.

For these and other violations to fact, onesidedness, news article editorializing, and other examples of "yellow press journalism" rampant in the special issue on the Thurmond incident, I AM introducing a resolve in the Senate to censure the M.D.C. on its coverage of the whole Thurmond incident.

Still Active

To the editor:

Way back in September, there was quite a lot seen of us wearing white blazers, maroon skirts, and beanies. What with a slight interference from the weather, the blazers, skirts, and beanies are somewhat camouflaged, but not for long - pretty soon winter coats and hats will yield.

Despite the disappearance act, we've been engaged all year long in various and sundry subversive activities (remember the beanie raids?), scouring the guy's dorms, shining their shoes, climbing the dangerous heights of the Stadium to welcome the Freshman class of '72 with a 25 x 25 mass of white and maroon, and if that's not subversive, at least its service! We sacrificed our mascot to the first bonfire of the year, our voices to the Redmen the next day, and our apples to big and little sisters in the Dorms. We sat in on SWAP. Commented via WMUA: curfews, ushered at DVP's, shipped off cards to Vietnam for the holidays, earned more money for our scholarship this year than any other, aided APO in organizing a Swingshifter Directory that should be out any time now, placed with honors in the Oneida Service Award competition and plan to hold another shoeshine in the Spring, deliver Easter baskets and help with keeping the spaghetti off the kid's laps at a picnic for the children at Belchertown. Who knows - we might even pull another beanie raid. Oh, the reason why we're telling you all this is that oddly some people aren't aware that this towering force in their lives exists. Well, this is just to let you know we do - and if you can't quite place us, we're called by many....

Bad Habits

To the editor:

After eating in the Dining Commons on campus for a few semesters I have noted some very interesting phenomena which perhaps someone else could venture to explain.

Starting with the morning meal: every morning it is advertised that hot breakfast will be served from 7:00 to 8:30, and a sort of continental breakfast from 8:30 until 9:30. Why is it that at exactly 8:30, perhaps with the variance of thirty seconds or less, the friendly cafeteria workers cease serving anything hot (eggs, pancakes etc.,) regardless of the fact that they may have 5 pans of the dish left? It is not because that side of the Commons closes at 8:30 because it does not. What happens to this food? Are the evil students who are so lazy that they do not get out of bed until 8:00 for their 11:15 class being punished for their laziness? Is this why the Dining Commons fee is ridiculous for the quality of food served, because of this waste?

Another interesting fact is that at lunch and dinner a few rather disgusting habits are noted. (Perhaps the dining commons workers are not to blame but are rather instructed to do this.) Any especially poor meat is not discarded, bur rather either hidden underneath a passable piece of meat, or immediately smothered with gravy. Why do not the ladies look at the piece of meat and put it aside? It is ridiculous to assume that the student will eat it because an animal could not digest it. Many students go back for seconds and thirds because they cannot get a decent piece of meat. I do not think that one expects the Commons to be a restaurant of gourmet quality, but I think for the fee one pays the food should be edible. This nasty little habit is not confined solely to meat however. The piece of the tomato or cucumber that is rotten with decay or has the stem still in it, is likewise hidden underneath another piece, of course lacking the gravy this time.

Would the Director of the Dining Commons Services like to comment to these definite and real problems, or would he like to cover them up with gravy?

Law Dean Lauds Draft Ruling

BOSTON (AP) - Boston College Law School's dean said last night he supports a recent ruling by federal Judge Charles E. Wyzanski Jr. that may become a historic benchmark in draft exemption cases.

Wyzanski held that an atheist or agnostic with conscientious scruples against war has the same right to draft exemption as a religious conscientious objector.

The Rev. Robert F. Drinan, dean of the law school, said, "Judge Wyzanski has made a new, and a bold - and, perhaps, reversible ruling."

The Supreme Court and probably Congress will have to face up to the question raised by the "significant decision of Judge Wyzanski," he said.

Drinan's comments on the "Sisson Case" were made on WKBG-TV's "Point of View" program.

"Judge Wysanski says, and I agree with him, you cannot give preference to the religionist over the non-religionist," Father Drinan said.

There are millions of atheists and agnostics in the United States and "We should exempt them if they have some moral or conscientious conviction against war not derived from any formal belief in the Diety," he said.

"You cannot give preference to the religionist over the non-religionist," he added. "No one should be forced to do killing against his conscience.

"If there are millions of young men opposed to all modern war as genocidal, we should listen to these people."

He said the Vatican encyclical asserts that the law should make provisions for conscientous objectors to refrain from involvement in war whether or not the motivation is on a purely religious basis.

"Even he who has no religious belief whatsoever should be protected in the law," Dean Drinan said.

The victim at the Nuremburg war criminal trials, he said, was that a military man cannot blindly carry out orders of a superior and escape all personal responsibility for his acts.

He said this decision rendered at Nuremburg is now part of international law and binding upon the United States and is pertinent to the Wysanski ruling.

WMUA to Air Discussion On Vietnam War Protests

Tonight the subject of discussion on WMUA's "Focus" program will be the war in Vietnam, with specific attention to new modes of protest designed to end the war. The program's usual length of one hour will be extended to 90 minutes in order to include moderator Ken Mosakowski's taped on-the-scene report of Saturday's anti-war protest march in New York City.

Guests scheduled to appear on the program are: John Medeiros, author of the pamphlet CASE AGAINST A PRESIDENT'S WAR; Gary Greenberg, a member of Delta Chi; Nick Ackerman, a campaign worker for former Mayor Ryan of Springfield; and DAILY COLLEGIAN reporter Kathy Biggane and art student Linda Harris both of whom attended the New York protest march.

Interested persons are invited to listen to "Focus", beginning tonight a half-hour earlier than its usual time, at 8:30 p.m.

2000 Sign Anti-ABM Petition

By RON LA BREQUE
Senior Reporter

Amherst and Northampton sponsors of a petition calling for legislative action against the proposed Safeguard Antiballistic Missile System said Saturday they have received support from the scientific, business and professional communities and have met little opposition to the petition.

Approximately 2000 signatures have been obtained in two days of circulation of the petition, which urges Sen. Edward W. Brooke to vote against the ABM system. A companion petition requests Rep. Silvio O. Conte to appear in the Northampton-Amherst area for a briefing and discussion of the "momentous problem" of the system.

Petitions were circulated at churches yesterday and will be sent to the two legislators at the end of the week.

Tables were set up Friday and Saturday in several shopping areas in Northampton and Amherst and were staffed by members of the ad hoc committee of "scientists and other citizens concerned with the ABM system."

The petition to be sent to Sen. Brooke lists four arguments against the system, claiming it will provide very little protection for the U.S., will trigger escalation of the arms race, will hinder negotiation for disarmament and will waste billions better spent on civilian needs."

Leaflets were circulated which stat e that all science advisors for Presidents John Kennedy and Lyndon Johnson were against the system.

In a letter to Mrs. George Levinger of Amherst, a member of the citizen' s group, Hardy Nathan, executive director for Sen. Brooke, said the senator has voted consistently against the system and mail received concerning the ABM issue is 100 to 1 against it.

The group has made no plans for the proposed meeting with Rep. Conte if the request is accepted.

EDUCAdviser Sees Tuture For Group

The adviser to the English Department Undergraduate Council has mixed reactions about the success of the group.

Paul Sanders, associate professor and director of undergraduate studies in English at UMass, stated, "The main accomplishment of EDUC is in its being. It was brought into being by the department, and students ironically object to this fact. The group could do a great deal of work if it would only get down and do it."

The English Department Undergraduate Council was created by the English department in Fall, 1968. Its purpose is to get English majors more involved in the work of the department. The council can make recommendations concerning curriculum, requirements and grading. Members of the council also work on various committees within the department.

According to Sanders, EDUC meetings in the past have been disorganized. With the group's now having a formal agenda, the meetings are run more efficiently.

EDUC's main job now, in his opinion, is "to present to the department an alternate plan for membership." The membership is "unstable", and the council must get enough people to work.

Sanders listed one of EDUC's accomplishments as the fact that five members of the council now have a vote at department meetings. Other achievements are that the council's statement on plagiarism "pointed the direction in which a department memorandum on the subject went", and an amendment introduced by EDUC to the program on honors was adopted.

Pre-Law Group Plans Meeting

Wednesday night, the first in a series of three meetings for all pre-law students will be held at 8 p.m. in Thompson 106. A movie entitled "Freedom to Speak: PEOPLE OF NEW YORK VERSUS FEINER" will be shown followed by a discussion period with Richard Conklin, the pre-law advisor for the University.

Procedures for applying to law school and information and facilities available to the students will be outlined. At this time, the pamphlet entitled "Inside Law School" will be described and distributed.

Two other meetings are being planned. The first will be April 23rd at which time a film on trial procedures will be shown; the second, May 7, featuring a film on the role of the lawyer in litigation involving freedom of speech and the First Amendment. In the course of these two meetings, Conklin will discuss the process of selecting a law school and suggest a broad outline for future activities of the Pre-Law Association.

Finnish Club to Hold Illustrated Lecture

Campus Finns are organizing a social and educational group, the Finnish Club. An internationally-known Finnish artist and a Finnish graduate student will deliver a joint slide lecture on modern Finland this Wednesday night as a part of the Club's third meeting.

Leander Fornas, a world-traveling artist who "gets along with" eight languages, and Heli Heikkila, a blond graduate student of the Botany department, will present an illustrated lecture. This free lecture will be given at the Worcester room beginning at 8 p.m.

Organizer of the Finnish Club, freshman Nanci Stark, says that there are over 30 members after a two-week recruitment drive.

In order to begin the educational function of the group, the Club has applied to the Student Senate for an executive order and will be submitting a request for Senate subsidization of Finnish grammar books or mimeographed sheets.

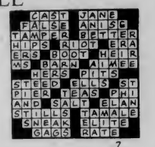
Greek Pianist to Give Recital

MADAME GINA BACHAUER

Gina Bachauer, known to millions around the globe as "The Queen of Pianists" will make her debut in Western Massachusetts tonight in a recital to be presented by The Concert Association at UMass, arranged through Hurok Concerts of New York. The event is scheduled for Bowker Auditorium at 8 p.m.

Mme. Bachauer, one of Greece's most illustrious daughters, has developed one of the most vocal and loyal international audiences of any artist before the public today. Her reputation stands as one of the truly outstanding pianists of our age. This great artist was responsible for arranging to bring one of this country's minor major symphony orchestras (The Utah Symphony) to her native country several years ago as one of the attractions of the Athens Festival.

This unlikely achievement brought international honors to this small ensemble and also an opportunity for the orchestra to appear in New York's Carnegie Hall. Mme. Bachauer's conviction that there are fine orchestras in this country beyond the most famous ones, is typical of her strength as an artist and as a person.



This season, she appeared as soloist with the Seattle Symphony in a concerto for two pianos by Bach. Her colleague at the second piano was the Crown Princess of Greece, whom she has taught for many years.

Reserved tickets for Mme. Bachauer's recital are priced at $1.50 and free to UMass undergrads. Tickets may be obtained at the Student Union Box Office and remaining tickets will be available at Bowker Auditorium before the concert. The event is sponsored by the Concert Association throught a grant of the Fine Arts Council.

Kennedy Proposes Hub Harbor As National Recreation Site

BOSTON (AP) - Sen. Edward Kennedy, (D-Mass.) reportedly is considering legislation to establish a national recreation facility of Boston Harbor.

An aide said Kenneuy's proposal would concern tying 14 central harbor islands into a recreation area for swimming, boating, and other forms of entertainment.

The legislation would ask the Department of Interior's Bureau of Outdoor Recreation to study the feasibility of creating a Massachusetts Bay National Recreation Harbor.

It also would call for an investigation of local and state protection of the 15 remaining islands in the harbor and the harbor's shoreline for recreation and open space.

The aide said Kennedy favors the idea of a recreation for "people who can't afford cottages in Cape Cod or in Maine."

The big bright green pleasure machine

The Norelco Flip-Top 20. Not only does it have flip-top cleaning, a handy on/off switch, and an easy-going carrying wallet, it has two Microgroove™ heads that float comfortably over your face. To make every part of shaving a downright pleasure.

Picture all that pleasure without a cord and you've got the Cordless 20B on the right. All it needs is 4 little penlight batteries and you've got 30 days of shaves. Without ever having to plug it in! Take it anywhere in its handy, compact travel case.

Two great shavers. Norelco calls them pleasure machines. Because they're a pleasure to use. And because you can buy them for a song.

Redman Stickmen Bomb RPI 26-10 Offense Highlights Scrimmage

By CLYDE COLLINS
Staff Reporter

A 26-10 pasting of a highly-regarded R.P.I. team in a Saturday scrimmage served notice that the UMass lacrosse team is ready for its season opener. The Redmen will entertain Wesleyan Wednesday at 3 p.m.

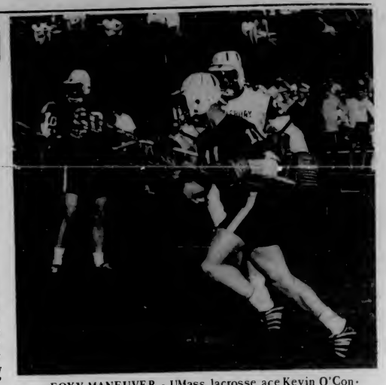
The UMass stickmen completed dominated play with R.P.I. on a rain swept varsity field. The visitors scored first early in the first quarter, but the Redmen then rattled off seven straight goals to put things for all intents and purposes out of reach for their outmanned foe.

Big Carl Schulthesis was immense for UMass at his midfield and attack spots. He scored seven times, and helped the Redmen control the ball for huge amounts of time, by repeatedly gaining possession on faceoffs. He was aided in this all-important maneuver by Steve Chambers and Parker Simonds, who both consistently outscrapped opponents for possession.

Aiding Schulthesis in the scoring parade for UMass were Tom Malone with five goals and Kevin O'Conner with three goals and a like number of assists.

UMass led 20-6 after three quarters and cleared the bench in the final soggy quarter.

R.P.I. was supposed to be no easy touch. They play in the New York State League which includes such schools as Colgate, Union and Syracuse, which all field strong teams. As UMass coach Dick Garber said, "They think they have a pretty good team and offensively they showed good strength. Their coach said we surprised them and thought we were one of the best teams his team has faced."



Though cakewalking to an easy win, Garber was not pleased with one facet of his team's play, that of the close defense. The coach remarked, "The close defense was little lazy, giving up too many shots and reacting slowly at times. They appeared sluggish. We can't allow that many goals every game."

Offensively what else can be said except from looking at the score, 26 goals!!! Garber, in a classic understatement, termed his attack, "very good".

He went on to add, "We have four or five guys who can do the scoring, and they play very unselfishly. On any given day one of those four or five can bust loose for a bundle."

One big disappointment for Garber was the weather. A good crowd was on hand at the beginning but by the second quarter, things were played on a relatively private level as a driving downpour dampened (sic) crowd enthusiasm.

Wesleyan will be no easy mark for the Redmen, as they are coming off a 7-2 year with a host of returning veterans. But their defenses will be forced to be shored up. Maybe you didn't see the number before. 26 goals!!!!

FOXY MANEUVER - UMass lacrosse ace Kevin O'Conner displays his All-American form during a past game. O'Conner and his high-powered mates open their regular season at home Wednesday against Wesleyan.

Bruins Sweep Cup WinLooms

TORONTO (AP) Derek Sanderson scored while Boston was short-handed in the first period and the added the clincher Sunday night as the Boston Bruins edged Toronto 3-2 for a 4-0 sweep of their best - of-National Hockey League East Division semifinal playoff series.

The Bruins now will play the winner of the other East Division semifinal, which Montral led 3- going into Sunday night's game.

Sanderson put the Bruins ahead 1-0 early in the first period when he converted a pass from Ed Westfall while teammate Phil Esposito was in the penalty box for tripping.

The goal at 1:21, Sanderson's fourth of the playoffs, was followed just a little over two minutes later by another Boston tally this one was scored by Esposito, his sixth of the playoffs. Passes from Bucyk and Ted Green and came while Toronto's Pierre Pilote was off the ice tripping.

Toronto broke through against Boston goalie Gerry Cheevers at the first period when Ron converted his second power play goal. Dave Keon and Ray Oliver assisted on the goal which game with Sanderson in the penalty box.

Sanderson got the clincher at 16:0 the second period when he Maple Leafs goalie John Bower on assists from Eddie Shack and Westfall.

Freshman golf candidates will meet in rm 215, Boyden, tomorrow evening at 7:30.

Winter Intramurals Draw Thousands

Nearly 4,000 students actively competed in a record braking winter intramural program just completed. Participating in seven sports the above number, representing about one-fourth of the campus population, included the first coed players.

The largest sports, participation-wise was basketball. After four weeks of league play resulting in 19 league champions, round robin play began for the campus championships. The four day playoffs resulted in the Grayson Aces gaining the dormitory title, Theta Chi annexing the fraternity crown, and the Drakesters winning independent laurels.

The Drakesters became campus champions with wins over their fellow divisional champions, with Theta Chi runnerup. The independent champs went on to defeat the New Hampshire campus champs, while the Aces upset the UNH dorm champs.

A highlight of the hoop competition was a rebound record set by Mike Ohlson of the Baker Buffaloes as he grabbed 233 caroms.

The annual all-star game was won by the fraternities as the Greeks defeated the dorm all-stars 64-57.

In handball, Carlos Lascoutx led Beta Chi to a campus title as swept through the campus titles to win the independent and campus crown. Tony Lauria of the fraternity champ team Phi Sigma Delta, was runnerup to Lascoutx for campus honors while winning the fraternity title, while dorm champ Frank Sacco of the campion Butterfield Lemons was third. Lascoutx also won the small ball handball tournament.

In bowling, Pi Lambda Phi edged Lambda Chi Alpha to annex campus and fraternity honors. The dorm champion Chadbourne Maroons were third while the Dell Vikings won the independent championship.

Chuck Webster of the Baker Buffaloes rolled a 279 single game to tie a record and win the high single title. Gary Damon of the Kennedy Panthers won the high three game trophy with a 651 series and also was high average leader with 186.

The dormitories defeated their frat counterparts 4392-4167 to win the all star contest.

Mike Katz led Alpha Epsilon Phi to the fraternity squash title over runnerup Phi Sigma Delta by winning the campus title. Katz defeated Gerry Dame of the Baker Bruins in the finals.

Carey Drakeford of the Bulldogs won the independent crown. Beta Chi won the independent crown with the Baker Broncos winning the dorm championship.

Alpha Epsilon Phi won the fraternity and campus volleyball title for the third straight year by defeating dorm champion team, the Kennedy Panthers. The Boyden Bombers, meanwhile, went undefeated to win the independent title.

Phi Mu Delta won its second consecutive wrestling crown, with three wrestlers winning campus titles, Paul Perrault, Jim Peters, and Ron Young.

Other winners were Brian Abbott, Dick Randall, Mike Bisol, Paul Rufa, Dan Kelley and Dick Donlin.

The Chadbourne Maroons edged the Hamlin Pied Piers for the dorm title, while White Heat/White Light won the independent title.

Theta Chi setting a relay record in the process, won the campus swimming title. Sigma Phi Epsilon also set a record in the 200 yd freestyle relay.

Individual winners were David Conroy, Ted LaRochelle, Ron Leveton, Mike Ohlson and Brian Leach.

The Washington Terrors won the Dorm title with the Kelley A.C. doing likewise in the independent division.

Ruggers Shine at Tufts 'A' Team Ties, 'B' Bows

After five weeks of cage and snowy practices, the UMass Rugby Club opened its spring season against Tufts Saturday and showed that it has outlived its growing pains with two good performances.

The UMass "A" team battled to a 0-0 tie against the more experienced Jumbos. The game was considered the best all-round performance the Redmen have shown.

The scrums, led by veterans Jerry Bruen Swede Vilkvitis, C.C. Reider, Jim Keating, Mike Meehan and Bill Frisbee thoroughly dominated play at the end of the game. Frisbee jumped well on lineouts while Don Chamberlayne did a good job of organizing the scrum.

The backfield also came up with a good job, as a platoon of veterans led by Jeff Fridman, Brian Leech, Frank Desiata, Paul Joy, Claude Blanc and Kent Hubgard, showed good ballhandling and spped and narrowly missed a number of scoring opportunities.

The backfield and scrum played well together and dominated both on offense and defense.

The UMass "B" was edged by Tufts 6-3 in a game highlighted by good ball handling and marred by penalties. The scrum was led by Bob Lawrence and made a strong showing on scrumdowns and defense.

The backfield, with Fred Thimmel leading the way, gave a good all-around effort and showed particular strength with ballhandling. George Duffield scored the lone three points on a penalty kick, while Red Perry played well at flyhalf.

Oldman Celts Won't Die

NEW YORK (AP) - The playoff-wise Boston Celtics, refusing to fold under constant pressure, held off the New York Knicks 108-100 Sunday in the opener of their Eastern Division playoff final series of the National Basketball Association.

After taking a 15-point lead in the third period, the Celtics used the clutch shooting of Bailey Howell and John Havlicek in the final period to fight off the desperate Knicks, who closed several times within four points in the nationally televised contest.

Walt Frazier, the game's top scorer with 34 points, had put on a one-man show to bring New York within 94-90 with 4:20 left but Havlicek scored on a three-point play to take Boston out of immediate danger.

After Frazier scored to make it 97-92 Howell dropped in a basket, and it was Howell and former Knick Emmette Bryant who ended the Knicks' last-gasp hopes with baskets when the lead had been out to 98-94.

The second game of the best-of-seven set is scheduled for Boston Wednesday.

New York led by as much as 23-14 in the opening period before Boston west ahead 27-26 at the start of the second quarter.

Moments later, Havlicek's basket put the Celtics ahead to stay 29-28, and a 15-2 tear behind Havlicek, Sam Jones and Bill Russell made it 42-30.

New York closed to 56-49 at halftime. Howell and Havlicek stretched the margin to 70-55 early in the third quarter and it was still 78-64 before the Knicks began a final rush behind Frazier. He brought them back within 78-73 entering the final period.

Zinn Says Colleges Maintain A 'System of Irrelevancy'

Prof. Howard Zinn, of Boston University, speaking on "Scholarship and Commitment" in a Five College Forum sponsored lecture last night at UMass, described scholarship in the present academic community as, "maintaining a system of irrelevancy. . .by serving the social interests of peace and stability."

The Five College Forum, a new program, with the aid of Distinguished Visitor's Program and the Amherst Faculty Series, plan to present distinguished individuals to the four college area.

Prof. Zinn called the current college movement, "a time of reckoning," in which the United States can no longer hide her problems. Times have changed since students are no longer as loyal and subservient to the Academy University). This change produces a problem for the government. "Knowledge," Zinn feels, "is power," but he said until now, knowledge has been wasted.

Relating the past to the present, Prof. Zinn said, "in the past, government and scholars got along... we (scholars) know our place, that is, we marched off to war." Knowledge is power, according to Zinn, but what is done with knowledge is even more important. The government, Zinn maintains, spends money in grants for research as a means to channel knowledge. Besides channeling knowledge with money, Zinn claims, "the government also uses deception and subtle force."

The government with its subtle force makes one play it safe, for in Zinn's words, "if we say things we aren't supposed to, we might get in trouble." To Zinn, it is the job of the academic community to point out the discrepancy between gaining knowledge of trivia and gaining knowledge needed to apply to problems.

Seeing emotionalism rather than reason as mystifying the deceitfulness of history, Zinn envisions scholars " creating a sharper vision of reality. . .to give an adequate rendering of the world like it is."

Professor Howard Zinn of Boston University spoke in the Student Union last night on "Scholarship and Commitment". The lecture was sponsored by the Five College Forum. (MDC photo by Ken Stevens).

Mauriat and his orchestra won fame with their recording "Love is Blue", which sold three million copies.

Recent record releases for The Paul Mauriat Orchestra on the Philips label include the LP "Doing My Thing" and the singles "Hey Jude", "Chitty, Chitty, Bang Bang", and "Sweet Charity." Mauriat will be travelling with his own harpsichord, a specially constructed twelve channel sound system (created to re-produce the effect of a recording sound stage in French Musical synthesizer, Martenot Musical Waves, in addition to a full orchestra and three female vocalists who figure in the Mauriat Orchestrations as an instrumental group.

Forum to Discuss Student Autonomy

Student autonomy, in the form of open house and alcoholic beverages regulations will be the topic of a forum in Hampden dining commons (S.W. #7) today, at 7:30. Participating on the forum panel will be University President John W. Lederle, Provost Oswald Tippo, Dean of Students William F. Field, Southwest Master John Hunt, and Southest Area coordinator Paul W. Brubacher.

The forum resulted from petitions presented to the Administration by Students of John Adams Tower last month. The petitions called for a general campus move toward dorm autonomy.

Originally the forum was scheduled for residents of the Southwest tower, but, with the large campus interest on student autonomy and the large turnout of tower residents expected, the program was opened to the public.

Temple Coeds Join ROTC

PHILADELPHIA (AP) - Twice a week eight Temple University coeds shoulder an M1 rifle and march slickly - hup! hup! - in military drill.

It's no put-on. They are in the university's Reserve Officer Training Corps which for decades has been exclusively male.

Temple's Department of Military Science was startled last fall when the girls sought to enroll in ROTC, taking advantage of a routine university announcement that it could be substituted for gym courses. The girls don't qualify for Army commissions, but they do get credit for the course instead of gym.

Lt. Col. Edward Kapla, the ROTC professor in charge, figured "a little drilling, marksmanship, military defense and history" couldn't hurt the coeds. So they joined 537 male cadets, giving them a 67-1 disadvantage - or is that an advantage?

"I had no noble reason for joining," admits Linda Comalli, 19, Jenkintown, Pa., "I guess I thought it would be fun being with a lot of men." Alecsandra Pastuszek, 19, of Glen Mills, Pa., a freshman at Temple's suburban Ambler campus and the lone coed in the ROTC unit there, says, "It wasn't easy at first. I think my presence may have been distracting."

So why did she do it?

"I like this country, and I want to learn more about it," she said.

For a while the girls were the butts of campus jokes and derision but now, says Donna Lima, 20, Philadelphia, "we command more respect - and we still have our female identity."

Tough though the course is, on the drill field or in the classroom, the coeds are doing fine.

Supreme Court to Review Decision on Draft Law

By JOHN ZEH
College Press Service

BOSTON (CPS)--The ruling last week by a Federal judge that the Selective Service Act "unconstitutionally discriminates" against non-religious conscientious objectors sets the stage for a review of the 1967 draft law by the U.S. Supreme Court.

If the high court upholds the decision by U.S. District Judge Charles E. Wyzanski, atheists, agnostics and others--religious or not--would be entitled to exemption from the draft if they oppose war for profound moral reasons.

Now, objection to war must be based on "religious training and belief." The Supreme Court in 1965 offered a broad definition of that term, but Congress in 1967 altered the law to exclude non-religious C.O.'s.

The decision essentially said that, in the absence of a direct threat to national survival, an individual's conscience can take precedence over the authority of the state. An individual's conscience is recognized as being on a par with traditional concepts of religion.

"Selective" conscientious objection is also upheld in the ruling. The judge disposed of the charge that objections to one war (now the Vietnam conflict) but not others would open a floodgate of spurious claims for exemption. At the heart of the matter is an individual's sincerity, which can be judged in the courts, he said.

The ruling said the 1967's draft act violated the provision of the first amendment prohibiting laws "respecting an establishment of religion." It called this case "a clash between law and morality," and warned that "when the state, through its laws, seeks to override reasonable moral commitments, it makes a dangerously uncharacteristic choice. The law grows from the deposits of morality."

When the law treats a reasonable, conscientious act as a crime, it subverts its own power. It invited civil disobedience," the decision continued.

A similar case is now pending before the Supreme Court. A Los Angeles computer engineer who contends the C.O. provision was applied improperly to him is waiting to see if the hi-h court will hear his appeal. A federal district judge in Baltimore ruled in early December that an atheist who believes killing is an unendurable sin can qualify for a C.O. exemption, That ruling was based on the 1965 Seeger case, which originally broadened the definition of conscientious objection.

If the Supreme Court declares the C.O. provision of the Selective Service Act unconstitutional, the issue will presumably be thrown back into the lap of Congress. It will have to enact an acceptable provision for non-religious conscientious objection, or for none at all, a spokesman for the American Civil Liberties Union says.

THE NEWS IN BRIEF

WASHINGTON (AP) - Secretary of Defense Melvin R. Laird said Monday the Soviet Union is testing a triple warhead nose cone for the big SS9 rocket he considers a threat to U. S. missiles.

Laird has cited Soviet deployment of the SS9 as justification for the controversial Safeguard antimissile system.

Currently the Soviets are estimated to have only about 200 operational SS9s, and intelligence estimates are that there will be about 500 around 1973 at current deployment rates.

WASHINGTON (AP) - Secretary of State William P. Rogers voiced hope Monday for mutual U. S. - North Vietnamese troop withdrawal this year but ruled out a one-sided American pullout now.

"We do have a plan which we think is a fair and reasonable one for ending this conflict," Rogers added. But again, he avoided naming any peace date and acknowledged "there isn't any magic formula" for ending the war.

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Supreme Court guaranteed Americans Monday the right to read dirty books or look at dirty movies in the privacy of their homes.

"A state has no business telling a man, sitting alone in his own house, what books he may read or what films he may watch," said Justice Thurgood Marshall for the court.

The ruling, an important extension of freedom of thought, forbids states to make mere possession of obscene material a crime - but leaves them free to restrict public distribution.

HOUSTON, Tex. (AP) - A human heart was implanted Monday into the chest of Haskell Karp after he had survived 65 hours with a mechanical device.

The 47-year-old Skokie, Ill., printing estimator was reported in satisfactory condition after receiving the heart of a Massachusetts woman in a 2-3/4 hour operation at St. Luke's Episcopal Hospital.

"I'm confident he will respond," said Dr. Denton A Cooley, who had just completed his 19th human heart transplant.

Academic Affairs Holds Open Coffee Hour To Discuss Curriculum Revision Proposal

The Academic Affairs Committee will hold an open coffee hour discussion this afternoon from 2 to 6 p.m. in the Colonial Lounge for all students interested in talking about the Committee's recent curriculum revision proposal.

The Academic Affairs report, published as a special issue of the COLLEGIAN last Tuesday, is due to be presented to the Student Senate on Wednesday of this week. The Committee is hoping to obtain as wide a sampling of opinion from students prior to that time.

Committee Chairman Story said, "Now that students have had about a week to read and think about the report, we hope that they will have some helpful things to tell us about their reaction to it. We are interested in having as much comment on the report as possible."

Members of the Student Senate committee will be on hand in the Colonial Lounge throughout the afternoon to talk with all students coming through. They will be prepared to explain and interpret the report in all aspects.

The Academic Affairs report, entitled "Education for Living: A Program for the '70s," makes a broad range of proposals for changes in the curriculum and programs of the College of Arts and Sciences. Among some of its major highlights are suggestions for changes in the advising operation of the College, new problem-centered courses in most departments, and a wholly new reduced body of College requirements.

On the question of College requirements, the report suggests the elimination of all present requirement, and their replacement by a new 6-credit rhetoric requirement and a total of 12 credits of distribution courses. There would be no College foreign language requirement under the Committee's proposal. All other requirements would be individually-tailored to particular departmental programs.

The Committee calls for major changes in the present grading practices of the College, suggesting that a 12-point system be adopted to complement a pass/fail system. Any student would be able to take any course for either a letter grade or a pass/fail grade, in the Committee's suggested changes.

The Academic Affairs Committee makes a suggestion for new types of major programs beyond the scope of the usual departmental major program. Under the Committee's suggested changes, students would be able to construct individual major programs of their own choice.

Following the expected endorsement of the Committee's report by the Student Senate, the report will be forwarded to the Dean and faculty of the College for their consideration. This is expected to take at least the remainder of the spring.

Williams Black Students Remain in Admin. Building

WILLIAMSTOWN, Mass. (AP) - A stand-off between Negro students and the administration at Williams College continued Monday with about 30 blacks remaining in the administration building they seized Saturday.

A two-day suspension of classes began Monday, and small groups of students and faculty members met to seek solutions acceptable to both sides.

The Negroes, members of the Afro-American Society, said they would remain in the building until they received specific responses to a list of 15 demands.

College officials indicated they agreed to meet all demands except two - a separate dormitory and cultural center for Negroes, and the annual admittance of three students from Sudan, Africa.

Dr. John Sawyer, college president, said Saturday he would resume negotiations when the administration building, which houses all college records and the central switchboard, is vacated.

Negro legislator Julian Bond of Georgia said Monday that he had no intention of mediating in the dispute, as has been reported earlier.

Bond is on a speaking tour and is scheduled to address an audience at the college Tuesday night.

The Negroes inside the building have been supplied with food by white students, and approximately 50 students spent Sunday night outside the building in sleeping bags in support of those inside.

Ray Begins Proceedings Toward A New Full Trial

MEMPHIS, Tenn. AP -- James Earl Ray took the first formal step Monday to get a full-fledged trial for the slaying of Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr.

A motion requesting a new trial was filed in Shelby County Criminal Court.

No date was set for hearing the motion. It was anticipated that Ray, who was held in a top-security cell in the Memphis jail for eight months, would be returned for such a hearing.

Ray pleaded guilty March 10 to shooting King and was sentenced to 99 years in the state penitenary. He began talking about moving for a full trial virtually as soon as his guilty plea was entered.

As yet nameless, the newest arrival on campus is a filly born March 30. The proud parents are UMass residents Lightly and Flintlock. (MDC photo by Rich McIntyre).

More Social Maturity Shown by Resisters Maintains Noted Berkeley Psychologist

Psychologist Study - from Globe

A Berkeley psychologist who has assembled intimate profiles of draft resisters and Reserve Officers Training Corps (ROTC) cadets has concluded that young men who refused military service show more social maturity.

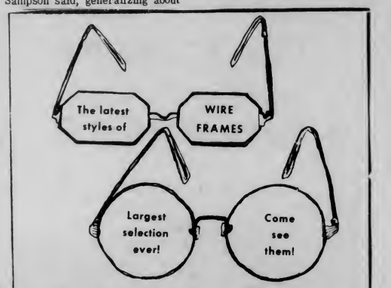
Dr. Edward E. Sampson of the University of California told the American Orthopsychiatric Assn. April 1, that contrasts uncovered in studies of 20 ROTC cadets from its University's military program and 12 young men indicted for draft refusal show that "Joe College and Betty Coed may be part of a dying breed slowly growing extinct."

"Joe is a nice boy and a good kid. Obedient, but he occasionally kicks up his heels, like after the big game or when Springtime gets his hormones surging. A little shy, but friendly. Treats women with respect-which means that he never talks dirty in front of them, though he's got a pretty racy locker-room spiel and a history of conquests not to be believed," Sampson said, generalizing about ROTC types.

But at Berkeley, he continued, "Joe College is now Sammy Wise." "His hair is long. His roommate's a girl. He has burned his draft card, his report cards, his middle-class bridges, his birth certificate, and the college ROTC building."

"His parents don't understand him, his country thinks him a traitor, but he may be the pioneering forerunner of tomorrow," Sampson said.

"Being in ROTC at Berkeley is somewhat like wearing a tuxedo to a formal dance at a nudist camp," Sampson said. He noted that the area also has a reputation of being "soft" on resisters, so the intimate profiles could symbolize extreme types in both groups."



'Chelsea Girls' Comes to Union

On Thursday, April 10 at 7:00 p.m. in the Student Union Ballroom there will be a special showing of Andy Warhol's CHELSEA GIRLS, a provocative, controversial film in the offbeat world of the Underground.

The film focuses primarily in the Chelsea Hotel, the "historic Waldorf of New York's Bohemia." There Warhol lets his cameras roam around the premises of eight different rooms to give his audience one of the best art films to reach the screen in this decade. And as an added treat, Warhol has split the screen in two, giving the viewers not one, but two films running side by side simultaneously. The resulting picture not only dazzles the eyes but also the minds and the hearts of the audience.

Unity Results From March

By KATHY BIGGANE
Staff Reporter

Now that Saturday's anti-war rally and march is over, and Central Park is back to normal, the logical question to be asked is what, if anything, was accomplished by the demonstration.

The general opinion seems to be that something definitely was accomplished, and that there are concrete results which will have a constructive effect on the future of the movement.

Probably the most noticeable result of the day's activities was the sense of solidarity and unity that all the participants came away with. There was an almost tangible feeling of rapport between the blacks and the whites, the old and the young, the GIs and the draft resisters, the veterans and the students, the liberals and the radicals, and even the Republicans and the Democrats (who marched in the same line). Everyone was united against the common evil - the war.

The march brought back the spirit of excitement that has been lacking for so long. Once again the masses were rallying for a common cause, and this time a greater number than ever before came out in support.

This march was important because it showed the large numbers of people of all walks of life, not only students, who were dedicated enough to sit all afternoon in the rain for something they believed in, for something that meant more to them even than their physical comfort, which is saying a great deal for Americans.

Students Boycott College; President Closes Campus

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (CPS - TELEX) - The firing of an administration official at Alabama State College here, which had earlier triggered in a student takeover of two buildings, Monday resulted in the campus being closed.

School President Levi Watkins ordered all students off-campus by 5 p.m., and some 500 defiant ones crowded into the dining hall, vowing to stay until forcibly removed.

President Watkins told CPS late Monday night that all but about 30 of the dissident students had given up their occupation. He said he had closed the campus because nearly 90 percent of the student body had not been attending classes, most because they did not support the protest.

Dr. Watkins said he had no intention of calling police, and had not closed the campus to cut off dissent.

The incident began in mid-March when Alvin Holmes, a black civil rights and political activist, was told of pressure on the administration from the state capitol regarding his activism. Holmes was fired shortly thereafter.

Since then, students at the predominantly black school have repeatedly requested meetings and an explanation about the dismissal. The requests have grown into demands; on one occasion 1000 students marched to the administration building, only to be locked out.

Will Examine College Unrest

CBS News will examine "The College Turmoil," a CBS News Special scheduled for airing Tuesday, April 15 (10:00-11:00 p.m., EST).

Eric Sevareid and Harry Reasoner will be the reporters. Described as "an attempt to shed light rather than heat on the subject of turmoil on college campuses," the broadcast will call on students and college presidents for an examination of student unrest. Among those who will appear on "The College Turmoil" are Dr. S.I. Hayakawa of San Francisco State, Dr. Robbin W. Fleming of the University of Michigan, and Dr. Morris B. Abram of Brandeis University.

The format of the broadcast, as outlined by Mr. Benjamin, involves two separate "panels."

Mr. Reasoner will first talk to four college students who cover the spectrum of student sentiment. Following this he will have discussions with the three college presidents.

Three specific questions will be asked of both groups:

--How did we get into this crisis in higher education?

--What do students want, generally and specifically?

--Where do we go from here?

"The College Turmoil" is sponsored by the Institute of Life Insurance on behalf of the life insurance companies in America as part of their continuing program of public service.

Test is Success For Moon Vehicle

SPACE CENTER, Houston, Tex. (AP) - Space officials reported that a moon landing training vehicle was tested successfully Monday after it had been grounded by two crashes last year.

Harold Ream, the test pilot, flew the vehicle six minutes at Ellington Air Force Base. The wingless landing machine will require 11 more test flights before it can be used by moon-bound astronauts.

The machine is designed to simulate moon landings from an altitude of 500 feet but Ream did not exceed 50 feet in altitude as he made three takeoffs and landings under different weight conditions.

Applications Now Being Accepted For Nantucket Writers Workshop

UMass is now accepting applications for this year's Technical Writers Workshop on Nantucket to be held June 30 to July 18.

The workshop is conducted by UMass English Professor John Mitchell at the University's Peabody Estate on Nantucket Island. The facility has a private beach on Nantucket Harbor and living and dining accomodations.

Enrollment is limited to 12 students in residence and four day students. Students may qualify for three graduate or undergraduate credits. Course work will include morning classes Monday through Friday and daily writing assignments.

Fees, including tuition, books, board and room will be $250 for residents of Massachusetts and $265 for others. Housing for the resident students will be available from June 29 to July 19.

Day students will be charged $165 and $185 respectively, and will be expected to find their own living facilities elsewhere on the island.

Applicants from any disciplinary background are eligible, provided they qualify for upperclass or transient graduate status at the University.

All inquiries and requests for applications should be addressed to Professor Mitchell of the UMass department of English. Deadline for applications is June 1. The admissions committee will notify successful applicants by June 15.

Guest speakers include Dr. Paul H. Flint, dean of the Tufts Graduate School and past president of the Boston Chapter of the Society of Technical Writers and Publishers (STWP), who will discuss "Writing Professional and Scholarly Articles;" M.D. Morris, author, editor and lecturer, whose topic will be "Writing Technical Articles for Mass Media" and Kenneth Tong, past president of the National STWP and eastern editor of John Wiley and Sons, who will discuss "Writing Scientific and Technical Books," and "Techniques for Illustrating Technical Writing."

Other featured lecturers will be Robert E. Chandler, vice president of Sales Promotion Services, who will speak on "Procedures in Industrial Advertising," and Jay R. Gould, director of the Rensselaer Technical Writers' Institute, who will discuss the "Psychological Aspects of Technical Writing."

On Wednesday the Panhellenic Council of UMass will present the Annual Sorority Sing. The Sing will begin at 7:00 p.m. in the Student Union Ballroom. The event is one of the highlights of the second semester. Each sorority, represented by approximately seventeen girls and a director, will sing two songs, one of which follows a general theme. This year's theme for the Sing is "On Broadway", and there is a delightful variety of songs on the program.

Songs on the program include "Try to Remember" and "Soon It's Gonna Rain" from the Fantasticks, "Hair" and "Aquarius" from Hair, "Where Is Love" from Oliver, and others. The participants will be judged on choice of selection, appearance, and general overall performance. There will be a first, second, and third place winner. Judges for the event are Mr. Alan Harler, Mrs. Frederic Hartwell, and Mr. Terry Schwarz. While the judges are conferring to determine award winners, another UMass group, The Jeffersons, will perform.

The public is cordially invited to attend the Sorority Sing. There is a small admission charge.

Air Science Professor Chosen As Outstanding Area Advisor

At the 21st National Arnold Air Society Conclave recently held in New Orleans, it was announced that Colonel Leon J. Friedman, UMass Professor of Air Science, had been selected as the Outstanding Arnold Air Society Advisor for the New England area. The award recognized his significant contributions to aerospace education and national security through distinguished leadership in the Air Force ROTC program. Colonel Friedman is advisor to the UMass Allan B. Bunce Squadron of Arnold Air Society and its affiliated Angel Flight.

Tippo to Guest At Coffee Hour

Provost Oswald Tippo will be today's guest at the weekly coffee hour sponsored by the Martin Luther King Jr. Social Action Council. As usual, the coffee hour will be between noon and 2 p.m. in the Colonial Lounge of the Student Union.

The program is informal, and open to all members of the University community. This is the place for people to get their questions answered and to air their greivances.

There will be free coffee available.

The Stassen

The motion picture industry's Academy Awards presentations are almost here. Other groups also have awards for those in their profession who have proven to be examplary in one area of another.

Politics is no exception. Although few people, other than politicians, realize it, "worthy" politicians receive awards in their own profession. These awards, like the "Oscar", are named after a person; winning politicians receive the "Stassen", in honor of that great and inexhaustible politician Harold Stassen.

In this particular year the competition for the "Stassen" is unusually fierce. An example of this competition can be seen in the category, "Set Design". The nominees are; Richard Daley, for his imaginative idea of "a basic cement background covered by fresh blood." Also in the running are the ever-prominent team of Wallace-Thurmond, with their eternal "white-on-white."

The category "Best Make-up" is a run away with Richard Nixon clearly in the lead. Second place will probably go to Adam Clayton Powell whose fabulous suntan is just a shade lighter than Black. "Best Lighting" will probably go to the Republican party, for their lighting effects in "Republican Convention-1968", which showed how well television lights can spot 1,000 WASPs and reveal their true character.

Excitement is present in the category "Foot-in-Mouth." It seems as though Spiro Agnew has a lead in this all important category, which always has the largest amount of nominees. However, Richard Nixon seems to be gaining on Spiro, Nixon got the nomination for naming Spiro Agnew as Vice-President. Also not to be counted out is the Republican party, the Republican party got the nomination for naming Richard Nixon as President.

The next few categories are the most important and the ones with the most prestige. "Best Supporting Actor" is very close with Hubert Humphrey, who didn't let his integrity get in the way of following the instructions of Big Daddy Johnson and Richard Daley, a slight favorite. Close behind is Richard Nixon, who didn't let whatever integrity he has, get in the way of obeying Strom Thurmond.

The "Stassen" for "Best Actor" will probably go to Gene McCarthy for his convincing portrayal of an honest, sincere, moral politician for the months March-August 1968. In our humble opinion McCarthy deserves this award because his performance truly gives definition to the term "Actor."

Well that's how the 1969 "Stassen" Awards shape up. However there are still a few categories we must cover. Those who desire the "Stassen" look upon these few categories with scorn. These dubious awards are called the "Stevenson" - named after Adlai Stevenson, probably the worst politician America has ever had.

The first recipient of the "Stevenson" is George Ball, who resigned from the prestigious post of U. S. Representative to the United Nations. Most politicians don't like to talk about Ball, but the rumor is that he resigned because of something called moral character.

Other recipients of the "Stevenson" are Arthur Goldberg, George McGovern, Allard Lowenstein, Judge Charles Wyzanski, Edmund Muskie and Judge George Crokett..

It is clear that the recipients of the "Stevenson" are a disgrace to politics, but thank goodness there are still men like these in America.

To Save Mankind . . . . .

(Editor's note - "The March 4 Movement" of M.I.T. students and professors protesting the misuse of science was highlighted by Nobel prize winning Harvard biologist George Wald who, speaking extemporaneously, outlines his fears and hopes for mankind. A Boston Globe reporter called the speech "the most important of my lifetime." We now, with the permission of the Boston Globe, reprint that speech.)

By Dr. George Wald

All of you know that in the last couple of years there has been student unrest breaking at times into violence in many parts of the world: in England, Germany, Italy, Spain, Mexico and needless to say, in many parts of this country. There has been a great deal of discussion as to what it all means. Perfectly clearly it means something different in Mexico from what it does in France, and something different in France from what it does in Tokyo, and something different in Tokyo from what it does in this country. Yet unless we are to assume that students have gone crazy all over the world, or that they have just decided that it's the thing to do, there must be some common meaning.

I don't need to go so far afield to look for that meaning. I am a teacher, and at Harvard, I have a class of about 350 students - men and women - most of them freshmen and sophomores. Over these past few years I have felt increasingly that something is terribly wrong - and this year ever so much more than last. Something has gone sour, in teaching and in learning. It's almost as though there were a widespread feeling that education has become irrelevant.

A lecture is much more of a dialogue than many of you probably appreciate. As you lecture, you keep watching the faces; and information keeps coming back to you all the time. I began to feel, particularly this year, that I was missing much of what was coming back. I tried asking the students, but they didn't or couldn't help me very much.

But I think I know what's the matter, even a little better than they do. I think that this whole generation of students is beset with a profound uneasiness. I don't think that they have yet quite defined its source, I think I understand the reasons for their uneasiness even better than they do. What is more, I share their uneasiness.

What's bothering those student? Some of them tell you it's the Vietnam War. I think the Vietnam War is the most shameful episode in the whole of merican history. The concept of War Crimes is an American invention. We've committed many War Crimes in Vietnam; but I'll tell you something interesting about that. We were committing War Crimes in World War II, even before Nuremburg trials were held and the principle of war crimes started. The saturation bombing of German cities was a War Crime and if we had lost the war, some of our leaders might have had to answer for it.

I've gone through all of that history lately, and I find that there's a gimmick in it. It isn't written out, but I think we established it by precedent. That gimmick is that if one can allege that one is repelling or retaliating for an aggression - after that everything goes. And you see we are living in a world in which all wars are wars of defense. All War Departments are now Defense Departments. This is all part of the double talk of our time. The aggressor is always on the other side. And I suppose this is why our ex-Secretary of State, Dean Rusk - a man in whom repetition takes the place of reason, and stubbornness takes the place of character - went to such pains to insist as he still insists, that in Vietnam we are repelling an agression. And if that's what we are doing - so runs the doctrine - anything goes. If the concept of war crimes is ever to mean anything, they will have to be defined as categories of acts, regardless of provocation. But that isn't so now.

I think we've lost that war, as a lot of other people think, too. The Vietnamese have a secret weapon It's their willingness to die, beyond our willingness to kill. In effect they've been saying, you can kill us, but you'll have to kill a lot of us, you may have to kill all of us. And thank heavens, we are not yet ready to do that.

Yet we have come a long way - far enough to sicken many Americans, far enough even to sicken our fighting men. Far enough so that our national symbols have gone sour. How many of you can sing about "the rockets' red glare, bombs bursting in air" without thinking, those are OUR bombs and OUR rockets bursting over South Vietnamese villages? When those words were written, we were a people struggling for freedom against oppression. Now, we are supporting real or thinly disguised military dictatorships all over the world, helping them to control and repress peoples struggling for their freedom.

But that Vietnam War, shameful and terrible as it is, seems to me only an immediate incident in a much larger and more stubborn situation.

Part of my trouble with students is that almost all the students I teach were born since World War II. Just after World War II, a series of new and abnormal procedures came into American life. We regarded them at the time as temporary aberrations. We thought we would get back to normal American life some day. But those procedures have stayed with us now for more than 20 years, and those students of mine have never known anything else. They think those things are normal. They think we've always had a Pentagon, that we have always had a big army, and that we always had a draft. But those are all new things in American life; and I think that they are incompatible with what America meant before.

How many of you realize that just before World War II the entire American army including the Air Force numbered 139,000 men? Then World War II started, but we weren't yet in it; and seeing that there was great trouble in the world, we doubled this army to 268,000 men. Then in World War II it got to be 8 million. And then World War II came to an end, and we prepared to go back to a peacetime army somewhat as the American army had always been before. And indeed in 1950 - you think about 1950, our international commitments, the Cold War, the Truman Doctrine, and all the rest of it - in 1950 we got down to 600,000 men.

Now we have 3.5 million men under arms: about 600,000 in Vietnam, about 300,000 more in "support areas" elsewhere in the Pacific, about 250,000 in Germany. And there are a lot at home. Some months ago we were told that 300,000 National Guardsmen and 200,000 reservists had been specially trained for riot duty in the cities.

I say the Vietnam War is just an immediate incident, because so long as we keep that big an army, it will always find things to do. If the Vietnam War stopped tomorrow, with that big a military establishment, the chances are that we would be in another such adventure abroad or at home before you knew it.

As for the draft: Don't reform the draft - get rid of it.

A peacetime draft is the most un-American thing I know. All the time I was growing up I was told about oppressive Central European countries and Russia, where young men were forced into the army; and I was told what they did about it. They chopped off a finger, or shot off a couple of toes; or better still, if they could manage it, they came to this country. And we understood that, and sympathized, and were glad to welcome them.

Now by present estimates four to six thousand Americans of draft age have left this country for Canada, another two or three thousand have gone to Europe, and it looks as though many more are preparing to emigrate.

A few months ago I received a letter from the Harvard Alumni Bulletin posing a series of questions that students might ask a professor involving what to do about the draft. I was asked to write what I would tell those students. All I had to say to those students was this: If any of them had decided to evade the draft and asked my help, I would help him in any way I could. I would feel as I suppose members of the underground railway felt in pre-Civil War days, helping runaway slaves to get to Canada. It wasn't altogether a popular position then; but what do you think of it now?

A bill to stop the draft was recently introduced in the Senate (S. 503), sponsored by a group of senators that ran the gamut from McGovern and Hatfield to Barry Goldwater. I hope it goes through; but any time I find that Barry Goldwater and I are in agreement, that makes one take another look.

And indeed there are choices in getting rid of the draft. I think that when we get rid of the draft, we must also cut back the size of the armed forces. It seems to me that in peacetime a total of one million men is surely enough. If there is an argument for American military forces of more than one million men in peacetime, I should like to hear that argument debated.

There is another thing being said closely connected with this: that to keep an adequate volunteer army, one would have to raise the pay considerably. That's said so positively and often that people believe it. I don't think it is true.

The great bulk of our present armed forces are genuine volunteers. Among first-term enlistments, 49 per cent are true volunteers. Another 30 per cent are so-called "reluctant volunteers," persons who volunteer under pressure of the draft. Only 21 per cent are draftees. All re-enlistments, of course, are true volunteers.

So the great majority of our present armed forces are true volunteers. Whole services are composed entirely of volunteers:

Air Force for example, the Marine Service, the Marines. That seems like proof to me that present pay rates are adequate. One must add that an Act of Congress in 1967 raised the base pay throughout the services in three installments, the third installment still to come, on April 1, 1969. So it is hard to understand why we are being told that to maintain adequate armed services on a volunteer basis will require large increases in pay; they will cost an extra $17 billion per year. It seems plain to me that we can get all the armed forces we need as volunteers, and at present rates of pay.

But there is something ever so much bigger and more important than the draft. The bigger thing, of course, is what ex-President Eisenhower warned us of, calling it the military-industrial complex. I am sad to say that we must begin to think of it now as the military-industrial -labor union complex. What happened under the plea of the Cold War was not alone that we built up the first big peacetime army in our history, but we institutionalized it. We built, I suppose, the biggest government building in our history to run it, and we institutionalized it. I don't think we can live with the present military establishment and its $80-100 billion a year budget, and keep America anything like we have known it in the past. It is corrupting the life of the whole country. It is buying up everything in sight: industries, banks, investors, universities; and lately it seems also to have bought up the labor unions.

The Defense Department is always broke; but some of the things they do with that $80 billion a year would make Buck Rogers envious. For example: the Rocky Mountain Arnsenal on the outskirts of Denver was manufacturing a deadly nerve poison on such a scale that there was a problem of waste disposal. Nothing daunted, they dug a tunnel two miles deep under Denver, into which they have injected so much poisoned water that beginning a couple of years ago Denver began to experience a series of earth tremors of increasing severity. Now there is a grave fear of a major earthquake. An interesting debate is in progress as to whether Denver will be safer if that lake of poisoned water is removed or left in place. (N.Y. Times, July 4, 1968; Science, Sept. 27, 1968).

Perhaps you have read also of those 6000 sheep that suddenly died in Skull Valley, Utah, killed by another nerve poison -- a strange and, I believe, still unexplained accident, since the nearest testing seems to have been 30 miles away.

As for Vietnam, the expenditure of fire power has been frightening. Some of you may still remember Khe Sanh, a hamlet just south of the Demilitarized Zone, where a force of U.S. Marines was beleaguered for a time. During that period we dropped on the perimeter of Khe Sanh more explosives than fell on Japan throughout World War II, and more than fell on the whole of Europe during the years 1942 and 1943.

One of the officers there was quoted as having said afterward, "It looks like the world caught smallpox and died." (N.Y. Times Mar. 28, 1968.).

The only point of government is to safeguard and foster life. Our government has become preoccupied with death, with the business of killing and being killed. Socalled Defense now absorbs 60 percent of the national budget, and about 12 percent of the Gross National Product.

A lively debate is beginning again on whether or not we should deploy antiballistic missiles, the ABM. I don't have to talk about them, everyone else here is doing that. But I should like to mention a curious circumstance. In September, 1967, or about 1-1/2 years ago, we had a meeting of M.I.T. and Harvard people, including experts on these matters, to talk about whether anything could be done to block the Sentinel system, the deployment of ABM's. Everyone present thought them undesirable; but a few of the most knowledgeable persons took what seemed to be the practical view, "Why fight about a dead issue? It has been decided, the funds have been appropriated. Let's go on from there."

Well, fortunately, it's not a dead issue.

An ABM is a nuclear weapon. It takes a nuclear weapon to stop a nuclear weapon. And our concern must be with the whole issue of nuclear weapons.

There is an entire semantics ready to deal with the sort of thing I am about to say. It involves such phrases as "those are the facts of life." No -- these are the facts of death. I don't accept them, and I advise you not to accept them. We are under repeated pressures to accept things that are presented to us as settled -- decisions that have been made. Always there is the thought: let's go on from there! But this time we don't see how to go on. We will have to stick with those issues.

We are told that the United States and Russia between them have by now stockpiles in nuclear weapons approximately the explosive power of 15 tons of TNT for every man, woman and child on earth. And now it is suggested that we must make more. All very regrettable, of course; but those are "the facts of life." We really would like to disarm; but our new Secretary of Defense has made the ingenious proposal that one must be practical. Now is the time to greatly increase our nuclear armaments so that we can disarm from a position of strength.

I think all of you know there is no adequate defense against massive nuclear attack. It is both easier and cheaper to circumvent any known nuclear defense system than to provide it. It's all pretty crazy. At the very moment we talk of deploying ABM's, we are also building the MIRV, the weapon to circumvent ABM's.

So far as I know, with everything working as well as can be hoped and all foreseeable precautions taken, the most conservative estimates of Americans killed in a major nuclear attack run to about 50 millions. We have become callous to gruesome statistics, and this seems at first to be only another gruesome statistic. You think, Bang! -- and next morning, if you're still there, you read in the newspapers that 50 million people were killed.

But that isn't the way it happens. When we killed close to 200,000 people with those first little, old-fashioned uranium bombs that we dropped on Hiroshima and Nagasaki, about the same number of persons was maimed, blinded, burned, poisoned and otherwise doomed. A lot of them took a long time to die.

That's the way it would be. Not a bang, and a certain number of corpses to bury; but a nation filled with millions of helpless, maimed, tortured and doomed survivors huddled with their families in shelters, with guns ready to fight off their neighbors, trying to get some uncontaminated food and water.

A few months ago Sen. Richard Russell of Georgia ended a speech in the Senate with the words: "If we have to start over again with another Adam and Eve, I want them to be Americans; and I want them on this continent and not in Europe." That was a United States senator holding a patriotic speech. Well, here is a Nobel Laureate who thinks that those words are criminally insane. (Prolonged applause.)

How real is the threat of full scale nuclear war? I have my own very inexpert idea, but realizing how little I know and fearful that I may be a little paranoid on this subject, I take every opportunity to ask reputed experts. I asked that question of a very distinguished professor of government at Harvard about a month ago. I asked him what sort of odds he would lay on the possibility of full-scale nuclear war within the foreseeable future. "Oh," he said comfortably, "I think I can give you a pretty good answer to that question. I estimate the probability of full-scale nuclear war, provided that the situation remains about as it is now, at 2 percent per year". Anybody can do the simple calculation that shows that 2 percent per year means that the chance of having that full-scale nuclear war by 1990 is about one in three, and by 2000 it is about 50-50.

I think I know what is bothering the students. I think that what we are up against is a generation that is by no means sure that it has a future.

I am growing old, and my future so to speak, is already behind me. But there are those students of mine who are in my mind always; there are my children, two of them now 7 and 9, whose future is infinitely more precious to me than my own. So it isn't just their generation; it's mine too. We're all in it together.

Are we to have a chance to live? We don't ask for prosperity, or security; only for a reasonable chance to live, to work out our destiny in peace and decency. Not to go down in history as the apocalyptic generation.

And it isn't only nuclear war. Another overwhelming threat is in the population explosion. That has not yet even begun to come under control. There is every indication that the world population will double before the year 2000; and there is a widespread expectation of famine on an unprecedented scale in many parts of the world. The experts tend to differ only in their estimates of when those famines will begin. Some think by 1980, others think they can be staved off until 1990, very few expect that they will not occur by the year 2000.

That is the problem. Unless we can be surer than we now are that this generation has a future, nothing else matters. It's not good enough to give it tender loving care, to supply it with breakfast foods, to buy it expensive educations. Those things don't mean anything unless this generation has a future. And we're not sure that it does.

I don't think that there are problems of youth, or student problems. All the real problems I know are grown-up problems.

Perhaps you will think me altogether absurd, or "academic", or hopelessly innocent -- that is, until you think of the alternatives -- if I say as I do to you now: we have to get rid of those nuclear weapons. There is nothing worth having that can be obtained by nuclear war: nothing material or ideological, no tradition that it can defend. It is utterly self-defeating. Those atom bombs represent an unusable weapon. The only use for an atom bomb is to keep somebody else from using it. It can give us no protection, but only the doubtful satisfaction of retaliation. Nuclear weapons offer us nothing but a balance of terror; and a balance of terror is still terror.

We have to get rid of those atomic weapons, here and everywhere. We cannot live with them.

I think we've reached a point of great decision, not just for our nation, not only for all humanity, but for life upon the Earth. I tell my students, with a feeling of pride that I hope they will share, that the carbon, nitrogen and oxygen that make up 99 percent of our living substance, were cooked in the deep interiors of earlier generations of dying stars. Gathered up from the ends of the universe, over billions of years, eventually they came to form in part the substance of our sun, its planets and ourselves. Three billion years ago life arose upon the Earth. It seems to be the only life in the solar system. Many a star has since been born and died.

About two million years ago, man appeared. He has become the dominant species on the Earth. All other living things, animal and plant, live by his sufferance. He is the custodian of life on Earth. It's a big responsibility. The thought that we're in competition with Russians or with Chinese is all a mistake, and trivial. Only mutual destruction lies that way. We are one species, with a world to win. There's life all over this universe, but we are the only men.

Our business is with life, not death. Our challenge is to give what account we can of what becomes of life in the solar system, this corner of the universe that is our home and, most of all, what becomes of men -- all men of all nations, colors and creeds. It has become one world, a world for all men. It is only such a world that now can offer us life and the chance to go on.

Traditional Practice-Teaching Preferred by Veteran Educator

By HELENE KOWALEWICZ
Staff Correspondent

A 28-year veteran of junior high school teaching says that, "Micro-teaching is an artificial and unnatural situation."

Mrs. Neil Deveno made the statement in comment on the present teacher training program of the School of Education at the University.

As an educator who has supervised student teachers throughout her teaching career, Mrs. Deveno said she takes interest in new teaching methods. Micro-teaching is of major interest to her, because it is such a radical and controversial approach to teaching.

Micro - teaching is a training technique for developing specific teaching skills. It exposes the trainees to variables in classroom teaching while reducing the complexity of the situation.

In an interview last week, Mrs. Deveno said that, "Micro-teaching is like removing a delicate plant from a greenhouse where the conditions provides the correct and necessary humidity, nourishment, soil, and sunlight, and placing it outdoors. Now the poor helpless plant is at the mercy of the elements."

The realistic elements in the classroom she lists are rapport with 25-30 students and discipline of 25-30 students. "To achieve rapport with all of your students is a horse of another color, compared with having rapport with only one student. Order in the classroom must be mastered before the subject matter may be presented. The level hardest to cope with is the junior high level," Mrs. Deveno said.

Free Tuition Ended By Amherst College

Free tuition at Amherst College for sons of residents of the town of Amherst who can qualify for admission will be discontinued beginning with students who enter Amherst in September 1970. Such students, however, like all other applicants for admission, will be eligible for financial aid according to their demonstrated need.

The Amherst Board of Trustees voted to end the Town Tuition Scholarship Program as a result of rapidly growing requests for financial assistance by applicants for admission and students already enrolled in the College.

The program, which began in 1939, has provided free tuition for students who, with their parents, have been residents of Amherst for at least three full years prior to their admission as freshmen. Those now in the College and those entering next fall will continue to receive the benefits of the program.

Town students interested in entering the College in the fall of 1970 and thereafter who need financial assistance should complete the regular financial aid application form available from the admission office.

BROAD VIEWPOINT:

THE FEMININE MYTH

Women's liberation means more than the social recognition of the ability of the female sex to function on an intellectual and occupational level equal to that of the male sex. True liberation necessitates the total obliteration of the subservient attitude that has been falsely termed "feminine" by societies past and present.

A "feminine" creature is a weak willed entity whose existence has either been pre-determined by the dominant male forces in her life, or one whose way of life is constantly being shaped by outside male forces. This creature doesn't accept the full responsibility for her decisions, because these decisions are made to further a socially established image that necessitates a total reliance on what the male forces want her to do. Any decision she makes is determined by her desire to lead a secure life as someone's "feminine" wife. The way she wears her hair, the clothes she chooses, and her basic personality are not the result of her own realization of herself as a unique, individual human being, but rather the result of a socially contrived method to produce unthinking, happy baby machines.

Her ideas about life don't come from inside her own mind, because her subservient attitude has taught her to accept the superiority of the male opinion. The "feminine" woman is amazingly malleable. Her goals and ideals change with each prospective husband. For this reason, her adult personality is a conglomeration of other people's ideas. This is convenient in that she can easily change her views if they prove to be too deep or difficult for her to handle. In this way she also avoids any meaningful responsibility for her chosen actions.

This kind of "femininity" not only limits the development of a complete human personality, but it also stagnates a woman's mind to the degree that her potentialities are never realized. It is an easier and more comfortable existence for a woman to have the spiritual and materialistic necessities of life provided for her.

A truly feminine attitude need not be subservient and inferior. A woman can appreciate her "womanliness" without sacrificing her right to be an independent, responsible human being. A realization and rejection of the societal restraints imposed on her is necessary to this self-determined development.

If she can take pride in herself as a unique individual, then she can dress in an attractive fashion for her own satisfaction rather than as man bait. She can pursue jobs that have a genuine meaning for her, and choose activities that reflect her personal interests. The liberated woman is not afraid of her freedom.

The Dilemna of the Pseudo-Liberated Woman

It was one of those mornings. I'd planned on skipping my 9:05 urban soc lecture, but the phone had gotten me out of bed at eight, and after the trip across the cold kitchen floor to answer it, I decided I might as well go.

I fell asleep half way through -between the lecturer and just being tired. So afterwards I headed for the Hatch for a couple of cups of coffee to get me through abnormal psych.

As I made my way a bit groggily through the line, I noticed a very attractive young thing ahead of me. She had long blonde hair, which really drives me up a wall, and big green eyes, I melted.

Being rather bourgeois in my tastes, I have to admit her mode of dress didn't exactly overwhelm me. She was wearing a sleazy old army jacket, fungus green bellbottoms that had seen better days and a Che Guevara sweatshirt. On the jacket was a "Peace Through Revolution" button.

But as I was rummaging around for a relatively unstale doughnut, she disappeared into the crowd.

After considerable trouble, I found a table in the new section of the Hatch, not really fitting in with any of the cliques in the old part.

As I looked over the top of the cup after the first few gulps, I was astonished to find that beautiful creature looking for a place to sit. Quickly scanning the area, I saw there were no other seats. I made my move.

"This seat isn't taken if you'd like to sit here," I said as brightly as I could at that hour.

She looked at me rather dubiously. But seeing that there was nothing else available, she gave me a nasty look and sat down.

Immediately she pulled out a biography of Leon Trotsky and planted those beautiful green eyes on the page.

"That looks interesting," I offered.

"Male chauvinist," she spat out as she planted her aggie boots on the chair next to me.

"What?"

"All you men want is to keep us women second class citizens. You oppress us with your double standards. We're supposed to wait with baited breath for you to ask us out and then we're supposed to be your whore for the price of a movie. From now on it's "Up against the wall, M.F.'."

"Not me," I protested weakly.

She just stared at me with those fiery eyes and her hair seemed to glow with anger. Her hands were trembling so much that she dropped Trotsky.

Quickly I reached down to pick it up, only to find rather painfully that her heel was planted on the back of my hand.

She grabbed up the book herself. "Male chauvinist!"

For the next ten minutes we sat in silence. I kept stealing glances at her over my coffee. Finally I got up my courage and, wiping the powdered sugar from my lips, I asked her if she would like to go to a lecture on "The Struggle for a Proltarian Party" at Smith Friday.

The lecture was supposed to be by a Bolivian guerilla so I thought it might be an attraction. She didn't say anything for five minutes and I figured I'd blown it.

Then she sort of smiled a little weakly and said, "I just bought a new dress at Bonwits. Do you think we could go somewhere else?"

WOMEN

Hypocrisy in Action

Mike Whalen sat on the funny shaped "sitting steps in front of Washington tower late Saturday night. He complained to a friend that, with the dance cancelled, there was nothing to do. He began to strum aimlessly on his guitar. Some girls walked by and asked if he could play "changes." He started playing and a crowd gathered.

Most of the people were dateless. They sat on the steps below Whalen, or on the ground. They swayed from side to side, keeping time to songs which, by folk standards, were not the swaying back and forth kind. They made a point of applauding after every song, and kept asking Whalen to play songs which he'd never heard of.

More people wandered by. Some were looking for pick-ups, some were just taking study breaks; most had nothing else to do, and were trying to look contented.

After about an hour, Whalen climbed to the top step, figited with his collar, strummed a loud chord, paused, and then began to sing, "There are too many martyrs, and too many dead . . ." His listeners began to sing along.

A voice from Washington tower called out, "shut the hell up." Whalen and his audience laughed.

Several feet away, in front of John Quincy Adams tower, four men wearing blue jackets with white letters on the front walked up to a Negro and asked, "What do you think of Vietnam?" The black answered, "I've got some buddies over there." The men in the blue jackets laughed and walked over to listen to Whalen. Whalen began to sing "Sounds of Silence" and the people around him stopped talking. The men in blue jackets walked away and stood by, looking at the crowd.

A girl in a short green jacket and a longish skirt walked out from John Quincy Adams, in front of Whalen and his listeners, and headed toward the little hatch. As she passed the men in the blue jackets they laughed, and exclaimed "look at that dog." Some of the people listening to Whalen heard them, turned and look at the girl as she hurried down the steps and ran into the little hatch.

She sat at the first table next to the door, alone. She just sat there. Some couples walked in, past her, and stood at the counter. Two guys walked in, glanced at her sitting alone, snickered, and walked by.

Outside, Whalen began a loud song and demanded, "Come on, sing along." "How many deaths will it take before too many people have died . . ."

Whalen finished singing and thanked everyone for listening and singing along. He put his guitar into its case, walked down the steps and into Washington tower. The people sitting on the "funny looking steps" slowly walked away.

After everyone had left, the girl in the green coat walked out of the little hatch, up the steps, past where the men in the blue jackets had been, and hurried into J.Q.A., alone.

Have you ever wondered exactly why some women dress the way they do, especially when their manner of dress seems to you unattractive, at times even bizarre, and certainly deviant from feminine norms? Have you ever stopped to think about what dictates the personal mode and whether it really is personal?

We would all agree that people do not simply select their clothes at random - they choose items that they feel express them well, or that fit the image of themselves they would like to present. So granted, some girls are the sheep of fashion, and they don't have to worry about being looked at disapprovingly because nothing is showing - the only personality their clothing exudes is that of a page ripped out of a magazine, the only image presented is that of a mannequin. They don't have to let anyone know anything about them except their fashionability. And that's fine, since from all conservative points of view, nobody likes to be confronted any more.

So what about those who can't help wearing their ideas, opinions, points of view and very hearts draped around them in the form of clothing. What about the long haired urchins who hang in the hatch clad in heaps of beads and bells and earrings and splashy etceteras who are branded at first glance Hippies, and at random, pseudo-hippies? They elicit, you must admit, certain reactions from certain types of people - generally automatic rejection or indifference from the fashionable, collegiate or undecided factions, and acceptance from those that dress similarly. In case you haven't noticed we have just drawn a dividing line, which if you will think about it, is really a valid one, and sadly enough, it is just on the basis of clothing. Now on the surface level, that's really tragic - remember clothes don't make the woman and all that, and it's true, they don't. But clothes reflect the woman, and that's the important thing. If a guy is not attracted to a girl because he says she dresses too wildly, or too carelessly or too something else, he is not, contrary to popular opinion, making a shallow judgement, since although he himself may not realize it, he is in actuality, turned off by what her clothes represent or embody. If a girl is embarrassed to be with another girl because the other girl is not attired in accordance with her standards, that means that the girl is not in accordance with her standards.

It would seem that those who dress as "hippies" are not seeking self-expression so much as they are testing it out, daring to exhibit what's there. Just wanting to show, share what's there. Your mind's up for grabs, you know, heart in hand, on sleeve. But there's also the protection of the group, so that nobody knows for sure if you're on the level or just putting on a show. And sometimes even you don't know it - even you fashion plates.

Communication is bad enough, but this is just one more thing to mess it up, so when you're out on your spring and summer wardrobe flings, girls, wondering how so and so will like this and how you love such and such but wouldn't dare to wear it, just be true to yourself "and it will follow as the night follows the day, thou canst not then be false to any man." And things will be so much easier.

School of Education Now Offers Administrative Intern Program

Applications for the Undergraduate Administrative Intern Program are now available at the School of Education. This program is open to all juniors going into their senior year who are interested in administration, advising, or teaching at the higher education level. Participants in the program become working members of the staffs of a variety of administrative and academic departments of UMass.

Interns gain "inside" perspective on the capacities, attitudes, methods and plans of University administrators. Interns can expect to gain perspective on such questions as to what degree is there an interlocking "establishment" among those who manage the University? Is the University administration designed, by deliberation or by accident, to thwart faculty or student desires? Are academic schools and departments wither "fiefdoms" or intergrated parts of an organization system? What is behind the term "red tape"? Is the University administration a form of tyranny; is it a benevolent dictatorship; is it a loose association of virtually autonomous activities; is it totally inchoate? If there is room for improvement in University administration, what strategies and techniques can be employed.

The programconsists of : ten weeks of summer work in a selected office at $85 per week; ten hours of work per week at $2 per hour during the regular school year; two required seminar courses, one in the fall and one in the spring, in University administration and higher education; and participation in an indepth group project on some phase of University life.

Applicants will be required to complete an application form, write a five-page paper on "recommended methods of student involvement in University administration and academic affairs" and be interviewed to be eligible for selection. Applicants for this program should contact Assistant Dean for Administration, Richard R. Coffing, at the School of Education before Friday.

Lederle to Answer Demands Of King Council Petition

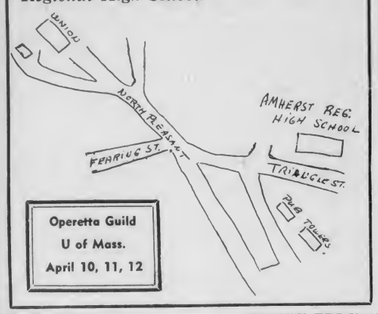
President Lederle will answer the demands made in a petition present to the Administration Friday by King Council Executive Secretary Gil Salk this Friday.

Calling for campus construction companies to begin fair hiring practices, the petition asks that any company which discriminates in hiring be denied University contracts. The text of the petition follows.

Members of the Martin Luther King Jr. Social Action Council and the UMass community at-large who deplore racial injustice do hereby petition the President of the University to request:

1. of the proper authorities, that all future contracts for University construction work contain a clause requiring that a guarantee by a contractor that there be equitable minority group representation at all levels, and that the contractor shall assume the burden of proof if he fails to fulfill his guarantee and:

2. Of all contractors presently working on campus, that the University being aware of serious injustices existing at present work sites, demands that immediate corrective steps be taken. Weekly statements of the progress of these steps should be submitted, beginning two weeks from today, to the President of the University and the Executive Secretary of the Martin Luther King Jr. Social Action Council.



The Daily Collegian would like to clarify the situation surrounding the publication of a letter from Dr. Robert W. Kern in its Wednesday, April 2 issue.

The letter to the editor criticizing Dr. Howard Quint of the UMass history department was received during the University's Spring vacation and printed in the first regular issue of the Daily Collegian following the break.

Between the time that the letter was mailed and printed in this newspaper, Dr. Kern sent a telegram to the Daily Collegian asking that the letter be withdrawn. Unfortunately, the telegram never arrived at the newspaper and the letter was published.

Dr. Kern told the Daily Collegian, subsequent to the publication of the letter, that he was sorry that the letter was "inadvertantly run," and that he had been notified of its incorrectness and therefore requested that it be withdrawn."

Filmmaker Says Cinema Courses Help Orient Audiences to Quality Films

"Although it is still too early to properly assess the full extent to which college cinema courses will provide new talent for Hollywood, there is no question that they perform an important service to the motion picture industry by helping to orient a whole new audience to quality in films," says distinguished film director and producer Martin Ritt.

Ritt's observations were made following his return to Hollywood from participation in Ohio University's first student film festival on its campus at Athens, Ohio. While there he not only discussed specifics with students and faculty at O.U. on the making of his forthcoming Paramount film, "The Molly Maguires," by Jeanne Cagney Morrison, sister of James Cagney, and an active worker in the University's Lively Arts program. A special screening of "Hud," an earlier Ritt film, was a highlight of the three-day seminar.

Ritt said he was greatly impressed with the creative quality revealed in the subjects which earned cash prizes for the eight student finalists. The winners were chosen from among the 200 O.U. students working toward fine arts degrees in film production. Actors used in the student films were friends and fellow students. Production costs per film ranged from $50 to $125, Ritt was told. The University made available its equipment to the filmmakers.

"Real talent will always find an outlet," sayd Ritt, "but I told them how tough it will be for them to break into the movies. I probably sounded as if I were trying to discourage them, but you can never discourage the ones with ability and those who can be discouraged shouldn't be in films."

The director says he was happy to note that the students of moviemaking in Ohio were as enthusiastic as they are in all the campuses he has visited.

"Instruction available at least teaches the young people about the technical tools of the trade," he says. "They become conversant with what's wanted in acting and directing. If they want to carry on professionally after graduation they have completed the ground work for the task.

"We know that 70 per cent of our movie audience is under 30, and we know that if young people don't like it, a movie cannot be a really big hit. If we increase their appreciation of quality on the screen, we are developing a more responsive audience for better films."

Ritt believes "The Molly Maguires," starring Richard Harris, Sean Connery and Samantha Eggar, will have an appeal to young people, since it concerns the secret society of Irish immigrant coal miners in the 1870's who fought against conditions and discrimination in the anthracite fields of Pennsylvania.

"What seems to appeal most to youth today is something that shows revolt against the establishment.

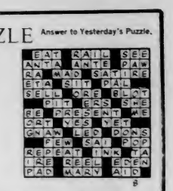
MembersCertified By Scuba Club

Saturday, March 29th, the Scuba Club certified seven new members: Prudence Stevens, Helene Couchon, Brian Krutka, Timothy Henderson, Robert Duffield, Marty Tabasky, and Thomas Hart.

The certification dive was held at Lanes Cove, Cape Ann, Mass.



This year's certification was unique in that the students received the Scuba Club's own certification combined with a Y.M.C.A. affiliate certification. The Scuba Club is the only club on campus that can certify its members nationally in their particular field.

The instruction new members receive is very intense and on a personal basis with two to three students per instructor. Once certified, the club members are offered a wide range of activities from wreck hunting and exploring to spearfishing and lobster-grabbing. There is a world down there that staggers the imagination . . . a vast, silent world that is timeless in its beauty and limitless in its potential to mankind. The Scuba Club's purpose is to bring this world to the interested students on campus.

Baseball Outlook Brightens as DiSarcina Bounces Back

Co-Captain Should Play in Ten Days

The UMass baseball team got its best news, since the last time the barns weren't smelling, when it was learned that co-captain Joe DiSarcina, who was feared to be lost for at least six weeks, should be back within ten days.

The All-New England and All-Yankee Conference shortstop was struck by a pitch on the right wrist, suffering a fracture. The wrist was immediately put in a cast and DiSarcina, a .300 hitter and superlative fielder, was thus thought to be lost for the bulk of the season.

However, good news has come this week. The break was not as serious as first believed. DiSarcina reported the wrist feeling much better and had the cast removed last Friday. He will start working out this week, and start hitting next week as the wrist becomes stronger.

Redman coach Dick Bergquist was ecstatic about DiSarcina's return, now hoped for the Vermont trip, April 18 and 19. The coach said, "This is a big lift to the team. I'm really happy about it as is the rest of the team. And of course Joey has been smiling about coming back."

It was about time that something good happened to the likeable co-captain. DiSarcina missed 10 games out of the basketball season, which he also co-captained, due to a family death and a leg injury.

He sprained an ankle in the first game of the spring trip and upon his return, suffered the wrist injury. Maybe, after a lot of bad luck, things will turn the other way for the talented shortstop.

His return won't come any too soon, as the 2-5 Redmen nine opens its quest for a Yankee Conference title Thursday at Connecticut.

redmen rantings - wmua 991.1 FM) will broadcast that big UConn game Thursday, starting at 3 p.m. Glenn Briere and Hal Dash will handle broadcast chores for the Redman Network... UMass wrestlers Bob Freeman and George Zguris were defeated in first round competition of the NCAA wrestling championships... Sophomore Leo Duart is expected to be the only UMass entry in next week's Boston Marathon, but he is given a good chance of finishing well up in the standings by local track experts.

Walk is NBA's 2nd Pick, Celtics Land Jo Jo White

NEW YORK (AP) - The Phoenix Suns, losers to Milwaukee last month in the coin flip for Lew Alcinder, selected 6 foot-10 Neal Walk of the University of Florida as the National Basketball Association's No. 2 pick.

Phoenix kicked off the draft of college seniors after the formality of Milwaukee's drafting of Alcinder had been observed.

Following the selection of Walk, a 20-year-old pivotman also picked No. 2 in the rival American Basketball Association draft, the Seattle Super-Sonics tabbed 6-foot-2 Lucius Allen, Alcinder's teammate at UCLA for two seasons who left school before his senior year.

Then, in order, The Detroit Pistons picked 6-foot-7 Terry Driscoll of Boston College, the Chicago Bulls chose 6-foot-5 Larry Cannon of LaSalle and the San Diego Rockets selected 6-foot-5 Bobby "Bingo" Smith of Tulsa.

Completing the first round picks were Bob Portman of Creighton, by San Francisco; Herman Gilliam of Purdue, by Cincinnati; Olympic star Jo Jo White of Kansas, by Boston, Butch Beard of Louisville, by Atlanta; John Warren of St. John's, by New York; Willie McCarter of Drake, by Los Angeles; Bud Ogden of Santa Clara, by Philadelphia; and Mike Davis of Virginia Union, by Baltimore.

Los Angeles, awarded a bonus pick at the conclusion of the first round as compensation for the loss of Rudy LaRusso two years ago, chose 6-foot-9 Rick Roberson of the University of Cincinnati.

The second round went like this:

Chicago from Phoenix, Simmie Hill, West Texas State; Milwaukee, Bob Greacen, Rutgers; Seattle, Ron Taylor, Southern California; Detroit, Willie Norwood, Alcorn A&M; Chicago, Ken Spain, Houston; San Diego, Bernie Williams, LaSalle; San Francisco, Ed Suldut, Holy Cross.

Chicago from Cincinnati, John Baum, Temple; Philadelphia from Boston, Gene Williams, Kansas State; Atlanta, Wally Anderzunas, Creighton; New York, Bill Bunting, North Carolina; Los Angeles, Dick Garrett, Southern Illinois; Philadelphia, Willie Taylor, Lemoyne, Tenn.; Baltimore, Willie Scott, Alabama State.

Red Sox Open Season Today With High Pennant Hopes

BOSTON (AP) - After finishing fourth, 17 games behind the champion Detroit Tigers, in 1968, the Boston Red Sox are confident they can go all the way under the American League's new divisional setup this year.

"Barring injuries, we have as good a shot as anyone and can win it," Manager Dick Williams said on the eve of Tuesday's regular season opener against the Orioles at Baltimore.

With Tony Conigliaro apparently recovered from a serious eye injury suffered when hit by a pitch Aug. 18, 1967, the Red Sox boast a mighty lineup.

Carl Yastrzemski, the league's only .300 hitter last year, rested and worked out during the winter and is ripping the ball with the thunder which led the Red Sox to the pennant in 1967.

Centerfielder Reggie Smith, working between Yaz and Tony, gives Boston possibly the hardest hitting outfield in the league.

The infield is solid with Ken Harrelson, the 1968 RBI king, back at first base, Mike Andrews at second, Rico Petrocelli at short and erstwhile first baseman George Scott at home at third and showing definite signs of rebounding from a dismal .171 year at bat.

Rus Gibson is the No. 1 catcher and the Red Sox are keeping fingers crossed that he stays healthy.

That leaves the pitching, the achilles heel for so many Red Sox powerhouses in the last couple of decades.

The fact is glaring: The Red Sox are hurting for pitching. The first blow struck when Jose Santiago, who was stricken with arm trouble last season, suffered a recurrence of the ailment.

With Santiago out indefinitely, the pressure becomes heavier on Jim Longorg, the 1967 Cy Young Award winner. Lonnie slipped to a 6-10 record last year after posting 22 victories and adding two triumphs in the World Series the previous fall.

Right-hander Ray Culp and southpaw Dick Ellsworth, a pair of 16-game winners a year ago, are other starters. Ken Brett, a 20-year-old southpaw virtually has nailed down the fourth starting job.

Lonborg is going to have to return to 1967 form and Culp and Ellsworth are going to have to give him plenty of help to keep the Red Sox in the running.

Yankees Spoil Ted Williams' Debut

WA TON (AP) - The New York es romped past Washington Monday to ruin Ted Willia but as manager in the annua rican League opener before ident Nixon.

New rs Jerry Kennedy and Bobby er slammed consecutive runs as New York raced early 8-0 lead. Murcer ad a two-run single to cap the Ya s' scoring in the fourth inning on they scored four unearned runs.

Nixon chatted and joked with Williams in the Presidential box before throwing out the first ball - a soft lob - to begin baseball's 100th year.

Mel Stottlemyre, the Yankee's 21-game winner last year, took over from Nixon, allowing 14 hits but keeping the Senators shackled until the game was out of reach. Frank Howard walloped a two-run homer for Washington in the ninth.

Williams emerged from the dugout just once for an angry but futile argument with umpires over a dropped pop fly in the midst of the Yankees' fourth-inning outburst.

A record opening day crowd of 45,113 watched the game in newly renamed Robert F. Kennedy Stadium.

Nixon, an admitted hometown fan, stayed throughout the three-hour game.

Williams, the Hall of Fame hitter who came out of retirement to become the first million-dollar manager, received a standing ovation that exceeded the applause for Nixon when he took the field before the game.

Loffsinger to Leave in July

By JAN CURLEY
Assistant Managing Editor

Dr. Mark G. Noffsinger, Associate Dean of Students was one of the most readily accessible deans for any student. (MDC photo).

Dr. Mark G. Noffsinger, Associate Dean of Students, has announced his resignation from UMass to become effective July 27, just one month short of his being at the University for five years.

When asked by the DAILY COLLEGIAN what his plans for the future were, Dr. Noffsinger replied, "To be perfectly honest, I haven't the foggiest idea what I will be doing."

In looking back on his years at UMass Dr. Noffsinger said he had enjoyed UMass and one of aspects that he liked best was its tolerance of differing opinions. He said his decision to leave was not a dissatisfaction with the University, but a "personal one", that he and his wife had been thinking of doing a number of things.

Dr. Noffsinger did his undergraduate work at the University of Toledo (Ohio) from which he also received an M.A. He holds a Ph.D. from the University of Michigan. He then joined the faculty at the University of Missouri.

Dr. Noffsinger came to the University in August of 1964 from the University of Michigan where he was coordinator of counseling and assistant director of residence halls.

As Coordinator of Student Activities and Director of the Student Union, the position he assumed upon his arrival at UMass, he became well known to the students, faculty and administrators through the personal rapport which he established with them.

Dean of Students William F. Field announced Feb. 3, 1967, that Dr. Noffsinger had been appointed to the newly created position of Associate Dean of Students.

Julian Bond Receives Ovation Before Capacity Cage Crowd

By LOUIS DIMONACO
Staff Reporter

"Shouts of liberty and equality are a hollow mockery" and the "barbarity" in the United States "reigns without rival", quoted Julian Bond in his opening remarks at Curry Hicks Cage last night. Bond cited a speech by Frederick Douglas, given July 4, 1852, which "sounds as though it were written yesterday."

The representative to the Georgia House presented a 30 minute speech to a capacity crowd at the Cage. Giving his view of the Black experience in America, Bond stated that, "a country founded by white men 300 years ago has remained in the hands of the white men," that "today's black struggle continues," and the history of the black struggle has been a "rebellion by non-whites against white providence."

Bond received a standing ovation after his introduction by John O'Connell, chairman of the Distinguished Visitors Program, and then proceeded to quote three speeches by leaders in Black American history.

Including the American Indians and the Spanish speaking Americans as well as the Blacks, Bond said "it will take a great deal of dedication on the part of young people." He went on to say that we are dealing with "evil men and an evil system," and that in a country designed as a melting pot "the only thing that has not melted is us."

Along with his membership to the Georgia House of Representatives, Bond is also a member on the Executive Committee of the Atlanta NAACP. In 1960 he helped to found the Student Non-violent Co-ordinating Committee (SNCC) and became known nationwide when he was nominated for the office of Vice President at the 1968 Democratic National Convention.

In the quest for civil rights Bond said that the Blacks "have to get together with other people no matter who they may be," but he said other methods have to be considered and the "prospects of violent revolution ought not to be dismissed." He does not, however, conceive of a revolution "tomorrow or the day after for that matter."

In his closing remarks Bond said that the Black movement "ought to be a movement which can rely on young people," and that "those who refuse to take part in the action are killers of the dream."

After his speech Bond answered questions from the audience, one of which concerned the formation of a new political party. In response to this Bond said there is a tendency to "announce political parties rather than form them." He also said that the Black students of ten years ago had little or no interest in university or community functions. He closed with the remark that if the black student has to choose between university and community activities, he should "choose off campus activities" because the condition of the universities are superior to those of the outside communities.

Sargent Signs Deficiency Budget Bill, Federal Government Funds Grants Libr. Funds

UMass building received a boost today when Governor Francis W. Sargent this morning signed into law the capital deficiency budget which includes the medical school appropriation for $19.6 million, and $2 million in funds for the proposed library and Tobin Hall.

The University was also alerted this afternoon by Senator Edward W. Brooke's office that the Office of Education (Health, Education and Welfare) had appropriated $432,574 in funds towards the library.

The additional $2 million asked for in the bill for the library was due to a rise in construction costs after the initial amount had been requested from the legislature. The $2 million sum will now be reduced by the money granted from the federal government.

Forum on Dorm Autonomy

"How Does One Establish a Society Placing Responsibility on the Student...?"

By DONNA WADSWORTH
Staff Reporter

In an open forum on dorm autonomy held last night in Southwest, students and administrators discussed the problems of bringing all participants in the University community to agreement about responsibility for student actions. The discussion, which was the result of petitions from students of John Adams Tower, was hosted by President Lederle, Dean Field, Assistant Dean of Students Paul Brubacher, and Southwest Master John Hunt, and centered around open house policy and alcoholic beverage regulations.

The meeting was well-attended and the informal question-answer technique provided lively conversation between panel and audience.

A question from the floor opened the discussion. "It seems to me that the majority of students are capable of setting their own rules, within certain limitations. What does the Administration feel about our ability to be autonomous?"

Dean Field answered. "Students are about as responsible as faculty, and faculty are about as responsible as people. The question is how does one establish a society placing responsibility on the student in a college atmos-

THE NEWS IN BRIEF

LOS ANGELES (AP) - The state reached the end of a long legal journey Tuesday, winding up presentation of testimony intended to convict Sirhan Bishara Sirhan of first-degree murder in the assassination of Sen. Robert F. Kennedy. The defense also rested its case.

HANOVER, N.H. (AP) - Dartmouth College, now for men only, has announced that it will admit 70 women during the 1969-70 academic year under an experimental exchange program involving 10 other eastern colleges.

The exchange students, mostly juniors, will receive academic credit for the program through their home universities.

In addition to the 70 women students, one male is being accepted at Dartmouth under the program, and between 10 and 14 Dartmouth men will move elsewhere - generally to previously all-girl schools.

Participating colleges, besides Dartmouth, include Amherst, Bowdoin, Connecticut College, Mt. Holyoke, Smith, Vassar, Wesleyan, Wheaton and Williams.

WASHINGTON (AP) - A new survey that showed 20 per cent of 5,000 color television sets checked emit potentially dangerous radiation provides more evidence that the TV industry must solve the problem, government experts said Tuesday.

At the same time the experts disclosed that the Public Health Service first recommended two years ago precautionary steps manufacturers might take to eliminate or minimize the hazard - but these have not been fully met.

CHICAGO (AP) - Four Chicago policemen pleaded innocent today of federal charges growing out of street disorders during the Democratic National Convention in August.

The four men were among 17 persons indicted by a federal grand jury which spent months investigating behavior of demonstrators, policemen and others. Eight policemen, eight demonstrators and a broadcasting company employee were indicted.

BARNSTABLE, Mass. (AP) - Antone Costa, 24, the Provincetown handyman charged with the dismemberment slayings of two Providence, R.I. girls in January, has been ruled mentally competent to stand trial.

The Barnstable County grand jury, meanwhile was hearing evidence in the case, with a report probably to be made Wednesday.

Precisionettes to Compete in Boston At Beanpot Invitational Drill Meet

By RICHARD LANE
Senior Reporter

PRECISIONETTES, WOMEN'S drill team, performing at this years Home Coming. They won first place in New England at the twelfth Regimental Drill meet. They compete again in another meet this weekend. (MDC photo by Ken Stevens).

The Precisionettes, the University of Massachusetts' women's drill team, is an organized group of women representing the University at regional and national drill competitions. They perform at as many home football games as possible for the enjoyment of the student body. This group is sponsored by UMass RSO, while ROTC provides them with a knowledgeable drill master and faculty advisor.

In 1948 Precisionettes was formed as a division of the UMass Band and performed with them in this capacity. The UMass - Harvard game was the highlight of the team's activities in 1963. During the first full year, 1964-1965 season, as an RSO sponsored organization, the team performed at the New York World's Fair and a football game in Buffalo.

In the Spring of 1966, the Precisionettes participated in their first competition: the National Intercollegiate Drill Competition at the Cherry Blossom Festival in Washington, D.C., in which they placed sixth. The next year included more football games and a regional New England competition at Cranston, R.I., in which they captured first place.

Last year the Precisionettes defended and retained their title of first place in New England at the Twelfth Regimental Drill Meet in Boston. Again the team traveled to Washington, but with even higher hopes. The dream came true when they won second place in that National competition.

For the first time, this year the Precisionettes will compete at the Beanpot Invitational Drill Meet in Boston, which has previously been only a performance. The team has hopes that this season will bring even higher honors as they compete for first place in the National Competition the weekend of April 11 - 13 and then defend their first place title in New England on May 3rd in the Commonwealth Armory.

Competitions are not the sole activities of the Precisionettes. The team has marched in parades such as the UMass Homecoming parade, Holyoke St. Patrick's Day Parade, and the Patriot's Day Parade in Lexington. On the agenda also are, of course, home football games, Fall and Spring ROTC Review. Last Fall, the team performed at Norwich University. One of the most rewarding performances this year was at the Clarke School for the Deaf in Northampton. The students enjoyed the demonstration immensely, and the Precisionettes hope to return in the upcoming season for another benefit performance.

For these parades and the Clarke School trip, the girls have paid for their own transportation. In addition, Precisionettes has sponsored sales to make money. They have sold notebooks at the beginning of each new semester at a discount rate for the students. Selling candy has proved to be successful for the team and a delicious investment for the buyer!

Eighty-two per cent of the county governments in the United States have populations of less than 50,000 each.

Chicago Priest Speaks On Black Catholic in America

The REVEREND GEORGE CLEMENTS, a black Catholic priest, will speak on "The Black Catholic in America Today" at the Newman Center social hall, Monday, April 14, at 7:30 p.m.

A native of Chicago, Rev. Clements became the first black student in the Archdiocese of Chicago to go through the ranks in his education for the priesthood. For the past six years, Father Clements has been an associate pastor at St. Dorothy Church in the Chatham area of Chicago's South side.

During this time the parish has become both famous and infamous by enabling the people to assume a very real and very dynamic leadership in the struggle for social and racial justice.

Rev. George Clements

Rev. Clements has worked with such groups as the Martin Luther King League, the Afro-American Patrolman's League, the Afro-American Fireman's League, Operation Breadbasket, and others.

In the past months, there has been much publicity over a serious confrontation between the hierarchy of the Archdiocese of Chicago, and the black priests of the Archdiocese, as well as the Black priests throughout the nation, who compromise the Black Catholic Clergy Caucus. His parishioners unsuccessfully demanded that Father Clements be made pastor of the parish but their request was ignored and events followed.

Rev. Clements believes and will continue to employ every means at his disposal to establish Black leadership in the ENTIRE Black community, which all Black priests, and thinking Black Catholics are convinced must include the Catholic Church and its Hierarchy.

Dance Group Schedules Performance

The University of Massachusetts Concert Dance Group will present their Spring Concert, Thursday, April 10 and Friday, April 11, at 8:15 p.m. in Bowker Auditorium. The performances are open to the public free of charge.

The Concert Dance Group, under the direction of Marilyn V. Patton will present a variety of dances choreographed by faculty and students specializing in dance in the School of Physical Education.

Mrs. Janet T. Craft, director of the beginning dance group, will present a group composition featuring live music by Anthony Crescione, musical director. Paula Shiff, Concert Dance Group President will perform a solo choreographed for her by Christine Mitchell.

Barbara Wabhan and Donna Rossini use the more contemporary sounds of rock music in COMBINATION OF THE TWO and THE GOOD, THE BAD, AND THE UGLY.

Williams Sit-in Over; Basic Agreement Reached

WILLIAMSTOWN (AP) - The administration and the Afro-American Society at Williams College announced Tuesday that they are in basic agreement, and thet the problems of the last few days resulted from misunderstandings.

Members of the black society ended a three-day occupation of Hopkins Hall, the main administratio building, early Tuesday, and both sides issued statements later in the day.

Approximately 30 Negro students had taken over the building last Saturday and had vowed to remain until they received responses to 15 demands.

Classes were suspended Monday and Tuesday as solutions were sought. The major stumbling block was what at first appeared to be a Negro demand for a separate dormitory and cultural center.

In a joint statement, Stephen R. Lewis Jr., college provost, and Preston Washington, chairman of the Afro-American Society said the administration and society agreed that " a larger concentration of black students within the present philosophy and structure of the residential house system will be sought to increase the solidarity and brotherhood of Afro-American students.

"More centralized dining, the existence of the social and cultural center in Mears House, larger clusters of black freshmen and the greater concentration of black upperclassmen in residential houses will provide the cultural, inforcement the Afro-American Society sought in its demands and which the administration recognizes as beneficial.

"Initial misunderstandings encurred because of confusion that the cultural center needed to be geographically distinct to meet its goals."

Proposal Made 2.0 Needed for Sociology Majors

Two proposals have been made by the Undergraduate Studies Committee regarding requirements for sociology majors. These have been presented to the Faculty and endorsed although not yet ratified. They are as follows:

Within the Sociology Department there will be two choices for majors: a career major and a general major. The career major shall consist of the requirements as they now stand. The general major would be required to take Soc. 101 and ANY 8-10 upper level Sociology courses. Both majors must fulfill the math, science and social science requirements of the College of Arts and Sciences.

The second proposal was Academic Standard.. This would only apply to those after the class of '71. Within the first four sociology courses, the student must receive at least one B and attain an average of 2.0. If this is not met, the student shall have a probationary semester to do so. If he again fails, then he shall no longer be a major in the Department. Also, all majors must have a 2.0 average upon graduation.

Thursday night in Thompson 104 at 8:15 there will be an open meeting to discuss the above proposals with the committee. This is very imortant, as it may be possible to implement the changes by September '69.

Artificial Heart Worked, Human Heart Rejected

HOUSTON, Tex. (AP) - Haskell Karp, who lived 65 hours with a complete artificial heart before receiving a human transplant, died Tuesday.

A spokesman at St. Luke's Episcopal Hospital said Karp died at 3:20 p.m. following a cardiac arrest.

The exact cause of death will not be known until the autopsy is completed, but it is suspected that the patient suffered rejection complicated by pneumonia and kidney failure," the spokesman said.

Doctor s expressed alarm only hours earlier after they reported Karp was experiencing kidney failure.

A morning advisory had reported the development of pneumonia in the right lung and a depressed kidney function but said doctors were hopeful he would respond to treatment.

A Call for Action

After 10 weeks of comparative calm, the Urban Crisis exploded to the top of President Nixon's priority list last week. Up until now, the Administration has concentrated on foreign affairs: the Middle East, relations with the Soviet Union, and, of course, Vietnam. However, the events of last week illustrated the urgency surrounding the decay of Urban America, and the necessity of positive action in the cities.

It would seem that, for two and a half months, Nixon has ignored the year-old recommendations of the Kerner Report, a plea for immediate and massive federal aide to the city. But reminders that Urban America is in desperate condition last week forced the President to "take another hard look at what we must now do to prevent mass misery in our cities."

The memory of Dr. Martin Luther King Jr.,'s assassination a year ago brought solemn resolves from national leaders, in both political parties, to work to end poverty and racial injustice. But the anniversary was also marked by the mobilization of 7,000 National Guard troops to quell street fighting in the slums of Chicago. A curfew was imposed in Memphis after street fighting and looting erupted in that city.

Across the country, city residents are revolting against the high price of taxes, as the urban middle class realizes the same fact which had tormented the urban poor for years - they cannot afford to live in the cities where they work.

The issues of school bussing, welfare, low and middle income housing shortages, as they seemingly always have, compound the ever mounting list of new and local problems.

Any solutions which might be proposed need money, in massive amounts, for implementation. But the already drained urban resident can no longer pay the brunt of the sum needed by the cities. They simply, like the cities in which they live, are too poor to pay.

The money, then, must come from the federal government. The Nixon administration's willingness to spend the money needed by the cities will not really be known for several weeks, but it is now clear that two problems may block the Administration from making any concrete financial contribution to urban America.

The first is the rate of inflation. The Administration has stated that it is reluctant to increase federal spending and further tax the economy. The second is the defense department. The Pentagon steadfastly refuses to cut anymore than $1 billion of its $80 billion budget. While much of the money the Defense Department cuts from its budget would just not be spent, a great deal would still be left to aide the cities.

It now seems that the only way the Nixon Administration will be able to help the cities will be to make sizeable cuts in the defense budget, something which most Americans agree is necessary, but something which the Pentagon is evidentally willing to fight.

To the editor:

You seem to print just letters that are criticism to what I think is a fine product, so a letter of praise is badly needed. What I write about is the Woman's Page that appeared in yesterday's Collegian. It was a welcome relief from the dull, everyday news and actually was good reading. Maybe as all things, the Woman's Page has matured from the mundane pablam of restaurant reviews, and the former tripe. Now the page appears to be what it has been named, the Woman's Page, not Squaw Talk. So, congratulations on a good innovation, and keep it up more often.

Unfair?

To the editor:

The open attack on Greeks is an unfair generalization of the fraternity system. The flagrant attack on the Greek system hurts houses who have taken action on civic and social issues. We feel that open and candid editorials, with rebuttals possible, would provide more constructive benefit than generalizations that make it impossible to comment upon.

The cartoons unfairly condemned the whole system, which includes all of the parts. We, as one of the parts seek to rectify this injustice. Other houses have: participated in a muscular distrophy drive on campus, sponsored a debate with Dow Chemical, brought Mayor Ryan of Springfield to campus to speak, participated in the heart fund drive, taken part in the Lions Club charity drive, sponsored the varsity - alumni football game, sponsored Christmas parties for underprivileged children, and have caroled at Christmas time at nursing homes. Our house has: sponsored a drive for Appalachia, sponored a Halloween party for children of the Meadowbrook School, aided Afro-Am in their Marion Williams concert, taken part in the Belchertown volunteer program, and are currently sponsoring (in the memory of Martin Luther King and Robert Kennedy) with the sanction of the Martin Luther King Council a drive for poor people in America.

Expounding on one point within a system does not necessarily describe that system. We do not judge your newspaper by one cartoon, do not judge all Greeks by the actions of some.

Disagree

To the editor:

I have never before written to the COLLEGIAN, and I do not intend to make it a habit, but it seems to me that some answer should be made publicly to the recent article by my friend Professor Robert Hinckley, "Undergraduate Teaching Versus Graduate Research." An answer seems to me important precisely because there is so much that is good, and attractive, in what Professor Hinckley says that readers are likely to end up by agreeing with him uncritically.

I attended a small liberal arts college as an undergraduate, and in twenty-two years of teaching I have taught both in small liberal arts colleges and in large universities. I must say that in this experience I have not found any uniform relationship between good teaching and the type of institution. I have had, and known, good teachers in both types - and I have had and known bad ones. There is nothing about the atmosphere of a small liberal arts college which necessarily encourages good teaching; indeed, in many cases the opposite is true, since the teacher is likely to become so immersed in the social and student life of the college that he does not keep up with his professional reading and is eventually twenty or thirty years behind. I would be willing to stack the average quality of teaching at UMass against the average level at almost any small liberal arts college that I know of.

It is, also, not uniformly true that small liberal arts colleges are immune from the pressure to publish. Our sister institution across town provides an example: professors at Amherst who do not publish are rather unusual and do not often last long there. This is true to a large extent at the "best" colleges, such as Smith, Williams, etc. It is not true at the colleges - such as the denominational colleges characteristic of the Midwest - which are often mediocre or worse. Those of us who attended such colleges do not remember any steady succession of great teachers - quite the reverse.

Although he does not say so, and probably would not, there seems to be an implication in Professor Hinckley's statement that there is some positive teaching benefit to be gained from not engaging in research. Or to state it more bluntly, that good teachers are those who do not engage in research and do not teach graduate students. I just do not think this is true. In fact, I would be willing to bet that if we could study this objectively, we would find no correlation between teaching ability and research performance (or lack of it), either positive or negative. As I look around me I am struck by the fact that there seem, quite clearly, to be as many bad teachers among those who do no research as among those who are research scholars. Good teaching comes from a combination of natural talent and interest, and has little to do with the other activities in which the teacher is engaged.

I am afraid we must face the sad fact that, at best, good teachers are and always will be in short supply. And the greater the numbers of young people we try to give a college education, the fewer (proportionally) will be the good teachers. This being the case, we will never have enough good teachers. But I do not think we will maximize the number available merely by separating graduate and undergraduate teaching. Where this has been tried (at places like Chicago and Michigan State) it has utterly failed to provide uniformly better teaching at the undergraduate level. I do not believe that the development of the graduate program at UMass has hurt undergraduate teaching; in fact, I suspect that such teaching is as good, here, as if ever was, if not better. Students who object to poor teaching have a legitimate grievance, but I am sure students of all generations have made the same complaints. I did.

All this is not said in an attempt to justify completely the status quo. We need today, as we have always needed, to pay great attention to the provision of good teachers. One of the ways to do this is to make teaching more attractive (this is not merely a matter of salary) and to find better ways of identifying and rewarding good teaching when it occurs. Teachers need some status AS TEACHERS. And I applaud Professor Hinckley's concern for finding some way of achieving this status. But I don't think he has found the solution, nor do I think he has diagnosed the problem very precisely.

Stereotypes

To the editor:

In a recent Springfield Union article entitled "Frat Image: Fun, Frolic, Flunk" this quote appeared: "The typical image of college fraternity life - fun, frolic and, possibly, flunk - may be true, a Penn State study shows." The rest of the article goes on to explain that people in the dormitories fare better scholastically than fraternity men. It would be a lie for me to say that this is not the typical fraternity image. However, a look at UMass fraternities, whether they are typical or not, might reveal a different set of facts.

Each semester, the Dean of Men's Office issues its own study. In it we see that for the 1968-1969 Fall Semester, the 1,002 UMass fraternity men compiled a total cume of 2.3005. This all fraternity average was, despite the typical fraternity image, above the all men's average of 2.2626.

As E. Reis asked in one of his recent cartoons, "Who stereotypes?" A closer look at the facts may show that UMass fraternities for one, do not fit the typical image of scholastic incompetence.

Great Page?

To the editor:

Regarding the Woman's page in the April 7 DAILY COLLEGIAN - what a great page. With its image changed from the silly, little girl trivia to the serious concepts of female liberation, the page promises to provide interesting reading each week.

My congratulations to editor Helen Kensick and her entire staff.

The Nerve!

To the editor:

In regard to your cartoons of April second and third, you have a lot of nerve to depict fraternities and all fraternity members as being single-minded conformists, obviously not having experienced fraternity life yourself. Contrary to popular belief, acceptance into a fraternity is not on the basis of an individuals ability to conform, the quantity of beer he can consume, or his sexual prowess. Nor are people cut from fraternities due to their interest in campus and civic affairs. Fraternities do not pressure members to conform any more than reference groups in a dorm.

I think you will find, on closer, and more objective inspection, that fraternity members, like anyone else on campus, have varied interests and constructively contribute to other groups within the University.

phere? We are further on the road to autonomy than any other state university. We have to gradually substitute independence for tradition, and this is not always easy."

Field went on to say that only three years ago, the University allowed no autonomy in house government. He stressed the point that autonomy must allow some guarantee of the rights of students in the minority.

Brubacher agreed. "It appears that there is a lot of difference of opinion as to how long open house hours should be. Whatever unit - school, house, corridor - decides, we have to think of the minority which could suffer."

A member of the audience suggested that the problem of annoyance to some students could be alleviated by having separate dorms with more limited open houses, or none at all.

Dr. Brubacher indicated that this was the direction in which the University was moving. "We in Southwest are already trying to let students choose their residences with a certain identity, but it is a slow process."

The conversation then turned to the use of alcoholic beverages. In answer to a question from the floor, President Lederle said, "We do have a problem with the over-21 ruling of the state legislature and with age violations here. The University has to be concerned. We don't want outside police actions, raids, etc. The most effective solution would be getting through the legislature that the drinking age be reduced."

The question arose about the possibility of facilities in the Student Union which could serve alcoholic beverages to UMass students under 21.

Lederle answered, "This is impossible under state law. The new campus center will have a bar, but we will have to require proof of age."

"Other schools are moving in relatively the same direction and at the same pace as we are. When a school like Boston College allows visiting hours, it makes it easier for us. College should be a place where people learn to manage their own affairs. Unfortunately, some parents won't let go of the apron strings, and expect us to be babysitters. We don't want to, but they hold US responsible."

The concensus of opinion was that what the University needs is better communication between student and faculty. A suggestion was made for a unicameral form of government: a student-faculty-administration Senate. Dean Field agreed. "There has been such a proposal," he said, "and I think there should be, because all three groups could then bring a hashed-out problem to the Board of Trustees. We really have common problems and need to work together."

President Lederle added, "Maybe by having a single legislative-making body, we could overcome the feeling of separatism, which does exist. One big problem is to get the students to realize that we are not a bureaucracy. In the eight years I have been here, I've seen many changes and I see more in the future."

UMies Interested in Foreign Studies Aided by International Studies Office

By ANNE HILLERMAN
Staff Reporter

Dr. Barbara Burn of the Office of International Studies has files of information on programs which offer students a wide variety of ways to spend a vacation and ideas on how to escape from a boring academic routine, such as working on a resort on the Black Sea.

"For not much more than he is spending at U. Mass, a student could attend a school in Australia, for instance, or spend a year in a British University," said Dr. Burn. There are numerous programs that students here are eligible for.

One of the most exciting packages for the summer is a trip to Japan to study at the University of Hokkaido. By special invitation from Portland State College in Oregon, UMass students can study for six weeks in Sapparo Japan, site of the 1970 Olympics. The University is in the Northern part of the country but the program includes excursions to all the major cities. The last part of the program offers an opportunity to participate in a Japanese - American Student conference. Undergraduates wishing to take part in this program may qualify for financial aid.

In addition to study programs the Office of International Studies can also assist students with travel and work in foreign countries. For example, information is now available on an Israeli package. For $599, including travel, living accommodations and meals, a student can spend nine weeks in Israel, three of them working in a Kibbutz and an archeological dig. Students who have had two years of French are eligible for a summer in France under a program offered by Dartmouth College. The plan includes living with a French family, courses in French language, literature and civilization, and free time for individual travel in Europe.

"We are always glad to have requests for information about opportunities abroad," said Dr. Burn. "If the office has nothing about the particular country or program a student is interested in we are eager to find out for him and to strengthen our own files."

Gina Bachauer Gives Impressive Performance

By JAMES W. WADE
Fine Arts Staff

The UMass Concert Association presented Greek pianist Gina Bachauer in concert Monday evening at Bowker Auditorium. Judging from the standing ovation and bravos, it was not only I who heard a piano recital of rare magnitude. It was truly an evening of artistry and accomplished music-making.

Mme. Bachauer's treatment of Beethoven's Sonata in C Major, Opus 53, the "Waldstein", was precisioned and forceful, yet dynamically proportioned. Her control of nuances, especially in the first movement, was flawless. She sang the theme of the Rondo for all it was worth and made for a most impressive performance.

Under Mme. Bachauer's hands, Chopin's B Minor Sonata came to life as a breathing, sensitive work of beauty. Both the first and last movements were powerfully directed structures that pulsated throughout. One would have to look hard to find music as moving as the third movement Largo, especially when played with the emotion that Mme. Bachauer injected into it.

Robert Schumann's Scenes from Childhood, Opus 15, is a masterful piece that musically portrays thirteen different childhood events. Mme. Bachauer played the scenes with the tenderness and personality that each individual section requires. From the melting lyricism of the famous "Traumerei", to the blustery pomp of "An Important Event", the total work was inflected with the grace and innocence that it wanted.

Film Series Theme Is Contemporary Social Problems

On Thursday, the Martin Luther King Jr. Social Action Council will show a series of films dealing with contemporary social problems. Starting at 2 p.m. in the Council Chambers on the second floor of the Student Union, the program will continue until 6 p.m. It will be open to the public with a 25-cent admission charge.

The feature film will be 'Off the Pig,' about the Black Panther movement. It reveals a side of the Panthers rarely shown in the American press. Also on the program will be 'Now!', a documentary of the Civil Rights movement, and 'Very Nice Very Nice', another documentary. In addition, the program will include a social satire called 'Protest!', and three animated films called 'The Hangman', 'Neighbors', and 'The Hand'.

Many of these films will be run more than once so that they will avoid conflicts with class schedules. The schedule follows:

2:00 Off the Pig; 2:20 Neighbors; 2:30 Protest!; 3:00 Off the Pig; 3:20 The Hangman; 3:35 Now! 3:40 The Hand; 4:00 Off the Pig; 4:20 Neighbors; 4:30 Now!; 4:35 Protest!; 5:05 The Hangman; 5:20 Off the Pig; 5:40 Very Nice Very Nice.

Boston Philharmonia To Perform Next Week

The BOSTON PHILHARMONIA ORCHESTRA will appear in concert next Tuesday evening, April 15th in Bowker Auditorium at 8:00 p.m. and will be under the direction of the gifted, young American conductor, Michael Tilson Thomas.

Mr. Thomas' program for this occasion includes Bach's Suite No. 4 IN D; Haydn's Symphony No. 60 in C "Il Distratto"; Symphony, Opus 21 by Anton von Webern; Carl Ruggles' "Men and Mountains" and Adagio for String Orchestra by Seeger.

The Boston Philharmonia has earned much praise for its outstanding performances since its founding last season. The ensemble is the first cooperative orchestra in this country and as such, is being closely observed.

The orchestra personnel has control of its membership, guest conductors and repertoire. Thus far, many of the country's most respected conductors have served including Alexander Schneider, Richard Burgin, Leon Kirschner and Kenneth Schermerhorn. Mr. Thomas, a twenty-four year old protege of Pierre Boulez is considered one of this country's most exciting talents.

Reserved tickets for this event are now available at $2.50 and may be obtained by contacting the Student Union Ticket Office.

UMass Lacrosse, Crew Open Today; Tennis Saturday

Stickmen Face Wesleyan, Hope for Quick Start

By WALT STACHURA

UMass lacrosse coach Dick Garber leads his team in their opening same today against Wesleyan on the field behind Boyden at 3 p.m. in what might be the beginning of the finest lacrosse season at U-Mass ever.

UMass returned home after a highly successful spring vacation road trip to Maryland and Long Island where they went unbeaten in a series of exhibition games. They capped their exhibition season with a 26-10 smashing of RPI last Saturday at home.

Wesleyan will present one of the better teams that the Redmen will face all season. The Cardinals are slated to finish among the top five teams in the New England lacrosse standings.

Garber noted that coach Gene Riley's team has a strong defense backed by a good offense. The defense is anchored by defenseman Ed Savage who will probably have the tough assignment of guarding Kevin O'Connor as he did last year.

The Wesleyan midfielders are led by Blackburn who Garber calls an excellent faceoff man and one of the leading scorers on the club.

Offensively, the Cardinals play a traditional offense operating in a circle with cutters breaking toward the net. Overall, Wesleyan plays good position with little gambling hoping to take advantage of the opponents mistakes.

Wesleyan will be playing their official opener in today's game. In their last exhibition game, they were downed by the Connecticut Valley Lacrosse Club 76 in overtime.

Garber is hoping that the Redmen will be able to jump off to an early lead to discourage his opponents and give UMass an early emotional boost. Also, a big win would prove that the spring trip was no fluke.

Netmen Seek No Less Than Title

By STEVE ROSS

The defending Yankee Conference tennis champions, under coach Steve Kosakowski, take to the courts this Saturday in quest of their second consecutive title. Kosakowski has but one goal: the championship again.

As Kosakowski put it, "Our first and only objective is to win the Conference. If we don't win that, we don't have a good year." For Kosakowski the eight dual meets mean relatively little, although the Redmen always compile a good record in them. Last year they were 7-3.

This year Kosakowski has more depth then he didi last year. No less than five men are fighting for the top singles spot, and four more are trying to crack into the final sixth spot. Four holdovers from last year lead the battle for the top spot.

Seniors Scott Sheppard, Tom Johnson, and captain Carl "Duck" Clem along with junior Mike Katz are the lettermen that Kosakowski has figured in the top five. They are joined by sophomore Alan Goldberg, the 1967 Eastern Mass high school king. Sophs Nubby Gervickas and Jon Bloom are in the thick of the sixth sport battle along with junior Warren Kahn and senior Tom Babson.

Gervickas is a veteran paratrooper who returned to school after a three year stint that included 22 jumps. Kahn was a starter in the opener last year but was injured in an automobile mishap and was forced to sit out the rest of the campaign. Babson was a regular on the Redmen hockey team.

Also making their presence felt are sophs Gus Penon, Rene Richard, Jeff Lockard and David Katz. Penon, a transfer from Costa Rica has turned out to give Kosakowski some added depth.

The cagey mentor is notorious for experimenting with his doubles combinations, but at the moment has Katz and Clem paired along with Sheppard and Goldberg, and Bloom and Johnson.

In the Conference the Redmen will have to watch out for Rhode Island. Last year UMass edged the Rams by the smallest of margins in copping the crown. URI lost only one man from that team, and has a pair of good sophs coming up from the frosh. But, Kosakowski says, "We're the champs. Somebody is going to have to beat us."

In dual meets the Redmen meet two very tough independents in MIT and Holy Cross. Last year the Engineers won 7 - 2, and have a good club once again. The Crusaders have a great one-two punch in John Mayotte and John Hughes. Kosakowski pointed out, "If we win these two we know we're a fine team."

Kosakowski had a great deal of praise for his lettermen. "Last year the kids won it when they weren't supposed to," he said, "and the spirit they showed then has carried over to the whole team." He added, "Potentially this team has more balance than last years."

The Redmen also worked out with defending New England champion Amherst late last month. Kosakowski called the practice, "most satisfactory," and pointed out, "this shows us how good we really are."

How good the team is is a question that will be answered starting Saturday on the courts behind Boyden.

Notre Dame Provides Opposition for Crew

By JAN CURLEY
Assistant Managing Editor

Crew season gets underway this afternoon with a scrimmage against Notre Dame. The Fighting Irish are making a swing of the East during their spring vacation. The races will be held at the Sportsman's Marina in Houth Hadley. The junior varsity starts at 4:15 p.m. and the varsity at 4:45.

Notre Dame is rated on a par with the UMass club. Last year the Irish were the third best school in the Midwest. They were hurt by graduation and this year's boat has a young crew. During their Eastern tour, they will be competing against WPI, Amherst College tomorrow and then move on to New York.

Varsity Coach Mike Fahertyhas announced the boatings for tomorrow's race, subject to change. For the varsity, Chris Jedrey (5'8", 126) will be the coxswain; rowing in number witht, Phil Dwyer (6' 2", 187), seven-Rich Merullo (6' 1, 188), six-Glen Chapie (6'3, 202), five-Ron Stoltz (6'4, 197), four-Bob Kiley (6'2, 190), three-Tom Mone (6', 190), two-Captain Doug MacLean (6'2, 193) and bow-Charles Leonard (6', 183).

The varsity boat is potentially the fastest boat UMass has ever had. Faherty has altered the rowing style this season and has decided to row the body lower. The club will be using new oars with shovel blades.

The varisty and junior varsity boats each have logged 280 miles rowing and are practicing for 10 miles a day now. Each rower is also running on his own.

There could be some problems with the junior varsity boat at the beginning of the season since none of them have had any previous racing experience. But, Faherty says they have "good potential" and he expects the team to improve as they gain the racing experience.

The junior varsity boating tomorrow will be Jerry Ahern, coxswain (5'5, 115), stroke - Bob Natusch (5'11, 173), seven-Dave Richard (6', 183); six John Peterson (6'2, 184); five-Bob Spousta (6', 205); four-Dave Sola (6', 174); three-Bob Depan (6', 195); two-Steve Malone (6', 170) and bow-Wendell Frost (6', 168). Bill Bedard (6'3, 188) is the spare.

There will be a meeting of all spring soccer candidates Thursday April 10 at 7 p.m. in room 250 Boyden.

Bruins Ready

BOSTON (AP) - The Boston Bruins held a light workout at the Garden yesterday as a preliminary tune-up for their opener at Montral Thursday of the National Hockey League's Stanley Cup semi-finals.

"We have plenty to motivate us," said Boston Coach Harry Sinden. "Don't think the guys forget about the way we were embarrassed last year when the Canadiens took us out in four straight."

The second game of the best-of-seven series is scheduled for Sunday afternoon at Montreal. The teams will return to Boston for games April 17 and April 20.

Red Sox Edge Birds, 5-4 in 12 Innings; Comebacking Tony C Belts 2 Run Blast

BALTIMORE (AP) - Pinch hitter Dalton Jones slammed a sacrifice fly in the twelfth inning, sending the Boston Red Sox to a 5-4 victory over the Baltimore Orioles in the opener for both clubs yesterday.

The Red Sox loaded the bases on a walk to Tony Conigliaro, a single by George Scott and another walk to Rico Petrocelli.

It was the first homer for Conigliaro, who missed the entire 1968 season, since Aug. 8, 1967 - just 10 days before he was beaned by a pitch that threatened to end his career.

After catcher Russ Gibson flied out, Jones batted for pitcher Bill Landis and cracked a deep drive to left field with Conigliaro scoring the winning run.

The Orioles earlier tied the score 2 - 2 in the eighth after Mark Belanger, who homered earlier, singled for his third hit - the entire Baltimore output to that point.

Frank Robinson had pulled the Orioles into a 4-4 tie with two out in the bottom of the 10th when he hit a two-run homer that offset one by Conigliaro in the top of the inning.

Belanger moved to third on a pinch single by Ellie Hendricks and scored on a shallow sacrifice fly by Don Buford.

The Red Sox chased Baltimore starter Dave McNally in the third inning when they took a 2-0 lead.

Carl Yastrzemski, the league batting champ the past two seasons, doubled home a run in the opening inning and scored on Harrelson's hit in the third after singling with one out.

Boston starter Jim Lonborg, seeking a comeback after a knee injury hampered his performance last year, retired the first seven batters before Belanger homered in the third.

Lonborg complained of a shoulder pain in the same area which bother ed him in spring training. He was scheduled for an examination by an orthopidic specialist as a precautionary measure.

Pats to Move?

BOSTON (AP) - Rumors afoot that the Boston Patriots of the American Football League were about to move to Seattle have been denied in both cities.

A story in yesterday's Boston Herald Traveler said word of the shift was expected "within...a few days."

"It's all news to me," responded Patriots General Manager William H. Sullivan yesterday. Lafa Lane Jr., the Seattle man who tried to purchase the Patriots last December, also denied the report.

Redmen hopes were bouyed somewhat with the announcement that Joe DiSarcina may be able to return to action. (MDC photo by Mike Alpert).

Administration Institutes Deposit System for Fall Room Choosing

By NEAL NOVACK

A Room Security Deposit System, instituted by the Student Affairs Office in conjunction with the Housing Office in Whitmore Administration Building, will now require all University students planning to return to residence halls next fall to pay a $50 deposit by May 31, 1969 to secure a room assignment and to insure enrollment for the '69-'70 academic year.

The Housing Office wishes to stress the modification of the University off-campus policy, which is designed to insure full occupancy for both the fall and spring semesters, thus eliminating some 1,200 vacancies at present.

Any student who will be twenty-one and/or a senior during the academic year (Sept. - June) will be eligible to live off campus in September provided he has notified the Housing Office of his intent prior to May 31. It is important to note that if a student lives within the residence hall system during the fall semester he will be unable to move off campus for the second semester without forfeiting his Room Security Deposit.

The $50 deposit will be kept in escrow to assure fulfillment of room reservation commitments. The full amount will be refunded to the student, however, when he gives advance notice of intent to terminate residence hall occupancy, when eligible, or when he leaves the University. Students who hesitate to reply to the Housing Office of their intentions to live within the residence hall system after the May 31 deadline, but on or before the July 1 deadline, forfeit their right to room preference.

Those students presently living in residence halls will receive in the mail within a few days a Room Security Deposit Bill along with a letter from the Office of Student Affairs introducing the student to the new system. Students presently living off campus and who wish to move into a residence hall next fall are requested to pick up a Room Security Deposit Bill at the Cashier's Office, Whitmore Administration Building.

An "Off Campus Residence Plan" form must be obtained at the Housing Office or any Area Coordinator's Office by all students presently living on campus, but who plan to move off campus, and by all students planning not to return to the University next fall. The "Off Campus Residence Plan form will be mailed only to students who are presently living off campus and to those students presently residing in a fraternity and/or sorority. This form must be returned before May 31 to an Area Coordinator or to the Housing Office.

Three computer card forms will also be available to students for the following reasons: 1) Housing Regulation Exemption, granting otherwise ineligible students permission to live off campus; 2) Temporary Room Security Deposit Waiver, allowing students to defer payment of their room deposit for reasons to be approved by the Board of Appeals, and 3) Boarding Regulation Exemption, allowing otherwise ineligible students permission to dine off campus. The first two forms may be obtained from the Housing Office, the latter from the Whitmore Dining Commons Food Service Office.

The formal Residence Hall Room Security Deposit Regulations are as follows: 1) A $50 Room Security Deposit must be paid by May 31, 1969 or a student's room assignment will be cancelled. 2) A student who is required to live on campus and has not paid his Room Security Deposit and has not made a room reservation by July 1, will be notified that his enrollment for the fall will be cancelled. A student must be twenty-one or a senior during the academic year to be

KENNETH P. O'DONNELL

Distinguished Visitors Program To Present Kenneth P. O'Donnell

Kenneth P. O'Donnell, special assistant to the late President John F. Kennedy and announced candidate for Governor of Massachusetts in 1970, will speak in Thompson 104 at 8:15 Monday. He is being sponsored by the Distinguished Visitors Program.

Of O'Donnell Sen. Robert F. Kennedy said in 1966 "I can say quite honestly and openly there wasn't a major decision that was made by President Kennedy during the period of 1961 to November 22, 1963, that Ken O'Donnell did not share in . . . on any matter that needed counsel or advice from someone with determination, courage and good sense, Ken was turned to."

O'Donnell left private industry in 1951 to assist John F. Kennedy in his campaign for the Senate. He served as assistant to campaign director Robert F. Kennedy and following the election served as the Senator's political representative in the Bay State.

In 1957 O'Donnell was appointed Assistant Counsel to Robert Kennedy on the United States Senate's McClennan Committee on Labor Management affairs.

In 1958 he became assistant to the campaign director, Edward M. Kennedy, in Sen. John Kennedy's re-election campaign. After that campaign, O'Donnell joined the Senator's staff in Washington D.C. to prepare strategy and schedules for the Presidential primaries throughout the nation, and plan for the Los Angeles Democratic National Convention.

After the convention O'Donnell organized and directed the arduous schedule undertaken by the Democratic nominee and accompanied the candidate throughout the campaign as his personal representative. Upon his election, President Kennedy named him Special Assistant and Appointments Secretary.

Following the tragedy in Dallas in November of 1963, President Johnson asked O'Donnell to remain in the White House, in the same capacities, which he agreed to do until the conclusion of the 1964 election campaign.

Upon his resignation Johnson said in a personal letter to O'-Donnell "You have served me faithfully and well and I shall always be grateful for your help during a critical period in my life, and the life of our country. Your advice has always been sound your energy unlimited, your loyalty absolute."

In the spring of 1964 he was appointed Executive Director of the Democratic National Committee to direct President Johnson's campaign schedule.

In 1966 O'Donnell received 46 per cent of the vote in his first bid for office as a candidate for the Democratic nomination for Governor of Massachusetts.

O'Donnell played a key role in the campaign of Sen. Robert F. Kennedy which ended prematurely in the Los Angeles tragedy.

O'Donnell returned to private industry as a management consultant. He resides in Jamaica Plain with his wife and five children.

$20 Board Fee Hike Proposal Brought Before Student Senate

By PAUL ANDERSON
Senate Reporter

The Student Senate, last night in special business, took up a proposal to raise the board fee by $20 per semester. Mr. Stoneham, Director of Food Services, explained that a pay raise of 20% or $20 a week is before the State Legislature.

The increase in board rates must cover an expected rise of $400,000 over present expenses, and the new board rates would cover it. The pay raise is fairly definite because of the threat of a strike by all state employees, and since the Food Services do not receive any state or federal funds, the students must provide the funds.

Stoneham reminded the Senate that the alternatives to a pay raise would mean elimination of the seconds policy with a continuation of the current small portions, a less expensive menu, no intertransferability of meal tickets, shorter hours for the snack bars, and the end of the continental breakfasts.

Senator Staples moved that the Dining Commons be open from 6:45 a.m. to 6:30 p.m. for continuous meal service. Stoneham has said that this plan is under study and would not increase operating costs. The amendment passed.

Former President Silverman moved that all students pay for the Dining Commons buildings, but that the Dining Commons operate on a restaurant basis, with students paying for what they eat and no freeloading. The entire proposal was then committed for two weeks to the Services Committee.

In other business, the Senate defeated a bill to allow the final class elections to be held in dorms. Discussion centered on the fact that the primaries were not included, which was unfair. Chairman Woods of the Student Government Affairs Committee stated that time and personnel would be a problem, since the primaries are next week. Vice-President Olken argued that the personal contact in front of the Student Union was vital, and dorm elections would remove it.

The question period handled such information as the sharing of room phone costs, regarded as feasible, which would make single room phones the most expensive. On the transferability of meal tickets, Mr. Stoneham said that board rates were based on expected absenteeism and could not allow transferability. In regard to Vice-president Humphrey's private lecture on the 18th, it was stated that it was his own request, but he will still give a public talk, paid for by student funds.

Three new chairmen were appointed to Budgets, Services, and Public Relations; they are James Albert, Mark Brenner, and Scott Thompson, respectively.

In late action, the Senate took up the Academic Affairs report. An amendment was made to strike

300 Harvard Students Sieze Admin. Building

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) - About 300 chanting young people chained themselves inside Harvard University's main administration building Wednesday to underscore their demand for an end to the 333-year-old Ivy League school's Reserve Officer Training Corps ROTC program.

The students - sometimes somber and sometimes raucous - ejected a number of administration personnel, including two deans, and several newsmen before barricading the building's main doors.

Meanwhile, in ones and twos, other students drifted in and out of the building through unlocked side doors, some to join the demonstration, others to leave it, and still others to ask that it be ended.

Thos e inside unfurled the flag of the Students for a Democratic Society, SDS, from an upstairs window, and called through bullhorns and a hastily installed public address system for support from those outside.

Below in historic Harvard Yard, an estimated 1,000 persons milled about, and some hurled catcalls at those inside. Others paraded back and forth with signs supporting the seizure. Many more stood quietly and watched.

Harvard refrained from making any immediate comment on the seizure. It could not be determined immediately what action, if any, the university would take in regard to the takeover.

The seizure followed by a few hours a predawn march by about 500 students on the home of Harvard President Nathan M. Pusey.

Chanting "Smash ROTC," and "ROTC must go," the students swept past campus police and surged through the gates in front of Dr. Pusey's home. They disbanded a short time later, but then regrouped and marched on the administration building, University Hall.

Collegian Open House

The DAILY COLLEGIAN will hold an open house in the paper's Student Union office tonight, at 9:00 p.m. All student s are welcome to come and discuss any phase of the paper's operation, ranging from editorial policy to production, with the editors. Any students wishing to join the staff of New England's largest College Daily are also encouraged to attend the open house.

THE NEWS IN BRIEF

BOSTON (AP) - An estimated 100 students, faced with immediate arrest for trespassing Wednesday, abandoned Boston University's Financial Aid Building, which they forced their way into three hours earlier.

The students, led by Students for a Democratic Society, left as approximately 100 Boston policemen, most of them helmeted, prepared to enter the building and make arrests.

The demonstration was aimed at pointing up a demand that the Reserve Officers Training Corps ROTC program be abolished at BU, and to protest military recruitment on campus and the university's overseas program under which professors teach in Europe.

CHARLESTON, S.C. (AP) - The head of a predominantly Negro union striking two hospitals said Wednesday strikers will resort to "demonstrations, confrontations and more activity on the picket lines" in their quest for higher pay and union recognition.

Mary Moultrie, a large, articulate woman in her mid-30's, said a meeting in Columbia Tuesday between a delegation representing the 380 strikers and Gov. Robert E. McNair was a waste of time.

She said McNair leads an "alliance to preserve poverty and to deny the poor people in this state every right to respect and human dignity."

Mrs. Moultrie, a nurse's aide who wears her hair Afro-styled, said the Rev. Ralph David Abernathy will be urged to return to Charleston to lead the strikers' campaign "for as long as it takes." Abernathy is president of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference.

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Nixon announced Wednesday the popular Head Start summer preschool program is being cut back a bit in order to finance year-long experimental efforts to broaden the educational horizons of the very young.

Nixon gave no indication of the extent of the reduction and Secretary of Welfare Robert H. Finch told newsmen it was too soon to come up with such figures.

Finch did say, however, that in some cases, funds are wasted because of the rather brief summertime duration of Head Start programs, suggesting that it might be more practical to operate on a year-around basis.

Nixon restated a previous commitment to give all American youngsters "an opportunity for healthful and stimulating development during the first five years of life."

He said preliminary studies indicate "Head Start must begin earlier in life, and last longer, to achieve lasting benefits."

In a move toward this, he said, the Department of Health, Education and Welfare will expand some of the longer-range aspects of Head Start, including follow-through programs.

WASHINGTON (AP) - Senate Majority Leader Mike Mansfield, although professing he has no inside information, says he sees signs an informal ceasefire may be possible soon in Vietnam.

The Montana Democrat said in an interview he sees progress toward peace on the battlefield and at the negotiating table - presumably at secret talks.

Some U.S. military analysts believe the Communists have ended their offensive in Vietnam and are pulling force s back into Cambodia and Laos.

He suggested that if the Communists are now withdrawing some troops, U.S. force s could ease battlefield pressure and avoid engagement. Even without a formal agreement, he said, this could produce what would amount to "a ceasefire and stand fast."

And that, in turn, would enhance prospects for a negotiated settlement, Mansfield said.

BC Pill Users Risk Body Disorders Says Planned Parenthood Assoc.

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) - Some of the eight million American women who now take "the pill" run the risk of certain ailments, most of them minor but some serious, the American Association of Planned Parenthood annual meeting was told Wednesday.

Among the possible effects of taking oral contraceptives they listed high blood pressure, metabolic alterations, neurological complications and abnormal blood clotting or thromboembolisms.

Dr. John Laragh, Columbia University professor of clinical medicine, told of a "possible cause and effect relationship" between hypertension and the pill, although the large majority who take it are not in the least affected. He said certain users are susceptible to high blood pressure.

Dr. William N. Spellacy, University of Miami professor of obstetrics and gynecology, urged continued research to explain why some pill users undergo metabolic changes resulting in diabetes.

It is not known, he said, whether these alterations are reversible.

Dr. Philip Sartwell, Johns Hopkins University professor of epidemiology, reviewed scientific papers on blood clotting and reported evidence "highly conflicting and controversial."

Dr. Clark said in the seven years American women have been taking the pill, 62 suffered strokes, but he did not say the pill was responsible.

graduates from the University. b) To a student who withdraws from school during a given semester. c) To a student who withdraws from the University after the completion of one semester but before the beginning of the next semester and who notifies the Registrar's Office prior to May 31 for the fall semester and December 1 for the spring semester. d) To a student who moves off campus and notifies the Housing Office prior to May 31 of his intention to do so. 7) A Board of Appeals has been established to review cases of a special nature.

Citing some student advantages of the Security Deposit System, Mr. John C. Welles, Director of Housing said that, "This virtually eliminates triples for those students who are presently living in a residence hall system who follow the normal room choosing procedures and Room Security Deposit payment system." Mr. Welles also went on to explain that, "This system would allow for more precise academic scheduling of classes by proximity in Residential College Areas." By knowing what students are actually living on campus prior to course registration in the fall, the Scheduling Office will know exactly what students will be enrolled in a specific course, and thus make course selection more equitable for students desiring to take a course, but unable to because of seats supposedly occupied by students who are actually no longer at the University. This situation applies for all course enrollment, not just Residential College Areas.

The new Room Security Deposit System is part of the over-all program of the Housing Office to turn its records and reports system into a data processed system, although the actual room assignment procedure will still be kept manual.

This manual and annual procedure of room choosing, in which students are responsible for securing a room within the residence halls, will run from April 27 through May 6. The procedure for room choosing is as follows: Sunday, April 27: 7:00-11:00 p.m.- students who wish to reserve their present room should sign up with their Head of Residence; Monday, April 28: 7:00-9:00 p.m. - a) students of the class of '70 who wish to change rooms within their present residence halls should sign up with their Head of Residence, b) 9:00-11:00 p.m. - students of the class of '71 same as class of '70; Tuesday, April 29: 7:00-11:00 p.m. - students of the class of '72 same as April 28; Thursday, May 1: 7:00-9:00 p.m. - a) students of the class of '70 who wish to change to another residence hall should see the Head of Residence in the residence hall into which they wish to move. This includes students who are presently off campus, b) 9:00-11:00 - students of the class of '71 same as class of '70; Friday, May 2: 7:00 - 11:00 p.m. - students of the class of '72 same as May 1; Tuesday, May 6: 10:00 a.m.-4:00 p.m. -

Biafra Nears End of Road

UZUAKOLI, Nigeria (AP) - Nigerian federal troops thrust to within artillery range of Biafra's last major town and paused Wednesday awaiting orders for what could be a final drive against the secessionist headquarters.

Maj. Meamam Vatsas, commander of the Nigerial 44th Brigade, brought his men over the weekend to less than eight miles of the brewery town of Umuahia where the secessionists have holed up for six months.

Vatsas said he figured his men could drive to Umuahia in five or six days. But so far he has received no such orders.

Student Vote Elects Professor To Mayoral Post in Ann Arbor

ANN ARBOR, MICH. (CPS) - Between 2,000 and 4,000 student votes provided the margin necessary Monday to sweep into office Ann Arbor's first Democratic mayor in a decade.

"The democrats won because of the students," Republican party county chairman told a sullen gathering of Republican workers Monday night.

Richard J. Harris, a law professor at the university, as mayor will head an 8-3 Democratic majority in city council - the first Democratic council in 36 years - unseating the 7-4 majority held by the Republicans for the past year.

The student voter drive culminated more than a year of activity by students, which included filing a criminal suit against the city clerk, challenging the city's strict interpretation of the state constitution used to deny many students the right to register to vote.

A newly elected Democratic councilman, University math Professor Nicholas Kazarinoff - who had repeatedly called for the resignation of the city clerk - walked through city hall Tuesday carrying a new broom.

Boston Philharmonia Orchester to Present Premiere Tour Concert at UMass April 15

The Boston Philharmonia Orchestra will perform its first tour concert in its two year history on the campus of the University of Massachusetts at Amherst on Tuesday evening, April 15. The event will be sponsored by the Concert Association and will represent the concert of March 20 which was cancelled.

The Boston Philharmonia was founded last season as the first co-operative orchestra in the United States. The term co-operative is well known in Europe since many leading symphonic ensembles are actually governed by their members, but the Philharmonia's attempt has been closely watched in this country to determine whether such a scheme is workable in this country.

To date, it looks as though the idea is meeting with some success and much of this is attributed to the high level of performances produced by this organization since its founding in 1967. The orchestra committee is responsible for selecting personnel as well as guest conductors and the list of participants has been impressive.

For their concert in Bowker Auditorium on Tuesday, April 15 at 8:00 p.m. the Philharmonia will be under the direction of the gifted young American conductor, Michael Tilson Thomas. Mr. Thomas, a protege of the distinguished Pierre Boulez will offer a program including Bach's Suite No. 4 in D; Seeger's Adagio for String Orchestra; Carl Ruggles' "Men and Mountains"; Anton Webern's Symphony Opus 2 and Haydn's Symphony No. 60 in C "Il Distratto".

Tickets for the Boston Philharmonia's UMass concert are open to UMass undergraduates without charge by producing their ID at the Student Union ticket office and reserved seats for the general public will be available at $2.50 and may also be obtained at the Student Union Box Office.

The Concert Association is sponsoring a tour concert by the Boston Philharmonia Orchestra Tuesday, April 15, in Bowker Auditorium.

Professor Arnold J. Toynbee Says American Expectations Disappointed

The United States has profoundly changed because of the disappointment of American expectations. So says Arnold J. Toynbee, British historial and philosopher of international renown, who celebrates his 80th birthday this week.

In a recent interview in his London apartment where he is convalescing from a recent slight heart attack, Toynbee stated that, "The expectations were that America could create an earthly paradise - yes, an earthly paradise - in the New World."

Toynbee is the white-haired Oxford-trained scholar who has authored a 12 volume study of world history and a best-selling abridged version of the same.

According to the British scholar the deaths of President John F. Kennedy and his brother Robert - whose family's history was "the American dream" - were an example of the disappointment of American expectations.

"I think it's brought out the irony of life and the tragic nature of life," Professor Toynbee said. "America is very unwilling to admit that the earthly paradise has no tragedy, she can't be the earthly paradise - she has got to uproot her original dream of being the earthly paradise."

Toynbee said that he compares the present United States civilazation with the "last days of the Roman republic, Cicero's time."

Toynbee's reason was the America today has "tremendous power in the world, used in a rather fearful way to the great distress and suffering of the people. . .and tremendous disorder at home, and above all, violence."

And it is violence, not limited to the United States, that Professor Toynbee regards as one of the "most serious evils" in our world today.

"Write For Peace" Committee Formed

Students have formed a new committee to stimulate the legitimate use of dissent as a means of renewing protest over the Vietnam War.

The group, known as the "Write for Peace" committee, was formed this week at a meeting (on Fearing St.) in Amherst.

About 12-students at the initial meeting agreed that legitimate political channels now available to express opposition to the war should be utilized.

The group's specific goal is to encourage anyone so disposed to write to the Congressional delegation with strongly worded letters of protest.

No chairman for the effort was chosen. The students felt the group should be a means to an end, rather than an end in itself.

Included in the initial meeting were: Nick Akerman, George Child, Eileen Goldstein, Mary Goulbisky, Gary Greenberg, Linda Harris, Steve Kramer, Ken Mosakowski, Al Peaks, Arnie Wallenstein, and Howard Young.

The next meeting of the "Write for Peace" committee is to be held Tuesday, April 15, in the Plymouth Room at the UMass Student Union.

Campus Comment

The Infirmary

(Editor's note: The following is the first in a series of articles which will appear under the heading of "Super Laugh." The purpose of the articles is to effect comic diversion and to bring to light some of the problems that exist on this campus and in the world. The situations presented in the articles are exaggerated to some degree and therefore should be taken in a purely fictional sense.)

You are sick. You feel nauseous. Your head throbs. You're generally up tight. You think you may be coming down with polio.

You take your temperature. It reads 104. You think a trip to the Infirmary may be in order.

If you live on the Hill, you don your hip-high boots, leather raincoat, eye goggles, and antenna and make other necessary preparations for the long mud slide to the Infirmary. If you live in Southwest you begin making plane reservations.

Since you start out early Tuesday morning, you arrive at your destination by 7 p.m. Wednesday night. After making the last few yards on your hands and knees, you struggle to open the door but find that it, along with the others, is locked.

So you ring the bell. No one comes. You ring again. Still no one. Seventeen rings later, a nurse walks by inside, looks at you while you make violent gesticulations, and continues on her way.

Three hours later, a student in the building sees you and lets you in. You graciously thank him and drag yourself to a chair. You then courteously ask him where the doctors are, and he then courteously tells you that he's been there for two weeks and hasn't seen one yet.

The student finally excuses himself, saying that he must go back to the men's room, where he has resided since his entry because of a lack of beds.

A frowning nurse soon trots by and demands to know what you think you're doing there. You patiently reply that you're sick and think you're getting progressively sicker and that you may . . .

You stop abruptly, for the nurse has just shoved an extra-long thermometer into your throat and down through your larynx, causing your Adam's apple to bulge out.

After ascertaining that you have a high fever, the nurse drags you into a dark room where you are kept until a sufficient number of cobwebs has formed around you. At that time, a doctor comes to see you, prescribes some medication for you, and transfers you to the broom closet until your recovery is complete.

WHYN Disapproves

(Note: The following is a WHYN Editorial of March 20 and 21, 1969)

WHYN Radio and TV go on record as disapproving actions of a few students during Senator Strom Thurmond's appearance Wednesday night at the University of Massachusetts.

We're not particularly enthusiastic about Senator Thurmond's politics ourselves. But he is a United States Senator chosen by the people of South Carolina as their representative. And he was an invited guest to the UMass campus. If one of our senators, Kennedy or Brooke, had been treated in South Carolina the way Thurmond was at Amherst, the people of Massachusetts would be rightfully indignant. We feel they should be just as indignant over Wednesday night's treatment of Senator Thurmond.

There are a number of legitimate ways to show disagreement with a speaker without resorting to climbing on stage and disrupting his remarks, or pounding on his automobile. These include picketing . . . listening to a speaker in stony silence with no applause . . . and sharp debate during question periods. Or perhaps the most chilling rebuke of all is greeting a speaker with an empty meeting hall . . . just not turning up to hear him . . . ignoring him completely.

One thing is plain. The cause of free speech for all of us is not served by attempting to deny it to Senator Thurmond.

Sad Attempt Windshield

To the editor:

I am writing in reply to the April 4 MDC article "Undergraduate Teaching Versus Graduate Research" by Robert Hinckley, Assistant Professor of Economics. My first response is that Professor Hinckley made a very sad attempt to define the real problem that exists when one entertains the notion of undergraduate teaching and graduate research. The problem is simply the unwillingness of faculty and power structure (your words) people to transfer power to the graduate and undergraduate students so that they can make materials relevant. The Professor Mr. Hinckley misread one of the central themes of the Berkeley insurrections which stated that students wanted power to determine and define their educational experiences and not be puppetized by the University into thinking that any faculty members were to be considered as having all of the knowledge. The section of Professor Hinckley's article I am most resentful of is his view as to "the relation between graduate-research and the undergraduate teaching programs using graduate students as teachers of undergraduates." I hope that Professor Hinckley's graduate assistants read the article to see what he thinks of them. They are "inexperienced" and of "very low quality as teachers." In my department, and I'm sure in many others, one need only talk to undergraduates to find out the fine performances being demonstrated in class by graduate students as opposed to the regular professors. And in most instances, the graduates are able to relate better on all levels to the undergraduates than the professors.

Student s are tired of the old bullshit material that has been gathering cobwebs in the minds of professors who see themselves as the brain trust. At this point, I would like to express my concern over the article which Professor Hinckley wrote by first either challenging him t o an open debate so that he may defend his most unfortunate and confused position on undergraduate teaching versus graduate research or have a committee set up to monitor one of his classes and one being taught by a graduate assistant in his department and see who prevails.

Bounce

To the editor:

On behalf of the brotherhood of Sigma Alpha Mu and the Western Massachusetts Heart Association, I would like to thank all those who contributed to "Bounce for Beats" on Friday, April 4 in front of the Student Union. Special thanks also should go to WMUA whose gracious cooperation in publicizing the event helped to make the drive a success.

As in past years, SAM will be at Springfield on April 26 and 27 to carry on a twenty-four hour "Bounce for Beats" Drive. The University Community is again invited to lend their support to what we feel is a worthwhile cause.

Thank you again.

Guyotte

To the editor:

The reprehensible tradition of making untrue and unsubstantiated charges through the use of "Letters to the Editor" has been propagated by Senator Guyotte in his letter of April 7, concerning the motion co-sponsored by Bob Nims and myself to apologize to Senator Thurmond for the actions of a few individuals who rocked his car and threatened him with bodily harm. Mr. Guyotte's actions are inexcusable when one considers he can talk to me at any Senate meeting, and that my dorm address and telephone number are readily available in the Campus Directory or from Student Information. Thus, I am placed in the unnecessary position of having to make a public rebuttal, because Mr. Guyotte did not have the common courtesy to verify his "facts" before publishing his assertions.

Mr. Guyotte contends that Senator Nims and I did not attempt t o have the motion introduced under Special Business at the Student Senate meeting of March 20. This contention is blatantly false. Copies of the motion were placed in all Senate mailboxes prior to the meeting, and if it were not common knowledge in the Senate that we would try to introduce the bill, it should have been expected, especially since the Thurmond incident was the previous day. The reason the motion was never introduced as special business was Vice President Hartwell's deliberate refusal to recognize either Senator Nims or myself. I had to leave the meeting at 9:30 for an appointment, and because it was clear that Hartwell was intent on stifling the motion and railroading the meeting, we abandoned our attempt to be recognized.

What is particularly amazing is Mr. Guyotte's opinion, which he masquerades as "facts omitted" (from the COLLEGIAN article of March 21) that, "it is extremely problematic that they would have succeeded in getting a favorable vote from the Senate even to CONSIDER their motion . . ." Is Mr. Guyotte inferring that the Senate is afraid or unwilling to debate the issue? While it is no secret that I am neither revered nor esteemed, much less even respected in the Senate, I cannot believe that the Senate would be so petty, or some of its members take their role as quasi-politicians so seriously that they would refuse to debate the motion because of personal animosities. And that the motion concerned a pertinent topic of intense campus interest is undeniable. So why, Mr. Guyotte, do you say the Senate would have refused to accept the motion as Special Business?

If people writing letters to newspapers would act more responsibly and verify their information (it is interesting to note that the writer of the letter I was forced to correct accuses the COLLEGIAN of violations of fact!) the letters section of newspapers would not have to become a forum for totally unnecessary debate. On a personal level, I shun publicity, and implore everyone to please talk to me before making public accusations.

Dennis Klayton

Retraction

To the editor:

On March 12 in a letter to the Collegian I expressed my belief that Mr. Potash of the History Department had fired a number of men of the History Faculty for their attempt to reform the departmental decision-making process. It has been pointed out to me that Mr. Potash was not the head of the department at the time of contract non-renewal, thereafter, I retract that portion of my March 12 letter.

Frat Men

To the editor:

Open your eyes, complaining fraternity men. The characters in the Collegian cartoons of April second and third had on T-shirt s with the Greek letters SDS. Have you forgotten your Greek or have you never known it?

Leslie A. Dierauf

Familiar?

To the editor:

It is bewildering that the Daily Collegian would have even considered having such a philosophy as Keith M. Bromery's displayed in its pages . . . It is obvious he offers nothing that anyone would be interested in considering. His philosophy is so alien that it is not worth listening to. After all, this is an intelligent society - supposedly. Free speech is hardly at issue in this instance. It is a question of justification.

Does this sound familiar, Mr. Bromery?

Curriculum Change Seen as Not Really Innovative

(ACP) - While more and more campuses experiment with new curricular structures and other changes designed to individualize the learning process, a new study says much of what is called innovation is really "renovation and tinkering."

In many cases, as Michigan State University researchers have pointed out in a new study of undergraduate curriculum trends, the changes were not original concepts. What was innovative in one institution may already have become "established" in others.

Samuel Baskin, president of the Union for Research and Experimentation in Higher Education, noted that much of what passes for innovation may not be innovative.

"There are a lot of seemingly innovative steps that may not mean anything," he said. In independent study, for instance, "If the faculty member's basic attitude toward the student hasn't changed, and if he is still directing the student in one way or another, then independence in learning isn't being developed."

Baskin listed six major types of innovation:

* Breaking large schools into smaller ones, such as the Michigan State plan.
* Increasing use of seminars, tutorials, and independent study.
* Abandoning single-disciplined courses in favor of interdisciplinary ones.
* Making off-campus field work a regular part of the curriculum; using videotapes, computers and other technological developments.
* Expanding the role of research and experimentation in the regular college operation.

Amid all the so-called new developments, Baskin believes two may represent "new models for teaching and learning." One is the "college of dispersion" in which students study and work in a cross - cultural environment. "Beach-head colleges" such as those operated by the union in Appalachia and Hawaii, and storefront colleges, "if taken to their fullest realization, become colleges without walls," Baskin said.

In such environments, students and faculty work together in the field on a "problem-centered curriculum" with on-going seminars. The life of action and the life of reflection are combined, it is hoped, into a single experience.

The second innovation, according to Baskin, is the experimental college run jointly by students and faculty. "When students and faculty plan the curriculum together, you're getting into some pretty basic redevelopments," Baskin said.

Curriculum researchers feel sound innovation - which comes about when ideas and practices are organized in new and creative ways into a coherent whole to promote student learning - is rare.

The forces creating change over the past 10 years are essentially no different from those bringing about earlier changes, the report said. "Only the more compelling contemporary tempo has altered significantly."

Today's Radicals . . . . Tomorrow's Conservatives

"There Have Always been Radical Groups

By BOB GANLEY
Staff Correspondent

Today's "young radicals" may be considered "conservative" by their own children. It's all part of the growth of protest movements in the last decade, and rebellion against the "establishment" by college students.

This prediction into the next generation was made by Dean of Students William F. Field, Sociology Professor Robert Stanfield and Senate President Bruce Balboni.

On the history of campus protestors, Stanfield had these opinions: "There have always been radical groups but they are more visible now than a decade ago. Students have always been critical of society, but now they are more open. Confrontation is used more than before." Dean Field agreed with Prof. Stanfield, "There have always been people with radical views on the right and left. We've had them as long as I've been here. Acceptance and support of their views haven't existed until recently. This has only developed in the last 10 years."

Balboni, a junior from Arlington, declined to comment on this question because he did not feel qualified to discuss the rise of protest.

Each was asked to give his opinion concerning the seriousness and the values of these protest groups. Field felt that "any student who holds basic beliefs in society must be taken seriously. That's different than agreeing with their views. When any form of ideas become destructive to others, you hit upon the right to dissent. How far to go is the question and the line must be drawn. I don't like to group students because you can't put fraternities, SDS and KKK into one lump group."

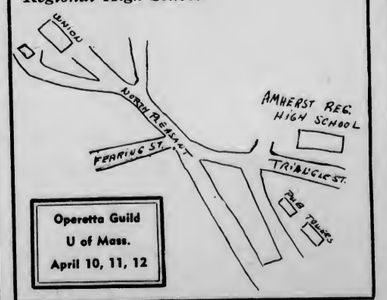
Stanfield commented: "In terms of the truth value of their analysis, they're wrong. Their conclusions are wrong and there are some flaws in their logic. They are worth listening to for the premises which are right and I agree with some of their arguments, but overall I disagree with their opinions because of their premises, which are wrong. They have a right to express their views but they don't have the right to interfere with the views of others."

Balboni had a harsher opinion: "I think a lot of their goals are good, but I find that their tactics can't be taken seriously. I think of SDS as one of these groups and I think their actions concerning the Bridal Fair and the dog (which the SDS threatened to burn) were foolish. The leadership is intelligent, but most of the people are blind followers. They find conformity in their nonconformity. Those demonstrators who are concerned with change are enviable, but the others are discreditable to the organization and hurt their good goals."

What about the future of this current generation of protestors? Will these young people be as liberal in 20 years as they are now and will they find that their children will be rebellious to their views?

Field said: "It's difficult to answer a question like this. You can't predict in which direction a person will go. These people will remain involved, but maybe in different ways. A person like this will exercise his talents in a special area rather than a general area." As far as these people facing rebellious children, he said: "I suspect that's true. Unless you question past generations, the society won't move forward. You can't question values unless you debate with the olders of the values and these are the parents."

Balboni held a different view. "I think a lot of students involved in demonstration now will change due to the economic realities of life. More and more young adults will be more liberal. I also think the students of today will be more sympathetic with their children, having gone through college under a great deal of student rebellion.



The basketball "Bounce for Beats" marathon will take place on the parking lot of Springfield Shopping Plaza, April 18 and 19. Squads from the UMass Beta Epsilon Chapter of Sigma Alpha Mu will keep the ball continuously bouncing while fraternity brothers collect contributions from the spectators for the benefit of the Heart Association. Columbia Students Vote for Senate

Prof. Michael I. Sovern of Columbia yesterday after noon announced that student and faculty members at Columbia University have voted to establish a senate to represent them as a major policy-making body in university administration. The decision was voted in a campus wide referendum.

The senate was proposed by the executive committee as an answer to demands by students and faculty members for a voice in the administration of th e university and would have 100 elected members.

Next step in establishing the senate is to obtain approval of the Columbia Board of Trustees. Prof. Sovern said that he hoped for "swift approval" and hoped that the first senate could be elected before this semester ended. Sovern is chairman of an executive committee elected last spring.

Ted Van Dyk, spokesman for the university administration said that "I cannot predict the detailed reaction of the trustees. I believe the existence of such a senate will in future assure a full expression of all campus viewpoints and formulation of representative policies - all through the democratic process."

Professor Sovern called the vote for a senate "a cause for celebration and a good omen." The students demonstrated, he said, "their willingness to assume the burdens of citizenship when they perceive that they will be treated as full citizens - adults."

A senate would have the power to make decisions about military training programs and affiliations with outside government, industrial and scientific programs.

Precisionettes Announce Tryouts

The Precisionettes women's drill team announces tryouts for the 1969-70 team. Coffee hours will be held on Monday, April 14, in the Colonial Lounge, Student Union, and on Wednesday, April 16, in the Main Lounge of Memorial Hall from 7 to 8:30 p.m. for interested girls to meet the members of this year's team. Tryouts will begin on Thursday, April 17. It is not necessary to attend either coffee hour in order to attend tryouts.

The purpose of these tryouts is to teach the prospective team members the basic facing and marching movements. After the practices are completed, there will be a night or two of final rating during which the members of next year's team will be selected.

Tryouts are run by next year's officers. Suzan Bradford, Commanding Officer, is a Fashion Merchandising major, class of 1970 from Brooks House. Her assistant, the Executive Officer, is Beverly Wood, a Fashion Merchandising major, class of 1971, from Emerson House. Gregory Terrio is drillmaster. Greg, a member of the class of 1970 from Cance House, is a Wildlife major. The military advisor to the Precisionettes is Captain Kleb.

Students Design Local Community

The problem: design a community center for a community that has been just about cut in two.

This was the task for students in this year's exchange problem by the department of landscape architecture at the University of Massachusett s and the department of architecture at Hampton Institute in Virginia.

The problem area was Brightwood, an older community in north Springfield split by two major transportation facilities: the Boston and Maine yards and Interstate Route 91.

The 20 students split up into five teams, two architecture and two landscape architecture students to each team. The exchange problem is an annual cooperative project between UMass and Hampton, held in the Amherst area one year and in the Hampton area the next.

"The object of the problem was to produce a preliminary physical layout for a Brightwood community center," explained Dr. John H. Martin of UMass, chairman of the project.

The students used real data on the history, economics and people of the area, furnished through the cooperation of the Springfield Redevelopment Authority, city planning office, Joint Civic Agencies and other groups.

At the core of the problem was the design and location of an elementary school which was to serve as the nucleus of the community center. Othe r facilities included parks, recreation areas, a job training center, a nursery school, a medical center and facilities for the elderly.

University of Massachusetts landscape architecture professor John H. Martin with student designs for a Brightwood community center.

The Springfield School Department is planning to build a community school for 2000 pupils in Brightwood, replacing the old Brightwood School and incorporating the populations of four nearby school districts. The student designs are strictly an academic exercise and will have no direct bearing on what is actually built in Brightwood.

Students Seek Conservative Change

Massachusetts' 11 state colleges are seeing "the wave of student activism" that has swept campuses across the country reach out to affect some 22,000 students in the state schools.

According to an article written by Nina McCain in the March 9, BOSTON SUNDAY GLOBE, "cracks are beginning to appear in the state colleges tradition of passive student bodies and strong, patriarchal presidents as students start to organize, t o question established practices and to push for a voice in decisions that affect them."

One student was quoted as saying that "There is an entirely different breed of student coming into state colleges now. They're thinking for themselves. They used to be told what to think."

The BOSTON GLOBE article went on to emphasize, however, that this new student activism does not mean "student s are taking over," or that state college activism is close to being that of a Berkeley variety.

What these new student leaders want is "to make the system better, not destroy it." Their goals, "modest by today's standards," are things like more liberal dormitory hours, keeping the library open on Saturdays and more money for state colleges.

And while a few state college presidents are less than delighted with the new student mood, others are in favor of giving students more of a share in decision making.

State college students met in November in Salem to talk about these and other issues. Out of this meeting came the United Student Governments of Mass. State Colleges. Its purpose is to "provide a united student voice on questions that concern them."

Distinguished Senior Nominations Sought

As a highlight of the Student Leader's Night program on Tuesday, April 15 in the Student Union Ballroom, President John W. Ledecle will present the Distinguished Senior Awards to individuals who have been selected for recognition of their continued and distinguished service to the University community.

The appointed selections committee wishes to solicit nominations from the University com - munity in an effort to consider every eligible member of the Class of 1969. The committee has been asked to recommend students on the basis of their accomplishments in the areas of academic achievement, student activities, university committees, athletics and community service projects, but are not necessarily to be limited by these considerations. Written nominations of any individual who appears to have made outstanding contributions in any of these suggested areas, a combination of these areas, or additional significant contributions to the University community, are requested to be submitted in the Student Activities Office in the Student Union by 5:00 p.m. on Friday, April 11.

Med Tech Sorority Holds Initiation

March 31st marked the initiation of 13 new sisters into Alpha Delta Theta, the professional medical technology sorority.

Following the ceremony, Mrs. Mary Jean Proulx, the former Medical Technology Coordinator, was honored with a pin in recognition of the service given by her in her capacity as sorority faculty advisor.

The evening was highlighted by Mary Lou Burke, who spoke to the initiates, on the various doors open to medical technologists. A graduate of Our Lady of the Elms College in Chicopee, Miss Burke is a medical technologist registered with the American Society of Clinical Pathologists. She interned at Mercy Hospital in Springfield, where later, as Head of Hematology, she won a Clay-Adams research grant for her work in "Resistant Cell Hemaglobin".

Lacrosse Team Explodes in 18-4 Romp over Wesleyan

By BOB GANLEY
Staff Reporter

An explosive offense and tight defense were the keys to victory as the UMass lacrosse team completely demolished Wesleyan, 18-4, yesterday afternoon behind Boyden. The game was played on a sunny, but sometimes chilly afternoon.

The Redmen took all the excitement out of the contest by scoring nine goals in the first half, while shutting out the Cardinals. Both the attack and the midfields figured in the scoring, which featured four goals by Carl Shulthesis. His fellow attackmen also did well as Tom Malone scored three and assisted on two others, and Kevin O'Connor had a goal and four assists.

The first midfield of Steve Connolly, Steve Chambers and Gerry Forgit split five goals between themselves to complement the efforts of the attack.

Wesleyan managed to hold the Redmen scoreless for almost seven minutes before Schulthesis scored an unassisted goal to break the ice. He then won the following faceoff, and O'Connor arched a high pass to Chambers, who was waiting in front of the net and made it 2-0.

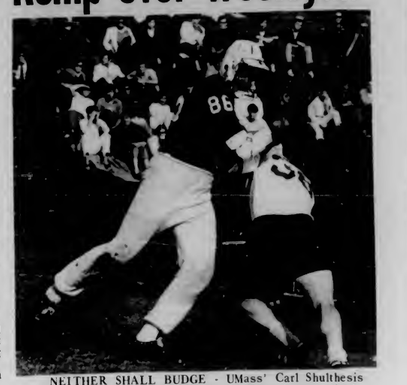
One minute later, Chambers set up Forgit all alone in front and finished off the beautiful play with his first goal of the official season. Co-Captains O'Connor and Connolly got together on the next goal near the end of the quarter, as Connolly scored from close range after getting the pass from O'Connor.

The second period started the same as the first as Wesleyan held early, but once again, Schulthesis got things rolling with an unassisted goal to raise the lead to 5-0. Another five minutes went by as neither team could get off a good shot. During this period, as well as the entire game, the UMass defense proved to be very tough.

Co-Captain Tom Tufts, Hoy Condon and 3,11 Devore and goalie Mark Schlossberg all performed very well. Forgit scored his second goal of the day when he knocked in an O'Connor rebound. Malone then set up C'Connor, on a picture play.

Malone passed from behind the net to O'Connor, who was high in the air, and with one motion, caught the ball and fired it in. Two minutes later, O'Connor returned the favor when he set up Malone in front for an easy goal.

Gary Vassar made it 9-0 at halftime on a pretty play as the Redmen brought the ball all the way down the field with some very accurate passing and Vassar finished it off. It was a play which must have had Coach Garber feeling happy.



The second half opened with Johnny Orr in the net for the Redmen. Malone scored an unassisted goal at the 23-second mark to start things off. Then the second midfield get on the scoreboard as Bob Florin scored on an O'Connor assist.

The group of Steve Anderson, Parker Simonds, Florin and sometimes Schulthesis, who is an excellent face-off man, did a fine job and they were in the game on many of the Redmen goals. Anderson just missed scoring on several occassions and played rugged defense, and Florin, in addition to his goal, saw another of his shots hit the post.

Connolly helped continue the rout as he scored an unassisted goal after sweeping across the field. Following him were three more unassisted scores, two by Schulthesis and one by Malone.

Wesleyan scored once in the third period and three "mes in the fourth, but these goals were matched by the UMass reserves. Steve Hershcopf, Mike Henry and Tom Brennan all scored for the Redmen to make the final, 18-4.

The highlights were many in this seasonal opener, but the most important was the fact that "Garber's Gorillas" will have to have an awful bad day defensively, because they score goals at will, and it will be a major accomplishment for a team to hold them under 10 goals in any game.

WMUA (91.1 FM) will broadcast today's UMass - Connecticut game live from Storrs, Conn., with airtime set for 2:55 p.m. The station elected to broadcast the contest due to the importance it has to the Yankee Conference race.

At the mike will be the dynamic duo of Glenn Briere and Hal Dash.

Baseballers to Take on Toughest Opponent UConn

It's not very often that the biggest opposition on your schedule is the opening game, but such will be the case when the UMass baseball team travels to Storrs, Conn., today to meet UConn. It will be the Redmen's northern opener and also kicks off the Yankee Conference season.

No one could ask for a better pairing. The Huskies are defending champions and were second to Harvard in the NCAA Regional Playoffs last year. UMass meanwhile, was a strong contender to UConn last season before finishing third in the Conference. To add fuel to an already important game, both teams are thought to be the two top contenders for Conference honors this season.

Their present records don't exactly bear that statement out, for both are misleading UMass is 2-5 from their spring trip, a trip that featured lusty hitting by the Redmen, but, unfortunately, even better belting by the opposition.

TONY CHINAPPI
Starting catcher

UConn, meanwhile, went 0-7 down south, but the record is not a true example of the Huskies' strength. They played well on their spring trip, losing three by a one-run margin and got excellent pitching at times. UConn won their first outing up north, a 3-2, 10 inning win over Wesleyan. Captain Bill Hogarty got the win.

The Huskies will be sending their ace against the Redmen today in the person of Bruce Drummond, an All-Yankee Conference player a year ago, shut out UMass at Storrs, 2-0. His battery mate will be sophomore Ron Romaniello.

At first base for UConn will be Billy Fiorentino from Lynnfield. At second will be Rich Friedman. The UConn shortstop is the leading Husky batter and basketball performer Jack Melene, while at third base is another hoopster Fred Malan, a .261 hitter a year ago. Set in two outfield spots are Tim Dobrindt, a .250 hitter in left, and centerfielder Jeff Fillmere, who batted .276.

JOHN KITCHEN
Mound duty

The right field will be either Howie Cura or Dick McRedmond.

UMass coach Dick Bergquist has a healthy respect for UConn and particularly for Drummond. Bergquist commented, "He became their ace last year and is a fine pitcher with an assortment of pitches. He did a job on us last year."

Bergquist will counter with big junior righthander, John Kitchen. The Chicopee native was 5-2 last season, and although, a bit disappointing on the trip as were most Redmen hurlers, he has all the tools to be a stopper for the Redmen.

Bergquist set the rest of the lineup with Co-captain Tony Chinappi catching and Ray Ellerbrook at first base. Tom Semino, a pleasant surprise on the southern trip, will be at second.

In place of the still-injured Joe DiSarcina will be sophomore Joe Guglotta, with junior Tom Berringer, the leading hitter in the first seven games, at third.

In left field will be slugger Bob Hansen. Sophomore Mitch Salnick will be in center with Dick Pepin in right field.

Bergquist does not hesitate to state the importance of the game when he said, "Whoever wins this game will be in the driver's seat. It would be great to win."

Rowers Sweep Two from ND

By JAN CURLEY
Assistant Managing Editor

SOUTH HADLEY - Battling far from ideal conditions on the Connecticut River, the UMass crew club swept two races from Notre Dame yesterday afternoon.

The river was way up, the current was against the boats, and there was a tailwind on the stern. The Redmen had not experienced any choppy water before yesterday, and their style is geared to flat water.

Although the varsity boat experienced some trouble with the choppy water, they finished the course in 6:21, 10 seconds ahead of Notre Dame. The Fighting Irish had the lead off the line stroking at 33. The Redmen were stroking their boat at 31-32, and they passed Notre Dame.

With 1000 meters to go, UMass had open water. Notre Dame upped their stroke, but UMass held theirs. With 500 yards to go, UMass just pulled ahead, stroking at 34. The win-margin was almost two lengths. Notre Dame finished the race at 35.

Notre Dame has a young boat of sophomores and juniors. UMass experienced some difficulties steering, which cost them some time, but they responded well to the Notre Dame boat and rowed a controlled race. Phil Dwyer stroked his first race for the UMass club.

Coach Mike Faherty praised his rowers for a good job, but added "they can go faster and could do better. The team wasn't satisfied."

Notre Dame, which was making an eastern swing over their spring break, posted a big win over Worcester Polytech Tuesday afternoon.

The UMass freshman and junior varsity boats rowed earlier in the afternoon against the Notre Dame frosh. With their permission, UMass was allowed to enter their junior varisty boat. The UMass frosh had not been scheduled to race, but Coach Faherty said, "They responded well."

The winning time for the UMass frosh boat was 6:52. They stroked the body of the race at 34-35 and showed good power in producing a strong finish, although the race was sloppy at times.

Notre Dame finished in a time of 7:27, stroking at about 33. They also experienced some difficulty with the choppy water. The UMass jayvees finished at 6:55, stroking most of the race at 31 and then moving up to 33.

Boatings for the UMass frosh were: coxswain, Louis Salza, 8-Rick Jones, 7-Bob Keller, 6-Jack Fadden, 5-Keith Radcliffe, 4-Jack Appel, 3-Dan Reidy, 2-Jack Edwards and bow, Jack Casey.

Harvard Students, Police Stage Melee, Strike Called

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) - State and city police, some swinging billy clubs and all disregarding a hail of bottles and other objects threw about 200 protesters out of Harvard's University Hall and arrested them Thursday, setting off a call for a three-day student strike.

About 30 persons were injured in the bloody melee that followed a 17-hour sit-in on the Cambridge campus.

More than 1200 students attended the rally which led to an overwhelming vote to strike after several hours of heated debate. But there was no way of telling how many of Harvard's 10,000 undergraduates and 5,000 graduate students might join the protest.

More than 400 policemen, wearing helmets and plastic face masks, and carrying nightsticks, rushed University Hall just as the sun rose and arrested students in the building who had ignored a University order to leave the night before.

The strike vote was taken at a rally in Memorial Church across the street from the Harvard Yard, with about 1,200 taking part, and adopting a resolution "to thoroughly condemn the bringing of police onto this campus, and the excessive use of violence while they were here."

Various splinter groups met informally during the day, one of them some members of the faculty and students in the Divinity School, who drafted a statement supporting the strike move. They also issued a set of their own demands, including one for amnesty for students involved in the University Hall takeover, and condemnation of Harvard for calling in the police.

Hundreds of other students, protesting against the protesters, gathered outside the hall, jeering and carrying such signs as "SDS does not represent Harvard."

Lederle's Answer Due on Construction Petition

By ROSE MILLER
Staff Reporter

Campus leaders will meet today with President John W. Lederle at 4:00 to discuss his response to the Martin Luther King Social Action Council's petition calling for fair practices by campus construction companies.

The statement, which was presented to Provost Oswald Tippo for the vacationing Lederle last Friday asked the President and the Board of Trustees to ask the bureau of building to require fair hiring practices of all contractors working on University projects. The statement also called for the President to seek an end to the injustices now practiced by companies working on campus.

A response from O'Connell construction company, the prime University builder, is expected a week from today. On April 21 there will be an open meeting for all the University community to discuss what has taken place to date.

The King Council first asked the O'Connell company why there were so few blacks working last summer, and was told that the company was concerned with the problem and would seek solutions. To date there is still just one black man in the 300-man O'Connell crew.

The spokesman for the group meeting with Lederle is Executive Secretary of the King Council Gil Salk. Other UMass representatives include Bruce Balboni, president of the Student Senate, Dave Beckwith from Project 10, George Child, President of IFC, Ron Hardy, chairman of the King Council board of directors. Robert Kentfield from the Student Senate, Stan Kinard, President of the campus Afro-Am Organization, Mike minsky from S.D.S., and Dan Weir from the University Christian Movement.

The text of the petition presented to the Administration is as follows:

Members of the Martin Luther King Jr. Social Action Council and the UMass community-at-large who deplore racial injustice do hereby petitio n the President of the University to request:

1. of the proper authorities, that all future contracts for University construction work contain a clause requiring that a guarantee by a contractor that there be equitable minority group representation at all levels, and that the contractor shall assume the burden of proof if he fails to fulfill his guarantee and:

2. Of all contractors presently working on campus, that the University being aware of serious injustices existing at present work sites, demands that immediate corrective steps be taken. Weekly statements of the progress of these steps should be submitted, beginning two weeks from today, to the President of the University and the Executive Secretary of the Martin Luther King Jr. Social Action Council.

Humphrey D.U.P. Guest Next Week; Day Long Program Set for Ex-V.P.

Former Vice-President Hubert H. Humphrey will give the 1969 Martin Luther King Jr. Memorial Lecture Friday April 18.

The lecture, to be given in Curry Hicks Cage at 8 p.m., is being co-financed by the Class of 1969 and the Distinguished Visitor's Program.

Humphrey will arrive on campus in the morning and a full day of events is planned to allow as much of the campus as is possible to meet with him.

Following the official greeting of the University by President John W. Lederle, Humphrey will travel to Orchard Hill to meet with the Committee for the College Education of Black Students.

An afternoon seminar has been arranged wit h attendance by invitation through the government department.

Following a press conference the campus community will be given a unique opportunity to meet the former Vice-President and his wife, Mrs. Muriel Humphrey, at an open coffee hour scheduled to be held in Memorial Hall. The coffee hour will be closed to the public for a short period with attendance by invitation.

The title of Mr. Humphrey's speech has not been released.

News Analysis

Students See R.O.T.C. as Symbol

The building takeovers at Harvard and Boston University Wednesday marked the beginning of the Spring campaign against ROTC an organization that serves as a handy symbol for the war in Vietnam, the "military-industrial complex" and a lot of other things that the protesters, and many other students, oppose.

The Reserve Officers Training Corps is clearly in trouble on a considerable number of campuses. Prestige institutions such as Harvard, Yale and Dartmouth already have decided to strip academic credit from the military training program and others are debating similar steps.

At Northeastern University, where a few students staged a small-scale parody of the first ROTC spring drill yesterday, the student council met recently to urge the administration to drop credit for ROTC courses. The Tufts faculty will meet next week to consider several similar proposals.

But these steps do not satisfy members of the Students for a Democratic Society who led yesterday's protests. They want ROTC completely removed from the campus and they are convinced they can tap a large body of anti-war sentiment among more moderate students who are increasingly frustrated with a seemingly endless war.

Last Spring, a good segment of the moderate, anti-war energy went into efforts to dump President Johnson and elect Eugene McCarthy. But Johnson has retired to his ranch, McCarthy has gone back to writing poetry, and the war goes on.

SDS members are not surprised by this. They have been saying all along that the war in Vietnam is no accident but the inevitable results of a system that, they claim, is built on economic exploitation of the poor and black at home and abroad. In their view, the university, by cooperating in any way with the military, is aiding and abetting that system.

"We know even if we kick ROTC off the campus, the military will get its officers elsewhere," Terry Poe, one of the speakers at the B.U. rally that BOSTON (AP) - The Boston Celtics, led by player-Coach Bill Russell, threw up a tight early defense and shackled ice-cold New York in the first half en route to a 112-97 victory over the Knicks and a 2-0 lead in their Eastern Division final series in the National Basketball Association playoffs.

THE NEWS IN BRIEF

STORRS, Conn. (AP) - Approximately 100 university of Connecticut students donned Indian garb Thursday and staged a peaceful protest demonstration against recruiting by the U. S. Bureau of Indian Affairs.

A guerrilla theatre performance was staged by the demonstrators outside Koons hall to depict the state of the American Indian today.

CHICAGO, Ill. (CPS) - Militant students at the University of Chicago, outraged over the expulsion of 42 students as a result of the February sit-in, have conducted a partial strike for two days, and may extend it to the entire campus.

Groups of students leafletted and picketed Wednesday and Thursday outside Cobb Hall, the school's main general classroom building. Observers said the strike seemed fairly successful, and that class attendance in the building was down significantly.

QUEENS COLLEGE, New York City (CPS) - The Administration building of Queens College was occupied Wednesday during a faculty meeting, by students wanting an end to secrecy in hiring and firing of professors in the city university system (of which Queens is a part), reinstatement of faculty members arrested during the last sit-in, all charges against students arrested dropped, and removal of police from the campus.

UMass Professor Hits Demonstrators; Justifies "Certain" Police Action

By GARY HAMEL
Staff Correspondent

"Student minority extremists challenge the majority of students and the free operation of the university but they cannot run the university," Professor Guenter Lewy of the Political Science Department said in a DAILY COLLEGIAN interview.

According to Professor Lewy, "the majority of students are in college to obtain an education and not to police university life. This basically non-violent and reasonable majority is willing to use the existing channels to obtain change.

"Only a small minority - the extremists, radicals - are unwilling to work within the existing order. Instead, they try to gain sympathy and radicalize the rest of the university by using clashes and confrontations," said Professor Lewy.

"Demonstrations", he continued, " are always legitimate. The error begins when the militants reject rules and laws and use violent means to achieve their ends. Here the police have to be called.

"When they resist arrest a groundswell of sympathy occurs - people not involved at first are drawn to the underdog."

Professor Lewy added: "The use of force by the police is justified by the resistance of the demonstrators. I am not condoning 'police brutality', but law enforcement agencies must enforce the law - their resort to force is legitimate. The militants want to play at revolution, but they do not want to accept the consequences of violating the law.

"You cannot let a minority impose its will on the rest of the community: this would be dictatorial. The vast majority of students who want to get an education would be thwarted."

He believe that "moderates must create an atmosphere in which attempts at intimidation and coercion will not have a chance, a climate of opinion that deprives the extremists of moral and psychological support. Moderates must uphold rational discourse and support the administration (of UMass) when it is forced to deal with disruptive groups or individuals. In doing so they will engage not only in a necessary act of self-defense, but also in a reaffirmation of the values a truly free university is based on: the search for knowledge and its dissemination with free discussion, objective inquiry and instruction in an atmosphere free from pressures for indoctrination and intimidation."

Professor Lewy continued: "The radical minority are convinced that they are right, they feel their tactics are legitimate - a TOTALITARIAN philisophy which disregards majority wishes is the result."

Professor Lewy said that the militants often ignore the fact that in most cases the legitimate channels of action are open. "They reject the democratic process IF IT DOES NOT GO THEIR WAY. If by using the channels, they fail, they think the system is phoney. They forget that in a democratic system you don't always win.

"Besides", he added, "university cannot and should not necessarily be run according to democratic means. Student sentiment ought to be ascertained, channels for the expression of student views on all matters must exist, and in some areas, like social life, students should be self-governing."

"In short", concluded Professor Lewy, "a university can't be democratic any more than a hospital can: may patients tell their doctors how to prescribe and treat them?

Move to Change Commons Structure Heard in Senate Committee

By ANNE HILLERMAN
Staff Reporter

A proposal to put all campus commons under student control and to have the commons offer more restaurant type service was suggested last night at the meeting of the Student Senate services committee. A commission established by the President of the Senate would consider the feasibility of having restaurant meal plans in the dining commons and of having meal tickets available on a weekly or monthly basis.

"Students are now paying for food services they do not want and are not interested in," said Paul Silverman, sponsor of the proposal. Since the commons are financed by student money and students have to eat there, students should have the framework to regulate them, Silverman said. The proposal, which the Services committee will submit to the Senate Wednesday, requests the Board of Trustees to grant the President of the Senate the authority to establish such a commission to regulate the dining commons.

In other action the committee approved an increase in the health service fee from $25 to $30 a year and voted unanimously against a proposal that a student who exercises his option to move off campus after first semester loose his $50 room deposit refund. The committee postponed action on a recommendation that the Senate purchase four new buses to help commuter students get from parking lots to their classes until it learns how much the busses would cost.

INTERTRANSFERABILITY OF DINING COMMONS

On a trial basis, beginning April 15th to the end of the semester, there will be intertransferability of all dining commons.

The only procedural change that will occur is that those students assigned to Franklin and Worcester Commons who have no pictures on their meal tickets will have to show their I.D. cards when they wish to eat in a dining commons not initially assigned.

ROTC

planned the takeover, said. "Our success will be measured by the number of people who become conscious radicals opposed not just to the war but to the foreign policy that made it necessary."

Because SDS is opposed to the system, and not just to ROTC, they have rejected what they see as efforts to compromise with ROTC.

At Harvard, for instance, the faculty voted earlier this year to eliminate academic credit from ROTC and take faculty rank from its officers.

But SDS and its supporters are angered by the fact that Harvard President Nathan Pusey made it clear that the university does not intend to sever its ties with ROTC and is engaged in negotiating a new contract for next year's program.

At B.U., beginning next September, no student will get academic credit for ROTC and a committee has submitted a proposal that would make ROTC an extra-curricular activity, take faculty status from its instructors, and deny it the use of university classrooms.

Sorority Sing Ends on High Note

Wednesday night, the Annual Sorority Sing was held in the Student Union Ballroom sponsored by the Panhellenic Council of the U. of Mass. Nine sororities competed for three awards. Each of the houses displayed tremendous effort in producing an entertaining presentation of "On Broadway" hits.

First prize, a Paul Revere bowl, was awarded to Chi Omega for their fine reditions of "Soon It's Gonna Rain" and "Scarborough Fair". In second place, Kappa Alpha Theta was enthusiastically applauded for their effective selection of "Because All Men Are Brothers" and "Hair". Alpha Chi Omega received the third place for a bright performance of "Get Me to the Church on Time" and "Yesterday".

While all awaited the judges' decision, MissFrances Botelho, a sophomore Education major, entertained with songs such as "I Enjoy Being a Girl", "Impossible Dream", and "As Long as He Needs Me." A standing ovation was the enthusiastic reception to her brilliant performance.

Both the participants and audience responded with zeal to each performance, The Sorority Sing was an enjoyable success.

Stage West Offers Albee

Stage/West at Storrowton is presenting through April twelfth Edward Albee's hardhitting drama "Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf". An extremely professional group the company does a fine job in portraying the four unhappy characters of Albee's well known play.

The directors of set design, costuming, and lighting should all be commended for the realistic environement they gave to their last production of the season. The action focuses upon one room in the hours before dawn in a small college town.

The acting is very effective, Martha, George, Honey, and Nick play games with each other, renting themselves apart until only raw flesh remains and the masks are stripped. They find and make reality in the fabrications of their minds. Albee pokes at this existence with a cruel humor and prods them through to the marrow.

Distinguished Senior Awards Highlight Student Leader's Night

As a highlight of the Student Leader's Night program on Tuesday, April 15 in the Student Union Ballroom, President John W. Lederle will present the Distinguished Senior Awards to individuals who have been selected for recognition of their continued and distinguished service to the University community.

The appointed selections committee wishes to solicit nominations from the University community in an effort to consider every eligible member of the Class of 1969. The committee has been asked to recommend students on the basis of their accomplishments in the areas of academic achievement, student activities, university committees, athletics and community service projects, but are not necessarily to be limited by these considerations. Written nominations of any individual who appears to have made outstanding contributions in any of these suggested areas, a combination of these areas, or additional significant contributions to the University community, are requested to be submitted in the Student Activities Office in the Student Union by 5:00 p.m. on Friday, April 11.

Nixon Proposes Three-Point Plan

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Nixon proposed Thursday a three-point plan for stepping up NATO political consultations and teamwork in dealing with social problems.

At the same time foreign ministers of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization studied the recent proposal by the rival Communist Warsaw Pact powers for a general East-West conference on European security.

West German Foreign Minister Willy Brandt suggested that the Western allies reply with a declaration of "readiness in principle" for such a parley - and let subsequent developments establish whether the Reds are genuinely interested in a broad settlement.

UMass Building Program Plans for Next Decade

By JILL WALLACH
Staff Reporter

UMass will see the completion of ten new buildings in the next couple of years. Four are now under construction; three projects have been awarded contracts and will soon get under way, and three are still in the planning stages.

According to H. J. Littlefield, Planning Officer, Office of the Provost, "This process of expansion is continuing at a rapid pace and will continue to do so. The University is planning now for students who are presently in the first or second grade and who will enter college in 1980."

Interviewed by the DAILY COLLEGIAN, Littlefield discussed buildings presently under construction, those soon to go up or under discussion and the appropriations which are making all this expansion possible.

There are three sources of funds. "All academic buildings," stated Littlefield, "are paid for by the state and federal governments on a one third /two thirds ratio. Dormitories, dining commons, the campus center, garage and recreational facilities are financed by the Building Authority. This organization represents the public in authorizing the construction of self-liquidating facilities."

Academic buildings now under construction are Christian Herter Hall (named for a former Massachusetts governor and U.S. Secretary of State under Eisenhower) and phase I of The Graduate Research Center. Herter Hall, containing classrooms, language labs, lecture halls and officer for the College of Arts and Sciences, will be ready for occupancy this summer. This is the Bartlett Hall addition near Whitmore. The graduate Research Center, at a total cost of $18.8 million (the federal grants for this building and for the library are two of the largest ever made to any school by the U.S. Office of Education) will be a complex of several buildings. Phase I will include completion of a 17-story building housing labs, offices and classrooms for the chemistry department. Connected low-rise buildings will contain a physical science library and facilities for computer science. Phase II will see the completion of two more towers which will house the math department and facilities for physics.

Construction will soon begin on a 28-story library that will serve the entire campus (as opposed to the special science libraries which are in or near the science buildings). This unit was designed by Edward Durrell Stone. The construction contract was awarded to Daniel O'Connell's Sons on April 1. According to Littlefield, "the ultimate cost will be $16.8 million. The building will contain two million volumes and have a study area capacity of three thousand persons. Stress will be on individual study rooms and carrels. Layout is based on the sandwich concept: two levels of stacks alternating with one level of studying area. Two levels will be below the ground with 28 stories above. Five high speed elevators will whisk students to any level."

The second academic building to be built in fiscal 1970, is Tobin Hall (Maurice Tobin was once governor of Massachusetts, mayor of Boston and Secretary of Labor under President Truman). "Teaching and research labs for the Department of Psychology will reside in this building which will ultimately cost $6-1/2 million," according to Littlefield. It will be located on the site of the present tennis courts behind Bartlett.

The third building (for fiscal 1970) will be the Fine Arts Building called clabass for classrooms, language labs, art studios, auditoriums and offices for the College of Arts and Sciences. This building was designed by Kevin Roche and will be built by O'Connell's Son (as just about everything else is).

Two buildings are presently being built with funds from the Building Authority. The Murray D. Lincoln Campus Center, which will be completed in May, 1970, is an addition to the Student Union. Littlefield indicated that it will contain facilities not only for social activities, but also for continuing education. An adjacent underground garage is also under construction. This will accomodate 988 cars.

The 1970 dormitories, which will soon be going up, will be ready for occupancy that September. This will be a three dormitor y complex housing 1400 students. Living quarters will be arranged in suites accomodating 5-7 people. Each suite will consist of 2-3 doubles, 2-3 singles, a living room and a private bath, similar to the set-up at Brandeis.

Campus Comment

A Warrented Apology

Bill S188 as presented before the Student Senate by Senators Dennis Klayton and Robert Nims states, that because Senator Thurnond came to the UMass campus as an invited guest and received what can leniently be called less than a courteous welcome from certain members of the community; the Student Senate should write a letter of apology from them as a result.

We feel that such action is commendable on the part of the Senate, but at the same time we think that a few others should also feel it an obligation even more so than the Senate to apologize for their direct involvement in what happened. After all, it wasn't the Student Senate who insulted the Senator.

True, Senator Thurmond may have views that differ with meny members of this community. True, that he might even as a result of some of his views insult some members of this community. But is is also true that he was invited here as a distinguished visitor by the student s of the University - that is, all of us. This is the point which ranks most important with us, and is also the point which warrents apologies from other sources than the Student Senate.

THE EDITORS

A View from the Earth

To the editor:

The meeting with Dean Field, President Lederle, Mr. Brubacher and Mr. Hunt on Tuesday concerning House (or corridor or whatever) Autonomy was a real discussion in the sense of a communication of ideas between two groups in the University, these being the Administration and the student body, working toward a common goal, more student responsibility. The topics ranged as far as curriculum reform, but essentially there was agreement (liberally from the opening "gun") that "student power" was coming, and that it was just a matter of time.

Why not now was then the question. "We must not move too fast or too far ahead of everyone else" was part of the answer, which is a point that has probably been discussed at great length. But, what seemed to be the key point in the time factor of a student responsibility program was that stated by Mr. Brubacher, that the idea must evolve among the students to the point where it is practiced to the extent that it is possible NOW, and this is not so limited as it may seem. Structures, solid, pre-existing structures must be ready to bear the load when the time comes to assume "autonomy".

Customs and traditions of self-government and familiarity with problems we have now is essential if we are to deal effectively with any new responsibilities or problems. Student government on the house level is one area where we can show what we have and develop our potential for "autonomy" to a concrete basis of evidence for our claims of competence. Class government, and especially the senior class, should be able to suggest concrete realistic programs for student involvement in a very real way. By using what we now have available in the fullest way, we can develop traditions and experience among the student body which will not only render it capable of assuming autonomy, but will also place it in a better position to demand it all the sooner.

I Resign . . .

To the editor:

Once again, the skies have parted and the Sun has engulfed the earth in its refreshing beams. The skies have erupted with the sounds of the singing birds and the rustling trees. Yet my ears are aware of the lack of the true sound of spring- the tolling of the Chapel bells.

Intuition tells me that the skies over the University of Massachusetts will soon be filled with the echoes of the tolling bells reverberating from the mountains of the north to the mountains of the south.

I, however, regret that I must join my former associate Charles Johnson in the far away Land of the Bellringers, forever to rest from the turmoil of the Pioneer Valley.

As I find my way to the Land, I must leave a successor to carry on the responsibility of calling to those entrapped students with an invitation to take a day to gather and celebrate the presence of Spring.

With my final farewell, I wish you a pleasurful Spring Day and bid my successor good luck. As you have been aware of the presence of Charles Johnson and me, be aware of my ever present successor Churvey P. Kilroy, for he is the symbol of Spring Day.

Farewell my faithful friends and good luck Churv.

Pro the Machine

To the editor:

I am writing this in refutation to Lee Hansen's comment on "The Morality Machine." Mr. Hansen's mind interprets the cries of the "philisophical-idealist complex" as posing a threat to "American liberty." He can only see this dissent as a plot to "destroy the War Machine. . . and leave us open to Soviet nuclear blackmail." It is unfortunate that he lacks the insight to understand the entire scope of their philosophy. Mr. Hansen wonders why they label things immoral without establishing a criteria for immorality. It is only because immorality is an abstract word incapable of definition. It is an individual feeling embedded in each of us, varying from person to person.

The philisophical-idealist ethic is more complex than just a movement to end the "War Machine." They seek more freedom for everyone. They seek a world free of social pressures. A world in which questioning government policies is looked upon with favor and not scorn. Is it right to send our armies to Vietnam, to kill men in black pajamas, on their own land, in their own rice paddies, merely because their political ideology differs from outs? They seek a world in which the university is center of knowledge and enlightenment, and not a training school that will mold one into the shape society wants.

If you think that this is a danger to "American liberty," then your reasoning is misguided. As J.l. Simmons and Barry Winograd say in their book, IT'S HAPPENING: "If you think this dream is a little naive and foolish and fantastic, you are right. If you think it neglects and glosses over many of the realities of present world conditions and that it is a bit pretentious and unlikely, given facts of history, you are right again. And if you find nothing good or true or beautiful about it, you can go to hell."

To the editor:

As an "Also Ran" for the Class of 1970 Presidency my endorsement of a candidate should count for something. I often recall, the only thing that kept me out of the Junior White House this year is the fact that Steve Weisman would not withdraw. Like someone else coming to campus this month, I came in second.

After deep consideration of the several excellent candidates for the important office of senior President, I endorse Dick Kline and respectfully urge his being checked-off come Primary Day. I know the other candidates, and I think Dick Kline's energy, character and personality will make our next year a lot easier and more active.

A former boss of mine, Dick got a lot of work out of the COLLEGIAN reporters under his supervision. A former Executive Councillor with me, Dick brought to meetings information unavailable otherwise and, often, proposals (spontaneous or otherwise) that got the Council moving.

Vote Kline on Primary Day! Keep his hat in the ring!

Counseling

To the editor:

What is a counselor? A counselor is a person who attends counselor training sessions once a week and tells his life history to a group of people who probably don't care.

A counselor is a person who is blind to everything that happens in the dorm with the exception of actual destruction to University property. A counselor is a person that learns to live with his section. He fits himself in with those around him, never expecting anything from the other section members. In general, a counselor is a name on the door.

IF, a counselor was a person, he would be someone with ideas about life, school, right and wrong, that he should be able to share with his section. The section should except him for what he is and he should still be able to keep his counselor's job. I am a counselor now, but I have not been hired for next year because I am a person, not just a name on the door.

Student Autonomy

To the editor:

Once upon a time, in the small hamlet of Amherst in western Taxachusetts in the land of Oz, there lived an educational community of Umies. The Umies were ruled by a Board of Trustees made up of several lesser gods of the Pay State who resided far away in the area of a Golden Domed Palace. The Umies had very few of the rights which we as human beings deem necessary. Their living quarters were subject to search without warrant. They were not allowed to possess certain ap - pliances, They had to ear the most detestable of foods, and, in fact, paid a fee much greater than the cost of the food so that more of the dining buildings could be built and more Umies forced to buy the food. They had to hide in secrecy when partaking of alcoholic beverages regardless of age or maturity. But the chief grievance of the Umies was the scarcity of visitation priviledges for members of the opposite sex. The last sexual deviant on our planet who attempted to impose a group morality was castrated and exiled a thousand years before the age of the Umie on Oz.

Finally, under able leadership, the Umies organized a rally. The large turnout at the rally frightened the Board of Trustees who subsequently decided to allow the Umies a limited amount of freedom; far less than they really wanted, but much more than they had ever had before. The Umies, happy with even a partial victory, forget their original demands and settled down to enjoy their new freedoms. After one Ozian year had passed, the Board of Trustees discovered that many of the Umies were illegally assuming complete freedom. Angered, the gods decided upon a very subtle plan of action. Using spokesmen in the educational community (especially Editorial Day Editors of the community's news publication, the Taxachusetts Daily Collegian) to instill a sense of guilt in the entire community for the violations that had been occurring enabled the Board of Trustees to withdraw all of the recently granted freedom without great resistence. For, you see, the people of Oz adhered to the concept of group accountability which we learned of when we studied the Ozian cultures of Soviet Russia and Nazi Germany, rather than the concept of individual accountability which we have here on Earth. Our historial records terminate at the point when the Board of Trustees began its subtle counterattack, but we have every reason to believe that the Umies failed to act in time with enough strength and unity to regain their meager freedom.

THE STUDENT AS NIGGER

by Jerry Farber

Students are niggers. When you get that straight, our schools begin to make sense. It's more important, though, to understand why they're niggers. If we follow that question seriously enough it will lead us past the zone of academic bullshit, where dedicated teachers pass their knowledge on to a new generation, and into the nitty-gritty of human needs and hang-ups. And from there we can go on to consider whether it might ever be possible for students to come up from slavery.

First let's see what's happening now. Let's look at the role students play in what we like to call education.

At Cal. State, L.A., where I teach, the students have separate and unequal dining facilities. If I take them into the faculty dining room, my colleagues get uncomfortable, as though there were a bad smell. If I eat in the student cafeteria, I become known as the educational equivalent of a nigger-lover. In at least one building there are even rest rooms which students may not use. At Cal State, also, there is an unwritten law barring student-faculty lovemaking. Fortunately, this anti-miscegenation law, like its Southern counterpart, is not 100 percent effective.

Students at Cal. State are politically disenfranchised. They are in an academic Lowndes County. Most of them can vote in national elections - their average is about 26 - but they have no voice in the decisions which affect their academic lives. The students are, it is true, allowed to have a lay government of their own. It is a government run for the most part by Uncle Toms and concerned principally with trivia. The faculty and administrators decide what courses will be offered; the student s get to choose their own Homecoming Queen. Occasionally, when student leaders get uppity and rebellious, they're either ignored, put off with trivial concessions, or maneuvered expertly out of position.

SMILES AND SHUFFLES . . .

A student at Cal. State is expected to know his place. He calls a faculty member "Sir" or "Doctor" or "Professor" - and he smiles and shuffles some as he stands outside the professor's office, waiting for permission to enter. The faculty tell him what courses to take (in my department, English, even electives have to be approved by a faculty member); they tell him what to read, what to write, and frequently, where to set the margins on his typewriter. They tell him what's true and what isn't. Some teachers insist that they encourage dissent but they're almost always jiving and every student knows it. Tell the man what he want s to hear or he'll fail your ass out of the course.

When a teacher says "jump," students jump. I know of one professor who refused to take up class time for exams and required students to show up for tests at 6:30 in the morning. And they did, by God! Another, at exam time, provides answer cards to be filled out - each one enclosed in a paper ba g with a hole cut in the top to see through. Students stick their writing hands in the bags while taking the test. The teacher isn't a provo; I wish he were. He does it to prevent cheating. Another colleague once caught a student reading during one of his lectures and threw her book against the wall. Still another lectures his students into a stupor and then screams at them in a rage when they fall asleep.

Just last week, during the first meeting of a class, one girl got up to leave after ten minutes had gone by. The teacher rushed over, grabbed her by the arm, saying, "This class is NOT dismissed!" and led her back to her seat. On the same day another teacher began by informing his students that he does not like beards, mustaches, long hair on boys, or capri pants on girls, and will not tolerate any of that in his class. That class, incidentally, consisted mostly of high school teachers.

FOLLOWS ORDERS . . .

Even more discouraging than this Auschwitz approach to education is the fact that the students take it. They haven't gone through twelve years of public school for nothing. They've learned one thing and perhaps only one thing during those twelve years. They've forgotten their algebra. They're hopelessly vague about chemistry and physics. They've grown to fear and resent literature. They write like they've been lobotomized. But, Jesus, can they follow orders! Freshmen come up to me with an essay and ask if I want it folded and whether their name should be in the upper right hand corner. And I want to cry and kiss them and caress their poor tortured heads.

Students don't ask that orders make sense. They give up expecting things to make sense long before they leave elementary school. Things are true because the teacher says they're true. At a very early age we all learn to accept "two truths," as did certain medieval churchmen. Outside of class, things are true to your tongue, your fingers, your stomach, your heart. Inside class, things are true by reason of authority. And that's just fine because you don't care anyway. Miss Widemeyer tells you a noun is a person, place or thing. So let it be. You don't give a rat's ass; she doesn't give a rat's ass.

The important thing is to please her. Back in kindergarten, you found out that teachers only love children who stand in nice straight lines. And that's where it's been at ever since. Nothing changes except to get worse. School becomes more and more obviously a prison. Last year I spoke to a student assembly at Manual Arts High School and then couldn't get out of the goddam school. I mean there was NO WAY OUT. Locked doors. High fences. One of the inmates was trying to make it over the fence when he saw me coming and froze in a panic. For a moment I expected sirens, a rattle of bullets and him clawing at the fence.

What school amounts to, then, for white and black kids alike, is a 12-year course in how to be slaves. What else could explain what I see in a freshman class? They've got that slave mentality: obliging and ingratiating on the surface, but hostile and resistant underneath.

As do black slaves, students vary in their awareness of what's going on. Some recognize their own put-on for what it is and even let their rebellion break through to the surface now and then. Others - including most of the "good students" - have been more deeply brain-washed. They swallow the bullshit with greedy mouths. They honest-to-God believe in grades, in busy work, in General Education requirements. They're pathetically eager to be pushed around. They're like those old greyheaded house niggers you can still find in the South who don't see what all the fuss is about because Mr. Charlie "treats us real good."

College entrance requirements tend to favor the Toms and screen out the rebels. Not entirely, of course. Some students at Cal. State L.A. are expert con artists who know perfectly well what's happening. They want the degree or the 2-S and spend their years on the old plantation alternately laughing and cursing as they play the game. If their egos are strong enough, they cheat a lot. And, of course, even the Toms are angry down deep somewhere. But it comes out in passive rather than active aggression. They're unexplainably thickwitted and subject to frequent spells of laziness. They misread simply questions. They spend their nights mechanically outlining history chapters while meticulously failing to comprehend a word of what's in front of them.

INWARD ANGER . . .

The saddest cases among both black slaves and student slaves are the ones who have so thoroughly introjected their masters' values that their anger is all turned inward. At Cal State these are the kids for whom every low grade is torture, who stammer and shake when they speak to a professor, who go through an emotional crisis every time they're called upon during class. You can recognize them easily at finals time. Their faces are festooned with fresh pimples; their bowels boil audibly across the room. If there really is a Last Judgement, then the parents and teachers who created these wrecks are going to burn in hell.

So students are niggers. It's time to find out why, and to do this, we have to take a long look at Mr. Charlie.

The teachers I know best are college professors. Outside the classroom and taken as a group, their most striking characteristic is timidity. They're short on balls.

Just look at their working conditions. At a time when even migrant workers have begun to fight and win, college professors are still afraid to make more than a token effort to improve their pitiful economic status. In California state colleges the faculties are screwed regularly and vigorously by the Governor and Legislature and yet they still won't offer any solid resistance. They lie flat on their stomachs with their pants down, mumbling catch phrases like "professional dignity" and "meaningful dialogue."

Professors were no different when I was an undergraduate to ACLA during the McCarthy era; it was like a cattle stampede as they rushed to cop out. And, in more recent years, I found that my being arrested in sit-ins brought from my colleagues not so much approval or condemnation as open-mouthed astonishment. "You could lose your job!"

Now, of course, there's the Vietnamese war. It gets some opposition from a few teachers. Some support it. But a vast number of professors, who know perfectly what's happening, are copping out again. And in the high schools, you can forget it. Stillness reigns.

FORCES A SPLIT . . .

I'm not sure why teachers are so chickenshit. It could be that academic training itself forces a split between thought and action. It might also be that the tenured security of a teaching position, like police work, pulls in persons who are unsure of themselves and need weapons and the other external trappings of authority.

At any rate teachers ARE short on balls. And, as Judy Eisenstein has eloquently pointed out, the classroom offers an artificial and protected environment in which they can exercise their will to power. Your neighbors may drive a better car; gas station attendants may intimidate you; your wife may dominate you; the State Legislature may shit on you; but in the classroom, by God, students do what you say - or else. The grade is a hell of a weapon. It may not rest on your hip, potent and rigid like a cop's gun, but in the long run it's more powerful. At your personal whim - any time you choose - you can keep 35 students up for nights and have the pleasure of seeing them walk into classroom pasty-faced and red-eyed carrying a sheaf of typewritten pages, with title page, MLA footnotes and margins set at 15 and 91.

The general timidity which causes teachers to make niggers of their students usually includes a more specific fear - fear of the students themselves. After all, students are different, just like black people. You stand exposed in front of them, knowing that their interests, their values, and their language are different from yours. To make matters worse, you may suspect that you yourself are not the most engaging of persons. What then can protect you from their ridicule and scorn?

It is the policeman's gun again. The white bwana's pith helmet. So you flaunt that authority. You wither whisperers with a murderous glance. You crush objectors with erudition and heavy irony. And, worst of all, you make your own attainments seem not accessible but awesomely remote. You conceal your massive ignorance - and parade a slender learning.

WHITE SUPREMACY . . .

The teacher's fear is mixed with an understandable need to be admired and to feel superior, a need which also makes him cling to his "White supremacy". Ideally a teacher should minimize the distance between himself and his students. He should encourage them not to need him - eventually or even immediately. But this is rarely the case. Teachers make themselves high priests of arcane mysteries. They become masters of mumbo-jumbo. Even a more or less conscientious teacher may be torn between the desire to give and the desire to hold them in bondage. There is a kind of castration that goes on in schools. It begins, before school years, with the parents' first encroachments on their children's free unashamed sexuality and continues right up to the day when they hand you your doctoral diploma with a bleeding, shriveled pair of testicles stapled to the parchment. It's not that sexuality has no place in the classroom. You'll find it there but only in certain perverted and vitiated forms.

BLEEDING BRAINS . . .

How does sex show up in school? First of all, there's the sado-masochistic relationship between teachers and students. That's plenty sexual, although the price of enjoying it is to be unaware of what's happening. In walks the student in his Ivy League equivalent of a motorcycle jacket. In walks the teacher - a kind of intellectual rough trade- and flogs his students with grades, tests, sarcasm, and snotty superiority until their very brains are bleeding. In Swinburne's England, the whipped schoolboy frequently grew up to be a flagellant. With us, the perversion is intellectual but it's no less perverse.

Possible Infirmary Hike Slated for Grad Senate Discussion

The possibility of a raise next fall in the infirmary fee will be one of the chief topics on the agenda of the Graduate Student Senate at its next meeting on Monday, April 14, at 8:30 p.m. in the Worcester Room of the Student Union.

Mr. Barry Averill, business manager of the infirmary, will attend the meeting to explain the financing of the infirmary operation, according to Senate President Thomas Minogue.

An administration proposal for a student supported activities and convocation center will be aired by Mr. Robert Kittle of the Treasurer's Office and university planning officer John Littlefield.

The meeting is open to the public.

Campus Work Study Aide Bolstered By Federal Grants this Year

Nearly 257,000 students who need financial help to attend college will be assisted by the Federally supported College Work-Study Program during the first six months of 1969.

Applications for work study at UMass are available in the Placement office in Whitmore. A part-time and a full time work study program is being offered for the summer.

Approximately $66.5 million will be made available by the U. S. Office of Education to 1,855 colleges and universities in all 50 States, the District of Columbia, Guam, Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands, to meet 80 percent of student payrolls. A student's college or university, or an approved off-campus agency, will provide 20 per cent.

Students may work up to 15 hours a week while in school and up to 40 hours a week during summer or other vacation periods. Employment may be in such on-campus jobs as teacher assistant, library aide, laboratory assistant, maintenance worker, or administrative aid. Off-campus employment may be for public or private nonprofit agencies in such activities as health, welfare, education, and recreation.

Any student unable to enter or to continue in college for lack of funds may apply for a job under the College Work-Study Program to the financial aid officer of a participating college.

The College Work-Study Program is one of four major Federally supported programs to help American youth attend college, according to the placement office.

The other programs are the National Defense Student Loan Program, authorized by the National Defense Education Act of 1958, and the Guaranteed Student Loan and Educational Opportunity Grants programs, authorized by the Higher Education Act of 1965.

These four programs of loans, grants and jobs represent a Federal investment of about $540 million during this academic year and are benefiting an estimated 1.5 million students.

Michael Tilson Thomas Conducts at Bowker

Conductor Michael Tilson Thomas, at twenty-four, is one of the brightest stars to flash across the musical skies in recent years. Mr. Thomas will make his Western Mass. debut April 15 in Bowker Auditorium.

Active as both conductor and pianist, Mr. Thomas has served as Assistant to Pierre Boulez at the Ojai (Calif) Music Festival and in Europe where he was one of the youngest staff members ever engaged by the Bayreuth Festival. He is conductor of the Debut Orchestra of Los Angeles. In the spring of 1968 Mr. Thomas prepared the orchestra for the Heifets-Piatigorsky Festival Concerts and during this past summer was awarded the Koussevitsky Prize for a conductor of merit.

For his appearance at the UMass campus, Mr. Thomas has selected a program including Bach's Suite No. 4; Seeger's "Adagio for String Orchestra"; Carl Ruggles' "Men and Mountains"; Symphony, Opus 21 by Anton von Webern and Haydn's Symphony No. 60 in C Major, "Il Distratto". Reserved tickets for this event are available without charge to all UMass undergrads and at $2.50 to the general public at the Student Union Ticket Office. Remaining tickets will be available at Bowker Hall Box Office preceding the 8:00 p.m. concert. The concert is presented by the Concert Association through a grant by the Fine Arts Council.

Faces A Movie Which Shows The Shams That Fill Our Lives

By SUSAN SCHMEHL
Fine Arts Staff

John Cassavetes' new and startling movie "Faces" is a graphic black and white documentary type slice of bourgeois life. Almost like a chunk from Updike's novel COUPLES, it punches you right in your gut with its relevance to today's society. If you cannot see yourself in this film in ten years time you will undoubtedly find someone you know. Cassavetes throws you right into it before you have even sat down in your seat. The "actors" come on as an audience watching themselves and you as the petty games of discontent are played. There is a lot of meat to carve through and interpret in "Faces". It does not set out to entertain you but slap you hard and let you think about it sans music and pretty colors.

Cassavetes makes some laugh with his film. But people stop laughing when they begin to realize that they have only been laughing at the pretenses that make up all they have to life.

"Faces" follows the inevitable disintegration of an upper middle-class marriage. Eventually a reconciliation of sorts is reached which only brings the two back knowing that even the miserable nothing they exist in together is better than living it alone.

Theater Group Does Fine Job In Portrayal of Virginia Woolf

Stage/West at Storrowton is presenting Edward Albee's hard hitting drama "Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf" April 11th and 12th.

The directors of set design, costuming, and lighting should all be commended for the realistic environment the y gave the production, their last for the season. The play is set in one room in a small college town.

The acting is very effective. Martha, George, Honey, and Nick play games with each other, reeling themselves apart until only raw flesh remains and the masks are stripped.

Byzantine Art Authority To Speak at Smith Monday

NORTHAMPTON - An authority on Byzantine art will speak at Smith College on Monday.

Ernst Kitzinger, A. Kingsley Porter University Professor at Harvard University, will speak in Wright Hall at 5 p.m. Sponsored by the Smith art department, his illustrated lecture is open to the public.

Professor Kitzinger will discuss "An Art Medium Transplanted: Byzantine Mosiac in Medieval Italy." His lecture will deal with the importance of the mosiacist's craft from Byzantium into Italy, particularly to Monte Cassino, Rome and Sicily. He will also describe the ideology of the patrons responsible for these efforts and the effect of this ideology on the fortunes of the medium on Italian soil.

From 1941-67 he served in various capacities at the Center for Byzantine Studies, Dumbarton Oaks, Washington, D.C. During this period Kitzinger spent a year as a Fulbright Scholar in Sicily working on mosiacs of the Norman period and another year as a Guggenheim Fellow traveling in Italy, Greece, Yugoslavia and Turkey.

Garber's Gorilla's to Meet Boston State College

By WALT STACHURA
Staff Reporter

Looking for their second victory of the season after the impressive 18-4 rout of Wesleyan Wednesday, the UMass lacrosse team takes on Boston State tomorrow at 2 p.m. on the field behind Boyden.

Boston State will be a new opponent on the Redmen lacrosse schedule. This season is only their second as an organized team, and they may be too weak to face the strong Redmen.

Boston State opened their schedule against the Boston Lacrosse Club Wednesday and will face stronger competition in the Redmen. However, Boston State insisted on having UMass on the schedule this year and may regret their decision after tomorrow's game.

UMass coach Richard Garber was delighted with his team's effort against Wesleyan. He felt that the team was outstanding, especially in the first half in which they built up a 9-0 lead.

Garber indicated that the offense kept up relentless pressure throughout the game and would have scored more if they had not had only a fair shooting game.

On defense, the Redmen were aggressive knocking down many of the Wesleyan players around the goal and stealing the ball a number of times. Goalies Mark Schlossberg and John Orr had an easy time against Wesleyan.

Looking to his next opponent, Boston State, Garber noted that they were newcomers to the game of lacrosse on a varsity level and might be weaker than some of the other opponents on the UMass schedule. However, he warned that they could surprise UMass and give the Redmen a tough game as Nichols College did a couple of years ago.

This game will be the last at home for the Redmen until May as they hit the road for four straight games. Their next game will be at Middlebury next Wednesday while the next home game will be UConn May 3.

Netters Go with Nine Unlettered Men Against AIC Yellow Jackets for Opener

By STEVE ROSS
Staff Reporter

The UMass tennis team will be on display in its first match of the season tomorrow afternoon at 2 p.m. on the courts behind Boyden when the Redmen meet the Yellow Jackets of AIC.

Coach Steve Kosakowski will be going after his eleventh consecutive winning season and is expected to field a strong team. Balance is the one thing with which the Redmen seem to be blessed. So strong are the Redmen, five nonlettermen will start in singles tomorrow.

Letterman Scott Sheppard will lead off at first singles. Soph Jon Bloom will play at two. Warren Kahn, attempting a comeback, will be in the third slot.

Two sophs, Nubby Gervickas and Gus Penon, will start at four and six respectively, and senior Tom Babson will be in the fifth spot. None of these three men were playing tennis at UMass last year.

Kosakowski will not determine his doubles pairings until the singles matches have been concluded. It is quite possible that some of the Redmen will be seeing double duty.

AIC is a well coached team. The Yellow Jacket mentor, Bill Callahan, is a great recruiter and recruits his talent from two tennis rich areas, Springfield and New York City. Just this past winter Callahan was honored as College Division Coach of the Year by the wire services.

Last year the Redmen were a 7-1 winner in a tough match. Kosakowski is hopeful that the Redmen can have another winning season.

Wrestling Team Car Wash

The varsity wrestling team is sponsoring a CAR WASH tomorrow at Arnold House on North Pleasant Street.

Ruggers to Host Boston Club

The UMass rugby club will face the Boston rugby club this Sunday at home. The games will be played on the rugby field behind Alumni Stadium. The "B" team will lead off at 1 p.m. followed by the "A" team at 2:30 p.m.

Both UMass teams faced the Boston ruggers twice during the fall season and lost both times. Boston's wins were attributed to their capitalizing on UMass defensive mistakes and superior strength in the scrum. Experience and better training have blotted out both of these dark spots for the Redmen.

Following a good showing from the backfield last Saturday at Tufts, UMass can rely on an attack far superior to the one that faced Boston last fall. Sunday should be a battle between the speed and ball handling of the Redmen attack and the greater strength and experience of the Boston club.

Rowers Travel to Wesleyan

Wesleyan will be the host tomorrow for the fourth annual Harborow Regatta in Middletown, Conn. In addition to UMass, University of Rhode Island and Worcester Polytech will be guests.

The varsity crew will be facing some stiff opposition from Wesleyan which has not lost to UMass in the last two years. This is supposed to be Wesleyan's year to build up their crew, but they have always had a good crew and the race is on their home course.

Worcester Polytech has revenge in mind against the varsity crew after UMass beat them in a dual meet last year. They can be expected to improve rapidly since their lake became unfrozen last week.

The UMass crew will go with the same combination that beat Notre Dame Wednesday, but to take this one, they will have to row better than they did against the Fighting Irish. The race will most likely be decided by the conditions, and the team that can respond the best to them.

The outlook isn't that much brighter for the jayvees. Wesleyan usually has a good jayvee boat, and this year's has most of last year's frosh rowers in it. Trinity beat them in a close race, and UMass will have to row a strong race to win. Injuries on the jayvee boat may tell the story.

In contrast to the opposition from Wesleyan, WPI should pose no problem.

In spite of the fact Wesleyan has another good frosh boat, UMass' boat should be rated as having a good chance to win. But WPI and URI are the unknowns in this race.

UMass Surprises UConn with 4-1 Win in Conf. Opener; Primes for Powerful Eagles at The Heights Tomorrow

By MIKE CURRAN
Senior Reporter

STORRS, Conn - Sophomore righthander Don Anderson, a surprise starter, gave the unsuspecting UConn Huskies the shock treatment yesterday as he pitched UMass to 4-1 victory over Connecticut in the crucial Yankee Conference opener.

Anderson, who got the starting nod from Coach Dick Bergquist only a half hour before game time, completely baffled the home team with sharp-breaking curve balls for seven and one-third innings, picking up nine strike outs while only walking four. The Huskies only managed three base hits off the New Jersey native.

Tony Chinappi, senior co-captain, gave Anderson all the support he needed when the stocky catcher cleared the bases in the sixth inning with a long double. Ray Ellerbrook's rbi single produced the other UMass tally.

The game began under a light rainfall which at times threatened to delay the contest. UConn starter Bruce Frummond and Anderson held the upper hand on the batters for the first five innings as neither team could muster much of an attack.

Dick Pepin led off the fifth with a line double to left center, but this scoring opportunity went down the drain as Drummond settled down to retire the next three batters. In the bottom of that frame, Connecticut filled the bases with none out to put Anderson in jeopardy for the first time. The visitors capitalized on a blown squeeze play, throwing two UConn runners out at the plate. Anderson then struck out Fred Malaan for the third time to end the threat.

In the top of the sixth, a walk to Anderson, a solid single by Tom Semino and a screeching shot of the first baseman's glove by Bob Hansen gave the Redmen a similar bases-loaded, no outs situation, and they proved to be better opportunists than their opponents. Chinappi ripped a waist-high fast ball off the base of the fence in right center to put UMass up 3-0.

The following frame, a base on balls to Tim Berringer, Anderson's sacrifice bunt and Ellerbrook's smash single accounted for the Redman run.

With one out in the UConn eighth, a walk and a single brought Bergquist to the mound, and he gave young Anderson a well-deserved rest. John Kitchen came onto put out the fire after the Huskies broke up the shutout with an unearned run.

Kitchen then breezed through the bottom of the ninth, striking out two of the three batters, to pick up the save.

DUGOUT CHATTER-Anderson, who was drafted out of high school by the Pittsburgh Pirates, showed Connecticut fans a major league curve ball. The sophomore righthander had been ineffective down south, but the control and hook he showed yesterday makes him figure much stronger into Bergquest's pitching plans . . . UConn pulled off four double plays on the Redmen . . . Another Jersey sophomore, Mitch Salnick, hit the ball hard all day, but couldn't find the openings . . . Bob Hansen captured the Anchor Award when he strained a back muscle putting on his uniform . . . Joey DiSarcina dressed, but his bum wrist will keep him on the bench another week . . . The bench jockies gave the Husky players all they could handle . . .
